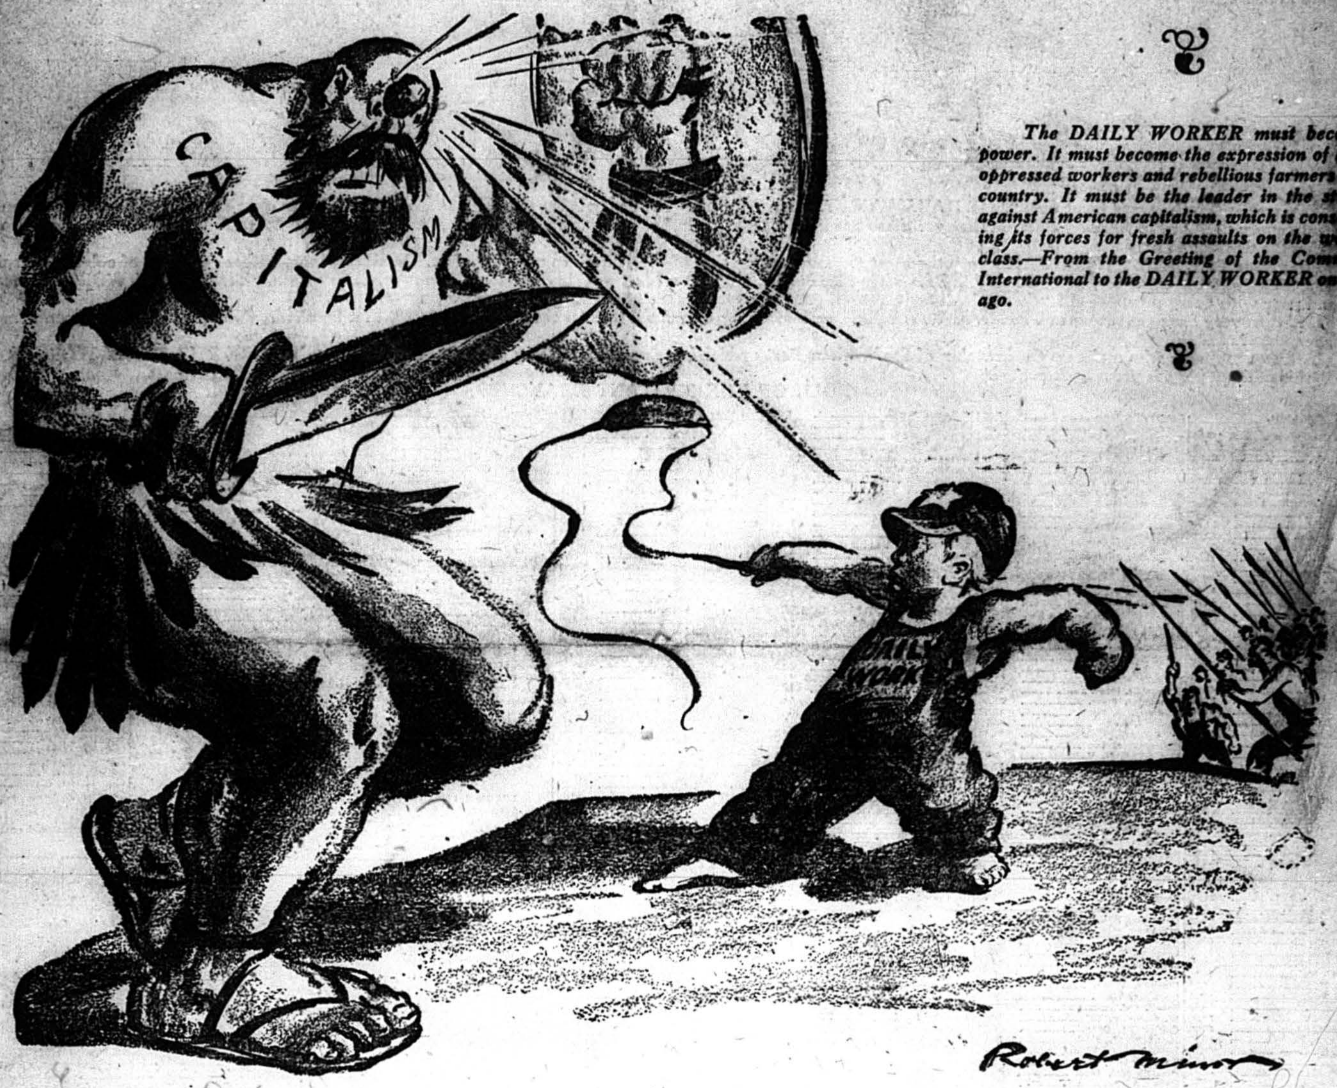
ONE YEAR OLD TODAY

January 13, 1925



Robert Minor

The DAILY WORKER must become a power. It must become the expression of all the oppressed workers and rebellious farmers in the country. It must be the leader in the struggle against American capitalism, which is consolidating its forces for fresh assaults on the working class.—From the Greeting of the Communist International to the DAILY WORKER one year ago.

I am the DAILY WORKER.

I came to life out of the needs and the growing class consciousness of labor.

I was born of the organized Communist strength of the vanguard of America's working class.

I arrived on January 13, 1924.

I am one year old today.

* * * *

I am but one of the many voices of Communism; many Communist dailies over the face of the earth.

I am the youngest; the only Communist daily published in the English language.

I join my voice, daily growing in power, with the thunder chorus reaching new masses over the world with its message of deliverance.

* * * *

I am but one year of age; yet the capitalist masters hate me.

I enjoy their hate. I thrive on it.

I am condemned by the yellow press of the master class. Their condemnation drives new masses in support of me.

I stalk into the factories, the mills, the mines and out on the land, and the workers, in the city and country, welcome me.

I am often hid away by quick witted toilers; lest the eyes and the wrath of the exploiters of mankind fall upon me.

I am often passed from hand to hand in secret. I am most often read and studied in secret.

I am treasured because of the liberating message of Communism that I am continually carrying into the dark places.

* * * *

I arouse the wrath of the Mighty Dollar's many "labor lieutenants."

I fight this enemy within, as well as the enemy without the ranks of the workers.

I spread before the masses the misdeeds of their misleaders.

I show that official reaction within organized labor is one of the most valuable allies of the class enemy of those who toil.

I am, therefore, no more welcome where labor's reactionary officialdom sits enthroned, than I am where the masters of men still hold sway.

I have often been driven from the gatherings controlled by the labor reaction; yet I have always returned to the struggle stronger than ever.

I have never been rejected by those who really labor.

I am loved by the increasing vanguard section of the toiling masses.

I am the spokesman of the oppressed; their only spokesman in the English language.

I am the first of the many to follow.

I am blazing the way for many like me—many DAILY WORKERS—that will be established in all the great industrial centers of the nation.

I am the pioneer; others will come after me; just as the growing, militant vanguard of labor draws new masses into its wake.

* * * *

I voice—every day—the grievances of labor.

I spur the many to greater struggles.

I urge the exploited to new victories for their downtrodden class.

I call upon them to stand erect and fight.

I point the way to the final victory.

* * * *

I am the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party.

I speak for the Communist International.

I call upon the masses to put an end to capitalism.

I urge the American Soviet Republic.

I am the voice of Communism.

I am a herald of the dawning Communist social order.

Here Come the Shock Troops of the Working Class Arm

Hail the Militant Workers Party Branches!

Hail the Militant Workers!

Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

A FEW weeks ago the word went out, "THE DAILY WORKER is in Danger!" For a year it has struggled in the forefront of the class conflict. For a year it has entered into every fight of the working class. Wherever there has been a fight against the enemies of labor, there has been THE DAILY WORKER, fighting, leading, inspiring the workers to battle.

For a year THE DAILY WORKER has been the most treasured possession of the American working class. In all this time, without a penny of subsidy, in spite of the bitter struggle for existence, THE DAILY WORKER has held up its banner. It has grown in circulation, in power, in influence. THE DAILY WORKER faces its second year with every prospect of further gains, new victories, greater service to the world revolutionary movement.

Is it then very strange that when THE DAILY WORKER called for help to make it safe for the struggle in 1925, that hundreds, thousands of militant workers gave their response?

To these militants who make up the branches of the Workers Party which have up until January 10 sent their support to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925, this militant page is proudly dedicated.

We have made a start!

But the biggest part of the task lays before us.

THE DAILY WORKER asked for $50,000 to make it safe for 1925. $50,000 is the amount which must be raised.

Fortunately the branches listed above do not represent all of the militant branches of the Workers Party. Nor have all the militants in these branches done their share to build and keep THE DAILY WORKER. Hundreds of militant readers of THE DAILY WORKER who are not connected with the Party branches will yet want to prove their militancy and their devotion to THE DAILY WORKER by the purchase of Insurance Policies.

The militants of the working class have sent their shock troops to the immediate support of their DAILY WORKER. The whole militant army will follow until the goal has been reached and THE DAILY WORKER made secure.

Hundreds and thousands have heard the call:

and they are answering:

"WE'VE GOT IT. WE'LL KEEP IT—AND BUILD."

LABOR LEARNS OF SOVIET GAINS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

OUR FIRST YEAR.
Revolutionary Optimism.
Alone in The Field.
Some Big Scraps.
Worst is Yet to Come.
The Leader of the Revolutionary Movement.
Our Loyal Army.

REVOLUTIONISTS are optimists. When they cease to be optimistic they cease to be revolutionists. Lasting optimism is born of the knowledge that this rotten capitalist system which breeds so much misery among the workers is destined to pass away, broadly speaking, because it has about reached the end of its usefulness. Speaking in terms of corn beef and cabbage, sauerkraut and goulash, systems are given the boot only when they can no longer keep the population's stomach properly tickled with the necessary elements that go to maintain existence.

THE collective stomach is as sensitive to fear as the ears of an artist are to flattery. When it looks as if a particular system was about to declare a moratorium on breakfast, dinner and supper, the collective stomach calls upon its allies, the collective legs, eyes, ears, tongue, etc., etc., to go to bat and ease the lazy, inefficient system out of business. It goes alright, but it does a lot of kicking. Hence the necessity for organizations formed for the purpose of burying it and putting something better in its place.

WHAT I am getting at is that it took a lot of optimism to start The DAILY WORKING. You will notice that we are celebrating our first anniversary and we are all asking each other—when we have a few minutes to spare—"How did we ever get this thing started and kept it going?" But facts have a habit of speaking for themselves. Here we are.

ONLY a few years ago, while our party was living in a condition of enforced low visibility, the sanity of many of our comrades was seriously questioned when they suggested the advisability of starting a daily Communist paper. But capitalism is bound to go and Communist Parties are organized to make it go quicker and Communist dailies are the most effective weapons at the disposal of Communist Parties to organize the workers for the overthrow of capitalism.

THOSE who do not understand that the contradictions within capitalist society prevent it from solving its own problems might be disappointed at a temporary lull in the class struggle and say: "Oh well, I expected the revolution before my next birthday. Now, it looks as if it will never come." This type does not stay put. It does not found revolutionary dailies. It was not the type that started The DAILY WORKER.

WHEN the department of justice raided the spot where the Communist convention was held in 1922, Bridgeman, Mich., they grabbed sixteen Communists and took them to Berrien county jail. While waiting for bail, we amused ourselves in many ways. One of our means of passing away the time was to get out a few sheets of manuscript which we bapitzed The DAILY WORKER. We hardly expected that two years and three months afterwards we would be celebrating the first anniversary of a real Communist daily.

SHORTLY before The DAILY WORKER was launched, the New York Call curled up on the sofa and never woke up again. Several liberals with more money than ability gave it a shot in the arm and it wriggled along for a couple of months under a new name and then quietly faded away. It took about $100,000 worth of dope to keep it going for two months. This experience naturally made some people pessimistic about the future of The DAILY WORKER.

THE New York Call died because it was not true to the cause of the workers. It deserted them for a hoped-for prosperity as the handmaiden of the petit bourgeoisie. But it had too much competition. The time was not ripe for a prostitute socialist daily in America to render itself indespensable to the capitalists. American capitalism was not yet in the condition of German capitalism where the Vorwarts and other yellow sheets were essential to it.

MUCH less than what it cost to keep the New Leader alive for

RAIL WORKERS DEMAND THEIR WAGE INCREASE

Bosses' Press Uurges an Immediate Showdown

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Engine service brotherhoods are demanding a straight increase in wages without modification of the standard rules on all western railroads with the exception of the Chicago & Alton, the Southern Pacific and the Western Pacific on which settlements have been made.

This means that the rail labor board's "short order" decisions will be disregarded in the negotiations. On many roads the rule changes proposed by the board would largely offset the small wage increase granted.

Lots of Southern Pacific Money

The Southern Pacific could pay more, according to The Wall Street Journal. But it refers to dividends not wages. The ability of this carrier to make profits far in excess of dividend requirements is treated as warranting an increase in the annual 6 per cent cash payments to stockholders to 7 per cent. In 1924 the S. P. made about $37,000,00 over and above all interest requirements or nearly $11 a share on the $344,380,906 capital stock.

Rail Labor Board in Cold

The Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen's magazine sees the wage settlements in western territory as a clear demonstration of the uselessness of the U. S. rail labor board. It says editorially: "It is worthy of special note that in the memorandum of agreement between the Southern Pacific and the Brotherhoods no reference whatever is made to the railroad labor board's decision. That the abortive, and insofar as the brotherhoods are concerned, unsolicited decision was designed to aid certain western railroad managements in an effort to destroy the engineers' and firemen's schedules must be apparent to anyone having a close knowledge of the facts in the premises.

"Said decision, however, far from having that effect, served to arouse the officers and members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and our own brotherhood to the point of fighting to a finish for the preservation of their agreements unimpaired by the abrogation of the single rule."

Commerce Journal Talks Rail Strike

Likelihood that a strike will be forced on the brotherhoods by western carriers in 1925 is suggested in signed articles for the Chicago Journal of Commerce by T. F. Woodlock. Evidently after a talk with representatives of the managements on Jan. 3 he urged the public to protest against the working rules of the brotherhoods.

He said in part: "It is clear from the action of the railroad employes in connection with the recent labor board decision that the brotherhoods are in a mood to defy the public. They have not yet given up the hope of eliminating it from direct participation in the adjustment of labor disputes in the railroad industry and they still hope to abolish the labor board by means of the Howell-Barkley bill.

"It is not impossible that this year may see an open conflict after the fashion of 1922. For this reason it is important that public opinion should be awakened in good tnme. The place to begin reforms is in the working rules. Sooner or later we must have a show down on this thing and no time will ever be more appropriate for it than now."

CAPPELLINI, RENEGADE RADICAL, IS FORCED TO OFFER CONCESSIONS TO MINERS HE HAS BETRAYED

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

SCRANTON, Jan. 12.—The seriousness of the unofficial anthracite strike situation in District 1 of the United Mine Workers has led President Cappellini to offer the strikers in the Scranton field the best terms since the strike began. The terms, conditional on the men returning to work, are:

Prompt action by conciliation board on grievances which caused the strike.

Full restoration of revoked charters and funds held up by the international union when the charters were lifted.

Complete amnesty of all leaders of the strike.

Strikers opposing the Cappellini plan said it carried no certain assurance that grievances would actually be adjusted. The grievances are of long standing against the company.

The DAILY WORKER---A Communist Builder

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

THE Workers Party is a young party. Whilst development has been comparatively rapid, it has still a long road to travel before it can be called a Bolshevik party in the full sense of the term. Particularly our party is weak organizationally. It is not firmly knit together, nor is it sufficiently mobile and responsive to its tasks. During the party's existence we have conducted much important and successful activity on the economic and political fields. Consequently we have been able to wield a great amount of influence upon the ideology and struggles of the American working class. But in all of our activity during these years of persistent and energetic work, the party has not made the progress that it should have done in building up the size of our membership and in welding what members we have into a compact and cohesive whole.

Our party's organizational weakness are to the greatest extent responsible for our failure to take the maximum advantage of the opportunities created by our activities, to build up the size and strenght of our party. One reason for this is that our party lacks capable organizers. We have not developed organizers to any degree commensurate with our development in other dircetions. Yet there is no lack of material in the party out of which organisers may be produced. In personal contacts which I have made practichlly everywhere in the country, I have become acquaintanted with many comrades who have the inherent qualities which go to make the most competent organizers. But in most cases these comrades are not developing these abilities nor are they applying them effectively towards the building of our party.

In the first anniversary issue of the DAILY WORKER it is particularly appropriate to point out the field opened up to us by our English language daily paper for the development of organizers and for the organization of our party. Obviously one of the best ways to build the membership of the party is by building the circulation of the DAILY WORKER. In fact it is so obvious that in all too many instances this way of making the party grow has been overlooked altogether. But, although it is quite generally understood that by building the DAILY WORKER we are also building the Workers Party, it is not so generally understood that in extending the circulation of the DAILY WORKER there is an open road to the development of organizers for our party.

Organizers are not born. They are made. They are products of active participation in the daily struggle. They are made in the process of doing real organization work. In our party we will develop the necessary organizers by putting the membership, so far as possible, systematically to work upon organizational tasks. There is no better school for organizers than in the building of the DAILY WORKER. This does not consist of filling the columns of the DAILY WORKER with theories of organization, but in putting effective theories into practice by the organized selling of DAILY WORKER subscriptions.

Here, in the building of the circulation of the DAILY WORKER, lies a field for the development of Communist organizers, which is open to every member of our party. In the performance of the systematic work necessary to the effective sale of DAILY WORKER subscriptions, and for that matter the sale of any of our party press subscriptions, there is called into play the qualities which go to make real organizers and propagandists.

In building the DAILY WORKER circulation we approach non-party workers, workers who are not class conscious. We tell them about the DAILY WORKER and ask them to subscribe. We must explain to them at least the main essentials of the class struggle. We must overcome objections, prove the advantages and necessity of organization, of working class militancy, of struggle against the boss and his pliant tools, the trade union bureaucrats. We must exploit the growing revolt of these workers. We must connect up our paper and our party with these workers by making the DAILY WORKER the spokesman and champion of their grievances. All this must be done upon the most far-reaching scale and in the most systematic manner possible.

Such work is getting down to fundamentals. It means real contact with the masses. By carrying it on aggressively and persistently we build up our self-confidence and our ability to give expression to Communist principles. In other words, we develop ourselves into organizers. In subscription campaigns the immediate goal to achieve is, of course, to extend the circulation of the DAILY WORKER. But this is by no means the only advantage to be gained. By the very act of trying to sell such subscriptions, whether he suceeds or not, the comrade in question is not only doing missionary work for Communism, but is also gaining valuable organization experience.

The Workers Party membership must take seriously the necessity for mass participation in the work of spreading the DAILY WORKER. The building of our great English language daily must ever and always be kept in the foreground of our program as one of the most important tasks confronting our party. A DAILY WORKER with a great circulation means tremendous strides towards the building of our organization into a mass Communist Party, a Bolshevized Party, a party of organizers and leaders. Let us work to the end that when the second anniversary of the DAILY WORKER arrives we will have a vast net-work of organizers and militants throughout the party working ceaslessly to extend the circulation and influence of our paper amongst the struggling masses.

LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL RAISES SLOGAN, "STAND FAST AND FIGHT" FOR 32 MICHIGAN DEFENDANTS

STAND FAST AND FIGHT!

TO ALL MEMBERS OF THE WORKERS PARTY: TO ALL WORKING CLASS ORGANIZATIONS: TO ALL BELIEVERS IN FREE SPEECH FOR WORKERS:

The executive secretary of the Workers Party, C. E. Ruthenberg, is in jail. Robert Minor, Communist cartoonist and writer, has been notified that he will be brought to trial within a few weeks. Thirty other party members will be tried as fast as possible. The prosecuting attorneys in Michigan, with all the labor-hating bootlickers of capitalism at their backs, are preparing themselves for new and more vicious assaults.

The Workers (Communist) Party faces a critical situation.

Prosecuting Attorney Bookwalter has already declared that he wishes to try the remaining defendants in the Michigan cases in gangs, instead of one at a time. We intend to prevent this. But it is clear that the Michigan authorities are preparing for more trials to follow on the heels of that of Comrade Minor. The bribed officials of capitalism state openly state that they will put William Z. Foster behind prison bars. They have already laid their plans for the trial of William F. Dunne. Everyone of the 32 Communists indicted in Michigan is in immediate danger.

We are confronted with a desperate offensive against the entire Communist movement of America.

The leaders are attacked. The organization is threatened. Now, as never before, the Communists are called upon to show what stuff they are made of. With closed ranks and with undaunted courage, with wholehearted devotion to our great cause, sparing no sacrifice or expense, we must stand and fight amidst the blows which the capitalist power is raining down upon us.

Why is it that the Michigan cases have been revived again, after months of delay, during which it appeared that they had been dropped? On all sides one sees signs of an awakening labor movement to meet the challenge of the lowered standard of living which capitalism is trying to force upon the workers. President Coolidge

JIM ROE, WOBBLY, OVER 70 YEARS OLD, COMES OUT OF JAIL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO.—Old Jim Roe is out of jail. He has served his criminal syndicalism sentence and is free once more to look for a job and keep on working for industrial unionism. Roe is over 70, crippled with rheumatism, obliged to spend all his time in San Quentin in the "old men's ward" in the hospital. But his spirit is just as eager and his loyalty as firm as when he was arrested in Sacramento for selling I. W. W. papers and sent up for four years, one of the very first to be sentenced under the criminal syndicalism act.

While behind the bars he urged his friends to concentrate the amnesty campaign on younger men who could still be useful in the class struggle on being freed.

BRITISH TRADE UNION DELEGATES TO RUSSIA ISSUE PRELIMINARY REPORT ON RESULTS OF MISSION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The Trade Union Congress delegation to Soviet Russia has issued a preliminary report on its return to this country.

The report notes the rapid progress being made by the Russian workers and peasants since a previous trade union delegation visited that country. Millions of new capital could be used advantageously in developing the tremendous unexploited wealth of Russia, the report says.

The members of the delegation are: A. A. Purcell, John Bromley, Ben Tillet, Herbert Smith, A. A. Findlay, John Turner and Fred Bramley.

The preliminary report reads:

During the six weeks' tour the delegation travelled over 6,000 miles, visiting some of the most important industrial centers in Russia, for the purpose of investigating the industrial, social and economic conditions prevailing under Soviet rule.

A full report of the delegation's activities will appear in a few weeks, which it is hoped will effectively remove many misunderstandings with regard to Russian affairs, mainly due to the misrepresenation of the political platform and press.

The investigations have covered several industries, including transport, mining, boot factories, printing, engineering and electrical undertakings, railway shops, oil fields, water power, electrical schemes, warehouses, distributive establishments, and the several economic departments responsible for the administrative control of industries.

Case of Workers.

Social institutions such as hospitals, rest houses, workmen's clubs, holiday homes and children's homes, are also visited in connection with the investigations into the working of state insurance schemes for dealing with unemployment, and the health of the workers and their dependents.

Facilities were given for free entry into all government institutions, and interviews readily arranged.

Documents, charts, and reports have been supplied, and expert translaters are now at work preparing detailed material for the delegation's report.

Pending the publication of the full report the members of the delegation place on record the following summary of their general conclusions:

(1) The social, industrial, and economic conditions of Russia have enormously improved since the visit of the British delegation in 1920.

Members of both delegations and the expert advisers formerly residing in Russia for many years, are agreed as to the very rapid process of economic restoration now operating under the direction of Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Sound Finance.

(2) The financial stability of Russia is more secure than was expected.

The Russians have almost balanced their budget, and have restored their productivity relative to the pre-war standard at a rate which compares favorable with the general European average.

(3) The industrial undertakings are being rapidly developed, especially

DOCTOR IN SOVIET RUSSIA TELLS OF NEW CANCER CURE

LENINGRAD, Russia, Jan. 12.—Dr. Molotkov, professor in the neurological academy here, announces the employment of a new method of treating cancer, which he declares will effect cures. The treatment consists in cutting the nerve leading directly to the cancerous growth.

According to Prof. Molotkov the nerves play a vital part in all cases of cancer. At the academy of medical sciences he exhibited several patients who he said had been cured by the new method. The same treatment, he asserts, will also heal gangrene and inflammation of the marrow of bones.

Building Trades Fakers Tinker with Calif.

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—President Hedrick and Secretary Tracy of the building trades department, American Federation of Labor, will meet the presidents of the sixteen national and international unions affiliated with that department, at the Sutter hotel in San Francisco on Feb. 12, to seek a full settlement of the disputed basis of representation in the California Building Trades Council, which is now doing serious injury to the movement in that state.

The state council was taken into the national department many years ago on its own basis of organization, including representation on state and local councils based on membership. This gives to the carpenters, now outside the national department, a majority in the state and local councils—in violation of the laws of the national department.

The sixteen executives of unions affiliated with the department are unanimous in their program of adjustment, which will not exclude the carpenters, but will deprive them of control of the state and local councils' policy.

BRITISH UNION LEADERS FLAY YELLOW PRESS

Denounce Lying About Russian Visit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—(By Mail.)—The capitalist press of this country continues to hammer the British trade union delegation that has recently returned from an official visit to Russia.

The delegates are enthusiastic in their praises of the accomplishments of the workers' and peasants' government and bitter in their denunciation of the lying campaign conducted against them by the yellow socialist press of this continent.

A. A. Purcell, chairman of the delegation, denounced the Manchester Guardian, favored among American liberals, the Daily Mail, Daily News Vorwaerts and Het Volk for their campaign of slander and lies.

"When we had a reception it was a 'fake'; when he had no one to meet us it was also a 'fake.' And when we did not say anything well—why didn't we?" declared Purcell.

Yellow Socialist Press.

"The German and British press—capitalist and socialist alike," said Purcell, "vie with each other in distorting the delegation's speeches. Then they followed it up, in quite a dozen instances, by asking me as chairman of the delegation, if I had anything to say regarding the visit.

"And when they failed to get a reply, they regarded us as being 'hypnotized.' Fancy trying to get news from hypnotics!"

Purcell declared that the official report of the delegation would be first given to the Trade Union Congress but that a preliminary report would be made public at once. He gave a hint of what it would be like when he said: "What will it tell us? Ah, wait and see. It is sufficient to say that if the working class of this country knew its strength and power to the same extent as that of Russia, the orthodox politician and the capitalist press mercenaries would be speedily learning whether they were really genuinely employed."

Relations With Miners.

Herbert Smith, president of the Yorkshire miners and one of the delegation has recommended that the British miners send a strong delegation to Russia to establish permanent relations with the Russian miners.

The sentiment created by the reports of the trade union leaders has had a damaging effect on the tory preparations for starting another war on Russia. John Wheatley, M. P., and minister of health in the recent labor party government made a strong speech in Glasgow recently on the dangers of the tory plot against Russia. He said:

"Despite any vituperation in the press, if any attempt is made by the government of Britain to launch into a war with Russia, I for one, am prepared to spend not merely my time, but my life in appealing to the working classes of this country to refuse not merely to join into an attack on Russia, but to utilize the opportunity of war with Russia in an attack on British capitalism."

To Defend Russia.

He warned the workers that an attack against Russia was in the course of preparation; that the workers of Britain and of all the world had an interest in Russia; that the people of Russia appealed to the workers of Germany, France and England and particularly the latter for aid in resisting the attacks of the capitalist enemy. The workers of the world had the duty of defending Russia against her enemies as her enemies were also the enemies of labor all the world over.

those responsible for electrical power and equipment.

The high degree of organizing and administrative capacity, and the enthusiasm of the workers under the new system of state ownership, deeply impressed the delegation.

(4) The housing conditions of the workers are being rapidly improved.

New housing schemes making provision for the erection of model cottages superior to some of the government houses provided in Great Britain, are being pushed forward with great energy and ability.

(5) A great effort is being made to eliminate illiteracy.

Many kinds of educational activity are being promoted and are being generously subsidised and urged forward by the Union of Socialist Republics and the trade union organizations.

More Education.

(6) Workmen's clubs, holiday homes and rest houses are also being used for the education of the illiterates, including children and adults.

The proportion of the workingclass population without education is being reduced very rapidly.

(7) The administrative departments of the Soviet state are well organized and efficiently controlled.

This is especially true of those to which the members of the delegation devoted special attention, namely, those dealing with state insurance for health, unemployment and the medical care of the workers and their dependents.

(8) Religious institutions have complete freedom to exercise their religious beliefs.

Members of the delegation visited churches and mosques during the services.

The church has been disestablished and is now entirely maintained by voluntary contributions, and no religious instruction is given in schools or other educational institutions.

Stamping Out Vice.

(9) Every effort is being made to improve the moral life of Russia.

Prostitution, gambling and other vices are being rapidly eliminated by educational effort and drastic state regulations.

(10) By the creation of workers' clubs, rest houses, sport and physical centers, trade union organizations are securing for their members trade union benefits and an addition to real wages, which is much appreciated.

Many other important changes will be referred to and dealt with in the report, which will contain the necessary information to justify the trade union and labor policy supporting the full diplomatic and economic recognition of Russia.

The report will also prove that millions of new capital could be properly and safely invested in the development of the enormous economic possibilities of Russia, and fully justify the claim made on behalf of British labor that Russia, under Soviet rule, has so far improved the material and moral conditions of its people as to have now earned a permanent place among European nations.

Signed on behalf of the delegation,
A. A. Purcell, Chairman,
Fred Bramley, Secretary.

LABOR! STAND FAST AND FIGHT!

was elected by the capitalists, to help push thru this program of the capitalists. Governmental reaction, expressed thru federal and state authorities, is striding forward to crush all working class resistence.

The prosecutors are not interested in the Communists as Communists. It is because the Communists everywhere appear as active leaders of the militant workers that they are being brought to trial in the capitalist courts. The ruling class offensive against the Communist is only the beginning of a larger and more concerted attack against the whole labor movement.

The defense of the Communists is the defense of the very existence of the labor movement.

The Labor Defense Council calls upon all fighting sections of the American labor movement and upon class-conscious workers thruout the country to rally to the defense in this critical moment.

To members of the Workers (Communist) Party, the situation is a supreme test. Comrade Minor must have the best defense that can be obtained. Comrade Ruthenberg may soon be out of jail temporarily, pending decision on his appeal to the United States supreme court. But he will not be out of danger. Practically every one of the other leaders of the party, beginning with Comrade Foster, may be taken from us—and will be taken from us soon unless the members of the party show such a spirit of militant resistence that the capitalist government is forced to back down.

The whole Workers Party must be shaken from top to bottom. There must be a rebirth of activity for the Michigan defense. The local units of labor defense council must immediately take steps to vigorously carry out its new and enormous tasks. Money must be poured out unstintingly.

We are in a life and death grapple with the political power of capitalism.

STAND FAST AND FIGHT!

LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL.

GRAND DUKE BORIS IS COMING; NEW YORK SOCIETY DAMES ARE READY TO DASH FOR THE BATTERY

PARIS, Jan. 12.—The Grand Duke Boris, younger brother of the pretender to the Russian throne, put his American visit in the light of a social jaunt to renew pleasant contacts made in 1902, in an exclusive interview with International News service just before he boarded a boat train to catch the Olympic for New York.

Boris refused to admit that he was going to America to launch propaganda for the restoration of Russian monarchy or for the purpose of raising funds to further that movement.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

two months under the care of Dr. Norman Thomas was raised in order to start The DAILY WORKER. A small sum indeed. But it had a loyal army behind it and the field all to itself. The socialist dailies were disappearing. They had decided that the class struggle was old stuff and that class collaboration was the up-to-date substitute. The word "fight" was to be eliminated from the vocabulary of the workingclass. "Not if I can help it," said The DAILY WORKER, as it buckled on its armour on the evening of January 12, 1923. On the following day it was on the streets, the most belligerent little battler the American working class movement ever saw. And if it has said a kind word for the capitalist or any of its lackeys ever since, even its worst enemies have failed to notice it.

NO sooner had The DAILY WORKER come upon the scene than it proceeded to interfere in every strike or struggle of any kind in which the workers were involved. The workers met it with open arms and the capitalists and the labor fakers with clenched fists. But it gave as many blows as it received and is today in better condition than ever before. In fact, it lives on trouble.

IT fought for the garment strikers here in Chicago and everywhere else there was an industrial struggle. It never waited for a moment to find out whether a strike was "justified." Never has any such doubts. Strikes mean fights against the bosses and that should be the favorite outdoor sport of the workers. It covered the Indianapolis convention of the United Mine Workers of America and several other big labor meetings. But, perhaps the biggest job of the year was the way it handled the election campaign, when the Communist banner was raised for the first time in a national election with William Z. Foster, the great strike leader as our standard bearer.

THE future of The DAILY WORKER is assured. We say this not because we are intoxicated with joy over our first anniversary, but because our daily has a loyal army of supporters. It is upon this army, the members of the Workers (Communist) Party that the daily relies.

THE DAILY WORKER is fighting the battles of labor. It is with them every day, from the mine fields of Pennsylvania, to the woolen mills of Massachusetts; from the transport workers in Vancouver to the garment workers in Chicago or New York. It knows no lines of division between workers. It stands for their united action on the industrial field and it continues to rally the most class conscious of them on the political field under the banner of the Workers (Communist) Party.

THE first Communist daily in the English language has passed thru its first year creditably. We have never yet heard a capitalist praise it. The labor fakers are not enthusiastic over it. But the workers that we have been able to reach—even those of them who cannot see eye to eye with us—know instinctively that it is their friend. As the class struggle grows in intensity, and the American workers will be compelled more and more to come into conflict with their masters; as the final struggle for the conquest of power by the workers draws nearer, the DAILY WORKER the trumpet of Communism will become increasingly more necessary to the workers to give them leadership and guidance.

Compromise Bill for Postal Clerks' Raise May Get Thru Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The senate will probably pass the Moses bill raising the pay of postal employes and at the same time increasing the rates of postage M. T. Finnan, secretary of the National Association of Letter Carriers announced here today. Finnan together with Senator McKinley conferred with Coolidge yesterday about the bill. Coolidge indicated that he would not veto the measure as he did with the bill passed by the last congress which aimed at increasing the wages of the postoffice slaves.

The Moses bill in its sections dealing with postoffice wages is a compromise of the bill which was vetoed. It gives only part of the increases asked by the postal workers. Officers of the various postoffice workers' organizations are boosting the bill on the theory that it is the best they can hope to get.

Passing of an Adding Machine Gets a "Death Notice" in the Papers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the New York World gives five inches of space in its obituary department, to record the passing of Walter R. Quick, auditor of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. "The Metropolitan" is a power in the capitalist world. As each one of its important human cogs drops into the grave, he must be given his "death notice."

Quick was typical of the loyal slaves of big business. The events in his life read like a column of figures. Born: Jan. 14, 1867; joined "The Metropolitan" when 20 years old, on March 14, 1887, in the bookkeeping department; in 1889 promoted to assistant to the secretary; transferred to the audit division, Jan. 1, 1890; went to Pacific Coast office in 1901; then cashier at the head office until 1910, when he came back to home office; on Oct. 13, of that year, appointed assistant to the treasurer to supervise the general accounting work of the home office; appointed auditor Jan. 21, 1913.

Any voucher, any file of papers in the vast machinery of "The Metropolitan" could tell as interesting, or utterly uninteresting, a story. Auditor Quick was but a card in the huge index of human material with which this life insurance company carries on its work. He had no other place in life under capitalism.

Evidently Auditor Quick had not reached that place where he could enjoy a little leisure, at the expense of working class policy holders; where he could travel and join exclusive clubs. These facts, if they exist, are usually included in the obituary of a "figure" in the business world. There were no such facts to report about Auditor Quick. At 58 years he was still close to the job. He had to be, evidently, in order to hold on to his place. He died on the job at the home office, No. 1, Madison Ave., New York City. It is reported that he died "suddenly"; just like any adding machine being scrapped at a moment's notice, in order to make way for something new and more efficient.

• • • •

And this Auditor Quick was no doubt looked upon as "successful" among his fellow white collar slaves. Didn't he get a notice in the papers when he died. For that, thousands of lesser white collar slaves, only a slip of pasteboard in the time clock, will envy him, for some time, until he is forgotten. This is the measure of success among the money hungry, ever struggling myriads of the middle class. Those who can get their feet on a few dollars rise accordingly in the estimation of their fellow adding machines.

• • • •

Capitalism may attract its multitudes of white collar slaves by various and dubious means, and chain them to the desks of its counting rooms; coddling them into believing that they are better than wage workers in the factories, the fields, the mills and the mines. But the profit hunger of big business will in time drive these petted pillars of the middle class into the ranks of the working class. These awakening multitudes will in time fight against the dreary, monotonous, empty lives forced upon them. They will realize that capitalism has nothing in store for them; that Communism is their only hope.

Under Communism this mind-numbing labor of the offices will be so ordered that it will be looked upon as a mere incident in the lives of human beings.

• • • •

The development of civilization under Communism will draw all human beings out of their pigeonholes, where capitalism filed them away, and give them a wider outlook on life. In fact, the aim will be to develop real human beings, who can think, and play, and enjoy life, and not to maintain mere machines of flesh, and blood and bones; which is the highest ambition of the present capitalist social order that is passing.

LOS ANGELES PAINTERS TELL PUPPYDOG CHARITY BEGGARS UNION CONDITIONS PREVENT T. B.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 12.—Painters' Local Union No. 1348 of this city is opposed to the conditions which produce consumption, that is, scab shop conditions, and in a letter addressed to the local association which operates as a sort of legal begging agency under the wing of the chamber of commerce, the union sends its respects to the open shop. The letter is as follows:

Gentlemen:—Your appeal in behalf the consumptive stricken received. With all due credit to your humanitarian efforts, we cannot refrain from sharply protesting your communication for not carrying the union label—the safest protection against consumption; for its being printed in an "Open Shop" under conditions of work producing consumption.

You are undoubtedly aware of the fact that the real and only aim of the so-called "American Plan" or the "Open Shop" is to suppress and destroy the fighting organizations of American labor; to check the resistance power of the American worker and to crush the fighting spirit of the producer of all wealth. Its "plan" is to institute the cruel system of extreme and unrestricted exploitation of the American worker rendering him a helpless and hopeless slave in the grind mill of poverty, misery, degredation and desease for himself and unlimited wealth and luxury for his greedy exploiter.

We do know the truth of all these facts from recent experience. We are struggling presently under the ruins of an unsuccessful strike for 14 weeks against the shameful plots of the "open shoppers" to rob the meager means of our bare existance; against their efforts to crush our spirit of liberty and independence and to destroy our only hope and protection—our fighting organizations.

The "open shop" plague leaves the factory door wide open for its faithful ally, the white plague, whose mother and direct beneficiary it is, especially so in Los Angeles. By supporting the open shop you are supporting its efforts to reduce our standard of living and to raise our standard of production; to reduce the amount of our food, shelter and clothing, rendering thereby each and every one of us an easy prey to the germs of consumption—the very thing you intend to fight. By giving aid and confort to our bitterest enemy, you are inviting consumption to do its worst and encouraging the white plague to run wild and unchecked.

Your plan of curing consumption with Christmas stamps while supporting its production and distribution through the "open shop", certainly does not appeal to us, the victims of them both.

At our last meeting, we have wholeheartedly donated the sum of $25 to the Los Angeles Consumptive Sanatorium—an institution absolutely fair to organized labor. We have also elected a committee to raise additional funds for the same purpose. We have sent volunteers many a time, members of our union, to contribute days of skilled work to paint and decorate the buildings on this institution. You will always find us ready and willing to do our duty, but we should never betray our own interests by supporting the scourge of humanity, the "open shop". We must refrain from contributing even one single dollar towards an institution supporting it.

Believing as we do that "an ounce of prevention is worth more than tons of cure," we can not under the circumstances be a party to your plan. We are respectfully returning your Christmas stamps and extend to your honorable and well meaning body our cordial invitation to help us prevent consumption by bettering the conditions of life and work of its prospects, the worker in America.

Yours for union conditions,
The Painters Local Union 1348, S. Solomon, Secretary.

Communist Press and Political Prisoners

By GEORGE MAURER.

THE Communist Party, and therefore the Communist press, has no interests aside from those of the working class as a whole. The interests of the working class, from its most advanced leaders to the most oppressed wage slaves are in constant conflict with the interests of the employing class and its instrument, the capitalist state.

As the class struggle intensifies the capitalist class more openly and ruthlessly, and with ever greater frequency, uses its instruments to suppress working class opposition to its slave driving rule, and to gain more privilege for the employing class. These capitalist instruments are popularly known as the forces of "government," "law and order" and "justice!"

Europe's Open Conflicts.

In Europe we see how far things have developed—fascist dictatorship, Horthy's murderous iron heel, the white terror, the workers and revolutionary working class leaders, Communists, murdered, jailed by thousands, their organizations attacked by white guards, and we see the workers building their counter-offensive, rallying to the Communist Party and press, aiding and defending the political prisoners—the victims of the class war.

In a full sense, workers and working class leaders, especially those who are most actively, militantly and effectively fighting the battle of the workers against capitalism—are made victims of capitalist punishment, the only "political" victims. To a capitalist dictatorship, workers who fight to wipe out that dictatorship are naturally its only true (class) political enemies.

Workers—Not Dilettante, Suffer

During the war, of course, even a few bourgeois supporters of the capitalist order, who happened to be non-resistant pacifists, and a few "philosophical individualists" who opposed capitalism's war and draft were made political prisoners. But the overwhelming bulk of political prisoners and victims in capitalist states were, are and will be in increasing number, workers, especially radical workers and more particularly revolutionary workers—Communists—who fight the class war.

The big capitalist newspapers know this well and they have tons of lies, vicious attacks calling for merciless suppression of the class enemies of capitalism, appearing in them day after day. We see in capitalist newspapers incitement to violence (and what not?) against working class opponents.

Lies Furnished Wholesale.

When courts, judges, officers of the law "stool pigeon" detectives, ignore the law (capitalist law, mind you) in their zeal to keep the workers in subjection, the capitalist dailies sing their praises and dish out pages of ridiculous, fabricated stories about "terrible" Communists, I. W. W., or other workers who dare oppose their injunctions, their strike-breakers and gunmen, their would-be complete open shop rule.

Political prisoners, working class victims of capitalism, stand out as one of the most clear revelations of the class war that is waging. The cases of Mooney and Billings, Sacco and Vanzetti, Foster and Ruthenberg in the Michigan Communist cases, the many I. W. W. cases in the west, the deportation cases of alien workers, in all their details expose capitalism and its interests and methods clearly to the light of day.

It Speaks for Whole Class.

It is quite natural then that the Communist press, being what it is, speaking for the Workers (Communist) Party, having no interests aside from those of the working class, should champion the cause of political prisoners. Readers of the Communist papers the world over, in all languages, workers who have been reading the Communist papers of America need not be reminded of the many cases of working class political prisoners of capitalism which have been detailed in them, well know that this is because of the importance and significance of such cases. They know that Communist papers call for action, for all workers and workers' organizations to rally to the support of political prisoners, to do everything possible in the way of concerted action and mass protest, because Communists and Communist papers know that the cause of political prisoners is the cause of the entire working class.

Readers of the DAILY WORKER know how valuable the DAILY, its predecessor, the weekly WORKER, and other Communist papers were in the Michigan Communist cases, the defense of which, or rather, the working clcass counter-offense around which, served to considerably strengthen the fighting spirit of the working class and its revolutionary vanguard.

What Are Your Duties?

Do you know what it demanded of you—the workers—in relation to the case of Sacco and Vanzetti Do you know your duties as a worker, as a fighter in the cause of the workers, which includes the cause of Sacco-Vanzetti? Read over again the call issued by the Workers Party for a united front of all organizations of workers in America to save Sacco and Vanzetti from death. It was in the DAILY WORKER, Dec. 27, along with a cartoon by Robert Minor, who is himself to be brought to trial at St. Joseph, Michigan, in February.

This call raises the slogan of full freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti. It calls for mass protest to show American capitalism that millions of workers realise "that their persecution is class persecution, no matter how hard the capitalist executioners try to disguise the baseness of their deeds!" It truly states that legal defense without mass protest will not save their lives. It acclaims "Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed by a jury of millions of their class—the working class for whom they fought and for whom they are sentenced to die!"

Daily Worker to the Fore.

This call appeared in the DAILY WORKER because the DAILY WORKER, official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party, has no interests aside from those of the working class, and knows that Sasso and Vanzetti were tried as enemies of capitalism and that their cause is the cause of the whole working class.

The editors of and the writers for the Communist press, the most active leaders of the Communist movement, all of those who build, maintain and strengthen the Communist Party and press, are most often made political prisoners.

Just see, for instance, who some of the Communists are that are now being defended by the Labor Defense Council and who are editors or writers for the Communist Press—Dunne, Browder, Foster, Ruthenberg, Minor, O'Flaherty, Lovestone, Bedacht among those of the Michigan defendants; John Lassen, editor of the Hungarian paper Elore; Vajtauer, editor of the Czecho-Slavok paper Obrana, etc. To you, who believe in the Communist press, we say, rally to the defense of your working class leaders, the militant fighters for the cause of labor.

Your Cause, Too!

Workers, the cause of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, class enemy of capitalism, sentenced to 3 to 10 years in prison and whose statement appeared in the DAILY WORKER of Jan. 5, is your cause. The cause of William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne, Robert Minor, Earl R. Browder and the other 27 defendants in the Michigan cases, is your cause.

The cause of Lassen and Vajtauer is your cause. The cause of all the workers who are victims of American capitalist tyranny, persecution and railroading, of political prisoners and class war victims in Europe under the white terror, is your cause. You are told about, and called to action for all these cases by the Communist press. Most recent is the call to action for the Michigan defense, sent out by the Workers (Communist) Party and the Labor Defense Council.

Will You Help?

You can help this cause of political prisoners by responding to the calls AND by building a great, strong, Communist press. We are sure that those who are in jail for us—for YOU—want us to help out utmost to build the DAILY WORKER into a great fighting mass Communist daily. You must rally to the cause of the Communist political prisoners—keep them out of prison—if you want the best, most powerful Communist press.

Our cause is one! Free political prisoners. Free Ruthenberg. Tom Mooney and the I. W. W. prisoners, save Sacco and Vanzetti from death! Keep Foster, Ruthenberg, Minor, Dunne, Browder and the others out of prison, free to fight and lead in the class struggle. More power to the Communist press! Down with capitalist dictatorship and oppression! Up and on with the DAILY WORKER to the workers' rule, the Communist society.

The Daily Worker and the I. W. W.

By HARRISON GEORGE.

IN its year of life the DAILY WORKER has layed a tremendous part in relation to the I. W. W., both in that organization's struggle against the suppressive forces of capitalism, and its internal struggles, in which a revolutionary resistance arose to the steady dry-rot of anarcho-syndicalism, liberalism, pacifism and political sterility that has been steadily eating the heart out of the I. W. W.—an organization which, before the war, stood easily ahead of any other in the revolutionary struggle of the American proletariat.

Tho the DAILY WORKER in the first months of its life went largely unnoticed by the membership of the I. W. W., in the last few months since the I. W. W. has been shaken by internal struggle which aroused the self-complacent to a thinking attitude and created an ideological storm in spite of all official efforts to stifle and ignore it, the DAILY WORKER has become a powerful influence in the I. W. W. This influence is far greater than I. W. W. spokesman wish to admit, probably greater than they know—because most of them live in a world of undeality, hob.nobbing with each other and convincing each other that Communist influence has no effect on their rank and file because it has none on them.

The Unofficial Friendliness.

But in the office of the DAILY WORKER where the rank and file of the I. W. W., equally with all workers of all unions, have a chance to be heard, the great number of tributes to the DAILY WORKER from members of the I. W. W., in prison and on the jobs, from the Pacific to the Atlantic and even from overseas, tells a story of warm faith in our workers' daily that cannot be gainsaid or waved away.

In spite of the stupidity of the I. W. W. in refusing all co-operation with the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League to fight the menace of criminal syndicalism laws and free the class war prisoners of whom the I. W. W. furnishes nearly a hundred in California alone, with these and the victims of the white guard Legionnaires of Centralia in Washington as the outstanding cases—in spite of fruitless efforts to come to some agreement with the I. W. W. whereby a general and combined fight for these workers could be carried on, the DAILY WORKER has done all it could without the assistance of the I. W. W. defense organization to give space and public hearing to cases of these persecuted workers.

In spite of the fact that the DAILY WORKER is the only real labor daily in the United States, reaching opinion far wider than its small but expanding circulation, and in spite of the fact that the office of the General Defense Committee of the I. W. W. is within a stone's throw of the DAILY WORKER, the I. W. W. defense secretaries have maintained such a hidebound pose of loftiness that they have never yet helped the cause of imprisoned men by prompt and special publicity matter or any other arangement with the DAILY WORKER to which all kinds of unions and union men and large numbers of unorganized workers bring their stories of capitalist oppression.

I. W. W. Prisoners Like Their Daily.

But while the I. W. W. defense gives the capitalist press as good and better news service than the DAILY WORKER, the boys in San Quentin and Folsom have repeatedly expressed their appreciation of our DAILY, which is THEIR DAILY, too.

It is, in the field of ideological struggle, however, between the rapidly growing group of Communist sympathizers, adherents of the Red International of Labor Unions, and the dogmatic leadership of syndicalist confusionaries, that the DAILY WORKER has made the heaviest inroads on the pre-war, pre-Lenin, conceptions of class war in the minds of the I. W. W. membership.

By space given the I. W. W.'s grave internal struggle against the injunctionites and all they stood for, the DAILY WORKER has aided the Red International Affiliation Committee to clarify the understanding of I. W. W. members everywhere as to what the Red International really proposes instead of the lies and misrepresentation they had been fed upon for years almost uncontradicted.

Partial to Revolutionary Struggle.

In the struggle between the injunctionite, job-unionist, pacifist element and the revolutionary left wing, the Red International Affiliation Committee unhesitatingly took the side of the revolutionary element, tho it criticized this left wing for its lack of program and definite organization and childish faith that the class war can be fought to a successful conclusion on any other way than the Communist program of winning the wide masses for the overthrowal of capitalism. The DAILY WORKER is not a colorless, "impartial" tribune in editorial policy and editorially took the position of the Red International Affiliation Committee against the splitters of Rowan and company.

During the 16th general convention, which lasted 25 days, the DAILY WORKER was a more influential force upon the I. W. W. membership than either the injunctionite group, the convention's right wing or left wing. So confused and disintegrated by misleadership is the I. W. W. that the R. I. A. C., with its straightforward program of clean-cut revolutionary struggle attained nearly, if not quite a balance of power in the I. W. W. with no more formidable weapon than the DAILY WORKER and a sincere purpose to advance the cause of revolutionary industrial unionism among the members of the I. W. W.

Every day the convention met, each delegate entered the hall with the DAILY WORKER in his pocket, and all over the nation the wobblies were visiting the news dealers where the DAILY WORKER was sold to see "What the Communists had to say" about the convention. Into the DAILY WORKER office came great numbers of letters from wobblies cursing their own censor-gagged press and enclosing sub money and praise.

R. I. L. U. Believers Speaking Up.

Friend or foe, they all read the DAILY WORKER, and—having got the habit, are inclined to continue The old fear of speaking up in defense of the Communists is passing. Six months ago in the I. W. W. halls, the wobblies would read in silence "what the Communists say" about the I. W. W., and, feeling it incontrovertible, would not discuss it even with one another, fearing to be called "Communist" by sneering dogmatists.

Today, this fear is passing. Those who agree at least partially with the Communists, and those who believe the I. W. W. should affiliate to the Red International of Labor Unions, are standing up like men in wobbly meetings and saying so and giving the reasons why other wobblies should do likewise.

Keep On Doing It.

The "liquidation" lie, which lived too long, is dead; the harmony between the program of the Red International and the I. W. W. is become clear; the differences which are not so vital as the points of agreement, are also clearer discerned and therefore easier settled; the injunctionites while alive, are not in control; anarcho-syndicalism, pacifism and false democracy are discredited together with their teachers and in the same degree. Much has been done—and to the DAILY WORKER goes a large share of the credit and the duty of keeping on doing it.

GIANT POWER PLANTS TO PUT TENS OF THOUSANDS OUT OF JOBS AND MAKE SKILL USELESS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Warning that the development of giant power promises serious problems for organized labor was voiced by Carter Goodrich of the University of Michigan in his address to the American Economic Assn. in Chicago, on the effect of giant power on the position of wage earners. Goodrich pointed out that control on the employers' side is likely to be massed in a huge trust of the sort against which trade unions have rarely made headway.

Immediate displacement of tens of thousands of workers with the resulting drift and maladjustment is the first hardship which he mentioned as likely. He noted that a saving of 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 tons of coal represents the livelihood of 50,000 to 100,000 miners. "If to this are added the similar tho less striking disturbances where the new power replaces thousands of other workers on the railroads and thruout manufacturing industry it is clear that the problem of immediate hardship alone is a very real one," he says.

The more lasting evil resulting from such displacement will be its effect on the labor standards of the industry out of which these men were squeezed, due to the weakening of the bargaining power of those who remain. Dealing specifically with the hundreds of thousands driven out of the industries affected he said:

"There is every prospect that the greater number of these men will cling for a considerable time to their old industries, ready to accept part-time employment or lower wages and so pull down the standards of their fellows, rather than take up the search for unfamiliar work. The process may well be long enough drawn out to break down standards that are themselves the product of long years of struggle and even cripple or destroy the workers' chief agency for their rebuilding." By this agency he means the union.

Giant power, he further states, brings with it the familiar threat of the breakdown of craft skill. He called specific attention to the fact that electric locomotives are recognized in a wage agreement on the Norfolk & Western as calling for less skill than the older type. This may be enough, he said, together with the displacement of engineers and a much larger displacement of firemen, to make a problem even for unions as strongly entrenched as the brotherhoods.

Summarizing he said: "Certain great technical changes in the past have held out promises almost as glowing but have fulfilled them only at the cost of grave and in some cases long continued hardship for the workers. Analysis makes clear that here again as in earlier revolutions there are certain factors that will make it very hard for the workers as wage bargainers to claim their share in the great benefits of the change. Wherever the change permits the reduction of forces or the reduction of skill, the coming of giant power brings real danger to the workers and their unions."

Join the Workers Party!

Thousands of working men and women will read this issue of the DAILY WORKER who have never before seen a copy of the only Communist daily paper in the English language and who know little of what the Workers (Communist) Party represents in the great struggle between capital and labor for power to appropriate the wealth which comes from the application of labor to natural resources.

To such we say that the Workers (Communist) Party is wholly different from any other sort of political party in existence, unlike the other so-called "radical or socialaist" parties. The Workers Party, unlike the parties who claim to represent all classes of people, represents only the interests of the working class, recognizing that its interests are opposed to all other classes.

Not only does the Workers (Communist) Party, recognize that labor produces all wealth, and that the continual struggle between the classes can never be settled or adjusted short of a complete overthrowal of the political rule of the capitalist class which masks its real dictatorship behind fake "democracy," but it sets out with a definite and practical program for the seizure of power by the workers and the possession of the means of production by all the workers, mental and manual, who participate in all fields of work which contribute to the material and intellectual requirements of human society.

Almost every worker knows that capitalism robs the workers, but few know how to end the exploitation. All capitalist class education in schools, churches, magazines, newspapers and movies, tells the workers that exploitation either doesn't exist or is dangerous to change, or cannot be ended.

The Workers (Communist) Party cuts through this fog of lies and miseducation with the light of understanding, showing all workers how they are exploited and teaching them to unite all their forces as a class to overthrow the already united forces of the capitalist class.

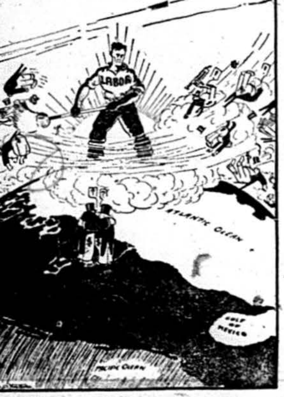
History shows that no ruling class volutarily surrenders power over an exploited class without open struggle, and the Workers Party warns that the workers can never emancipate themselves by simply voting and passing laws in congress.

But although the Workers Party recognizes that only by revolution can the exploitation of the workers be finaly ended, it has no interest seperate from the working class, and aids to the full extent of its power in every struggle for immediate needs such as more wages, shorter hours, abolition of child labor, the fight against unemployment, the "open shop" and the suppression of workers' rights.

The Workers (Communist) Party fights for the organization of great, strong industrial unions by amalgamation of old craft unions and organizing the unorganized, and the uniting of all workers and working class organizations in the fight to overthrow capitalism and establish a workers' and farmers' government.

, To all the readers of this issue of the DAILY WORKERS, we urge that you join the Workers (Communist) Party.

WIPING OUT CAPITALISM



Labor's Big Job

And We Will Do More Next Year

What has the DAILY WORKER done in the year of its existence to justify the support of the working class? To answer this question would require almost a republication of each issue. Even to give an abbreviated index of the subjects would cover all the pages of this special edition. Unfortunately, our Daily cannot afford the great clerical expense of making an index, and in both the editorial and business departments, unknown to those who are out of touch with the Daily's internal affairs, the comrades, who get out your DAILY WORKER, work shorthanded, long hours and under great handicaps.

Hardly had the DAILY WORKER been born, when it had the sad task of announcing the death of Comrade Lenin, on January 21, and calling for the memorial meetings held from coast to coast. In vast throngs the workers responded, as we hope they respond this year to commemorate the life and work of the great strategist of world revolution.

On January 22, the U. M. W. of A. convention opened at Indianapolis, and the DAILY WORKER stepped at once into the arena of a gigantic struggle between the left wing of the labor movement led by the Trade Union Educational League, and the class collaborationist labor fakers of the union bureaucracy. Nova Scotia, Howat and the three-year agreement were issues. The DAILY WORKER'S baptism of fire in the Miners' Union was but a start of its continuous struggle for the revolutionary unionism of the T. U. E. L. as the American section of the Red International of Labor Unions.

Space forbids detail, and we mention only a few of the major struggles and campaigns in which the DAILY WORKER fought in the forefront of America's workers: The united front struggle for the protection of foreign-born workers; the relief campaign for the starving workers of Germany; the fight against the Ruhr occupation; the fight against Kaufman's sluggers in the Furriers' Union; the C. P. P. A. conference at St. Louis in February and the series of conferences during March in Minnesota; the savage battle between the strikers of the I. L. G. W. and the bosses, police and injunction judges in Chicago and the persecution and expulsions of that union's best workers by the Sigman gang.

Sigman and his wreckers were pilloried by the DAILY WORKER in the May convention at Boston after the Daily had celebrated May Day. Then came the Teapot Dome exposures; the martial law and klan murders of miners in Williamson county, the continual exposure of fascism in Italy and America; the continual struggle for workers in prison for labor. Jacob Dolla, the West Virginia miners, Mooney, the I. W. W. Centralia and California victims and the Michigan defendants have shared our space.

The DAILY WORKER followed the line of the Communist International, generally and in particular matters. The Daily has given great space to international affairs; the fight on the Dawes plan; every struggle of our comrades overseas; the wonderful progress of Soviet Russia in its internal and external phases; the rise and fall of MacDonald's fake "labor" government; the colonial struggles for liberation of oppressed nationalities and races; China, the arena of imperialist conflict; and, among many more important events, the recent beginning of a Pan-American revolutionary labor movement, and the campaign for world unity of all labor unions of the Profintern.

The DAILY WORKER has fought for the rank and file; against the Toledo expulsions of machinists, and the fine battle of that union's left wing in the Detroit convention; the A. C. W. convention at Philadelphia in May and the unmasking of the Hillman treachery, the battle with Levin and his sluggers in the Chicago elections; the Pullman, Hegewisch and Paterson strikes; the conflicts in Boston and elsewhere; and the campaign against unemployment, wage cuts, longer hours and the open shop.

The DAILY WORKER fought the battles of the revolutionists in the I. W. W. against splitters and reformists, likewise in the A. F. of L. the Daily was on the job at the El Paso convention just as in the I. W. W. convention, reporting events and editorially leading the struggle. In the A. F. of L. and all subordinate unions, the Daily has fought for wiping out the color line, and full equality of Negroes and Orientals with white workers in all relations of life.

Perhaps the leading work of the year has been the first Communist campaign in the United States in the capitalist elections. The young party had its first round with parliamentary "democracy" and the Daily was the most powerful instrument of the battle.

The republican and democratic conventions were exposed, and in the middle of the campaign, Coolidge's manager, William Morgan Butler, was exposed as a direct employer and boss of stoolpigeons of a private detective agency in the textile unions of New Bedford. The C. P. P. A. convention which endorsed LaFollette was shown to have betrayed the farmer-labor movement, opened with prayer and ended with thanks to the police.

In all these and a multitude of other struggles, the DAILY WORKER has earned the support of the workers of America. Its future is in their hands.

It is claimed that former emperor Willie of Germany has undergone a monkey gland operation and that he is now quite sprightly. If this report is true, then the ex-kaiser is doing better than capitalist Germany under its Morgan-Dawes gland operation, that seems to be killing rather than improving its victim.

The Communist Press in Pan-America

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

ON this, the first birthday of our Bouncing Communist baby, the DAILY WORKER, one is tempted to boast of our rapid advancement and heap laurels upon the only English Communist Daily in the world. It is truly something to be proud of, an achievement that we did not even dream of two years ago, and the party especially the DAILY WORKER staff can very well be complimented for the work done.

A Long Way To Tipperary.

But, when we look at the tasks before us, the hard, rough road that we have yet to travel, what we have done is as nothing compared to what we have yet to do. The DAILY WORKER has not yet struck its proper Communist stride—the circulation must be increased, closer and more familiar contact must be made with the great masses of workers, the DAILY WORKER must become the workers' newspaper, a paper that the workers will read and heed, a paper that will be able, thru its columns, to ideologically lead the workers in the struggle.

That is the task that is yet ahead of the DAILY WORKER and the Communist press as a whole. We have not yet cast off our cloak of isolation. We talk about the American workers, but what we realy mean is only the workers of the United States and, sometimes when we think about it, Canada. How much thought, time or energy do we give to the working class movements in that great stretch of land south of the Rio Grande, Latin America, composed of some 20 republics, with a population of approximately 100,000,000, a land of great wealth, terrible poverty, and terrific persecution.

Our Task in Pan-America.

The task of the Comunist press in Pan-America is to draw these scattered working class movements out of their national isolation, thru propagandizing for the unification of all Communist and left wing forces into a united front for class action. To wage a constant fight against the domination of the A. F. of L. and C. R. O. M. (Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana) leadership in the Pan-American labor movement and in favor of the united front action of the workers on both continents against the rule of capitalist imperialism.

The rapid advance that American imperialism is making thru Latin America, makes it imperative that we collect our scattered Communist and left wing forces to meet the assault. This means the unification of the Communist press for common action thruout Pan-America with a definite and unified program of action. In this the lead must be taken by the DAILY WORKER in the north, La Internacional of Argentina in the south, and El Machete of Mexico for the Central American republics. These three are the recognized leading Communist organs in their respective territories.

The Ravages of Imperialism.

With Chile, Guatemala, Peru, El Salvador, Honduras, under the iron heel of a military dictatorship supported by American imperialism; with the American troops occupying Nicaragua and Costa Rica; with the American flag flying above their custom houses; Santa Domingto with a so-called liberal government set up at the point of American bayonets; the Mexican government completely in control of Wall Street, with the Pan-American Federation of Labor acting as the labor-wing of American imperialism—it is truly a hard, difficult and very important task that confronts the Communist movement and the Communist press of Pan-America.

Did You Ever Hear of This?

We have, however, a solid basis in our Pan-American Communist press upon which to launch such a campaign. Argentina has the largest Communist Party of both continents, with a membership of nearly 40,000. It has also the oldest Communist Daily in Latin America, La Internacional, an eight page paper that circulates in Uraguay, to a certain extent in Brazil and is known thruout Latin America. It is very close to the workers, played an active role in the big harbor workers' strike of Buenos Aires which lasted nearly eight months, is endorsed by many unions as their official organ and leads the fight for affiliation to the R. I. L. U., which received, on a roll call, a 40 per cent vote.

The El Machete, organ of the Mexican Communist Party, altho only a bi-weekly, reflecting the poverty of the party by the poor quality of paper it uses, can, with joint assistance and action, be built up into a powerful Communist voice. The El Machete without doubt has the best drawings and cartoon of any Communist paper in America. Many of its drawings symbolical and powerful, make a strong appeal to the Indian workers and draws them closer to Communism. Altho its circulation is small, it has played local leading roles in strikes such as the successful strike of the oil workers in the Tampico district of the state of Vera Cruz.

Our Forces Dispersed and Isolated.

Then we have the La Defensa Obrera, a daily organ of the Communist Party of Chile. This member of our Communist family is not very well known outside of its own country and is, unfortunately, tainted with the virus of social democracy.

There are other Communist papers in Latin America, such as Justicia, of Uraguay, and undoubtedly many other papers that we know nothing of, such is our isolation. There are many sympathetic papers like Justicia published in Havana, Cuba, which publishes many articles endorsing Communism and lately published the program of the Workers Party with favorable comment. The La Lucha de Classes a labor union official organ of Havana, Cuba, sympathetic towards Communism, which in every issue carries reprints from the DAILY WORKER. In Peru and Uraguay, we find many labor union journals sympathetic towards the Communist International and the R. I. L. U.

Wall Street's Itch For World Power.

American imperialism in its bid for world domination, is leading us direct to another world war. This imperialistic force is determined to unite the western hemisphere into a solid American imperialistic block, so as to strengthen its position at home, entrench itself from Cape Horn to the Behring Straits and to throw the Pan-American working class into the next world war in defense of American imperialism.

American imperialism, in its conquering march thru Latin America, is very versatile in its maneuvers. In Mexico, thru its labor-wing, the Pan-American Federation of Labor, with the late but not lamented Gompers as their chief spokesman, it opposes dictatorship and sets up a capitalist democracy, because that form of government at this time is most suitable for its purpose.

The Intrigues of Imperialism.

In other republics mentioned above, it supports local military dictatorship, while in others it boldly and forceably takes over the customs houses, while again in others it sets up a United States military dictatorship. In Argentina, Brazil and Chile, which form a loose united block, it tries to set these countries at war with one another so that it will have a pretext for interfering.

The Communist press of Pan-America has indeed a very important Communist task to perform. It will, to a large degree, be held responsible for making the labor movements of these countries really acquainted with each other, to draw them closer together and to help give them Communist orientation. What do we know about Latin America? Only what our Communist press tells us, and that is very little. What does Latin America know about us? Very little, and the Communist press must tell them.

The Pan-American Anti-Militarist League.

The duty of the Communist press is to carry the Communist message to all the workers in all America, to herald the birth of a new organization, "The Pan-American Anti-Militarist League," to call upon all left wing unions and revolutionary groups to join this league, to help the speedy unification of all Communist Parties, to encourage the organization of Communist Parties where none exist.

Birthday greetings to our vigorous, healthy, and growing Communist baby, The DAILY WORKER, is to raise the slogans:

A United Pan-American Communist Press, as against a United Pan-American capitalist press.

A United Front of the Revolutionary Working Class from Cape Horn to the Behring Straits, against American imperialism.

Away with our national isolation! Pan-American Communism for Pan-America!

Down with Pan-American Imperialists! Up with the Pan-American United Soviet Republic!

How We Live and Work

Editor's Note:—This paper is printed for the workers, poor farmers and those who work and sweat under the present system of society. It is a paper of the workers, by the workers and for the workers. We want to reach every corner of this country where labor is being exploited for private gains, for profit. We want the workers and farmers all over the country to read the DAILY WORKER. In order to make it more interesting and be able better to reflect the life of the wide laboring masses, WE WANT OUR READERS TO WRITE TO US. This new department "HOW WE LIVE AND WORK" will appear as often as there will be sufficient letters from our readers about the life and working conditions under which our masses struggle. Try to make the letters interesting bringing out facts which may not be known to workers in other sections of the country. Try to make them short and to the point.

Editor The DAILY WORKER:—About four miles from Brownsville, Pa., in the Coke Region, is the mining town known as Brier Hill, the coal camp of the Buckeye Coal company, which is a subsidiary of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Steel company. A friend of mine worked there from the time he was 15 years old till the coal strike of 1922. During the strike he was secretary of the Brier Hill local of the United Mine Workers of America.

After the Cleveland agreement in 1922 my friend went to work in the union coal field of district No. 5 but owing to a shut down he was forced to look for a job. After seeking work in union mines for over four months, my friend decided to try his old hunting ground and on Jan. 3 went to Brier Hill. At every mine there is a lamp house and usually the mine foreman's office is in the lamphouse.

While my friend was waiting here to see the superintendent about a job, a company deputy came to him and asked him if his name was N —— N —— — My friend said yes, and the deputy said, "Come along." The deputy took him in a taxi to Squire Hess' office, and he was booked on a charge of traspassing. My friend was fined $11.85, with the alternative of 30 days in jail. He explained that he was merely looking for a job.

"You have to go to the local superintendent's office for permission to step on the company's grounds," the deputy said. "There is no such rule generally, but there is your case." The deputy had remembered my friend's part in the 1922 strike, and was trying to "get even."

Incidents such as the above are very common. My attention has been called to cases where union men were fined $25.00 and costs or more for such "trespassing." And there are people naive enough to hold that America is a "free" country. The country is democratic only for the bosses and their lackeys.

Working conditions are rotten. The Frick wage scale, which is the nearest one to the union scale, is far below union wages on contract work. Those union mines which are working are running 50 per cent capacity, but the large majority of them are still completely shut dwn.

The branches of the Workers Party here are all active in raising insurance policies for the DAILY WORKER, and are accomplishing a great deal, even tho work has been slack. The West Brownsville South Slavic branch has sent in $50.00, in donation. The membership is sure of raising $100.00 before the drive ends.

Yours for Communism,
(Signed) Vincent Kemenovich.

Militant Labor Greets Second Year of "DAILY"

THOUSANDS HAIL DAILY WORKER'S FIRST BIRTHDAY

Many Celebrations Held Prove Huge Success

Thousands of Workers Party members and readers of the DAILY WORKER are rejoicing today that the DAILY WORKER celebrates the splendid achievements made in behalf of the working class and the Communist movement during the first year of its existence.

The DAILY WORKER is one year old today, and the militant workers rejoice that for the first time the workers are led by a militant Communist daily newspaper printed in the English language.

Big New York Meeting.

The New Star Casino was jammed with thousands of workers Sunday afternoon and evening, at the combined Karl Liebknecht memorial and the DAILY WORKER birthday celebration. Great enthusiasm greeted the speakers who told of the accomplishments of the DAILY WORKER during the past year and the triumphs which are expected in the coming year.

The proceeds of the celebrations will go toward the fund now being raised to build the DAILY WORKER for 1925. Arrangements for the Chicago celebration were handled by a committee of three, made up of Gussie Kruse, Natalie Gomes and Emma Bleckschmidt.

One year ago today on North Halsted St., in an overcrowded, rented flat, the DAILY WORKER was born. The pennies contributed by the thousands of Workers Party members bore fruit in the establishment of the first English language Communist daily newspaper. The sneers of the enemies of the militant working class were even then only partially silenced. The opponents and false friends of the Communist movement said, "The paper will last only a few months."

In Midst of Big Campaign.

But at the end of the first year the DAILY WORKER is entrenched in the working class movement to the dismay of the enemies of Communism. It is a daily necessity for thousands of workers and poor farmers, helping them carry on their everyday struggles in the shops and fields and mines against their bosses, the open shoppers, and the entire capitalist class.

The first birthday of the DAILY WORKER finds the paper in the midst of a successful campaign to raise funds to make the paper even stronger during 1925. The DAILY WORKER is the rallying point of the militant workers and the American Communist movement. In the first year the DAILY WORKER has shown itself as a necessary and permanent weapon in the capitalist class and the establishment of the rule of the workers.

Comrade Moritz Loeb, business manager of the DAILY WORKER, declared that the DAILY WORKER is now more firmly established than ever before. "We are conducting well organized subscription drives in all the principal cities and industrial centers," said Comrade Loeb. "Thru the DAILY WORKER builders we now have a staff of efficient field organizers. The literature department of the Workers Party is to be centralized under the control of the DAILY WORKER after Jan. 15."

"An important step will soon be taken by the DAILY WORKER in printing every day a special New York edition of the DAILY WORKER. This will undoubtedly increase the circulation of our paper in New York City and the eastern states and increase the influence of the Communists in that section. New York news of interest to the militant working class living in that territory will be printed in the New York edition daily."

Over $15,000 has already been contributed by Workers Party members and readers of the DAILY WORKER to the fund to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925, Comrade Wagenknecht, in charge of the campaign, said. "All Workers Party members must remember that the DAILY WORKER is the official organ of the Workers Party, and just as the first duty of the comrades of all federations is to support the C. E. C. of the party, so is it the first duty of all Workers Party comrades to support the DAILY WORKER which is the official organ and the mouthpiece of the Central Executive Committee and of the Workers Party."

Comrade Wagenknecht said that while splendid progress is being made in the campaign to insure the DAILY WORKER for the coming year, some branches have not been heard from. "There is twenty thousand dollars in pledges outstanding, and these branches should immediately send in whatever money they have raised." The campaign will continue until the DAILY WORKER is made safe for the coming year. The DAILY WORKER is facing the year 1925 with every prospect of being of even greater service to the Communist movement than during the eventful year just passed."

"The DAILY WORKER is gaining influence in Los Angeles," Comrade Samuel Globerman, Los Angeles representative of the DAILY WORKER says. "The demand for the DAILY WORKER is steadily increasing." Los Angeles friends of the DAILY WORKER staged a very successful celebration, speakers calling attention to the splendid progress made by the DAILY WORKER in the past year.

NEW YORK TO HAVE ITS OWN EDITION

DAILY WORKER MANAGEMENT MAKES DECISION TO ISSUE SPECIAL EDITION FOR NEW YORK CITY

"New York City is going to have a special edition of the DAILY WORKER as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made," declared Moritz Loeb, business manager.

"The decision to publish the edition has already been made and only details remain to be attended to. The decision was made in response to the growing demand of New York comrades and sympathizers for the Special," said Loeb.

It was possible to go to the extra expense owing to the energy put behind the drive to increase the circulation of the DAILY WORKER in New York by our party members. The circulation doubled since last summer.

New York is the first city in line for a special edition, but arrangements are being made to bring about specials for Cleveland, Detroit and other cities. How soon this can be done depends to a great extent on the work of those comrades in creating a demand for the DAILY WORKER.

TO ALL PROGRESSIVE COAL MINERS!

To all Progressive Miners:—You should send in the general election returns of your local to the T. U. E. L.

So far only the following locals have been recorded in the columns of the DAILY WORKER:

The results from these locals are as follows:

For president: John L. Lewis, 3,802; Geo. Voyzey, 10,867; majority for Voyzey, the left winger, 7066.

Vice-president: Phil. Murray, 3,908; Arley Staples, 10,455; majority for Staples, the left winger, 6,447.

Secretary-treasurer: Wm. Green, 4,346; Joseph Nearing, 9,080; majority for Nearing, the left winger, 4,740.

These few returns show that the Progressive Miners' slate and program has the support of the majority of the members of these locals, scattered thru seven districts, 5, 6, 12, 14, 17, 18, and 22, and indicates the tremendous vote cast for the candidates who stand on a program of action based upon the class struggle as against the reactionary class collaboration policy of the Lewis machine.

These results are splendid, and show the wonderful fight that the left wing in the Miners' Union is putting up against the most powerful reactionary machine in the American labor movement. It shows how deeply the T. U. E. L. has penetrated the rank and file of the Miners' Union with its revolutionary program of action.

If your local is not among those listed above, or if you know the results of any local that is not mentioned, then fill out the form below and send it in to the T. U. E. L. When the election returns are completed an analysis of the election will be made by the national committee of the T. U. E. L.

Vote Against Lewis.

VERONA, Ill., Jan. 12.—Local 5686, went strongly on record for the progressive slate in the national elections. The vote for the national officers was, Lewis, 63; Voyzey, 117; Murray, 64; Staples, 98; Green, 104; Nearing, 56.

For district officers, the voting was: Farrington, 119; Hindmarsh, 56; other candidates, 69; Fishwick, 120; Hewlett, 54; Black, 56; Nesbit, 89; Contorioux, 35; other candidates, 97.

Secretary Offered Deal.

PLAINS, Pa., Jan. 12.— The coal diggers of local 1483, left no room for doubt as to what they think of John L. Lewis, when the ballots cast in the recent elections were counted.

Lewis received only 20 votes to 118 cast for George Voyzey, his progressive opponent. Philip Murray got 20 votes, while Arley Staples received 112; William Green 19 and Joseph Nearing, 111.

All Down The Line.

The members went all down the line for the progressive slate.

On election day, the secretary of the local, a Lewis henchman tried to make a deal with the progressives, offering to split the local vote evenly between the two slates. The progressive, however, insisted on an honest election and told the faker that they did not want a single vote that did not rightly belong to them. The returns showed that the members of the local were overwhelmingly against the reactionaries.

Communist Journalism

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE Communist daily press has brought into labor journalism in America—the record of the workers' struggles and the explanation of the causes of those struggles—a new note. It is a note of challenge, of hope, of faith in the workingclass, of confidence in the final victory of the workingclass—a note of unshakable belief in the ability of the workingclass to conquer capitalism and erect its own social order.

In all other organs which claim to voice the desires of the workingclass and record their indictments of capitalism, trade union journals, socialist papers and publications of the middle class "friends of the workers," there is always a note of hesitation, of complaint, of hopelessness, of lack of confidence in the working masses who alone have the revolutionary heritage and who alone are capable of storming the world fortress of capitalism.

The Communist press, like the Communist Parties and the Communist International, appeals only to the workers in industry and agriculture. It rejects the idea that any other social group can or will fight thru to completion the world-wide conflict between the red hosts of workers and the black hordes of capitalism.

The Communist Parties, organized in and accepting the direction and discipline of the Communist International are the sole leaders in this struggle by virtue of superior understanding, superior organization, superior courage.

The Communist press is colored thru and thru with this current springing from the well of Marxian-Leninist knowledge of the class struggle. It is for this reason that every news story, every editorial, every article, every announcement, every line in the Communist press, breathes the class struggle, that its every utterance is uncolored by any thought or wish to placate the enemies of the workingclass, to soften the struggle or to conceal from the workingclass the inevitable outcome of the daily conflicts—the necessity of revolution.

There has never been a daily paper like the DAILY WORKER in the United States. There will never be one like it until the Workers (Communist) Party of America is able to publish in other cities a duplicate of the DAILY WORKER. It has set a new standard of labor reporting and journalism—a standard as much superior in militancy and understanding as the revolutionary Communist Parties are superior to the reformist and apologetic and traitorous parties of the second international—yet a standard that can be and is being raised as the Communist press grows in age and experience as the most important part of the Communist movement.

The DAILY WORKER has made many mistakes in the first year of its existence, but these mistakes have been of the head and not of the heart. Its worst enemies will admit freely that in not one single line has it ever expressed doubt as to the righteousness of the struggles it recorded or hesitation in throwing itself into those struggle. It has given two blows to capitalism for every blow it received as the fighting guardian of the interests of the revolutionary workingclass and its vanguard—the Communist Party. It criticises the labor movement, but only to correct its weaknesses, to make it stronger on the fighting front and not because it doubts or fears the workingclass. It criticises as a part of the workingclass and not as an expression of an organization that has interests separate from and above those of the workers. The Communist daily press, if it is to fulfill its mission of being the voice of the fighting workers, must be in closest connection with them. The Communist daily press must be the product of the workers on the field of battle and its stories of the struggle must have the odor and color of the battle, they must carry to the other workers who read them the picture of each conflict, identified by detailed knowledge of the course of that conflict and the strategy and tactics employed.

The Communist daily press can, therefore, be what a Communist press must be, only when its pages are filled with news furnished by worker correspondents — workers who know of what they write, because they write of workingclass history which they help to make. The Communist daily press is a weapon—a weapon whose keen edge is used to cut great gaps in the walls of the capitalist system, to cut down the mercenaries of the capitalist state, to strip their corpses of the camouflage with which the capitalist press covers them, to show them to the workers in their nakedness as they really are—class enemies, the janissaries and lackeys of reaction.

The Communist daily press must have, in every industrial center, in every agricultural district, at least one worker who makes it his business to furnish the news of the class war day by day. The workers of America have had enough of the patronizing recording of their struggles by kindly intellectuals and half-baked college boys whose greatest fear is that some day the workers will do away with capitalist tyranny and robbery and leave them nothing to write about.

In the coming year, the second of the DAILY WORKER'S existence, every effort must be devoted to welding a chain of worker correspondents stretching throughout the United States, with links in every place where workers sweat and fight, a chain that slowly at first, but with ever increasing tenacity and speed, will strangle the lies and slanders of the capitalist press in the throats of the vermin who write them, a chain that will show with unerring accuracy to the workingclass the hills and valley of capitalism that they must ascend, explore and conquer before the Communist papers can send hurtling from their humming presses the news that a bleeding, fighting, tired and war-worn but unconquerable workingclass has broken the power of world capitalism, set up its own dictatorship, and in a seven-column headline of flaring red, say: "Next Order of Business—Build Communist Society!"

To the workers' correspondents of the Communist daily press we give this slogan—"Write as You Fight."

To All District Organizers, Industrial Organizers, Secretaries of Local T. U. E. L. Groups and National Industrial Committees!

Dear Comrades:

In order to bring more effectively to the front our industrial work, it has been decided to set aside a weekly section of the DAILY WORKER under the head of "T. U. E. L. Activities." This section will be full of news of what the left wing is doing in all the localities, unions and industries of the country.

No need for me to explain in detail the importance of the innovation. It will help make the DAILY WORKER more interesting, as well as bring home more forcefully to our militants and membership at large the importance and extent of our industrial work.

The success of this new industrial department in the DAILY WORKER can be assured only if it has the active co-operation of all our field men. Therefore, we call upon you and urge you to furnish us with a constant stream of detailed information regarding the industrial activities of the left wing in your particular sphere of activity.

Your reports to this office should not be brief generalizations, but detailed statements of real activities. We realize that this will put a little additional work upon you. But the advantage to be gained by the movement will well repay this effort on your part. We are convinced that you will give us your most hearty co-operation in this respect.

Your reports should cover strikes, unemployment, union elections, expulsions, shop conditions, and all live features of the labor movement, written especially around the thot of bringing out the part played by the left wing in these movements and of stimulating our militants into activity.

You should write freely on these subjects. We, of course, will not publish everything that comes in, but use our discrimination so as to make the department bright and interesting. We will be able, to a very large extent, to judge of the efficiency of our industrial organization by the response we get in the building of this industrial department in the DAILY WORKER.

We depend upon you to see to it that your community and industries are fully reported in the department.

Send all material directly to the national office of the T. U. E. L.

Fraternally yours,
William Z. Foster,
Industrial Director.

It Can't Be Done---Except by Communists

By MORITZ J. LOEB.

WHEN we said, "We are going to establish an English Communist daily paper," our enemies sneered.

Among the officials of the trade union movement it was the concensus of opinion that we wouldn't last a month. All down the line, the fakers were amusedly skeptical. "It can't be done," they said.

Our liberal contemporaries were no less doubtful. They, together with some "progressive" union leaders in New York were still nursing the fingers they burned while playing with the New York Leader. "Surely," they thought, "if we practical people cannot keep a daily labor paper going even with the tremendous resources which were at our command, how can a few wild Communists succeed?"

Such a thing would be impossible besides being extremely discreditable to the reputations of the world's safest world savers.

As a matter of fact there were many Communists who had serious doubts as to our ability to put across so large an undertaking. We were poor not only in finances, but also in experience. We proposed to start out on an uncharted journey.

"But," some argued, "we have about $75,000. It is not much considering waht we will have to do, but even if we incur the great deficit which is everywhere predicted for us, we will be able to keep going for a little while anyhow."

It was to some degree in just this spirit of adventure that the DAILY WORKER was started. But there has been no adventuring. Once established, there has been nothing of romance about our daily. From the first day the task has been appreciated as a real task, with problems that required real solutions. We were concerned not with keeping the DAILY WORKER alive "a little while," but in building a weapon that would fight as long as the revolutionary struggle demanded.

If there has been anything of adventure about the DAILY WORKER it has been in the sense that as never before we have adventured into realism. For if ever our party has set itself to a task with jaws set, with brains and bodies working, that task has been the building of our daily organ.

It is true that we are not yet very efficient. Neither in our editorial work nor in our administration have we been able to accomplish half of what we desired and hoped for. It is true that the party as a whole has as yet given to the DAILY WORKER only a small fraction of the support and activity which it deserves and, to continue, must have.

But we are here! A year ago we started to build. We have been building every day for a year. We are not finished, in fact, we are just beginning, but at the end of a year we have something to show for our efforts.

Every day for a year we have had our DAILY WORKER, leading us in our struggles, clarifying our movement, gaining us ever increasing influence in the working class. Every day for a year we have been building and strengthening the working class.

In a year we have almost tripled our circulation.

We have established a central party printing plant, safeguarding for the future not only our daily, but also our monthly official organ and all the other propaganda needs of our party.

We have bought a building for our daily and for the national offices of the party.

We have centralized the party publishing institutions and prepared the way for more effective propaganda work in the future.

We have started to organize the press distribution of our party upon a sound foundation, thus laying the basis for activity which is bound to multiply a hundred fold our effectiveness in increasing the circulation of our daily, our monthly, and the party books and pamphlets.

It has been a struggle, a bitter struggle. There has been little said, most of the party did not dream, of the difficulties which were being encountered, the dangers that were faced. There were times when we didn't know where the money was coming from to meet our daily needs. There were times when the dangers and difficulties seemed almost insurmountable. Obstacles have been met and overcome.

At the end of a year the DAILY WORKER is here, an infant still, but a healthy, fighting one.

We have been building our daily for a year. The biggest part of the building has yet to be done. There has been struggle. The heaviest struggle is yet to come.

A year ago we were told "It can't be done."

Now the immediate task is to make the DAILY WORKER safe for 1925 while we continue to build it bigger and stronger and better.

Our enemies are no longer amusedly skeptical. They are furiously, terrifiedly skeptical.

"It can't be done," they croak.

And they are right. IT CAN'T BE DONE—EXCEPT BY COMMUNISTS.

Special New York Page of Anniversary Issue

NEW YORK ENGLISH HARLEM BRANCH IN LEAD; BIG SALE OF INSURANCE POLICIES TO NON-PARTY MEMBERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The total paid in on DAILY WORKER insurance policies at the DAILY WORKER agency here to Jan. 9 was $1,549. Some $300 more have been sent direct to Chicago from the New York district. Pretty fair beginning, considering the fact that New York did not begin its drive until several weeks after the rest of the country. In due time the goal of $9,051 set down as the quota for the New York district will be passed.

In amount of policies sold, the English Harlem Branch stands first. This branch sold more shares of stock in the DAILY WORKER last year than any other branch in the United States, and is determined to repeat its winning of this high honor.

The Finnish South Brooklyn branch stands second, and West Side English third. English Bronx No. 1 and Downtown English follow. There should be a little race between these three English branches as well as the Williamsburg English which today stands eighth. The Hungarian Yorkville and Lettish are also among the leaders.

But the branch that has sold the largest percentage of its quota to date is the Astoria English branch of eleven members, which has paid $40 of its quota of $55 or 73 per cent.

The individual honor goes to Comrade H. F. Mins, who has already sold nearly one hundred dollars worth of policies, and every dollar of them to non-members.

Comrade Kobel of the Esthonian branch has also sold a goodly number of policies to outsiders. These comrades are setting an example that should be followed by every DAILY WORKER builder, turning their faces toward the masses outside the party rather than trying to sell all policies within the membership alone. And both Mins and Kobel get subs from the same people to whom they sell the policies.

New York is ordering over 11,000 copies of this anniversary number. Sounds big, but it isn't. A little group of Garment Workers who are not party members, headed by Ida Weissman, is ordering five thousand copies, nearly as many as the whole party organization put together, and they are going to distribute all these papers to non-Communists. This is another good example to follow.

GENERAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING OF Y. W. L. IN NEW YORK CITY, JAN. 16

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 12.—A general membership meeting of the Young Workers League of New York will be held Friday, Jan. 16, at Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave.

At this meeting the statement of the National Executive Committee on the work of the league and its future tasks will be discussed.

Comrade John Williamson, executive secretary of the league, will speak for the N. E. C. Discussion will follow.

It is the duty of every member of the league to be present at this meeting, so that a large representation as possible can be present.

Comrades, cancel all other meetings. Get after every member who may not know of the meeting and bring him there.

N. Y. Labor Leaders Disagree with Smith On Child Labor Law

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The New York State Federation of Labor has issued a statement demanding that the state legislature ratify the proposed child labor amendment without delay, declaring their opposition to the plan of Gov. Smith and the republican party and democratic party leaders to submit the amendment to a special election. The federation declares that the state representatives were elected on platforms supporting the child labor amendment, and therefore delay involved in a referendum is unnecessary.

The New York labor body, however, agrees with all other recommendations in Gov. Smith's message. There are no specific recommendations which would increase the influence of the workers.

COMMUNIST EDUCATION DEVELOPS RAPIDLY THRU NEW YORK WORKERS SCHOOL CLASSES AND LECTURES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

New York, Jan. 12.—New York has been witnessing a rapid development in Communist educational activity since the organization of the Workers' School as an institution controlled and directed by the Workers Party. Never in the history of the party has so much interest been displayed by our New York membership in educational work. This is in line with the general intensification thruout the party of our activities on the educational field.

The Workers' School aims to establish itself as the educational center for New York militants. A frankly Communist organization, it offers workers that training, from a Communist standpoint, which is essential for effective service in the struggle against capitalism.

The school now offers at its central headquarters a party training course, a trade union training course, and several general courses.

Party Training Course.

The party training course is intended for party members only. It consists of four classes in the International Communist Movement, Principles of Communism, Marxism, and American Economic and Social History.

The course on the International Communist Movement, given by William Weinstone, will treat of the origin, development and dissolution of the First and Second Internationals. It will describe the conditions under which each of the Internationals was formed; their principles and tactics; the struggles of tendencies and what each contributed to the working class movement. It will review the discussions and decisions of the five congresses of the Communist International, outlining the principles and tactics of Leninism.

The course on the Principles of Communism will outline the development of society from the dissolution of the early Communist society to the period of imperialism, covering the period of slavery, feudalism, and the introduction and evolution of capitalism, the rise and development of the state and other institutions of class rule. It will introduce the lessons of Marx and Engels regarding the state and the necessity of the dictatorship of the proletariat as the transition period to the overthrow of all class rule.

During the first term, the course in Marxism will consider the philosophical theory of Marx. This will include a study of idealism and materialism, dialectics, historical materialism, the class struggle, and the state and proletarian dictatorship. The economic theory of Marx will be taken up in the second term.

Alexander Trachtenberg conducts the class in American Economic and Social History. This deals with the forces which led to the discovery and settlement of the American continent, the economic organization and social institutions of the American colonies, the class character of the constitution and other fundamental enactments, the establishment of the factory system, economic expansion. The forces underlying the Civil War will also be treated, as well as the development of capitalism and the subsequent rise of American imperialism.

Trade Union Training Course.

This course, open to active militants in the trade unions, offers several classes in American Labor History, Communism, and Organization.

The course in the History of American Trade Unionism, given by Solon De Leon, follows the development of American trade unionism from the formation of the first known local in 1792. The growth from local to international organization, from craft to industrial unionism, from "pure and simple" ideas to independent political action, from a reform to a revolutionary outlook, will be traced in detail. Among the organizations whose history will be studied are the Knights of Labor, the American Federation of Labor, the Industrial Workers of the World, and the Trade Union Educational League.

A course on the Fundamentals of Communism, with particular reference to Communist theory and tactics in trade unions, will be given by Oliver Carlson. In addition, there will be a symposium by well known militants on the Problems of Organization in Trade Unions, taking up such questions as structure of trade unions, the work of the various committees, parliamentary procedure, etc. A class in public speaking especially adapted for trade unionists is given every Saturday afternoon at 3 p. m.

General Courses.

Among these, is a highly interesting and instructive course in the Russian Revolution given by the well known Communist teacher and writer, Moissaye J. Olgin. This takes up various phases of the revolution such as, Problems of the Peasantry, the Theatre and the Russian Revolution, the Problems of the Intelligenzia and the Revolution, etc. At the last meeting of the class, Comrade Olgin spoke on "The Cultural Aspects of the Russian Revolution." At the next session, on Tuesday, January 27, he will deal with the "Internal Controversies within the Russian Communist Party.

Every Friday night, Ludwig Lore conducts a class in Current Events Besides this, courses are given in elementary and advanced English on Monday nights, and Public Speaking on Tuesday nights.

Workers Educational Centers.

The Workers' School has established educational centers in various parts of the city, where classes in Communism, American Labor History and English are given. Among the most successful efforts of the school has been the organization of classes in the A. B. C. of Communism thruout the city and also in the district. These are now in progress as follows:

Bronx Center, 1347 Boston Road, Tuesday, 8 p. m.

Harlem Center, 64 E. 104th street, Tuesday.

Williamsburg, 319 Grand street, Tuesday.

Brownsville Center, 1844 Pitkin Ave., Monday.

Lower Manhattan, 208 E. 12th street, Thursday.

Lower West Side, 345 W. 39th street, Wednesday.

Such classes are also being arranged in Yonkers, Newark, and Paterson. In addition, courses in American Economic Development are given in the Harlem and Williamsburg Centers.

Open Forums.

Open Forums are being conducted in the Bronx, Harlem and Brownsville Educational Centers every Sunday night at 8 p. m. These are meeting with considerable success. Among the lecturers are such prominent Communists as Ben Gitlow, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Joseph Manley, William Weinstone, Ludwig Lore, etc.

Library and Research Bureau.

The organization of the school library, to be known as the Brower Memorial Library, is proceeding rapidly This will serve as a study center for students of the school, party members and sympathizers generally.

In conjunction with the library a research bureau will be established to gather and file information on political and economic developments in the various countries. A file will be kept of American and European Communist dailies and periodicals, as well as other important labor publications.

Much important work is to be done in this connection, and comrades are urged to come over to the school and help whenever they have time, particularly Saturday aftetrnoons.

Registration is still open for many of the courses given at the Workers' School and the Workers' Educational Centers. The winter season of the school will end on March 15. Registration for the spring term will begin on February 15.

For information and registration apply at the office of the Workers' School, 208 E. 12th street, Telephone Stuyvesant 4634, or at Workers' Educational Centers.

Organizes Clipping Bureau.

NEW YORK.—The Workers' School is organizing a clipping bureau to clip and file articles and news items bearing on the political and economic struggles in the different countries. This bureau aims to provide comrades with a ready access to various surces of information, and will prove a valuable asset to the party membership in New York.

Volunteers are needed immediately to help in the work of clipping and sorting. Comrades are urged to come over to the school headquarters, 208 East 12th street, whenever they have time, especially on Saturday afternoons.

'DAILY WORKER' TAKES OVER THE PARTY LITERATURE DEPARTMENT

CHANGE TAKES EFFECT JANUARY 15.

The last step of the general program for the centralization of the party press will go into effect on January 15. On this date the administration of the party literature department will be transfered to THE DAILY WORKER. Thus the management of THE DAILY WORKER, The Workers Monthly and the Literature Department will be properly centered under one control.

This amalgamation will make possible not only a great saving in overhead expenses and an increase in the efficiency of all three branches of the party press, but it will also make possible for the first time a really organized and functioning distribution machinery.

DISTRIBUTION ALSO CENTRALIZED.

Beginning also on January 15, the army of DAILY WORKER agents organized into The Daily Worker Builders will take on the sale and distribution of the party literature as well as THE DAILY WORKER and The Workers Monthly. The Workers Party Central Executive Committee, in deciding to amalgamate all branches of the party press, also decided to amalgamate the distribution machinery.

It is therefore necessary that Workers Party units which have literature agents apart from their DAILY WORKER agents, combine these offices or form a DAILY WORKER committee under centralized control of the branch thru the appointment of a committee chairman.

BRANCHES MUST HAVE DAILY WORKER AGENTS.

It is also more necessary than ever that every party branch and shop nucleus have an active and capable DAILY WORKER agent, directly connected with the DAILY WORKER office. Out of the more than 1000 party branches, not more than 400 have active DAILY WORKER agents. Which means that 60 per cent of the party branches are not giving organized support to the party's English language press; which in most cases means that they are not giving any support at all. For successful distribution of our press we must have organization and for organization the first step is the election of DAILY WORKER agents in every party unit.

In those branches which have not yet elected their press representative, the next branch meeting is suggested as the proper time and place to overcome this delinquency.

A Comrade "Keeps His Shirt On."

IT was a session of a branch executive committee. "Comrade Chairman," George Smith was saying, "Howinell can we set the date of this meeting when no one has a calendar on him?"

"Keep your shirt on, Comrade Smith," the chairman answered, "Here's a 'Tool Box' I got from the DAILY WORKER and it has a calendar in it." He put a circle around the date decided and the meeting was set.

The committee arranged the order of business to allow for discussion. For there's nothing a Bolshevik likes more than discussion—unless it's more discussion.

As soon as the branch meeting opened the DAILY WORKER agent was on his feet. "Comrade Chairman," he said, "our C. E. C. decided that the first order of business is the DAILY WORKER, and unless it is, this meeting does not go on unless you drag me out!"

"Keep your shirt on," the chairman answered, "I can make a better speech than you can for our daily and I'm going to do it first." And he did—with the result that everyone bought a policy to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 but one comrade—as all the policies were sold out.

The chairman was at a loss what to do—and the DAILY WORKER agent was again on his feet. "Comrade Chairman, you keep YOUR shirt on," he said, "I have a 'Tool Box' with me, with a policy blank in it and I'll thank the comrade for his money." Which he did.

As in all good branches, applications for membership were up for reading. The chairman spoke: "Comrades, of three applications before us two came in from the 'Tool Box' sent out to the readers of the DAILY WORKER. We welcome the new comrades in our branch, and I mention this to show the part our Daily plays in the growth of our branch."

At this point a comrade arose. "Comrades," he said, "I no speak English, good. I think DAILY WORKER fine pepper, but I Roumanian and I take also Roumanian pepper. Where I can buy heem?"

"That's easy," a comrade said from the audience, "I also got a 'Tool Box' and in it are all the Communist language papers. The Roumanian paper is—let's see—O yes, 'Diptheria.'"

"That's no paper," the DAILY WORKER agent said, "That's a disease. He means Desteptarea. It costs only two bucks and I'll take your sub."

The Roumanian comrade laughed good naturedly and gave him the money. And on the next order of business the Young Workers League was brought up.

A little Bolshevik arose, "Comrades," he said, "I have nothing to report this time. But, while you are on this order of business I will also use the 'Tool Box' to appeal to the young people present," And he read the fine appeal for the League the "Tool Box" contains.

Other business dispensed with, during a five minute recess to pay dues, the DAILY WORKER agent got subs from the members and visitors for The Workers Monthly and The Communist International—it's so easy with the handy blanks in the "Tool Box."

After intermission the industrial organizer was on the floor. "Now, comrades," he said, "nobody can tell me they are active in their union. I'll know it when I see their paid up union book. With a handy pocket in the 'Tool Box,' everyone should have his book at every meeting. And I make a motion to that effect." The motion went over with a bang, and the DAILY WORKER agent was instructed to send to the DAILY WORKER for twenty more "Tool Boxes."

And then the discussion began. And some one got a little hot under the collar.

"Comrade Chairman," he shouted, "I protest. The speaker doesn't know Labor History from a fried onion. It isn't true that the Knights of Labor were organized in 1869. He must be thinking of the Knights of the Bed Sheet—the K. K. K.'s."

"Keep your shirt on," warned the chairman. "Look it up in the 'Tool Box.'"

The comrade did, and then had this to say: "Comrades, I apologize." During the discussion, I noticed some comrades making notes in the "Tool Box." There are pages in it for that purpose. I learned also that it has facts in it on the Labor movement. I realize what a useful little book the "Tool Box" is. We have used it tonight for almost everything. And on the page for addresses I will put down the names of some friends I want our agent to send one to.

And I say this: "From now on, not only will 'I keep my shirt on' but, I will put the 'Tool Box' in it."

COMMUNIST!

IN one year of its existence the DAILY WORKER has proven its worth to our Party.

IT is a record to be proud of. A record of accomplishment for the Revolutionary Labor Movement in this country.

IN every single fight for the working class on the political field—in every single battle on the industrial ground—the DAILY WORKER has carried the Communist banner, cemented together the Left Wing of the Labor movement—has proven also its strongest weapon.

OUR Party has grown in this time—and the DAILY WORKER has been an important contributing factor in its growth. The DAILY WORKER has brought the Communist message to thousands of workers—has proven the magnet that has drawn them into the ranks of the Communist Party.

FOR the Workers (Communist) Party membership it has performed a great service. The best expression of Communist principles, of the tactics of our Party, in the pages of the DAILY WORKER, has served to clarify the Party, to cement it into one, single, fighting unit—to Bolshevize it.

IN this way, the DAILY WORKER (although still in its infancy) has served our Party—the Revolutionary workers in this country—you, who hold its principles.

HAVE you done your share to strengthen it—to build it for greater results in its second year of life?

THERE is no better service to perform for the revolutionary movement than to build its best weapon. Getting one new sub for the DAILY WORKER is a simple task. Make it your duty to perform it.

And here's the sub blank.

CHINA POWDER BARREL IN THE BROILING EAST

The Chinese Masses Are Backing Sun Yat Sen

By JACK ARMITAGE
(For The Federated Press.)

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 12.—The present lull in the hostilities in China is but an armed peace, ready to burst into flame of war at any moment.

Popular opinion, judging by reports from different parts of China, will demand that Sun Yat Sen be made head of the government with headquarters at Peking.

Hits Foreign Treaties.

Such a government, once firmly established, would be a deathblow to all the aims of the powers. The position would be more acute than ever, for Sun has repeatedly and emphatically stated that he will not observe the present treaties with foreign powers. In that he will have the backing not only of China, but of all Asia, and Russia playing the leading role. It will then be up to the powers to either ignominiously climb down or to conquer Asia.

How far the armed forces of the powers could get is a question. To occupy treaty ports is an easy matter, but that would barely affect even China. To all intents they are occupied at the present moment. For the powers to conquer China would be a bigger undertaking than Napoleon's march to Moscow. China would welcome it as part of her strategy. The coast, and some of the rivers, could be held but to conquer the interior is a different proposition.

Sees Lightning Change.

The situation in oriental countries is undergoing lightning change. Russia will be a powerful influence in China, both militarily and politically. Some are inclined to the belief that Japan will not throw in her lot with China. However, things political in Japan are altering rapidly.

Recent events in the Yang-tse valley show the trend of public opinion in China. It is here that the country is most thickly populated, for the Yang-tse carries along its valley one-eighth of the world's population. Radical propaganda has been extensively and methodically disseminated among these people, most of it emanating from Shanghai and Canton. These people are in no mood to tolerate concessions to foreigners.

With the people of the Yang-tse and south China at his back Sun Yat Sen holds a strong position. He has always been the idol of the Cantonese and the overseas Chinese, who are radical in thought. These people have literally poured money into his war chest, especially from America and Australia.

At the moment foreign newspapers are full of the most ridiculous calumnies regarding Sun. That may be well enough for foreign readers, but it will have no influence on the Chinese. Sun Yat Sen is the chosen leader of the revolutionary elements in China. It is hardly to be conceived that he would sell them into the hands of their enemies, as some writers would have us believe, and that is the only thing which would discredit him with his followers.

Foreign financial interests will have to find a strong man to stem the wave of radicalism which has fast spread thruout China. The question today is not, will there be war, but where will it end? The situation at Pekin is a match which may set fire to the powder barrel of the orient.

The Communist Press and Shop Nuclei

By MARTIN ABERN.

ANYONE who reads the glowing history of the Spark, the Russian revolutionary newspaper of years ago; anyone even remotely acquainted with the history and development of Pravda, organ of the Russian Communist Party, and its powerful connection with, and influence over the masses of Russian workers, need not be told of the gigantic importance of the press. For malevolent influence, consider the scorpion capitalist press of America! How did the Spark, Pravda, and other working class newspapers attain such immense influence? Because they were working class papers? That is not enough. There are working class papers that do not, nor are ever likely to have any real hold on the hearts and minds of the workers. The success of the revolutionary organs in Russia lies in their close contact and sympathy with the daily needs and aspirations of the struggling workers. Pravda succeeded because it spoke the needs and aims of the workers. But more important: The workers themselves spoke in Pravda. They made the paper their own by writing always in it of the lives they lived and worked. Hence, Pravda was, or is, not just a paper. It is the blood, bone, muscle, brain and body of the workers. Pravda is the worker. The famous "Workers' Columns" or "On the Job" columns made a living paper.

Shop Nuclei Will Invigorate Communist Press.

Yet not even Pravda could succeed so well without something else. That is, the Communist Party organization. But, further, a certain type of party organization: The shop nuclei, party units organised in the shops, at the place of work. That spells permanent mass contact. The party in Russia is completely organized on the basis of shop nuclei, to do all party work. The Communist press gives concentrated propaganda and daily direction to the work in the shops. Communist nuclei units in the shops. Communist things, report the conditions of work, their struggles and lives, all the little things which arise daily and which mean so much to them. These are written in and commented upon by the press and result in building the press and party.

The DAILY WORKER, our American Communist daily, tries in every way to reach the masses of workers. It wants the workers to write about themselves and their work in the DAILY WORKER. Real success in this field will come when the Workers (Communist) Party is a party of shop nuclei. "Until our party, moreover, has its base and absolute majority of membership in the large and basic industries, steel, coal, railroad, etc. dangers in the party and in its press will be present to a degree in the direction of petit-bourgeois deviations (yielding to the ideas of those in small industry, shop-keepers, etc.) This would not be necessarily conscious or premeditated, but determined by material objective and mental considerations.

In organizing shop nuclei, we aim to establish our party in the basic industries and thus reach the living material for bolshevization of the Workers (Communist) Party. The influence, circulation, content and viewpoint of the press are automatically thus affected.

Even now our press does not give sufficient reading matter on conditions in the workshops, not due to the unwillingness of the press to print such information, but quite the contrary. Our party members must first be in the large shops, a condition which lays the basis for a workers correspondence. When dealt with, the cases have been concerned, too often, with individual or special cases of exploitation or with those employed in isolated or small shops. If there is nothing better, there can, of course, be no objections. But, obviously, it will be more important and striking for our Communist press, for the DAILY WORKER, and our Communist cause, when shop reports will come mainly from the big industries, mines, mills, etc., thus making a single illustration of shop struggle common to thousands of workers in the same industry. Then, too, letters from the workers "On the Job" stuff, have been dependent on chance and on a few "willing" comrades, or, let us say, loyal and energetic ones.

Shop Correspondents Thru Shop Nuclei.

With Communist shop nuclei organized, every shop will have a regular and special shop correspondent. Such news of workshop life will interest broad masses of workers. They will feel it is their story that is being told, that it is their paper. The shop nuclei will be another direct link between the workers and our Communist press, and also inversely so.

Plainly, we are but in the sheerest beginnings of our work in the field of shop nuclei and a GREATER COMMUNIST PRESS. Still we must build right, rest our foundation solid—in the shops. To organize shop nuclei is to lay the best groundwork for increasing systematically the circulation of the DAILY WORKER and other Communist papers; is to make it possible for the DAILY WORKER to become in fact the written expression of the workers' drudgery, wrongs, hopes and aims. To build our Communist press thru the shop nuclei is also to build more shop nuclei and to get increasing contact with the workers. Thru shop nuclei and a Communist press—hopes translated into deeds—a mass Communist Party.

Klan Tries to Capture Indiana's Educational Laws

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 12.—The ku klux klan made another bid for power in the state legislature here, when Walter Bossert, grand dragon of the klan in Indiana, sought to have James Knapp of Hagerstown named chairman of the committee on education. It is thot unlikely that Harry Leslie, speaker of the house, will appoint the klansman as Lesie is unfriendly to the klan.

The intense desire of the klan forces to secure appointment on the committee on education points to a klan campaign to force its educational program on the state.

Rent Raise Defeated.

VIENNA, Jan. 12.— The government's move to make Austrians who now pay no rent pay small amounts was blocked in the Austrian parliamentary committee on justice by the social-democrats who created a disturbance with whistles and bells, causing the committee to adjourn, without passing the rent law.

Dead in Siberia.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—Captain Charles Henry Sells, the American commander of the band of settlers taken from Wrangel island by a Soviet government icebreaker, has died at Vladivostok, the state department declares.

MUSIC • LITERATURE • DRAMA!

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Allied Arts Concert.

About a year ago the writer reviewed the first program of the Chicago Solo Orchestra. This organization gave one concert and then gave up the ghost. In connection with the Adolph Bolm ballet, until this year the ballet of the Chicago opera, the Solo Orchestra has risen from the dead.

The amalgamation calls itself the Allied Arts, and has given two programs so far, with tremendous success.

The second program, given its second repetition at the Eight Street Theater last Sunday, was divided in two sections, one given over to the orchestra, the other to the ballet and orchestra together.

The orchestral section opened with two compositions the reviewer regrets not having heard, a tone poem describing an evening party, by Arthur Bliss, and a symphonic movement by Paul Juon. Arthur Bliss is one of the least known of the new English school. Juon is a German who has written a great deal of queer and sometimes bad stuff.

Miss Hager, Excellent Soprano.

The third number was a group of "four pleasant songs," by Stravinski, sung by that most excellent of sopranos Mina Hager. They are typical of Stravinski in his lighter moods, which is to say they are cryptically brief and delicate and cubistic in style.

Two langorous slow waltzes, the "Valse Triste" of Sibelius and a waltz by d'Indy closed the orchestral section.

The ballet opened with a little thing called "Love the Magician," by Manuel di Falla, who is a past master at the composition of Spanish dance rhythms. The story was about a lady pursued by a ghost, and it was done perfectly, as the Bolm company always does things. (And as many others don't—got to the opera this year and see how ballet should not be done.)

Henry Eichheim, who used to live in Chicago, directed a pantomime of his own called "The Rivals." Eichheim specializes in Oriental music. Not the woul-be Oriental music of Rimiski-Korsakov and Irving Berlin, but the real authentic stuff. He has spent considerable time in the far east, and his melodies are genuine.

"The Rivals" is concerned with two Chinese generals, one the homliest one the best looking in China. The handsome comander kills the ugly one in a duel. But the dead man't wife, who is the most beautiful woman in the land, arrives to fight the victor. After considerable pantomime, including an armistice during which the woman prays for victory, they kill each other and die embracing.

Eichheim scored this bloody affair with gory music. It has all the noise and rattle of the Chinese tonal art, but has enough melody to make it intelligible to western ears.

Variety In Program.

There was a great deal more on the program, impossible to review in detail. There was a burlesque of a circus, played to that ancient circus tune Offenbach's overture to "Orpheus in the Underworld," a masked ball pantomime, set to variations on a well known operatic aria, the Tartar dances in Borodin's opera "Price Igor," and a lot of short individual work.

The scene painter for the Allied Arts is Nicholas Remisoff, who did many of the scenes for the Chauve Souris. These scenes are done in the fantastic, highly colored, extravagant fashion that put the Chauve Souris over. Reminsoff's curtain shows the spirits of the ballet dancing in the air between high office buildings.

When one thinks of ballet one is too often inclined to think of the art solely as it is cultivated in Russia and presented by Pavlowa or Fokine. The Allied Arts, by giving us ballet of Spain, America and France, will correct that error. And the performance of the latest in small orchestra music by Mr. Delamarter and his organization helps to make the Allied Arts wirth while.

All Art Is Propaganda.

Upton Sinclair will publish from his Pasadena, California, office early in February a work of criticism entitled "Mammonart." The book is a study of literature and all the arts from the point of view of economics. The author advances the thesis that all art is propaganda, whether consciously or unconsciously. He examines the arts, beginning with Homer and the Old Testament, and coming down to the present day, inquiring to what extent they have been used to serve and glorify the ruling classes. This volume is the fifth in a series of studies of culture from the point of view of the class struggle; the other works already published, being "The Profits of Religion," "The Brass Check," "The Goose-Step" and "the Goslings."

Fire Drives Sixteen Families Into Streets In Standard Oil Town

WHITING, Ind., Jan. 12.— Sixteen families were driven to the street early today, homeless and bereft of all belongings, by a $100,000 fire that destroyed a three-story brick block.

The block was located on the main street and housed four stores, a theater, and apartments above. The fire started in one of the apartments and spread so rapidly that it was soon out of control.

Aid was sent by the Chicago fire department, the Hammond, Ind., and Indiana Harbor departments.

English Comrades Begin Forming Factory Groups

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Jan. 12.—Transformation of the English Communist Party on a factory group basis is making solid progress. London has sixteen factory groups, organized on the shop nucleus basis, and Glasgow five Other districts report that difficulties in the way of organizing factory groups are fact being met.

A district congress was recently held in the Tyneside for the special purpose of informing the comrades of this district on the means of carrying out this new form of organization.

The R. I. L. U. and the Daily Worker

By EARL R. BROWDER

DO you members of the trade unions, you who carry on the fight from day to day and from year to year for the revolutionary class struggle, you who are on the real firing-line of the Communist movement of America—do you realize what THE DAILY WORKER means to you in your fight?

How Do You Find Your Fellow-Fighters?

Perhaps you hadn't stopped to think about it, but it has been mainly THE DAILY WORKER which furnished the means of your finding one another so that you could fight together, so that you could work out the programs upon which you unite, so that you could carry your programs out to the working masses in your particular field of battle.

We have had enough experience to learn that THE DAILY WORKER is our most powerful weapon. The miners know it. It was when THE DAILY WORKER first appeared that the tens of thousands of rebelling miners in the United Mine Workers of America began to powerfully mobilize their real forces against the treacherous Lewis machine, and thus to lay the foundations for a fighting union of miners. It was THE DAILY WORKER which rallied the support of wide circles of the working class to the striking textile workers in Paterson. It was THE DAILY WORKER which connected up the thousands of fighting carpenters who supported the candidacy of Morris Rosen in the election in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, and thus for the first time in the history of that organization broke the undisputed rule of reaction. It was THE DAILY WORKER that made it possible for the militant members of the machinists organization to launch a powerful campaign against the B. & O. plan of class collaboration, and to organise a strong resistance to both the reactionary administration of Johnston and to the fake "progressives."

These things are only a few samples of the manner in which THE DAILY WORKER has sunk its roots deep into the life of the American labor movement in the trade unions, a movement which will be the foundation of the revolutionary unions of the future, the American section of the Red International of Labor Unions.

It must be remembered, in judging the supreme value of our daily, that even if the specific work in the separate unions and industries, could, possibly, be carried on in a fashion without THE DAILY WORKER, yet the real task of establishing a left-wing movement would certainly fall of its complete success if we did not have the daily.

That is because a real left-wing movement is impossible unless it is a class-movement, not a partial or sectional movement, and it must extend at all costs extend beyond the boundaries of the separate unions and industries, setting up the bonds of solidarity between the revolutionary workers of all unions and industries, organized and unorganized. It is precisely because the DAILY WORKER has done this needed thing that today we can say the left wing is a reality in the American labor movement, that the R. I. L. U. has set its roots firmly in the American working class.

International Solidarity

Solidarity of the revolutionary workers by groups, by industries, and on a national scale—that is a large task that our movement has undertaken, and has only been through the DAILY WORKER that great progress has been possible in this direction. But even these steps are not enough. In the present age of imperialism, the final stage of capitalism, if labor solidarity does not extend beyond all national boundaries it cannot be said yet to exist. And it is precisely in the field of international solidarity of the revolutionary workers of the world that the services of the DAILY WORKER to our movement have been emphasized.

International solidarity is more than a phrase or a sentiment. It can only exist on the basis of real contact of the workers of the different countries, of a knowledge of their manners of life, of their working conditions, of their problem, of their struggles, of the history of their organizations, of their programs, of their contacts in international conferences, congresses, etc. Such necessary international contact is only possible on a highly organized scale. Tremendous outlay of energy is necessary, at great financial cost, with great organizational burdens—and it is only when all the rich results of such efforts can be made available to the tens of thousands of the workers everywhere, at a low cost and every day in the year, that it becomes possible to lay the foundations of international solidarity.

Think of the overwhelming riches of international information and contact with the workers all over the world that the DAILY WORKER has made available for the American movement. Every important struggle of the workers of every land is reported by the best writers and the best fighters in the movement. Every important problem that confronts the labor movement, nationally and internationally, is studied and analyzed by the best informed and best trained thinkers of the international working class in the columns of the DAILY WORKER. All the great advances made by the Russian working class, the first section of the proletariat to become the ruling class of its country, are described and reported in detail. Out of the small contributions of the 20,000 to 30,000 supporters of the DAILY WORKER has been built up a mighty machine for organization and struggle, a part of the international revolutionary army of the proletariat.

Build a Mightier DAILY WORKER

Yes, surely, on this first anniversary of the birth of our fighting daily, we can be proud of what it has accomplished. We can say without hesitation that it is the DAILY WORKER which has enabled the Trade Union Educational League to penetrate into every nook and cranny of the labor movement with the message of the Red International of Labor Unions. It has been the DAILY WORKER that has finally put the revolutionary labor union movement of America upon a permanent basis.

But we cannot be content with congratulating ourselves on what has been done. It is necessary to make every small achievement the starting point for a greater one. It is necessary to extend the small struggles for revolutionary progress in which we are now engaged only the beginning of greater struggles. It is necessary to deepen our program and widen the scope of its influence always and continually.

There is one fundamental prerequisite to all these tasks which faces us. That is to BUILD THE DAILY WORKER, and to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

Let this be the watchword on the first anniversary of the first English-language Communist daily in the world.

Supporters of the Red International of Labor Unions will unite in enthusiastic support of our greatest weapon—the DAILY WORKER.

Juniors, this is our Birthday Party!

Tho we are the littlest readers of the DAILY WORKER, we have everything in common with it, for we are It, and It is We.

Isn't the DAILY WORKER a pioneer just as we?

Isn't the DAILY WORKER young, energetic, audacious and militant, just as we?

Isn't the DAILY WORKER "always ready" to fight the battles of the exploited workers and farmers? Doesn't the DAILY WORKER shout the truth about the workers' struggle for emancipation from capitalist exploitation into the teeth of the capitalist lying sheets, just as we little Juniors heroically shout the truth about the vicious capitalist system into the teeth of our false educators?

So you see, in fact, we and the DAILY WORKER are synonymous.

And the little Communist David who threw the stone at the greedy capitalist monster Goliath in Robert Minor's birthday cartoon in this edition is really us.

We Juniors, offsprings of the masses, are destined to lead the way in the United States out of black reaction to a workers' government, to the United States of Soviet America.

THIS IS REALLY OUR BIRTHDAY! We are going to celebrate as true Communists.

We will read carefully what our grown-up comrades tell us of the duty of a Communist, of their struggles to pave the way for bringing our beloved Daily into existence, and when then speak of the tasks of the future, we will roll up our sleeves and with Comrade Fishman, who drew the cartoon for our column, we will start on the road with our message and keep right on no matter what the obstacles.

Juniors! Are you ready?
ALWAYS READY!

You Probably Never Thought of it!

And yet another sure way of building the DAILY WORKER is by getting an "ad."

When you go to your dentist—your doctor—your bank—the people you buy from—do you ask them to advertise in YOUR Paper?

There are advantages in it for them and it will help to build YOUR paper.

"The Daily" and the Left Wing

BY THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE.

THE past year has been a very active, yes, hectic, year for the Trade Union Educational League. That we have made progress is self evident, just as that a great deal of the credit for the progress made is due to the fact that we have had a daily paper for the past year which has fearlessly fought in the interest of the working class. It has supported and given publicity to the policies and tactics of the R. I. L. U., of which the T. U. E. L. is the American section.

The daily has suported every strike, every fight of the workers against wage cuts, lengthening of working hours. It has consistently, and insistently urged the workers to fight for a higher standard of living, for a shorter workday, against child labor, against injunctions, in fact the DAILY WORKER, the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party is the only English language daily in America that has at all times in all struggles of the workers, thrown its columns open to them and their interests.

It would be an unforgivable mistake if the T. U. E. L. allowed the DAILY WORKER'S birthday to pass without congratulating it upon the splendid achievements of the past year. The Trade Union Educational League, however, considers that the success of the DAILY WORKER is the joint achievement of the Workers (Communist) Party and the T. U. E. L. We also consider that the building up of the DAILY WORKER is a joint task, and we pledge ourselves that in the coming year the activities of the T. U. E. L. in building up the DAILY WORKER will be intensified.

The DAILY WORKER has sometimes been criticized by some groups of the T. U. E. L., but tho in some cases this criticism was justified, the DAILY WORKER was never criticised for not supporting the struggles of the left wing, but in over-valuing some phase and under-valuing others. And this is an inevitable result, it must be remembered of the lact of WORKERS' CORRESPONDENCE as a leading feature of the DAILY WORKER, which is not the daily's fault but the fault of those among the workers who are in the struggle and yet do not write accounts of it for the DILY WORKER. On another page the T. U. E. L. is calling for this work. Make the T. U. E. L. page a living thing that will stand out brightly in the DAILY WORKER.

Just let us cite a few of the left wing fights conducted by the T. U. E. L. since the birth of the DAILY WORKER so as we can get its proper value in the everyday struggles of the workers. Born on Jan. 13, 1924 the DAILY WORKER was of invaluable service to the Progressive Miners' committee in the struggle against the Lewis reactionary machine in the U. M. W. of A. convention held Jan. 22, 1924.

Here was a convention of 2,200 delegates, a numerically weak left wing fighting against the strongest and most reactionary machine in the A. F. of L. Some 500 copies of the daily were sold every day and passed around, and it is safe to say that one-half of the delegates read the DAILY WORKER every day. What a tremendous affect that had! It strengthened the left wing a thousand fold.

The first three days of the convention Lewis had his own way, he gaveled everything down the throats of the delegates. After that, the left wing steadily grew in strength, and finally smashed the convention control of Lewis and forced him to adjourn the convention before the business for which it was called was completed. This victory of the left wing, altho it did not smash Lewis' control of the union, nor was it able to put a program over in the convention, strengthened and crystallised the left wing and weakened the Lewis machine.

Again in the fight in the Furriers' Union against the reactionary Kaufman machine where many of our members were slugged, the daily was on the job. In the struggle against the yellow socialists in the I. L. G. W. U. where a number of Communists and T. U. E. L. members were expelled and removed from office the DAILY WORKER was there; also, in the Ladies' Garment Workers' strike of New York and Chicago, in the I. L. G. W. U., and A. C. W. conventions, in the Ilinois Miners' and other district miners' conventions. The daily was a tower of strength to the left wing in fighting the reactionary machine and its class collaboration and expulsion policies in all unions.

The DAILY WORKER fought with the T. U. E. L. in the fight for the reinstatement of Alex Howat, Jim McLachlan, Tom Myerscough, the expelled Toledo machinists, and the splendid fight put up by the T. U. E. L. in the Machinists' convention. The distribution of DAILY WORKERS to the delegates at the Carpenters' convention, carrying the program of the Progressive Building Trades Workers into this extremely conservative convention for the first time, the subsequent publicity given to Morris Rosen the left wing candidate against Hutcheson, which firmly established the T. U. E. L. as a separate and distinct group in the Carpenters' Union resulted in a more than credible showing in the election. All of these fights were strengthened thru the fact that we have a daily working class paper in fact some of the fights would have been impossible without the DAILY WORKER.

The struggle going on now in the Carpenters' Union by the left wing against the signing of a scab agreement by Hutcheson and Jensen, which has resulted in the expulsion of five members of the Local 181 of Chicago and the fight of the re-instatement of the eleven expelled Los Angeles carpenters, are gradually rallying the membership in support of the left wing. Carpenters thruout the country are writing for information on this struggle, their attention being drawn to it thru the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

These are but a few of the struggles of the left wing that have been strengthened and made possible thru the fact that we have the DAILY WORKER. Hundreds could be cited such as the Pullman, Hegewisch, Patterson, and the "outlaw" anthracite strike, the fight for protection of the foreign born, the farmer-labor party movement, the release of class war prisoners, for amalgamation, international unity, recognition of Soviet Russia, etc.

The T. U. E. L., in greeting the DAILY WORKER, promises the fullest co-operation and support, and pledges itself to help to make the DAILY WORKER a real working class daily of mass power. Not in the sense of editing, but in the sense of helping to bring the DAILY WORKER to the workers, so that it will be accepted by the masses as their paper in the sense that the DAILY WORKER will become the ideological leader of the workers in fact.

The Communist Press and the Elections

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

THE first year of the DAILY WORKER also marked the first year in which the Workers (Communist) Party entered the national political arena. It is readily admitted that the success of the Communist campaign was in great part due to the fact that our party had its "DAILY" ready and at hand to help fight its battles. The Communist press is the biggest calibre gun in the Communist armory during electoral struggles.

Win Non-Revolutionary Elements

It is in the theses of the Second World Congress of the Communist International that we find this declaration:

"The participation in the elective campaign and the revolutionary propaganda from the parliamentary tribune has a special importance for the winning over of those elements of the workers, who—perhaps the agrarian working masses—have stood far away from the revolutionary movement and political life."

Year of Difficult Struggles

The year 1924 was filled with difficult phases of the electoral struggle for our party. It would have been sorely crippled without the aid of its Communist press.

It was not merely a matter of winning the exploited workers and poor farmers away from the old parties admitedly the instruments of Wall Street rule. But it was during this year that the developing middle class movement under the leadership of LaFollette for the first time reached national proportions, and entered the national campaign as a definite factor. Our Communist movement was called upon to expose before the city and land workers the petit bourgeois character of the LaFollette movement; and to reveal its real nature as an ally of the big capitalists.

This task would have been impossible of accomplishment without the DAILY WORKER. Thru our "Daily" new masses were not only made acquainted with our movement, but were educated in its principles and brought into its ranks.

Many Special Editions

The realization by the party members and their central organizations, of the magnificant services that our "Daily" is able to render during the elections campaign, was best seen in the large number of "Special Editions" ordered by the comrades in the big industrial centers.

In this way hundreds of thousands of workers and poor farmers were not only awakened to the existence of the Workers (Communist) Party, and its program and candidates, but also came in contact with their first copy of the DAILY WORKER. Thus new contacts were established that will result in the future in the establishment of strong centers for the circulation of our Communist "Daily."

The Opposition is Powerful

It needs the constant, daily hammering of our Communist press to make headway for our movement. In every electoral struggle the capitalist spokesmen have all the advantages. The movie houses, attracting great multitudes, are open to them. They have their entrances to the schools, the churches, in fact, few meeting places of organizations, whether of workers or non-working class elements, are closed to them. The capitalist press is with them 100 per cent. And in addition to all these mediums for reaching the masses, they now have the radio. It is against this stone wall of opposition that the Communist press must advance to win progress for our cause. But it does make headway.

At many of the meetings of the major candidates, during last fall's campaign, the DAILY WORKER was bought and eagerly read. Many who came to hear Coolidge or Dawes, Davis or Bryan, LaFollette or Wheeler, came away with a copy of the DAILY WORKER stuck in their pockets, and Communist ideas seeping into their brains.

Labor Gets New Outlook

It was a new outlook that confronted the American workers and poor farmers when the Workers (Communist) Party and its candidates, Foster for president, and Gitlow, for vice president, raised the Communist standards, for the overthrow of capitalism, in the 1924 elections.

The American masses had been fed on the shibboleths of capitalist "democracy." They had been saturated with the idea that they had "rights" under capitalism; that there was even some way of labor achieveing "justice" under the social system of private ownership. Even the socialists, imbued with the hope of winning reforms within the capitalist system, were quite frightened by the Communists' frank statement of aims.

The prejudice thus aroused, especially when inflamed by the misrepresentations and villification of the well-armed enemy, was casual distribution of leaflets. It had to be fought by the Communist daily press, especially our English-language daily, the DAILY WORKER, appearing day after day, carrying the statements and manifestoes of our party, the speeches of our candidates, the refutations to the attacks made upon us. This could only be done by our "Daily."

Our Communist party came out of the last national campaign with new masses not only understanding, but believing in the tactics of the Communists in entering the parliamentary institutions of the bourgeoisie with revolutionary aims. It is on this basis that we build for the future.

Knowledge for the Future

Our party members have learned the use of their "Daily" as as weapon in the electoral struggle, just as they have learned how to use it in strikes, and other combats with the class enemy of labor. With this knowledge already gained they will be better able to utilize this weapon to even greater advantage in the future. They will develop that knowledge in the greater struggles to come, when the DAILY WORKER will prove a more powerful factor than ever on the side of labor, in the electoral struggle, as well as in every other battle of the workers against the capitalists.

After 45 Years, Ivan Okaldski, Betrayer, Faces Revolutionists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Jan. 12.— After nearly forty-five years Ivan Okaldski, who betrayed his accomplices in the assassination of Czar Alexander II in 1881, has been brought to trial before a revolutionary tribunal charged with treason to his former comrades.

After the assassination of Alexander II, Okaldski confessed his part in the plot and betrayed all the others who were implicated. They were either executed or fled to exile.

Krylenko, one of Soviet Russia's most noted prosecutors, is conducting the case for the government. Altho nearly forty-five years have passed since Okaldski's betrayal of his comrades, the government is able to bring to the court a formidable array of witnesses who are acquainted with the facts. Thousands of documents will be produced in court in an effort to establish Okaldski's guilt.

FLAHERTY.

TWO headlines glare at me from a pile of newspaper clippings lying on my desk. One reads: "Girl Minister Accuses Wife." The other is: "Sunday School Teacher Named by Wife in Suit." It looks as if some evil genius insisted on getting Christ's army in wrong. The "girl minister" is 23 years old and got into trouble when a female member of her congregation invited her to pray for her husband who it appears "had a secret sin on his soul." The little evangelist was so successful that the unhappy husband grew two sins where formerly there was only one. At least so thought his wife. The judge told the minister to let the erring husband take a chance on going to hell his own way.

THE second story deals with the escapades of a prohibition enforcement agent and a Sunday school teacher. The paper does not say whether old John Barleycorn figured in the adventure, tho he has a way of getting mixed up in such affairs. All we care to say in comment is, that the best defenders of the sanctity of the home are not the ministers of the gospel. But what could you expect from the followers of the holy ghost?

THINGS have come to a pretty pass when a congressman cannot take his liquor without having to apologize in congress and before the world for it. Mrs. Frank D. Scott let the cat out of the bag when she had a falling out with her husband who happens to be a congressman. "Hell hath no fury like a woman's tongue," and Mrs. Scott talked to beat hell. What she said caused a republican congressman to propose an investigation of her charges, that solons who were sent down to investigate Panama smuggled booze into the United States on their return. The congressman who proposed the investigation is a "wet." Those who are alleged to have smuggled in the liquor are "dry."

ACCORDING to Mrs. Scott's testimony, the congressman had a jolly old time. It was a mixed party, the solons bringing their wives along. When the lawmakers were decently stewed, so the story goes, they demonstrated the most liberal attitude on marriage relations and acted in quite a carefree, unstatesmanlike manner. Dignified representatives of the "peepul" could be seen trotting unsteadily around the deck with a pitcher of anti-Volstead liquor in their hands looking for guests. It is said that the "dry" congressmen were the "wettest" offenders. Nobody suffered any painful injury during trip and but for Mrs. Scott getting her kimono burnt thru contact with a gallant army officer's cigarette, sometime later in Washington, the dry congressmen might still be enjoying their wet trip.

THOMAS J. WALSH of Montana, the terror of oil thieves and the chairman of the public lands committee, which investigated the oil scandals, was one of the chosen few entertained by Edward MacLean, newspaper publisher, at his home in Washington. D. C. MacLean is the obliging fellow who admitted loaning $100,000 to Albert B. Fall in order to cover that gentelman's financial relations with the oil baron, Doheny. MacLean was one of the big figures behind the scenes in the oil scandal on the side of the oil thieves. Walsh was the "defender of the nation's resources." It was a good show while it lasted.

A. S. EMBREE, I. W. W. ORGANIZER, FREED AFTER FOUR YEARS OF PRISON

BOISE, Ida., Jan. 13.—Adolph S. Embree, lone political prisoner in Idaho, has just been pardoned. He was arrested as an I. W. W. organizer and convicted under the Idaho criminal syndicalism statute in 1920. His four years and more behind the bars have only whetted his eagerness to return to organization work. He was general secretary-treasurer of the I. W. W. in Chicago during 1917-1918.

MINNEAPOLIS FAKERS WAR ON RADICALS

Communists Fight Back with Determination

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 13.—Dan Stevens, Communist, and member of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly for twenty years, is threatened with losing his seat in the central labor body because of his membership in the Workers Party.

The attack on Stevens is directed by the old reactionaries ably assisted by the alleged progressive Cramer, editor of the Review, than whom there is no more fully fledged lickspittle in the labor movement. Cramer formerly played with the radicals, but fear of losing his meal ticket sent him crawling to the reactionaries.

Between Two Fires.

But Cramer is now spurned by both sides. The old reliable conservatives have the greatest contempt for him. They cannot trust this backslider who would turn any way at a moment's notice that would promise him a juicy meal ticket together with the gratification of his desire for the limelight.

The Communists are vigorously meeting the fight forced upon them. They have put up a full slate for officers of the assembly and may enter a candidate in the mayoralty campaign, if the labor fakers endorse George E. Leach for mayor, according to C. A. Hathaway, district organizer for the Workers Party.

Machinist Is Barred.

The reactionaries promise to make a report of their investigation of Dan Stevens, next Wednesday. William Nauseth, of the machinists' union, also barred from the assembly by the fakers, is on the fakers' frame-up list.

The center group in the assembly are shaking in their shoes. The Communists are fighting under very favorable circumstances and have their opponents on the moral defensive.

Earthquake Destroys Villages.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 13.—Violent earthquake shocks were felt today in the region of Ardahan, Russian Armenia, according to reports received here. Several villages were reported destroyed. Many lives were said to have been lost.

TEXTILE WAGE CUT MEETS STRIKE TALK; LONGER HOURS BEGINNING; T. U. E. L. URGES UNITED FRONT

FALL RIVER, Mass., Jan. 13.—Textile union forces in Fall River are divided on the question of fighting the 10 per cent wage cut decreed by the cotton manufacturers for 25,000 employes. The American Federation of Textile Operatives, a conservative independent union having most of the organized textile workers submitted the issue to its six affiliated local unions with the following result:

A. F. T. O. Wavers and Yields.

The weavers' local voted unanimous rejection of the cut with a majority in favor of strike; the spinners' local gave unanimous rejection, with a five to one vote for strike; the loomfixers' local rejected the wage cut but did not vote for a strike; the carders' local accepted the cut under protest and yarn finishers' and slashers' locals are reported to have yielded to the reduction demand. This division makes effective action by the A. F. T. O. doubtful.

The United Shows Fight.

On the other hand the United Textile Workers' Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and having several hundred members in Fall River, declares thru international president Thomas F. McMahon that the wage cut will be fought with the resources at its disposal unless an investigation justifies the manufacturers, as McMahon is confident it will not.

Several thousand workers are following the leadership of the U. T. W. members in Fall River, says McMahon, and will act with them. He declares the manufacturers did not consult his union because they knew the U. T. W. would oppose their action.

McMahon bares the post-election wage cut conspiracy, stating that the reductions were postponed until after Coolidge had been elected, under the direction of that shrewd textile capitalist William Morgan Butler of New Bedford, chairman of the republican campaign committee.

The cut is now coming under the leadership of Morgan Butler, son of the republican chairman, and president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association. It is coming in those localities where unemployment has been worst and the workers' spirits are supposed to have been most broken by suffering.

Assailing the cut as an outrage, McMahon pointed to the employers' profits, saying:

"There are some mills in Fall River that have declared dividends during the past year of as high as 20 per cent, and these mills are not equipped with automatic looms or up-to-date machinery."

RAW VEGETABLE FIENDS RAZZED IN BABY DAILY

The first anniversary of the DAILY WORKER was celebrated by its Chicago supporters last Monday night with an entertainment which provided, besides nice things to eat and drink, a novel sketch somewhat after the fashion of an incident in the "Beggar on Horseback." Those who have seen the play will remember the interesting little paper which is distributed among the audience during the show.

A Novel Stunt.

The committees in charge of the entertainment pulled off an amusing stunt last Monday night. Moritz Loeb business manager of the DAILY WORKER took the platform and announced that a fresh example of DAILY WORKER Publishing company efficiency would be given in a few minutes. And a fresh example it was. Nothing less than making up a miniature DAILY WORKER on the stage and selling it for ten cents a copy to the audience.

An editorial staff composed of Thurber Lewis, Al Schapp, Gussie Kruse and Walt Carmon, supplied the news which was as unreliable and funny as one could wish and Loeb acted as makeup man. Even a living cartoon

SUPREME COURT TO GET CASE OF RUTHENBERG

Local Unions Sending in More Money

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The appeal to the United States supreme court for a reversal of the decision of the Michigan supreme court, confining C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party to the Jackson, Mich., prison without bail, will be heard on Saturday.

On January 17 the supreme court of the United States will be asked by Comrade Ruthenberg's attorneys to admit Ruthenberg to bail pending a final decision on the constitutionality of the Michigan criminal syndicalism law.

Frank P. Walsh, who defended Foster and Ruthenberg in the Michigan trials, will represent Comrade Ruthenberg in Washington, as will Isaac Ferguson of Chicago. Comrade Ruthenberg's lawyers contend that the Michigan criminal syndicalism law is unconstitutional because it denies the right of assemblage and of free speech given in the constitution, and that the Communists cannot be imprisoned for merely expressing their opinions. No intent to do criminal injury has been shown by the Berrien county prosecutors of the Communists.

Local Unions Aid Defense.

The O'Fallon Local Union, No. 705, of The United Mine Workers of America, at its last regular meeting voted unanimously to donate $25.00 for the defense of Ruthenberg, and the other Michigan defendants. A. W. Young, member of the O'Fallon local, declared to the DAILY WORKER: "The miners in O'Fallon are beginning to

WORKERS PARTY ISSUES CALL FOR UNITED FRONT CAMPAIGN AGAINST ATTACK OF BOSSES

The long and carefully planned attack on the wage scales of the working class shall not go unchallenged! This is the spirit of the statement issued today by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, in its program for uniting the whole working class to resist the wage cuts now being carried out and being planned for the future. The statement is as follows:

United Front Campaign Against Wage Cuts

Policy and Slogans.

1. Our campaign against wage cuts shall be considered as, and made into an organic part of, our general campaign for the mobilization of all working class forces against the present offensive of American capital.

The wage cuts shall be treated as one of the manifestations of this capitalist offensive, the other manifestations being the reopening of the Michigan cases, the organized capitalist campaigns to perpetuate child labor exploitation, the proposed revival of bills against the foreign born, etc. The central slogan in this campaign, as in all other shall be: A United Front of Labor Against the United Front of Capital.

2. Our objective in the campaign against wage cuts is to arouse the workers to actually fight against these wage cuts. We must, therefore, carry on an intensive agitation in favor of strikes, to resist wage cuts. The slogan of the strike must be made the central point in out anti-wage cut propaganda as the only effective means to resist wage cuts.

3. Following the slogan of: Resist Wages Cuts by Strikes, must come the slogan of: Strengthen Your Union for the Coming Battles. In order to strengthen the union and labor forces generally, we must propose the following concrete measures.

- a. Organize the unorganized.
- b. Establish shop committees.
- c. Amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions.
- d. Fight child labor exploitation.
- e. Rally to the defense of labor militants in the class struggle.
- f. Fight for the defense of the foreign born.

During this campaign we shall expose the futility of LaFollettism and the conference for progressive political action to do anything for the working masses.

Propaganda.

1. An agitational leaflet shall be immediately prepared and published by the central executive committee in 250,000 copies. The leaflet to be drawn up in accord with above outlined policy. Reference shall be made in the leaflet and in our propaganda generally that in starting the new offensive against labor, the capitalists are reaping the fruits of their victory in the presidential elections, as foreseen and stated by the central executive committee in its statement summarizing the results of the elections.

The lesson shall be drawn at this point for the necessity of class action on the political field under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party. Criticize the futility of LaFollettism and the conference for progressive political action.

2. All party editors shall be instructed to follow closely the wage cut developments, to display prominently all news relating to these developments and to propagate editorially and otherwise the party policy.

3. Wherever the situation reaches an acute stage the party shall immediately organize mass meetings and shop meetings, to propagate our policy.

4. As part of our propaganda against wage cuts, we shall introduce resolutions in local trade unions, joint boards, and city central bodies calling the attention of the workers to the imminent wage cuts and to the necessity of preparing to resist. The resolutions shall incorporate our policy

SOVIETS MAY GET KELLOGG'S RECOGNITION

Hughes' Successor Favors Russian Treaty

PARIS, France, Jan. 13.—It is quite an open rumor in the whole diplomatic corps now gathered at Paris, that the appointment of Frank B. Kellogg to the office of secretary of state presages recognition of Russia by the United States.

Inspired conversations from sources close to the new head of the state department frankly state that Kellogg believes the United States must eventually take some cognizance of Soviet Russia, no matter how hostile American capitalists are to the Soviet form of government.

These sources point out that Great Britain, France, Italy, and Germany have already reached a method of getting along with the Bolshevik enemy which they cannot destroy, and even Japan is now negotiating a treaty with the Soviets, which may lose America much trade to her most immediate enemy. Asiatic trade has been going against the United States and Mr. Kellogg thinks America cannot afford to remain as the only nation refusing to take Bolshevik trade.

It is the opinion of everyone that this viewpoint of Kellog is the viewpoint of Coolidge's administration, in which Borah, the chief proponent of recognition of Russia, leads the section that looks toward a more vigorous struggle against English interests.

Certainly, the stepping out of Hughes gives a chance for a graceful reversal of policy by the government on Russian as on other affairs. Hughes was independent, too much so, it is believed, for Coolidge, while Kellogg is a weaker character that will accept any order the White House may give him.

A New Front Toward England.

Kellogg has what some call a "judicial" mind, the some who go further call him "timid." Undoubtedly he will be more of a rubber stamp for Coolidge, who seems to be a bit more willing to fight British capital in Europe even if he has an understanding with England for a united front against Japan, than Hughes was.

Hughes conceded too much to England in America's European interests, while Morgan's new grasp upon and subjection of France makes it more needful to make an ally of France against Britain in Europe, and an ally of Britain against Japan in Asia.

You Must Help!

Ruthenberg in prison! Thirty-one more trials ahead. Ten thousand dollars wanted by January 15.

Volunteers wanted to help mail out tens of thousands of letters for the Michigan defense.

RAILROAD STRIKERS, JAILED BY DAUGHERTY INJUNCTION, REFUSED NEW TRIAL BY U. S. SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—L. R. Raylor, Jacob Zink and Patrick Hanahan, of Illinois, serving terms in Leavenworth prison for violation of a federal court injunction, restraining interference with railway post office cars during the railroad strike of 1922, failed in the United States supreme court today for a retrial or reversal of their conviction.

DETROIT AUTO WORKERS STAND BY COMMUNISTS

Denounce 'Syndicalism' Laws

Protests and resolutions are being sent in to the Labor Defense Council from all over the country, demanding that C. E. Ruthenberg be freed and protesting against the prosecution of Robert Minor or any of the others who were indicted along with Ruthenberg.

The Auto Workers' Local No. 127 of Detroit expressed its stand as follows:

Drive Against All Workers.

"Since the world war many states have passed so-called 'criminal syndicalism' and 'criminal anarchy' laws, which are in violation of the spirit of the bill of rights of the United States constitution, and are instruments of the employing class tyranny over the workers and their organizations."

After sounding the warning that the railroading of Ruthenberg, Minor, Foster, Dunne and the other 28 Michigan defendants, well-known fighters in the ranks of the labor movement, will be only the beginning of a general capitalist drive against the entire labor movement, the union resolves to protest against and condemn the action of the Michigan supreme court and to support the Labor Defense Council. They call upon all labor bodies and working class organizations to do likewise. Their petition urges the governor of the state of Michigan to issue an unconditonal pardon to Ruthenberg, and they protest against any further prosecution of those indicted along with Ruthenberg. Their resolution was adopted Jan. 9, 1925 and is signed by A. S. Weaver, chairman and R. S. Swann, secretary.

Funds for Legal Battle.

Already a number of working class organizations and unions have realized the importance to labor of a great counter-offensive defense fight against the railroading of the Michigan defendants and are sending in their contributions to the Labor Defense Council. The United Mine Workers of America, Local No. 705, O'Fallon, Ill., sent a check for $25.00. The joint educational committee of three lodges—N. C. S., C. S. L., and S. N. B. S., of Christopher, Illinois—sent a money order for $25.00. The Workingmen's Sick Ben. and Ed. Federation of New York writes "Enclosed find $25 which is all we can possibly give at this time. We would like to send more and promise to contribute again as soon as we can." The Workingmen's Sick Ben. and Ed. Federation of New Pittsburgh, Pa. donated $25 and promise "The decision of our executive committee is that we are going to send you every month $25." The Labor Defense Council has issued a call for $10,000 before March 1. All workers and working class organizations thru out the country are asked to respond generously and NOW!

Federation Secretaries Will Read This, Because It Is of Vital Party Interest

THE other day a comrade told us that whereas most of the party federations had to support their own federation dailies and weeklies, therefore he thought it would be no more than right for the English branches to take over the support of the DAILY WORKER.

We answered by informing the comrade that the DAILY WORKER was not the organ of the English speaking membership of the party, that it was the organ of the entire party, that it was THE PARTY ORGAN, the official spokesman of the party and the C. E. C.

This means but one thing. That is, that altho every party branch must help support its language daily or weekly, over and above the support so given must also go a consciousness of the VALUE of the DAILY WORKER to the party, the recognition of it as the CENTRAL PARTY ORGAN, and loyal support for it.

The table below gives the number of branches in every party federation, the number of branches in each federation that have already HELPED TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925, and the number of branches that have not yet sent in EVEN A SINGLE DOLLAR.

It is to the branches that have not yet remitted that we call the attention of the federation secretaries. It becomes the task of every federation secretary to secure an immediate response from the branches that have not been heard from. It is of VITAL party interest that EVERY BRANCH take part in the campaign to safeguard the DAILY WORKER for the coming year.

Federation	Total Number of Branches	Branches That Remitted	Branches That Have Not Helped
Finnish	172	80	92
South Slavic	92	56	36
Russian	75	47	28
Jewish	69	28	41
Hungarian	43	14	29
Lithuanian	68	20	48
Lettish	8	6	2
Polish	26	19	7
Greek	18	6	12
German	35	9	24
Ukrainian	55	11	44
Armenian	20	8	12
Czecho-Slovak	23	9	14
Italian	71	10	61
Bulgarian	8	6	2
Roumanian	7	3	4
Scandinavian	19	9	10
Esthonian	6	3	3
ENGLISH Branches	151	93	58

There will go into the mails today, a letter to every federation secretary giving him the names of the branches that have remitted. Every federation secretary will thereupon send a letter to his branches, requesting those that have not as yet helped to do so at once and requesting the branches that have already remitted to complete their quotas.

Beginning tomorrow, we will publish by districts, the names of the branches in each district, the amounts each branch has contributed to the insurance campaign, the names of the branches that have not yet helped to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO BE SCENE OF AIR WAR GAMES IN FEBRUARY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Plans are being prepared for extensive winter maneuvers—the first ever held by the army air service—in northern Michigan in the latter part of February, it was announced today by Brigadier General William Mitchell.

All available planes of the air service will be mobilized for the meet which is to held to acquaint army aviators with first hand knowledge of conditions encountered in the snow and ice.

All supplies for the encampment will be transported by air, airdroms will be selected by scouting planes unacquainted with the topography of the country and supply bases will be established as tho the ships were warring in a strange country.

THE French ambassador to Russia tells the Soviet government that the workers' republic would make quite a hit with small French holders of czarist bonds if it consented to pay those debts. He does not use the language of a dictator. While the French representative was expressing himself in this fashion in Moscow, the Roumanian secretary of the state for Bessarabia was conferring with Krassin, Soviet ambassador in Paris, over the dispute between Roumania and Russia on the Bessarabian question.

DESPITE the iron ring of enemies which capitalism has formed around Russia, the Soviet republic is strong enough to compel even the foremost military nation in Europe to come to terms and to talk the language of peace rather than war. In America, ers, is too busy trying to save his Charles Evans Hughes. bitter foe of Soviet Russia retires, and Washington now is of the opinion that the United States will follow the lead of the rest of the capitalist world and recognize the workers' republic. Not such a bad week for the Soviet government.

GENERAL SMEDLEY BUTLER, director of public safety in Philadelphia, and Magistrate E. P. Carney raided the fashionable Ritz-Carlton Hotel in the Quaker City recently. What they discovered caused the judge to demand the revocation of the hotel's dance license. The magistrate expressed amazement that one so particular about law enforcement as Butler should exhibit such caution when confronted with the case of a wealthy joint like the Ritz-Carlton. The general tried to plant his knuckles on the judge's nose and his honor threatened to make dents in the warrior's countenance. Friends separated the law enforces and their faces were saved for further exhibitions of hypocrisy.

Losses on Leviathan.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Losses in early operation of the steamship Leviathan by the Emergency Ship Corporation was charged today before a house investigating committee by Shipping Board Commissioner E. C. Plummer. There was overstocking of provisions resulting in losses of thousands of dollars and inefficiency in the steward's department resulting in great destruction of chinaware and linen, Plummer said.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

We received an essay by Comrade Helen Petras on Lenin. Comrade Helen is 10 years and a member of the LaFayette Nucleus of Chicago. This group of Juniors has promised to write essays for our column on Lenin, Liebknecht, the Communist Parties of the world and the Workers' Revolution. These essays will appear in our column as we receive them. We're so glad to get these essays. For you know we are quite sure they will make the rest of our little Juniors get busy and write something for our column.

To repeat what kind of contributions we want for column. Tell a story (no matter how short or how long, but tell it), about anything that happened to you while you were at school or walking along the street or talking to your playmates. Other children will surely be glad to hear about it.

Tomorrow I shall tell you a story about an experience I had one day on my way to the DAILY WORKER office.—Ed. Note.

NICOLAI LENIN.

By Helen Petras, Age 10.

Who was Lenin? Many children ask us this question.

Lenin was a revolutionary leader, a Communist, and our Comrade Lenin's brother was a revolutionary leader also. Lenin's brother was killed by the czar's soldiers, and this was the beginning of Lenin's awakening.

He went to college and there he taught all his student friends Communism. When he finished college he went to a Karl Marx college.

In the revolution of 1917, Lenin took an active part. He could not come to many meetings because he was being hunted by the czar's police who wanted to do the same thing to him that they did to his brother. So, tho he was very active and all his words were law to the comrades, they did not see him very often. Some did not see him at all, but they all studied his teachings.

The Communists won the revolution and Lenin became premier of Soviet Russia.

On Jan. 21, 1924, Comrade Lenin died and was mourned by all the world. Lenin was a teacher and let us all remember his teachings and keep his spirit.

Forward to a Workers' and Farmers' Government thruout the world!

TEXTILE WAGE CUT IS FACING TALK OF STRIKE

the 41,000 textile workers of the city's mills. Andrew Raeburn, secretary New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers' Association, announced the cut after the association's meeting.

The announcement of the cut makes New England textile wage reductions practically unanimous. Amoskeag mills in New Hampshire led off with Lawrence, Lowell, Rhode Island, and Fall River mills following. No marked increase in the amount of work has been promised in any of the mills, altho some have resumed five-day week or full-time operation.

The T. U. E. L. Issues Statement.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 13.—The Trade Union Educational League today issued a statement upon the critical situation in the textile unions and the industry. The statement says:

"We warn the textile workers against any surrender to the bosses on the wage cut, as experience proves that any such surrender will be followed by another attack on wages or on hours. That the New Hampshire mills are now beginning to increase the work day from 50 to 54 hours should be a lesson to the unions of the American Federation of textile operatives in Fall River. The wage cut began in New Hampshire.

Fight or Lose More.

The T. U. E. L. and all the militant textile workers of New England will support the weavers' and spinners' unions of Fall River in joint and close action with the United Textile Workers' Union in a solid front against the wage cuts. The T. U. E. L. and the Communists will rally all their forces as they did for the broad-silk workers in Paterson to aid strikes of the textile workers.

The T. U. E. L. points out to the mistaken workers in the Fall River carders', yarn finishers' and slashers' locals of the A. F. T. O.—and to all other textile workers who are thinking that the easiest way is to surrender, that any acceptance of the cut will bring more cuts, and increases of hours.

No Division; No Desertion!

Moreover, this division of the workers' unions in the face of an attack by the unified bosses is desertion under fire and destructive of the unions you have. Poor and weak as they are, they will be destroyed, just as the power of the railroad shop unions was destroyed by one union accepting cuts, breaking unity, then another, and another, until a capitalist open shop offensive practically wrecked them.

The T. U. E. L. urges the textile workers—Force your little unions to unite on the one issue of fighting the wage cuts. Take the lead, militants! Call on the lagging locals for united effort! Where no unions exist, or where they will not struggle, call the workers into meeting and form shop committees that will take up the fight. For unity, build a solid fighting front! Rally the unorganized masses to the struggle! Permit no betrayal by officials! Stand by your guns, fight the wage cut! Fight any increase in hours!

Signed—National Committee.

was furnished, this role being played by a young comrade.

Loeb Is Some Magician.

Comrade Loeb declared the deadline was reached and he pressed the imaginary button that sets the big press in the DAILY WORKER plant humming, several young comrades ran thru the hall shouting "Read the Baby DAILY WORKER; ten cents a copy." It was a work of art even tho some of the editorial department came in for merciless lampooning. It was edited by a well known humorist in the business office who evidently is a meat eater judging from an amusing paragraph on a local trade union militant who lived exclusively and ostentatiously on carrots and turnips—raw—for a period, a rather short period we are informed.

A good little review of this paper would be incomplete without quoting it entirely.

Sufferers Suffered More.

Those who had not yet recovered from the party discussion had salt rubbed into their wounds during the evening by being inveigled into a dispute over the respective merits of the majority and minority theses and then getting arrested and fined five cents for each offense.

Music was furnished by a Young Workers' League band. It was snappy and modern. Everybody had a merry time and are looking forward to the next Workers Party entertainment which will be held on Feb. 28. This is the famous Red revel.

6 Hungry Children and $15,000,000 Cathedral Is New York Contrast

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, New York City offers another one of those many startling contrasts that well to the surface out of the teeming lives of its millions.

Downtown, the family of the dead Vincenzo Castiglioni, sits about the coffin of the father, killed in a building accident. There is the widow with six children, and another baby coming in February. They had to borrow 25 cents to get something to eat, and they don't know where the money is coming from to pay the undertaker.

Uptown, where the lights shine brighter, the episcopal bishop of New York, William T. Manning, smugly directs the campaign to raise $15,000,000 that will be spent to build another gorgeous religious structure, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

New York's millions of workers, kept going endlessly on the treadmill of capitalist exploitation, will give little heed to this contrast; the tragedy in "Little Italy" and the ambitious schemes of one of religion's most repulsive harlots.

The thing that should startle New York's workers, however, is the fact that organized labor's officialdom is allied on the side of the aristocratic ecclesiast and not with the dead carpenters' family. Instead of resenting the conditions that suddenly pauperize a whole family, the official labor regime takes its place with the church, one of the powerful pillars upholding the capitalist social structure. For this they receive the blessing of heaven's annointed prince on earth. The blessings may fall on the heads of the labor fakers, but no bread comes to the mouths of the starving Castiglionis.

It is significant that Manning's $15,000,000 cathedral, a monument to the black reaction of the nation's metropolis, is not only endorsed by the Building Trades Council, but also by the Central Trades and Labor Assembly. That makes its unanimous, except for the United Hebrew Trades. Cahan, Sigman and Kaufmann could no doubt be persuaded, without much difficulty, to join hands with the Coughlins, Quinns, and Youngs. Reaction is all of one stripe.

Just now official labor is making pretenses to opposition against child labor. But the church is one of the most powerful instruments for combatting any move to take children out of the factories, the mills and the mines.

The Castiglioni children, because of the tragedy that has overtaken them, will be pushed into the nation's great industrial machine, while the episcopal bishop and the labor leaders will look on and praise the beneficent institutions of 100 per cent Americanism.

In life the Castiglioni family, with the wages paid the father, had hardly enough for the meager necessities of life. Then a "green" concrete floor dropped the bread winner eight stories, in one of the city's latest sky scrapers and buried him under tons of broken stone. Hunger began immediately knocking at another tenement door on Prince St.

All these things the Castiglioni children will remember as they grow up. They will not be drawn toward Manning's cathedral, or any other church edifice. They will be of the 27,000,000 boys and girls in this country who reject all religious mummery. These children, as they grow up, will become part of that section of the working class that will make war on the labor allies of bishops and other princes of the church reaction. They will develop into militants who will in time turn to the Communist movement, that alone makes war upon the capitalist state breeding the startling contrasts of the $15,000,000 cathedrals and hungry children.

understand that there is a reason why the leaders of capitalist courts have put the leaders of Communism behind the bars, in filthy cells for the mere fact that they assembled together and expressed their opinion in favor of the working masses."

"We as miners know that the Communists are the only group in the country today that are fighting on the side of the rank and file miners and all other workers. We know that if the atrocities against the workers, such as the cold-blooded murdering of the miners in Pennsylvania, continues, there will be a catastrophe in this country that will be remembered by those who are committing murder and putting honest people in prison. We also hold that the blood of our two brothers—Sam Pace and Steve Frely, who were murdered in the hard coal fields—is dripping from the hands of Cappellini and his 'international' masters."

Lettish Comrades Help.

The Chicago Lettish branch of the Workers (Communist) Party has sent the following telegram to Comrade Ruthenberg. "The Lettish branch of Chicago greets you as a class war prisoner, and stands by you in this hour of persecution. We wish your speedy return to our ranks and pledge to do everything possible for your defense. (Signed) F. Zelms, secretary, 4017 Park Ave."

and slogans and shall demand that the executive bodies of the unions put these measures immediately into effect.

5. The industrial department of the party shall prepare such a resolution and transmit same to all connections.

6. Comrade Harrison George is to be commissioned to prepare draft of pamphlets on wage cuts, to be approved by political committee.

Organization.

1. In those industries where wage cuts are already announced or seem to be imminent, the district organizers are instructed to put into effect the following program:

a. Hold special conferences with party members in respective shops and organize our members to carry on propaganda in shops for a united front of all unions in the industry to resist wage cuts. In the process of this work, organize party shop nuclei.

b. Wherever possible, our comrades in these shops shall organize shop meetings and have resolutions passed against wage cuts and for amalgamation, shop committees and a policy of class struggle.

c. Hold general mass meetings of workers for same purposes.

d. Call upon federation district organizers to assign language speakers and organizers to work under supervision of district organizers.

e. Prepare outline of speeches for our speakers. The main burden of these speeches must be against wage cuts and for amalgamation and the united front. Other issues should be injected, particularly defense of class war prisoners and united front with the Workers Party to fight for the immediate demands of the worker.

f. In critical situations send daily reports to the national office on the developments of the industrial situation and the progress of our work.

2. In resisting the attempts of the employers to reduce wages our general policy shall be three sided: (1) To stimulate the masses to meet every wage cut with a militant strike; (2) To secure the leadership of these strike movements, whether they are conducted by the trade unions or the unorganized masses; (3) To keep the Workers Party program closely before the discontented masses at all times.

FAKE ELECTORAL BILL BACKED BY FASCISTI GUNS

Disfranchise Opposition Plan of Mussolini

ROME, Jan. 13.—The fascisti have called out their military force of armed guards and police to terrorize the people and see that Mussolini's new election law bill goes thru, by force if necessary, as parliament is reassembling today.

The jails are still filled with Communists, and the agitation of the workers demanding their immediate release is increasing. Mussolini has until today secluded himself in his quarters here, and the fact that he was not seen on the streets led to the rumor of his assassination, it is said here.

The election bill upon which Mussolini sponsors, gives the fascisti supporters 2 and 3 votes, and holds the opposition followers down to one vote a piece.

Fascisti Active Here.

An Illinois branch of the Italian fascisti has been organized, which makes its main object a fight against the Communists. In a statement showing plainly that the followers of Mussolini make it their chief task to fight the growing power of the workers, Mario Lauro, secretary of the Illinois fascisti, heaps abuse upon the Italian and American Communists.

"In this period following the war we see the fascists take the place of striking railroad men," Lauro said. He boasted about the fact that Mussolini turned the fascisti into a huge strikebreaking agency, and defeated the workers in their strikes and struggles against their miserable conditions. "The fascisti under Mussolini have saved Italy from the reds," he cluded.

Lauro did not explain how it is that the fascisti are able to remain in power only thru the white terror, and the power of their bayonets.

Huge Anti-Fascist Meetings.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Thousands of persons attended a united front anti-fascisti demonstration, led by the Communists, held in the People's House, 7 E. 15th St., Sunday night. The auditorium was filled to capacity to hear the speakers urge the prevention of any attempts to organize fascisti in America. Comrade Coco, who presided, declared that the black-shirted terrorists and sluggers of the capitalist class must not be permitted to gain a foothold in this country.

Comrade Coco denounced the capitalist press for supporting the fascist dictators. "Giolitti says he wants democracy," said Comrade Coco. "But he wants only to save the bourgeoisie from the rule of the workers led by the Communists, after Mussolini is overthrown. Elbert Gary of the steel trust wants the same kind of democracy that the Giolitti's of Italy want—the license to continue exploiting the workers and prevent the formation of a Soviet government.

The meeting ended with the singing of the Red Flag.

Davis Will Stick

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—James J. Davis will not resign as secretary of labor to make room for John L. "If there is any chance," said Davis, "That is up to the president, who is my boss."

RESCUE 16 SAILORS AFTER BEING AFLOAT TWO WEEKS ON OCEAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Sixteen sailors, the crew of the four masted schooner, Manuel Caragal, were rescued at sea after being afloat on the storm-swept Atlantic for almost two weeks, following the wreck of their vessel, said a radio message to the Independent Wireless corporation here today.

The radio message gave only a sketchy outline of the rescue. It said the men were almost at death's door. They were picked up 240 miles southwest of New York.

RAILROADS ARE PATTED ON WRIST BY COMMISSION

Ordered to Be Fair After Next March

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The interstate commerce commission today reaffirmed its previous decision holding that the practice of the railroads in assigning private cars and foreign line cars for railway fuel to bituminous coal mines in excess of the share contemporaneously distributed to bituminous coal mines upon their lines, which do not receive assigned cars, was unjust and unreasonable.

Commission Divided.

The railroads were ordered to change their practice with regard to privately owned coal cars by March 1, 1925.

The commission was divided on the question, Commissioners Hall, Potter and Cox dissenting from the majority report.

The private car owners are grouped generally into three classes, according to the commission's report:

The Big Moguls.

"1. Those that owned the plants, mines and cars, the latter being used to transport coal from the owned mines to the plants of the owning company. In this class are included Bethlehem Steel corporation, the United States Steel corporation and its subsidiaries, the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.; Wisconsin Steel, and International Harvester companies; Ford Motor Co., and the Steel company of Canada.

The Second Class.

"2. Those that own the cars and the plants, but not the mines. Included in this class are the By-product Coke Ovens, not connected with the steel and other plants, enumerated in class 1, and the Public Service Electric Co.

"3. Those that own cars and mines, but which are dependent upon outside contracts for the disposition of the coal, the Berwynd-White Coal Co., and the Westmoreland Coal Co., being included in this class."

Washington Refuses to Withdraw Its Troops from Southern Republic

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Administration officials are as yet unable to produce evidence that President Salorzano of Nicaragua wants the 100 American marines to remain in that country, where they have been for the past 12 years. Reports that the Washington government may be "induced" by Nicaragua to postpone their withdrawal under the pledge given a year ago are not accurate. Salorzano and his liberal regime were chosen because they were hostile to North American domination, either financial or military. If the marines stay, it will be because Washington is unwilling to yield to the appeals of the Nicaraguan people that they be left to govern themselves.

Dinner Pail Epics
by Bill Lloyd

Federated Press Jingles.

I see the fundamentalists is shaking theologic fists and standing up upon their toes to hit the moderns in the nose. They're called the fundamentalists because in all their mental lists the fundamentals is forgot—the kind what count in life a lot. And what they call the could skate could be a lot more up to date.

In this here fight the biggest thorn would seem to be if folks is born upon this earth with parents two, or whether one will sometimes do.

However folks receive their steer, one thing is sure, they're surely here, and all I've seen, the good and bad, had something looking like a dad. He may have been a poor excuse, but had his biologic use.

If I may offer sum suggestions, it seems to me there's lots of questions on which to work our cerebrum, if we just ain't too awful dumb. The man what swings a dinner pail won't wager one cheap shingle nail to know if preachers fit the slot called fundamental or what-not.

What's fundamental, without fail, is how to fill the dinner pail, and Bryan's pawing of the air don't seem to put no grub in there.

Theology ain't my long suit. In economics I'm a beaut. I can't discuss the virgin birth, when when it comes to things of earth, I think I could surely tell some things about the present hell. Of weary toil we are the son, whether we had one dad or none. And life would still be quite a stew, if we could prove that we had two.

GRUELLING WORK LOT OF LABOR IN GERMANY TODAY

Men, Women and Children Must Labor

By GARL BRANNIN.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

HOCHST, Germany, Jan. 13.—This little village of 2,200 souls midway between Frankfort and Heidelberg affords a picture of rural life which is illuminating to one who comes with impressions of Germany gained chiefly from reading.

Nestled between the wooded slopes of the hills with a noisy little stream running thru the town this place of red tile roofs, half timbered houses dating back to the 17th century and narrow winding streets has a charm to the newcomer familiar with the regimented order of the cities.

It's Work! Work! Work!

But closer contact with the primitive standard of comfort and a glimpse of the specter who has taken up his residence here as well as in every city and hamlet in Germany, goes far to dispel the atmosphere of picturesqueness and uncover the hard facts in everyday life.

In many respects life today is little different from the days before August, 1914. People worked hard cultivating their little patches of land or in nearby mills and at other kinds of labor. And yet they found the time and had the spirit to get much pleasure out of community life. They had plenty to eat and drink and no occasion to worry for their standards were simple and in their own small circle, they saw no reason to doubt that they would continue to get along.

Today the same rule of labor continues, but it has been extended to take in all members of the family. The problem of getting a living has become a very serious matter. The mother steals time from her home duties to do small jobs or to peddle odds and ends; the children find ways of picking up a few extra pfennigs and, when thru the regular school at 14, go into industry or housework. Many houses have small stocks of goods to sell tended by the wife or children while the husband goes out to work. Even with all hands earning one wonders how the people get along.

Wages Low; Food Cost High.

Wages average around $1 per day while the cost of food thruout the nation is as high as in the United States and sometimes higher. Coffe from 60c to $1 per lb.; bread, 20c for a 4-lb. loaf; beef, 25 to 35c a lb.; soft coal, $11 per ton. Nearly every family has a small patch where they raise potatoes, carrots, fruit and garden stuff. In this village practically no building work is going on. If you want to rent a house you register with the burgomaster and take your turn.

There is a co-operative store with about 300 members and growing patronage. It acts to keep down the price of bread and other staples, but one is impressed with the large amount of petty trading and shop keeping and home industry. A privately owned electric plant which sells light at 11c per KWH and power at less facilitates these home industries.

A day in Heidelberg furnished another bit of information as to the changed economic condition of the German people. The enrollment at the great university is only one-third of 1913.

Another angle of the picture is presented at Erbach in this district where the hereditary count tho deprived of his title by the 1918 revolution still occupies the family palace and draws rents and dividends from lands and industrial enterprises to the tune of 2,000,000 marks ($500,000) yearly. He, like Stinnes, Thyssen, and the industrial overlords, does not need to worry about the price of bread, blutwurst and beer.

Executive Clemency for Carlo Tresca is Requested by Bureau

(By Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Application for executive clemency for Carlo Tresca, serving sentence of one year and a day at Atlanta penitentiary for the publishing of a two-line birth control book advertisement in his paper Il Martello, has been forwarded to U. S. attorney general by the American Civil Liberties Union, acting for Tresca. The union asks for clemency on the ground that sentence is disproportionate to the offense. It is the first prison sentence imposed in the United States under statute penalizing birth control advertising.

The Communist Press and the Young Workers

By JOHN WILLIAMSON.

THE Young Workers League participated in the campaign to launch our first English Communist Daily and today it feels proud of the fact that during the past year we have been able to keep our Communist Daily in the field continually as the fighting expression of the working class in its many and varied struggles.

Today when we are facing a national crisis, when unemployment is growing each month, when the young workers are being pitted against the adults in the vicious circle of wage cuts, and replacement of the adult and more experienced workers by young workers for less pay, it is the DAILY WORKER which raises the slogan and demands of the Young Workers League who are always active in every industrial conflict.

During the past year when the League has been advancing forward on the field of economic struggle, the DAILY WORKER has been an invaluable asset in each of the many campaign conducted by the League.

Today, when we are approaching new imperialist wars which will result in the young workers being called upon to sacrifice their lives on the battlefield for American plutocracy it will be the DAILY WORKER which will serve as a daily medium of advice and leadership to every worker, young and old, against the further ventures of American imperialism. The DAILY WORKER must be the standard around which we rally day after day in our attack against the capitalist state and its hirelings.

While the official organ of the League, The Young Worker, is important for every young Communist, nevertheless we must not forget that the youth movement is only a section of our Communist movement of America. After spending four, five or six years in the youth movement we must enter completely the party and there carry on the struggle till final victory crowns our efforts. In this struggle of ours, whether it be of interest to the youth or the adult movement the importance of the DAILY WORKER cannot be overestimated.

From another angle the DAILY WORKER is one of the best means of training the new recruits who enter our revolutionary youth movement. In our daily paper they receive the news of the entire world labor and Communist movement. They receive a wide, a world vision, which is so necessary to world solidarity.

With the DAILY WORKER helping and aiding the American young workers in their daily battles and serving as an educational and rallying point for the young American Communists we must be determined to sacrifice in order to keep our DAILY WORKER in the field.

DEMOCRACY IN ACTION EXPOSED BY BALLOT CROOK

Schooled Boys and Men in "Election Fixing"

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—A sensational revelation of the workings of bourgeois democracy in all its nakedness in the form of an election scandal, has caused quite a stir in this city.

It has now been disclosed that Congressman Nathan D. Perlman, republican, was re-elected over his democratic opponent, Dr. William I. Sirovich, by the wholesale manipulation of votes under the direction of a professional "election fixer," George Rosken, who confessed before the grand jury that under his direction a systematic steal was carried out.

He stated that he was in charge of many men and boys whom he trained to assist him in the work of putting the election of Perlman over, so the official returns gave the congressional seat to Perlman by a slender majority of 121 votes.

Rosken described his operations as follows:

"On election night, November 4, I was tally clerk in the twenty-third election district of the eighth assembly district. When the vote for governor was being polled, my aides were secretly checking up the vote for congress.

"In this way, before the other members of the board got to the congress count, I knew that Sirowich was ahead by about 125 votes in our district.

"I had received word that the vote separating Dr. Sirovich and Perlman was very close and that if I could keep Sirovich's lead down to fifty votes, Perlman would be re-elected.

"I manipulated the tally sheets so that when the clerk handling the ballots called a vote for Sirovich, I recorded the vote for Perlman. In this way I reduced the Sirovich majority of at least 125 to 45.

"My alterations thereupon showed a total vote of 225 for Sirovich and 205 for Perlman. An accurate and honest tally would have given Sirovich 325 or 330 votes and Peryman about 140.

"If my figures do not jibe it is because here and there I would throw an odd vote to William Karlin, the socialist candidate, who stood no chance anyway.

"I had a ring on my finger, specially made, which I HAD BEEN USING TO FAKE VOTES for years. This ring had on the side toward the palm a pencil lead setting. I used this lead to write in about fifteen votes for Perlman on ballots when the vote for congressman had been left blank.

"In some cases, where a straight democratic ticket had been cast, including a vote for Dr. Sirovich, I would add to the ballot markings a vote for one of the other congress candidates. This, of course, would have the effect of voiding the vote for Sirovich."

Rosken here demonstrated with a pencil point concealed in the palm of his hand how he could mark a ballot and escape detection.

He went on:

"I am not the only one that can do this. I have trained many others in the same trick. I have a school around election time, for this sort of thing and I have been called in as an expert election fixer in hotly contested districts in Queens, Bronx and Kings county, as well as in other districts in Manhattan. Sometime I would bring with me some of my aides whom I had schooled."

CHICAGO MYSTERY GIRL IDENTIFIED AS ST. LOUIS PRINTER'S DAUGHTER

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—Chicago's mystery girl, after being identified as Charlotte Maguire, is home again with her invalid mother and her father, who is a printed by trade. The girl has suffered a lapse of memory which lasted over two months during which time she got stranded in Chicago and was held until she was identified by her aunt, Mrs. Anna Griffiths.

Mrs. Griffiths read an item in the St. Louis papers stating that Chicago's mystery girl, Charlotte Norris, would broadcast a radio message in the hope of finding her friends. Mrs. Griffiths immediately started for Chicago where she identified the girl as her neice, Charlotte Maguire.

GERMANY OPENS TRADE WAR ON FRENCH RIVAL

BERLIN, Jan. 13.— A fierce trade war between Germany and France looms, now that the Berlin government is able to act independently in the matter of negotiating trade agreements with allied nations on terms of equality.

On January 11, Germany was freed from certain commercial restraints forced on her by the treaty of Versailles. Under the terms of the treaty Germany was obliged to grant one-sided tariff favors to France, while France slapped the maximum tariff on all German importations. Hardly had the clock struck twelve on midnight of January 11, when Germany planted a wicked tariff wallop on commercial France's nose. The tariff war is one now in real earnest.

Situation Muddled.

The German capitalist politicians have yet found it impossible to form a cabinet. The situation is as hopelessly muddled as ever

The first four months' operation of the Dawes' plan netted the allies 286,263,447 gold marks in reparations. Of this sum Great Britain received $5,800,000 and France $113,600,000.

Charge Governor of Kansas Conspired To Accept Bribe

TOPEKA, Kans., Jan. 13.—Governor Jonathan M. Davis and his son, Russell, were charged in information filed today in city court by Tinkham Veale, county attorney for Shawnee county, with "conspiracy and accepting a bribe," in connection with alleged sales of pardons in Kansas.

With Veale going out of office, a change in plans was made at the last moment and the governor was to be arrested while still governor of Kansas.

Report on Wheat Products.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—The department of commerce announces statistics on wheat ground and wheat milling products, by months. The figures for October are revised to include reports received since the preliminary bulletin for at the rate of 5,000 or more barrels of flour annually.

For November 876 companies reported 1,012 mills, 21 of which were idle during the month, and these mills produced approximately 83 per cent of the total wheat flour reported at the biennial census of manufacturers, 1921. The 1,066 mills reporting for October produced 84 per cent of the flour reported in 1921.

TOM WALSH OF MONTANA DINES WITH MC LEAN

Harding's Pal Back at Old Haunts

By LAURENCE TODD.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, January 13.—E. B. McLean, who last spring was hiding in Florida while his detectives, go-betweens to the White House and capitol, private secretaries and lawyers were trying to save him from the witness chair in the Teapot Dome investigation, has give a New Year reception to some hundreds of officials, bankers and other important persons in Washington.

And who do you suppose was one of his most distinguished guests?

None other than Senator Tom Walsh of Montana, who directed that Teapot Dome inquiry, and who surprised everyone by the gentleness of his questions when at last he did get the $100,000 liar before him. McLean had notified the committee, thru his lawyer, Mitchell Palmer, that he lent Fall the mysterious $100,000 which afterward was shown to have ben delivered by Doheny to Fall in a satchel.

Snappy Stories.

A former democratic congressman has written, under a pen name, an enlightening review of the Scott divorce case, insofar as the testimony in that case has touched the life lived by congressmen nowadays.

"Washington knows about the Boar's Nest," he says, referring to the gambling house in which Scott is declared by Mrs. Scott to have lost big sums of his official salary. "But the men in charge of that particular gambling house have such a political pull that they are never disturbed. Their principal patrons are leading members of the old guard machine. When Uncle Joe Cannon was czar of the house, the course of legislation was determined by conferences held in the Boar's Nest, games being suspended in order that an 'understanding' might be reached. Congressmen who wanted to stand well with the machine found it advantageous to show up at the Boar's Nest. The road to preferment lay past the gaming table.

"Lobbyists with fat bank rolls 'got acquainted' with legislators at the Boar's Nest. Sometimes the lobbyists were obliging enough to be heavy losers."

Scott, according to this insider's statement, began to "slip" soon after the 1920 election, when he had ran as a moderate progressive. He introduced a bill that would have killed the seamen's act, so far as the Great Lakes were concerned. He went wrong on other things, too. Labor turned against him in 1922, but he was returned as a machine candidate He was placed on the rules committee. Since 1920 his career has been market by the events testified to in the divorce suit—the trip to Panama, and his alleged smuggling of a trunkload of liquor into Washington. Scott denies that he smuggled, or that he lost thousands at cards in a week, or that Rep. Royal Johnson of South Dakota has the Scott furniture because of a gambling debt. Everybody's talking about it.

MAYOR HYLAN'S TUNNEL JOB IS HALTED BY MEN

Union Sand Hogs Demand Safety Devices

By ART SHIELDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Not a union sand hog can Mayor Hylan get for his proposed tunnel under the Narrows from Brooklyn to Staten Island until the working hours for high air pressure men are reduced.

Auctioning of the tunnel contract has stopped until the mayor gets an agreement with the Compressed Air Workers' Union.

Tired of Committing Suicide.

"We are tired of committing suicide," said an old sand hog in the union's office at 229 East 84th street. "Look at Mike there, crippled for life, paralyzed from the hips down. He got the 'bends' once too often."

The "bends" follow long hours under high air pressure. The worker may pass out thru the air locks feeling pretty fit and two hours after double up and collapse on the street and be laid up for a week to two months. After several attacks of the "bends" he is thru for life. Hundreds of "bends" attacks have occurred on the great vehicular tunnel project from Canal street, Manhattan to Jersey City, with about two hundred more or less permanently disabled and 10 killed.

The union agrees that high air pressure is unavoidable; that a pound of air is necessary for every two pounds of water pressure. But the union demands that working hours per day be reduced in porportion to the air pressure hazard—the hours to range from 8 at comparitvely low pressure to one at 50 pounds.

Union Demands Safeguarded Workers.

The new demands which must be met by whatever contractor gets the Brooklyn-Staten Island contrat, make drastic changes for the better over the hour schedules prevailing on the Booth & Flinn job from Manhattan to Jersey City. The 6 hour day is to begin at 18 pounds, instead of 21; the 4 hour day at 26 pounds instead of 30; 3 hours from 33 to 38 pounds; 2 from 38 to 43; 1½ hours from 43 to 48 and 1 hour per day at 48 to 50 pounds. Due rest periods are to be given.

Proof that contractors can successfully operate under this schedule is shown by the success of the O'Rouke company on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit power house on the East river.

The Compressed Air Workers' Union seeks to have these provisions binding on all future operations, thru the passage of the Steinberg bill, now before the New York legislature.

Joseph McPartlan, secretary of the Compressed Air Workers' Union gave the Federated Press a total of sand hog casualties on the Booth & Flinn Manhattan-Jersey job. Nine hundred and thirty were injured, according to union figures, reckoned on the basis of men seeking compensation, the public service commission admitting 580. Ten were killed and 200 more or less permanently disabled.

Two Men Injured Daily.

"Ten men are injured daily on this job," said McPartlan in his little office. "That's a big human price to pay for his big engineering project. The trouble is that the price is unnecessarily big. Most of the injuries are due to the cruelly long hours at the unnatural conditions.

"The sand hog doesn't make a fortune. He works only part time; gets seven, eight and eight and a half dollars a day, with certain serious injury awaking him sooner or later. His working life is far shorter than in other occupations and insurance companies either reject him entirely or charge him four times the rate of other high rate risks."

Snow Buries Jap Train.

TOKYO, Jan. 13.—A large force of coolies are engaged in digging out the passengers of a train buried by snow during a heavy blizzard that has been raging in northeastern Japan, reports reaching here late today said.

KU KLUX KLAN OUSTED FROM STATE OF KANSAS BY THE SUPREME COURT

TOPEKA Kansas, Jan. 13.—The ku klux klan was ousted from the state of Kansas today by the state supreme court.

The court issued the ouster in its ruling on the state suit to drive the klan out of Kansas brought three years ago by Attorney General R. J. Hopkins.

The decision was based on the point that purchase of lodge paraphernalia and supplies without a charter is illegal in Kansas.

The ruling means that scores of lodges which have been doing business in the state without a charter will be compelled to cease until they obtain state sanction.

The Workers Party in Action

WORKERS IN NEW YORK MUST BOOST BAZAAR FOR CLASS WAR PRISONERS IN UNIONS TO ASSURE ITS SUCCESS

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—One thousand revolutionaries have been arrested in Esthonia, scores of them have been murdered. Large numbers have been killed in Lithuania and more arrested. Latvia and Finland are the scenes of the wildest black reaction. The revolutionary workers of Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria, Poland, Jugoslavia, Greece are being arrested every day.

Militant Workers Massacred.

Four hundred workers and peasants were recently arrested in Roumania and subjected to the vilest terrorism. In Spain, the de Rivera dictatorship is drowning the revolutionary movement in blood. Mussolini is sending his blackshirts against the revolutionary workers once more, hoping in this way to crush the revolutionary movement. In India, Java, China and Japan, the capitalist government is massacring the working masses, thinking in this way to keep down the spirit of revolt.

The conviction of Charles E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party, and his sentence to three to ten years in prison in the state of Michigan; the prosecution of Robert Minor, former editor of the Liberator; the arrest of John Lassen, editor of the Elore, the Hungarian labor paper and of Emmanuel Vajtauer, editor of the Obrana, the Czecho-Slovakian labor paper; the contemplated prosecution of more than 30 other workers who attended the convention of the Communist Party convention in Bridgeman, Michigan—and the hundreds of foreign-born workers who face deportation—all of this shows clearly that the capitalist government of the United States intendts to do the same with the revolutionary movement in this country.

Who are to aid the class war prisoners in the capitalist dungeons of Europe? Who are to help in the defense of the workers who stand before the capitalist courts of the United States? Only the workers will do it. Only the sympathisers with the revolutionary movement will do their share.

What is your labor organization doing to aid the cause? The International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council, which are organized to do this work, have arranged a joint bazaar, which will take place at the Lyceum, 86th St. and 3rd Ave., New York City, from Feb. 11 to 14. This bazaar must be made a success. It will be a success, if every worker, every labor organization does its part.

We need articles for the bazaar. Every class conscious worker, every trade union, every workers' organization, every fraternal organization should do its share. We appeal to all these organizations to take up the matter at once and to do their utmost in procuring as many articles as possible.

Send a notice of what you are doing to the Joint Bazaar Committee, 208 East 12th St., New York City, or call up Stuyvestant 2818.

The need is great—Do not delay. Every trade union must co-operate.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS
CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

STATEMENT OF NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

IN view of the calling of the enlarged executive sessions of the Communist International and Young Communist International called for the near future, the national executive committee of the Young Workers League of America hereby withdraws the call for the convention call until after the sessions of the enlarged executive.

The discussion in the Young Worker on the statement of the national executive committee will cease with the Jan. 15 issue of the Young Worker. The discussion in the branches and membership meetings must cease immediately except for those meetings already arranged prior to the publication of this statement. At these membership meetings already arranged the N. E. C. shall strive to have a representative present and any comrade representing any other definite opinions be given equal time to present their viewpoint.

With the closing of the league discussion the organization must unite and knit itself more solidly than ever to carry on the work that lies before us. Regardless of differences during the discussion every comrade must subordinate these and unite behind the policies and the outline of work adopted by the N. E. C. and see that it is carried into effect wholeheartedly by every member and unit of the organization. Our immediate tasks are many, our numbers are still small and we must not allow anything to hinder us in our progress towards a real Bolshevized Young Communist League.

The entire league must enter wholeheartedly the Lenin enrollment drive to "Double our members during 1925." This slogan must permeate the entire organization. This must not be an isolated and member catching drive. It must be linked up closely with the organization of our league completely upon the shop nucleus basis. Furthermore our membership drive must be linked up closely with the economic struggles of the working class youth. We must gain the support of the young factory workers upon the basis of our everyday economic and trade union demands. We must permeate the millions of young Negro workers with our propaganda and bring them into our ranks. We must extend our activities amongst the young agriculture workers and thus solidify the city and country proletarian youth During this year we must transform our league completely upon the shop nucleus basis and this can be accomplished much better by connecting this task directly with our Lenin enrollment drive.

Another immediate task that lies before us is the issuing of the Weekly Young Worker in the immediate future. Every member and sympathizer must redouble their energies to collect the necessary $2,000 and secure thousands of new subscribers. With our press transformed into a weekly, we will have a powerful weapon to help us reach the masses of young industrial workers. "Every member to work! The Weekly Young Worker by March 1st!"

The many tasks which lie before us have been outlined by the national executive committee in its program of action printed in the Oct. 15 issue and again elaborated and amplified in the national executive statement printed in the Dec. 15 issue of the Young Worker.

Altho the convention has been temporarily postponed this only gives us an opportunity to build our league and make greater strides forward prior to our third national convention. Let every member step to his post NOW and carry on the necessary work which is required to build our league into a mass organization. The discussion is closed. Now is the time for action. To work, comrades.

National Executive Committee.
John Williamson,
National Secretary.

From Now on--Into Both Ears--Please

WHERE do we stand in this campaign to INSURE THE LIFE of the DAILY WORKER so as to the quicker assure the death of capitalism?

Yesterday the DAILY WORKER passed its first milestone in revolutionary service. It was a very busy year. It was a year of achievement. The major achievement of the DAILY WORKER is that TODAY we have an INFORMED party.

Today the party knows what's going on in the world. Today our party membership can talk interestingly and intelligently about the Dawes plan and Morgan, about MacDonald and India, about Pekin and Karakahn, about Japan and the Shenandoah, about Cappellini and Farrington, about Standard Oil and the Royal Dutch Shell, about Imperialism and Us.

Today we have a party membership that is INFORMED. Today we have a party membership that can TALK. In the daily contact the DAILY WORKER reader makes with other workers he is TODAY enabled to TELL THINGS and give the things he tells the RIGHT interpretation, ours, that of our party.

THIS IS GOOD! And what is good for us and our party and our aim must be continued. It is for this reason, among others, that the DAILY WORKER must have its LIFE INSURED.

15,000 DOLLARS
IN CONTRIBUTIONS TO DATE

in this campaign of ours and yours for $50,000 to safeguard our daily. Everything considered this is a very satisfactory beginning. This means that we have put the campaign one-third over.

In yesterday's Birthday Special we printed the names of the MILITANT BRANCHES and their remittances to date. What Story does this MILITANT PAGE TELL? Read!

OUR PARTY HAS 995 BRANCHES.

THIS MEANS THAT 546 BRANCHES HAVE NOT YET HELPED TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

To reach, to awaken, to secure ACTION from these 546 branches now becomes the job of all of us. It becomes the job of every DAILY WORKER reader in these branches. It becomes the job of every C. C. C. secretary who has part of these branches under his jurisdiction. It becomes the job of every district organizer, federation secretary, DAILY WORKER agent.

From now on, we're not going to run the risk of having what we say go into one ear and out of the other. From now on we intend shouting into both ears of all these branches; we and the federation secretaries into one ear, the district organizers and all other interested into the other. In this way the importance of this campaign surely will register.

The importance of this campaign MUST REGISTER with every branch and party member. We say MUST because we, all of us, have decided, finally, that this campaign is going to be the kind in which EVERY PARTY BRANCH TAKES PART. THE KIND TO WHICH EVERY PARTY BRANCH RESPONDS.

$20,000 in pledges still to collect!

Of our 995 party branches 546 have not yet remitted a single dollar.

With prospects such as these, a Communist Party should understand its task and turn out a complete job!

And We Will!

MANY GOVERNORS IN SADDLE FOR BIG BUSINESS

State Machines Scrap Over Spoils

With the meeting of many state legislatures, and the inauguration of the new governors, the state political machines have settled down to fighting each other to see which political gangs shall control state graft.

Small's Speech Ignores Workers.

In Springfield, Ill., Governor Small made the usual inaugural speech, telling what a splendid man he is. Small did not mention of course, his deals with the ku klux klan during the campaign in which he was re-elected. Nor did he have much to say about the case on which he is out on bonds, charged with stealing millions of dollars from the state of Illinois. Small was content to harp on good roads and other "safe" issues. He did not refer to his consistent anti-labor record. Small made no recommendations for laws which would help the workers in any way.

Governor A. V. Donahey, the only democrat to survive the republican landslide in Ohio, took the oath of office for a second time as governor of Ohio. Donahey is well liked by the corporations, as he does their bidding as quickly as James Cox or Frank Willis, former republican governors, could obey.

Bosses Sitting Pretty.

Several political cliques are struggling for final control of the Indiana state legislature, with the odds favoring the gang backing the newly installed governor, Edward Jackson. One of the first pieces of business transacted by the legislature at Indianapolis, rushed thru in almost record time, was the passing of the appropriation of $100,000 to pay the salaries of the assemblymen. The speed with which this work was transacted is in marked contrast to the delay accorded bills for better wages and working conditions for Indiana's workers.

One of the hardest legislative battles will occur when the republicans who were defeated in the primaries last May attempt to repeal the primary election law. The gang that was ousted from power in the republican party of Indiana have organized a powerful opposition to the present office holders, and are expected to join with the democrats on some issues. In his message to the legislature, Governor Jackson opposed a repeal of the primary law.

Jackson Worst Prison in Country.

Governor Groesbeck at Lansing, Mich., where the supreme court a few days ago denied Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party a new trial, delivered the usual governor's message calling for money. Groesbeck mentioned the dilapidated condition of Michigan's prisons. Ruthenberg is confined in the state prison at Jackson, Mich., considered one of the worst prisons in the country.

The Morgans and Rockefellers are resting easy, as they know that no matter whether the state machinery belongs to the democratic or republican political camp, it was all bought and paid for by Wall Street money. The state political machines are the servants of the employing class.

MINERS THANK DAILY WORKER FOR ITS HELP

Families In Destitute Circumstances

Despite the columns of optimism published in the capitalist press, boasting of the great industrial prosperity prevailing in America, the stories that come into the office of the DAILY WORKER from the coal regions of southern Illinois carry a different message.

There, we find want, real want. Many of these coal miners have been idle for two years thru a closing down of the mines, and mining is practically the only industry in those regions.

Letter From Miner.

The DAILY WORKER has repeatedly called the attention of its readers to the sufferings of the dependents of the unemployed coal miners, and the following letter from the president of a local union in Sessor shows that the miners are appreciative:

Dear Comrades:—I received package of clothing from the DAILY WORKER yesterday and wish to thank the DAILY WORKER for same, as things contained therein are of great benefit to some of our families here who are in very destitute circumstances.

With all good wishes to the DAILY WORKER, I remain,

Comradely yours,
ROSS WHITE.

Miners Generous.

The miners have never failed to respond to appeals for assistance in a working class fight when they were financially able to do so. No other section of the American working class displayed as much generosity. This should be an added reason why our readers should not forget the miners of southern Illinois and their dependents.

The DAILY WORKER will be glad to forward money or articles of clothing to the organization that is looking after relief work among the miners.

Favored Reduced Rates.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—Reduction in the rate on government loans to the railroads, from 6 per cent to 5 or even 4½ per cent, is favored by President Coolidge. He thinks that lower rates on loans will be reflected in lower freight rates.

JACK JOHNSTONE WILL SPEAK ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION AT THE NEXT MEETING OF CHICAGO BRANCH T.U.E.L.

Jack Johnstone, assistant secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, will report on the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor at the next regular monthly meeting of the Chicago branch of the league.

The meeting will be held on the last Wednesday in January at 8 p. m. in North West Hall, corner of Western and North avenues.

Comrade Johnstone reported the El Paso convention for the DAILY WORKER and traveled to Mexico with, but not as guest of, the labor fakers who accepted President Calles' of Mexico invitation to witness the inaugural ceremonies in the Mexican capital.

Johnstone has the unusual distinction of being the first Communist reporter in America to announce the passing of America's greatest labor faker.

ASWELL URGES ESPIONAGE FOR ALIEN WORKERS

Asks War Against Seven Million Foreign-Born

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Registration of every alien in the United States every year, and continuous "tagging" of his whereabout by the federal government are proposed by Congressman Aswell of Louisiana, a former school teacher, in a bill which he has introduced too late for consideration in this congress.

"It is estimated that there are 7,000,000 aliens in this country who have not taken out their first papers," he says, "and hence have no intention of becoming supporting American citizens. They sent back to their various countries last year $400,000,000 which they saved by living here on pennies. They get all they can from our beneficent government and yet hold their allegiance to foreign governments. There are aliens in the United States who enjoy the protection of our flag and yet if they could would destroy it."

For Spy System.

Under his scheme, the arriving alien would be made to pay a fee of $10 for original registration, and would have to register and pay $5 every year thereafter until he became an American citizen. All aliens now here would have to make the $10 and $5 payments too, and report at the registration offices, which would generally be the post offices.

When an alien wished to leave one district to reside in another, he would have to first notify the office where he had been registered, and then within 48 hours of arrival notify the office in the district to which he moved. This is the old Russian and German imperial police system of espionage upon the movements of individuals.

Why Not Fingerprints Too?

In order to give the alien a proper sense of his being under the eye of the police, he would be compelled to secure a certificate of identification, which must be shown to any officer of the department of justice, department of labor or police power of the several states. Penalties would be inflicted for failure to produce this passport when accosted by a police officer or detective. Hotel and boarding house keepers, just as in the old European scheme, would be compelled to report immediately the arrival of alien guests and the employment of alien help.

Two Snowshovelers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Charles H. McWilliams, 65 year old worker, shoveled snow in New York's streets for two days but couldn't collect his $15 for several days. He had no money for food or for carfare to his home in Jersey or for lodging in New York. He slept in the subway at night. He didn't have even a nickel to take him to the section pay-master's office and when he went to the main office, department of finance, municipal building, he stood in line until he got to the window to be told that he must go to the section office. He collapsed on the floor from starvation and is threatened with pneumonia from exposure.

Snowshoveller 4560, a strong young worker who hadn't been able to connect with a job until the snow, ducked a snowball and fell in the way of a truck which struck and killed him. He had no papers to identify him in his clothing.

Chances to Steal Some More.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—An allotment of $405,700,000 for the United States veterans' bureau was the largest item in the independent offices appropriation bill, reported to the house today. The bill carried a total of $452,349,617 for the operation during the fiscal year beginning July 1. of federal bureaus not connected with the principal departments.

LONE COMMUNIST HAS ONLY PLAN FOR N. D. FARMERS

N. P. L. Governor Fights Child Labor Law

By ALFRED KNUTSON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 13.—Discussion has been started here among state legislators as to what kind of bills and resolutions should be introduced.

League Officials at Sea.

The steering committee of the nonpartisan league so far has no definite plank and purpose, and absolutely no program of interest to the working farmers of the state. It is doubtful whether league leaders will propose the passage of any bills and resolutions that will be of value to the exploited farmers and workers, notwithstanding the fact that such measures have no chance of getting by the I. V. A. (Big Business) controlled senate, and cannot stand the test of the courts.

This would mean that no battle will be waged in behalf of the bankrupt and mortgaged farmers, except for the lone fight of A. C. Miller, the one Communist, because, ultimately, they can only be helped when capitalist legislatures and capitalist courts have been done away with altogether

It is exactly the political institutions of capitalism that hinder the solution of the farmers' problems, and its is against these institutions we must fight.

Sorlie for Child Slavery.

Sorlie, the league governor, is against the child labor amendment, which is only a bourgeois and ineffective substitute for real abolition of child slavery, it is true, but nevertheless a genuine issue in which workers and farmers are widely interested and around which the Workers (Communist) Party is rallying all poor formers and industrial workers to compel action.

Sorlie's hostility to the ratification of the child labor amendment does not suit many of the nonpartisan league members of the legislature, who believe that it should be ratified. The lone Communist, A. C. Miller, has made ratification of the child labor amendment a leading issue in his program, and on this as on other points the governor is meeting opposition from league members.

West Frankfort Coal Diggers Working for Special Elections

VALIER, Ill., Jan. 13.—The miners of this sub-district are continuing their efforts to get a special convention for the purpose of investigating frauds perpetrated by the Farrington machine during the election and making arrangements for new elections.

During the elections several hundred bogus ballots were discovered and the reactionaries also broke into the office of a progressive local and got away with the contents of the safe.

Several locals are working hard collecting signatures in order to secure the necessary names.

Want U. S. to Buy Cave.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—A delegation from Kentucky, headed by Senator Ernst today sought the support of President Coolidge for legislation now pending in congress, providing for the purchase of Mammoth Cave, Ky., by the government for inclusion in the national park system.

About 20,000 acres of land at an estimated cost of $2,000,000 is involved.

Alabama Judge Frees Wobblies.

MOBILE, Ala.—Thirteen seamen arrested Nov. 20 for having cards of the Marine Transport Workers' branch I. W. W., were released Jan. 7. The trial judge ruled that the defendants must be charged with an act of violence after taking membership in the organization and that mere membership is not a violation of Alabama law.

Store Burns Mysteriously.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Jan. 13. — Investigation of fire which spared only the frame of the Franks Drygoods company store here today revealed that damage may exceed $500,000. Store officials were endeavoring to determine the origin of the fire, the second big department store fire here within a month. Stock of the Boston store was destroyed Dec. 21 with a loss of $350,000.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD TELLS OF TRADING BY SOVIET RUSSIA IN U. S.

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Senator Borah has caused to be printed in the Congressional Record an Associated Press dispatch from New York, showing that the combined total business handled by the 3 trading companies representing the Soviet Union in the United States in 1924 was $63,416.147, and with transactions handled thru European cities it reached $69,757,761. Of the former sum, $52,692,549 represents American goods shipped to Russia. The total turn-over is $23.257,761 more than the pre-war total.

He also printed in this connection a letter from Joseph Newburger, of the Newburger Cotton Co., Memphis, Tenn., urging recognition of Russia for the sake of better trade relations. Newburger has made three trips to Russia, the first one 25 years ago. He declares that Russia would buy 500,000 bales of American cotton, worth $400,000,000, if the channels of trade are opened by diplomatic recognition, and the Russian market will also take $200,000,000 worth of American farm machinery, electrical appliances and other manufactured goods.

UNIONS BACK UP W. P. IN FIGHT ON CHILD LABOR

Omaha, Nebr., Militants to Spread Campaign

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 13.—Close behind the Stonecutters' Union and the Independent (LaFollette) Club, which have gone on record as the result of the campaign of the local T. U. E. L. and Workers Party militants, the Moulders' Local Union, No. 190, has passed a resolution on the child labor question and has also appointed a committee of two to co-operate in the campaign. This action was taken after their meeting had been addressed by David Coutts, local secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, and Tom Matthews.

The Independent club, in response to the united front proposals of the local City Central Committee of the Workers Party, had reviously appointed a committee to co-operate in the campaign on the child labor question, and also appointed a committee to go before the state legislature in behalf of the child labor amendment.

To Spread Campaign.

The Omaha militants are now taking steps to spread the campaign on the child labor question thruout both Iowa and Nebraska.

The resolution passed by the Moulders' Union is as follows:

Resolution Against Child Labor.

WHEREAS, the physical and moral well-being of the children of the working class in this country is being destroyed thru brutal exploitation in the mines, mills, factories and sweatshops to create larger profits for employers; and

WHEREAS, thru the exploitation of the children the employers are enabled to reduce wages and lower the conditions of labor, and to weaken the trade unions; and

WHEREAS, the children of the workers and small farmers are entitled to a full education, without being penalized thru lack of the necessities of life that forces them into hard work in their childhood, thereby stunting their lives; and

WHEREAS, children are forced to work because of the poverty of their parents and a child labor law without government support for the child going to school would have little value; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, that we demand the immediate ratification by the state legislatures of the child labor amendment to the constitution and that congress shall immediately pass a law prohibiting the labor of children under eigtheen years of age; and be it further

RESOLVED, that, since the child labor amendment would be meaningless without government maintenance of the school children of the workers and farmers, the state and federal legislatures shall provide by law for full maintenance of all school children of workers and small farmers, the funds for this purpose to come from special taxes on high incomes, and be it further

RESOLVED, that we favor setting aside of all discriminatory clauses in the constitution of the trades unions and admitting all young workers into the unions with equal rights, and that dues and initiation fees be adjusted for the young workers in order that they may strengthen the unions against the employers; and be it further

RESOLVED, that our organization is ready to enter a common political struggle against child labor exploitation and for full government mantenance of the school children of workers and small farmers, and pledge ourselves to co-operate with other working class organizations to this end.

Suggests Sympathy.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor has written President Coolidge and Governor Cox of Massachusetts "requesting their sympathetic attention" for the appeal for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Labor Faker Saves Money on Funeral Of Samuel Gompers

If a prominent labor leader died every week, Harry Jensen, president of the Carpenters' District Council, would be about ten thousand dollars to the good, on that item alone, according to a carpenter from Harry's home town who walked into the office of the DAILY WORKER yesterday.

Not seeing any close connection between dead labor fakers and dough, tho the connection is quite obvious when they are alive, the reporter nailed the carpenter down to a more specific recital, so to speak.

This is what developed: The last report to come to the membership of the Carpenters' Union here in Chicago from their district council showed that Harry Jensen received $350.00 for going to New York to see Sam Gompers planted between Andy Carnegie and "Bill" Rockefeller.

Was Quite a Climber.

The carpenter from Jensen's home town (where it is reported Harry made quite a name for himself, being a social climber in the widest possible sense) observed that his townie was a thrifty chap and preferred to be on the receiving than the giving end of everything but a dangerous weapon, and could not fancy him traveling to New York on the Twentieth Century which would put a dent of fifty dollars on his little nest egg, leaving $300.00 to paint Gotham red.

What it cost to travel up to Yonkers, where Sam was buried, would not purchase a cargo of Haig and Haig, but the man from the little town where Jensen used to play around, figured that Harry must have at least two hundred of the $350.00 when he got back to the Windy City.

He Saw the Connection.

It then began to dawn on the unsophisticated reporter that there was a connection between dead labor fakers and savings accounts.

"Harry dresses better since he became a labor leader than he used to when climing into attics in his home town," observed the visiting carpenter. "The cops were not as friendly to Harry then as they have become since he began expelling radicals from the union," said our friend as he departed.

Pay Union Wages.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—New York dress jobbers are to make themselves responsible for the payment of union wages by contractors to whom they parcel out their orders, under an agreement being worked out at conferences between representatives of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the jobbers and the contractors. Much trouble has arisen from failure of contractors to pay union prices.

Refuse Stay for Mexican.

HAMMOND, Ind., Jan. 13.—Efforts of the Mexican consul in Chicago to obtain a stay of execution for Jose Castro, the Mexican slayer of Paul Burdich, an Indiana Harbor policeman last April, have so far been fruitless and Castro will pay the penalty of his crime in the electric chair at Michigan City penitentiary Thursday night, Jan. 15, Castro killed the officer as he was about to be arrested in a soft drink parlor.

"In Memoriam—Lenin" to be shown TOMORROW at Gartner's Theater.

SPECULATORS IN GRAIN BENEFIT FROM GOOD CROP

Farmers As Usual the Narrow End

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13. — Why wheat prices are high, and have risen steadily since last summer, is explained in a special summary issued by the department of agriculture, answering complaints that laws against speculation in grain futures are not enforced.

Reduction of acreage by 10 per cent or 12 percent for the northern hemisphere, and a bad crop on this reduced acreage, outside the United States, is the fundamental fact which has driven prices upward, the department says. The crop in the United States was only 70,000,000 bushels more than the "small but disastrously low-priced crop of 1923," and it was 35,000,000 bushels below the 5-year average.

Admitting that these conditions are "unlikely to occur on the average more than once in many years," the department argues that if the farmers would provide themselves with storage facilities, so that they could hold their grain for the winter market instead of rushing it to market as soon as it is thrashed, they would get the benefit of a high-price year. It claims that wheat prices, of which the speculators are now getting all the benefit, are still just at a parity with all commodities in purchasing power.

Warns Stool Pigeon

Lumberworkers and labor men in construction camps are warned not to confine too trustfully in a traveling evangelist who is reported preparing to cover those points. His name is Fred R. Wedge, who as he later confessed, left his San Pedro church in 1923 to join the I. W. W. during the harbor strike as a stool pigeon. He has a good platform presence, is huskily built and makes the impression of being able to use fists. He claims to have been a prizefighter.

They Cannot Ignore Russia

Whenever the name of Russia was mentioned within the hearing of the late Secretary of State Hughes (late as secretary of state), it is reported by Washington correspondents, that the bewhiskered gentleman got very angry. He hynotized himself into a mental condition which fixed the status of Soviet Russia as that of an outlaw nation with which the angelic capitalist class of America could not officially deal.

But economic facts have a funny habit of knocking the best thought-out plans into a cocked hat and it now seems that Hughes' anti-Russian bias has knocked him for a row of penniless grand dukes.

Unless all signs fail, and they usually do not, canny Calvin Coolidge, the business-like political spiritualist from New England, who would roast a heretic today and negotiate a loan with him tomorrow, is going to talk dollars and rubles to the hated Bolshevik leaders of Russia before many moons. It is rumored in Washington that the present head of the American Federation of Labor does not feel called upon to persist in the political line adopted by his predecessor Gompers towards Soviet Russia. The unqualified approval given by the visiting British trade union leaders to the Soviet regime cannot fail to make a profound impression on the American labor movement.

If Calvin Coolidge, the chosen leader (for the moment) of American capitalism, decides the time is ripe for this country to drop the policy of ignoring the existence of a powerful nation covering one-sixth of the earth's surface, it will not be because of any love for the Soviet regime.

It will mean that the capitalists of the United States no longer intend to be isolated from the opportunity to make profit out of the development of Russia's natural wealth and of trade with the people of that country.

There is another factor. The United States looks with anxious eyes on the diplomatic strategy of Soviet Russia in the Orient. Russia's diplomatic victory in China and the humilating defeat suffered by Hughes' foreign policy in that quarter may have more to do with the Standard Oil attorney's resignation than appears now on the surface.

It looks now as if the most formidable world capitalist power is preparing to recognize its arch enemy, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Hillquit Sees Classes

In a lecture delivered recently by Morris Hillquit, millionaire leader of what is left of the socialist party of America, before a New York audience, he declared that America has ceased to be a classless nation, such as it was a generation or two ago.

This is rather enlightening. In our Communist ignorance we suspected that classes existed in America for many, many generations and if only Hillquit read a little history of the American working class movement by one of his co-workers in the field of yellow socialism, he would find much evidence in the form of bloody battles between the workers and the capitalists to show that there were classes in this country.

Hillquit is interested in proving that we are developing the sinister phenomenon of a class society in America in order to lay the basis for his fake labor party, the foundation for which he declared was laid in the last election. But Hillquit's proposed labor party would not be founded on a recognition of the class struggle, but would have as its guiding aim the theory of class collaboration to which the yellow socialists all the world over are committed.

There are classes in America today. There were always classes in America. The history of the human race is a history of class struggles. There will be classes until capitalism is abolished and thru that act mankind once and for all freed from exploitation and class rule.

The only movement that is effectively working toward this end is the Communist movement under the leadership of the Communist International. The Workers (Communist) Party of America is the party of the workers who recognize the class struggle and who want to organize for the overthrow of the only class that stands between the workers and their emancipation, i. e. the capitalist class.

The champions of the democratic-pacifist era in Europe have a hard time of it. Both Premier Herriot, of France, and Premier Branting, of Sweden, are sick abed, and the late premier, MacDonald, of Great Britain, is touring in the West Indies for his health. It sure is a sickening job trying to uphold the left wing of fascism.

Roosevelt's Revelations

"As for Mr. Roosevelt's war on corporations," Mr. Depew continued, "that was more fiction than fact." The quotation is taken from an article by George E. Briggs in the Chicago Daily News, accompanying the first installment of the late Theodore Roosevelt's letters to Henry Cabot Lodge, his lifelong political friend and advisor.

The letters are nothing short of sensational and are as severe an indictment of the capitalist system as one could desire to see published. The newspaper syndicate which purchased them is making a good thing of it under the unwritten law of capitalism, "everyone for himself and the devil take the hindmost."

Roosevelt, the alleged foe of the big corporations, is characterized as their best friend by Chauncey Depew, chairman of the board of directors of the New York Central railroad. Depew knew what he was talking about.

But the big corporations did not like Teddy at first. They had to be shown. They refused to support his campaign for the presidency. This made Teddy sore. Writing to Lodge he tells of Jim Sherman's failure to get a campaign contribution from E. H. Harriman, the railroad king. Harriman said that he preferred the democrats to win in view of Roosevelt's attacks on the corporations. Sherman insisted that Teddy was really a good friend of the corporations. To this Harriman replied in Teddy's own words: "He was not in the least afraid, that whenever it was necessary he could buy a sufficient number of senators and congressmen or state legislators to protect his interests, and when necessary he could buy the judiciary."

That was plain language and Teddy informs us that the Standard Oil crowd and the Morgan interests gave expression to similar thoughts, but in more discreet language. The corporations, Roosevelt writes, preferred to have a Bryan or Hearst administration as they could make terms with them.

To offset the bad impression his demagogy had created in the minds of the money barons, Roosevelt delivered a speech purposely prepared to set himself right with them. In this speech he swung on "labor" and made it quite clear that the workers would meet with the iron fist if they got restive.

While Lodge did his best to convince "our Wall Street friends" that Teddy was quite safe, he realized that Roosevelt's speeches against the corporations would bring him strength at the polls.

Roosevelt himself was one of the most accomplished political mountebanks in American history. He also gives an inside view of capitalist politics which should prove of great educational value to the workers. Roosevelt's letters to Lodge give one a strong sniff at the capitalist cesspool.

Small and Labor

Governor Len Small delivered his inaugural speech last Monday in Springfield before a large audience. It marks the beginning of his second term as governor of the state of Illinois. No governor in the history of this state has run the gauntlet of more charges of graft and corruption than Small. He is charged with having misappropriated approximately one million dollars of state funds while he occupied the position of state treasurer. It appears that the charge sticks.

But we are not immediately concerned with the governor's illegitimate operations with the public treasury. We will leave the bourgeoisie to worry about that. What we are concerned with is Small's attitude toward labor, particularly in view of the fact that he had the support of the American Federation of Labor political machine thruout the state.

One would expect that in view of this support, the governor would give some indication in his speech that the interests of the workers occupied even a little niche in his mind. But we scan his inaugural speech in vain for any evidence that labor existed as far as he was concerned. The governor deals with taxes, revenues, pardons for criminals, hard roads, waterways and other issues affecting the business elements, but he had nothing to say about the only class that produces all the wealth on which Small and his fellow parasites live, nothing about unemployment, wage cuts or injunctions.

Reward our friends; punish our enemies! That is the political slogan of the labor fakers. No doubt the fakers get rewarded. The masses who supply the votes on election day are left to the tender mercies of the capitalist exploiters until election time comes around again.

So long as the workers depend on their capitalist friends to help them, they will merit the kind of treatment meted out to them by politicians of the Small type. There is only one party in America that represents the interests of the workers politically and industrially, the Workers Party, which urges the workers to organize for their own salvation and not depend on slimy capitalist politicians whether masquerading under the banner of progressivism or not.

Chicago is pleading for an increased flow of water from the great lakes to fight the sewage peril. But it will take more than water to clean up this cesspool of capitalism. It will require a new kind of government at Washington—a Soviet government.

The DAILY WORKER and the Pravda

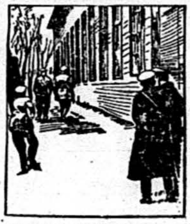
By M. A. SKROMNY

THE revolutionary workers of the United States are celebrating today the first birthday of their newspaper, the DAILY WORKER. Unlike any other newspaper in this country, it has been fearlessly fighting for the overthrow of the capitalist system of society and the establishment of a new Communist society.

Looking back into the past, we will try to analyze how much we succeeded in getting ahead, in arousing the working masses to the struggle, in advancing the interests of the working class.

Since the daily was established we participated actively in a few more or less big strikes, as for instance, the International Ladies' Garment Workers, the Pullman Car Builders' strike, the Western Electric and International Harvester special campaigns, etc. The national presidential election campaign was the biggest one in which our Daily played the biggest role. Without the Daily it would have been impossible to reach even a half of those workers that we reached during the campaign.

Chasing Them



Policemen chasing the newsboys selling the Pravda in 1912. In 1924 they were chasing the "newsies" of the DAILY WORKER from the gates of the Western Electric.

We did much and good work during the first year, but is it all that could have been done?

160 Russian Communist Dailies

The Moscow Pravda, with a membership of less than 500,000 in the Russian Communist Party, has reached a circulation of over 500,000. And there are 160 Communist dailies published in Russia besides the Pravda. Our DAILY WORKER is the only English Communist daily in the United States and in the world, but its circulation is far, very far from that of the Pravada. Of course, nobody expected us to reach such a circulation within one year, but still, our circulation is far from what it should be. The reason for this we can find by analyzing again the growth of the Pravda.

During January, 1924, the Pravda received 690 letters from its labor correspondents, that is, correspondents that are working in the shops and factories, Rabcors, as they call them. At the same time the circulation of the Pravda was 126,334 during January. In March the Pravda received 954 letters from the Rabcors, the circulation went up to 170,445. In July there were 812 letters, the circulation went up to 326,028. In September there were 978 letters, the circulation went up to 379,135. In October—1054 letters, circulation—422,068. In November there were 1104 letters from the Rabcors and the circulation went up to 460,510, and in December it reached 507,745.

Cartoon which appeared in the special edition of the Pravda celebrating the 500,000 circulation of the paper.

The connection between the letters of the labor correspondents and the circulation can easily be seen. The Rabcor that sends in a correspondence sees to it that it shall reach his shopmates, hence the circulation grows. This is proven by the figures of the Sormov works where they have an active Yacheika (Communist nuclei) and a live Rabcor. In February 1924 the Sormov works was getting 161 copies of the Pravda, in March—221, in April—520, in July—623. The more they write to the paper—the bigger the circulation.

Very Few Labor Correspondents

How is it about our own daily? How many labor corresondents have we got? Very few.

The Pravda received over 8,000 letters from its Rabcors during the year of 1924. How many did we receive? We did not count them. It was not necessary. We can count them on our fingers.

We did receive some letters, but mostly from party officials seeking free advertisements for their dances and affairs. The wide masses of workers will not become enthusiastic readers of the DAILY WORKER just on account of this kind of stuff. To make them readers of our paper we must write about THEIR life and THEIR struggles. And we must write in THEIR language, leaving out all high-sounding phrases which the average worker does not understand.

I spoke to many non-party workers whom I induced to subscribe to the daily. "The paper is too professional, we need a dictionary some times to understand it," they told me.

It is the labor correspondent that can remedy this situation best. He works with his shopmates every day, knows what they need, and how to talk to them about their needs. But we haven't got these labor correspondens. An attempt was made to induce workers to write by running a few articles in the DAILY WORKER on "How to Write for the Paper," but it did not help any. Those articles did not make the workers write. In order to induce the workers from shops and factories to write, two things are necessary: First, to give all encouragement possible to the writer, to assure him that his correspondence is welcome and will be printed, secondly, to see to it, that the paper in which his correspondence is printed shall reach those for whom it is intended.

Put Capable Comrades on the Job

It is up to our party units to have a capable and willing comrade assigned to write from the shop or factory where he or she works. There is always more than enough to write about in every capitalist shop. In the larger cities meetings of these labor correspondents should be called from time to time. Where we have professional Communist journalists, classes for labor correspondents should be organized. The capitalists have their classes of journalism. Don't we need them? The party units must also see to it that the copies in which the letters of these correspondents are printed shall receive special circulation among the workers in the shops and factories to which the correspondence reffers.

This is not a patent medicine to get rich quick. We are badly in need of these correspondents. We are also in need of closer co-operation between our journalists. Much good resulted from the only meeting of our Chicago party editors held at the beginning of the presidential elections. Why not meet more often to exchange ideas and experiences?

Another evil which we should try to overcome in the future is the "dryness" of our paper. There should be more poetry, also fiction to break the monotony of our always serious, and often endless articles. Our paper should not be a paper for party members only. A daily paper must reach the wide non-party workers and poor farmers. Some space has to be devoted to party matters, but the paper as a whole must be devoted to the wide masses if we expect them to become our readers.

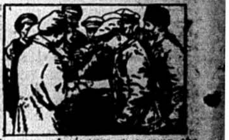
Newsboy selling a "confiscated" issue of the Pravda which he keeps for safety in the drain pipe. (1912)

Only when we overcome these shortcomings, when we will succeed in mobilizing the labor correspondents all over the country and with their aid enlarge our circulation among the workers and poor farmers, will our paper become a real power in the United States.

How They Read the Pravda



A group of workers discussing the correspondence of their Rabcor.

In the meantime, let us all do our share in insuring the existence of the DAILY WORKER for 1925, in making it better. When the next birthday of the paper will come, let us be able to say: "I did my part!"

Greeting to our readers!
Long live our DAILY!

ALL IN ONE ISSUE

By ARNE SWABECK.

POWER and beauty expressed in every line; a piercing analysis of the tactics and methods of the labor movement, exposing its traitors and teaching its future leaders. From cover to cover a brilliant yet solemn picture of the titanic nature of the class struggle with sparkling rays of hope for the victory to come, such are my impressions of the January issue of the Workers Monthly.

Seldom does my time permit more than just a hurried glance over the pages of our current literature but when beginning on this issue I was compelled to continue untill finished reading word for word. I found the material so rich that I could not afford to skip a word. Since the first issue of this magazine in November each succeeding issue has outdone the other.

The first article, "Lenin, Leader and Comrade," by Bittelman, is precisely what its title implies; a simple but forceful description of the revolutionary qualities of the great working class leader and of Leninism. It is both the builder of the party—the only true proletarian party—, and the science of modern revolution which is described by Bittelman. Lenin, the comrade, who gave his best to the Communist Party, who belongs body and soul to that party and Leninism which now leads the struggle.

Comrade Foster's article on the El Paso convention again reminds one of the immediate grim realities. In his usual powerful style he rips into the treacherous camouflage created by the corrupt bureaucrats to hide their dealings in imperialism, their preparations to support the next war for new conquests and deliver to Wall Street a labor movement, gagged and servile with no vitality left for resistance. The actual needs of the trade unions as brought forth by the militants but shamefully ignored by the diamond studded officials are emphasized by Foster in no uncertain terms. Fred Ellis lends a touch of rather grim humor in picturing the horces . . . . tail bowing before Samuel Gompers at El Paso.

The first installment of the history of the Russian Communist Party, by Zinoview, appears in this issue. That is something all rebels will want to read.

There is a story of the lives and struggles of the Rocky Mountain metal miners by Jack Lee. Notes on Shop Nuclei by Martin Abern, who has acquired considerable experience in dealing with this subject. A timely and interesting description of the nationalist revolutionary movement of China, the desperate efforts of world imperialism to maintain its grip on this fertile field, the Kuo Min Tang Party and its leader Sun Yat Sen. There is a joint statement by William F. Dunne and William Z. Foster on the A. F. of L. and Trade Union Unity, showing the response of this organization to the drive for world trade union unity by the Red International of Labor Unions. Not a response, however, to actually help unite the trade unions, but to, if possible, establish a hegemony over the world trade union movement for the benefit of Wall Street by the henchmen of Wall Street—, the reactionary labor lieutenant. Another indictment, hitting straight from the shoulder at the servants of capitalism.

The little story "Consequences" by Jack Wilgus, I read with delight. It is just a little piece of reality taking bodily out of the sphere of working class life picturing the hideous maneuvers of the employers in taking advantage of their economic power over the workers. In this story a miner long out of a job, his beautiful young wfie struggling with death and no food in the house becomes the willing tool of the boss, breaks the strike and commits treason to his class. When finally the young miner is completely broken down by the burden of his own treason he is sent away, thrown on the ash heep while the boss seduces his young wife. It is a story which fills one with hate against the present class system and the exploitation of labor. Then turning to article "At the 'Red October' Candy Factory" by Anna Louise Strong, one finds a relieving contrast. Here the beginnings of a new society, with the workers managing all affairs, for the benefit of the workers and with the aim to do away with the class system makes its appearance. This article gives relief, yes, but it also inspires to carry on the struggle to follow the glorious example of the Russian workers.

Turning again to the cover of the January issue of the Workers Monthly one finds added inspiration in the picture of the sturdy working woman with the crimson banner. One can almost feel the throbbing of millions of marching workers,—intent upon a definite goal. Yes, "Revolution Comes" here, perhaps slowly but surely.

THE Federated Press, working class news [illegible]y, commenting on the anniversary of the DAILY WORKER, notes that at the time the first Communist daily in the English language was launched, "the weight of opinion was that it would not live beyond the few months it would take to dissipate its $75,000 nest egg as The New Leader, successor to The Call, had rioted thru its $100,000 in short order."

"INSTEAD of competing in comics, sports, features, market reports, mystery stories and cross word puzzles with the capitalist dailies," continues the Federated Press editor, "the DAILY WORKER appeared steadily day by day from its own printing plant in Chicago as a six-page paper devoted to news for and about labor. The last postoffice statement on its circulation, printed Oct. 6, 1924, gave its average net paid circulation as 15,788. . . . Among the English language dailies that have either ceased publication or sold out to the enemy since the Federated Press was organized in 1919 are the New York Call, the New York Leader, the Oklahoma Leader, the Butte Bulletin, the Cumberland Leader, the Minnesota Star."

THE Federated Press comment gives the key to the secret of the success of the DAILY WORKER in maintaining its existence and even prospering in a revolutionary sense, at a time when the corpses of dead labor papers dotted the highways. Instead of wasting money competing with the capitalist press in serving literary offal to the workers the Workers Party decided that the only reason for bringing the daily into existence was fighting the battles of the workers and organizing them for the final struggle against capitalism. That this policy is the only one for such a paper to follow is proven by the continued existence of the DAILY WORKER and the fact that it has behind it a loyal army of supporters behind [illegible] which it would not hold for [illegible] hours if it catered to [illegible] prejudices and modified its [illegible].

IT appears that the British and American capitalists have won a real victory in China when the followers of Wu Pei Fu won back Shanghai from the adherents of the new Peking government. The capitalist powers look with extreme concern at the prospect of the unification of China under the benevolent tutelage of Soviet Russia. The capitalists cannot afford to give their own workers a living wage but they have millions to pour into China, creating civil war in order to dismember the country so that they can secure better concessions from the different leaders.

J. P. MORGAN delivered what is reported to be the first speech he ever made in public at a testimonial dinner given under the auspices of the New York State Bankers' Association to George F. Baker, head of the powerful National City Bank. Morgan's father thought the world of Baker, declared his son. This is the same Morgan who was accused by Roosevelt in his letters now running in the papers, of floating rotten securities. Among those present at the dinner was Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury. "Mr. Baker's spirit is part of the foundation of America," said Mellon. If you want to know who the rulers of this country are, look up the heads of the big banks. You will find the Bakers, Morgans and Mellons high up on the list.

CHILDREN STEAL TO PROVIDE FOR SICK AND WIDOWED MOTHER

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 14.— A 15 year old girl and her 8 year old brother were arrested in Lynn by Captain John T. Curry for stealing a pair of shoes from a Lynn department store. Investigation revealed that the children were starving, and had stolen the shoes to provide for their widowed mother who is seriously ill in bed at home, without fuel, food or clothing. The family was clothed in rags. They were taken to the poor house. Police refused to divulge their names.

STARVATION ORDER ISSUED BY HUTCHESON

Deprives Carpenters of Livelihood

Because five members of local 181, of the Carpenters' Union, signed a resolution protesting against the scab agreement signed by General President Hutcheson and District President Harry Jensen, they are deprived of their means of livelihood, according to an official statement from Hutcheson, which was read at last Monday night's meeting of the local.

The Hutcheson letter was in reply to a request from the local members that the expelled carpenters be given a working card pending trial. The members of Local 181 hold that there has been no trial.

"Czar" Hutcheson claims that the appeal of the local against the railroading of the five members did not act as a stay of sentence and that they are therefore out of the organization. Nevertheless, the expelled members attend the business meetings of Local 181 and are not denied the password. This is because the members of the local are solidly behind them and the fakers are powerless to prevent them from attending the meetings.

In Jensen's Local.

It is worthy of note that Harry Jensene, the president of the district council is also a member of this local. It was under his immediate direction that the railroading process was started.

The appeal, signed by forty members of the local, appealing to the general president against the railroading of their fellow workers was read at last Monday night's meeting. The appeal covered the fake trial and told of the falsified report made by the chairman of the trial committee. The defendants for instance were reported to have pleaded guilty. This was a barefaced lie, said the appeal. Three members of the trial committee signed an affidavit to the effect that the defendants did not plead guilty.

When this part of the appeal was read the secrtary, a lackey of the reactionaries, shouted a denial of the accusations made against him. The members told him [illegible] that he was a liar and that shut him up.

Fakers Violate Constitution.

No more outrageous proceeding was ever taken against any members in the history of labor organizations, declare the members of Local 181. According to the constitution of the Carpenters' Union, a two-thirds majority of those present at a local union meeting is required for conviction and it also provides for the defendants taking the floor. The faked report of the trial committee was never voted on by the membership and it was never either accepted or rejected.

The members of Local 181 are still determined that the fakers cannot railroad the militants out of the union and deprive them of their means of livlihood simply because they dared defend trade union principles against the treachery of the corrupt reactionary leaders.

MELLON URGES U. S. TO GIVE PRESENT TO R. R.'S WHERE HE OWNS STOCK

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14.—Andrew Mellon, millionaire secretary of the treasury who owns stock in numerous railroads, tried to make himself some money at the expense of the people of the United States today by recommending to the interstate commerce commission that a reduction be made in interest charges on government loans to railroads.

There are $323,000,000 in outstanding government loans to American railways. The interest charges have been six per cent. Mellon urged that the six per cent interest be voluntarily cut to 4 and ¾ per cent, "to avert financial catastrophes among the railroads." Mellon said this kindness to the railroad magnates on the part of the government would be "good business." He did not say for whom.

DAILY WORKER IS BARRED FROM W. VA. PRISON

Union Official Betrays 38 Jailed Miners

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 14.—Because of the treachery of the prize faker of the officials of Pittsburgh District 5 of the United Mine Workers of America—Pat Fagan—the DAILY WORKER has been barred from the Moundsville, W. Va., penitentiary. Fagan was angry at the DAILY WORKER for exposing his betrayal of the rank and file in the case of the mine worker defendants in the famous Cliftonville "riot."

Fagan made a special trip to Moundsville, where 38 miners are imprisoned, some of them for as long as ten years, and induced the warden not to admit the DAILY WORKER which these miners were reading every day. Immediately after Fagan's visit the DAILY WORKER was barred from the prison.

The rank and file miners had pleaded guilty on advice of the mine union attorneys who were also lawyers for the union officials, and these rank and filers were sentenced to long terms in prison. After enduring the suffering privation and persecution incident to life in a lonely mining camp, they were thrown into jail because of the incompetence of the union officials, and now these officials help to persecute the miners while locked up behind prison bars by depriving them of their favorite reading matter.

UNFILLED ORDERS IN STEEL INCREASED BY 784,787 TONS IN DEC.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.— Unfilled steel tonnage orders of the United States Steel corporation increased 784,787 tons in the month ended December 31, according to the monthly report of the corporation, issued today.

Forward orders of the corporation on December 31, amounted to 4,816,756 tons, against 4,031,969 tons on November 30, and 3,525,270 on October 31, and 4,445,339 tons on December 31, 1923.

DAILY WORKER TAKES OVER PARTY LITERATURE DEPARTMENT TODAY

Beginning today, the DAILY WORKER becomes the central station of the English Communist press in this country.

The DAILY WORKER, Workers Monthly, Communist International and every book, pamphlet and leaflet—every piece of English Communist literature will—beginning today—be ordered from and distributed thru the DAILY WORKER and the network of agents, builders of the party.

The centralization of the party effort in this plan will have an immediate effect of not only concentrating the energy of the active party members, but more speedily and efficiently promoting the systematic distribution of Communist propaganda to workers both inside and out of the party.

This move of the central executive committee of the Workers Party, going into effect today, means that the literature department of the party ceases to operate as a separate unit and becomes a part of the DAILY WORKER.

The move has obvious benefits to every unit of the party and has been greeted with pleasure by all those already advised of the change.

Branches and city centrals having separate DAILY WORKER and literature agents are to eliminate one and establish committees with the DAILY WORKER agent in charge.

Letters are being sent to all officials and units of the party advising of the details of the changes made and new catalogues are being prepared for an intensified campaign of Communist literature sales.

The organization of DAILY WORKER agents as the propaganda directors of the party, as soon as better perfected, will bring with it a systematic publication of new books and pamphlets under the plans of the educational department of the Workers Party.

All orders for literature, post cards, buttons, etc., formerly under the literature department, must now be ordered only thru the DAILY WORKER.

Money owing to the literature department on old accounts must be paid directly to it. New orders must be paid to the DAILY WORKER.

U. S. MARINES IN NEW ROW AT SHANGHAI

Dollar Intrigue Aided by Armed Force

SHANGHAI, Jan. 14.—American marines landed from the destroyers Tracy, Smith Thompson and John D. Edwards in the bay, tonight were holding prisoner the defeated troops of the Peking government in internment camps in the foreign settlement.

Volunteers from the merchant class were mobilized to assist the police forestall any outbreak of the poor and exploited who might take advantage of the disturbance. Railway traffic was entirely suspended except for the movement of troop trains.

One More Imperialist Intrigue.

Slight skirmishes were going on all day outside the city between forces of the British-American hireling, Chi Hsieh-yuan, and the scattered troops of the Peking provisional government.

The situation is a result of recent intrigues culminating in open hostilities when Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan ousted as military governor of Kiangsu, and Marshal Sun Chaun-fang formed a combination to oppose the central government at Peking.

A Quiet Plotter for Imperialism.

When Chi Hsieh-yuan was ousted from Nanking a few weeks ago, he came to Shanghai and put up in the foreign settlement, where he pretended to be living quitely. It is now clear that his quietude was covering a reorganization of his old troops in this area, and dickers with British-American interests for financing the rebel movement that now has seized control of the Shanghai section.

DAUGHERTY AND BURNS TO SHARE $65,000 GRAFT

Testimony Given During Means Trial

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Samuel Rosenblatt, of Chicago, testifying today at the trial of Gaston B. Means and Thomas B. Felder on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice, said Means told him on December 11, 1922, that $65,000 which Means is alleged to have demanded from Rosenblatt and two other Chicago men, was to be split between William J. Burns, former attorney general Harry M. Daugherty, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew J. Mellon and two other men. Means formerly was a department of justice investigator. Felder was his lawyer.

Means demanded the $65,000 in return for promising immunity to the Chicago men charged with using the mails to defraud in connection with the sale of stock in the Glass Casket Co., of Altoona, Pa., Rosenblatt testified.

Sherman Anti-Trust Law Looks Rather Ill After Court Decision

The life of the Sherman anti-trust law, it is said, may hinge on a decision to be handed down by Federal Judge Adam O. Cliffe, following arguments being made today in what is known as the "malleable iron casting case."

The arguments are being made in "do novo" proceedings in which the court is petitioned to set aside a ruling of U. S. Commissioner James R. Glass, holding four indicted men could not be removed to Cleveland, and discharging them from custody.

PITTSBURGH MILITANTS HOLD T. U. E. L. MEETING ON SUNDAY, JANUARY 18

Many important problems are confronting the local unions in Pittsburgh and vicinity. It is necessary that every progressive trade unionist attend this meeting.

Change From Hughes to Kellogg Is Admission of Growing Soviet Power

JAPAN SOON TO SIGN PACT WITH RUSSIA

Baldwin Govt. Changes Diplomatic Mask

MOSCOW, Jan. 14.—The next government to sign a treaty with the Soviet government is expected to be Japan. There is no doubt in the minds of Soviet officials but that recognition is speedily forthcoming.

There are three points still preventing a resumption of diplomatic relations. One is a difference over the allotment of the oil production of Saghalien Island, Japan demanding 50 per cent and Russia only conceding 40 per cent.

Japan demands guarantees against Communist propaganda in Japanese controlled territory. This, of course, is something not within the power of Russia to grant even if it were willing.

Immediate Evacuation.

Soviet Russia demands the immediate evacuation of Saghalien island by the Japanese. The later offer to evacuate next spring.

Diplomats say that these points of disagreement present no serious obstacle to the signing of an agreement. Soviet Russia is not in any particular hurry, since Charles Evans Hughes decided to quit the Coolidge cabinet on the fourth of March. The United States is watching the Russo-Japanese negotiations very closely and it is not unconcerned about the disposition of the oil on Saghalien island.

To Send Delegation.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—It was unofficially stated at the American embassy today that Coolidge would send an unofficial delegation to Russia within a short time to take preliminary steps toward the negotiation of commercial treaties with and recognition of the Soviet government.

As a counter blast against the latest evidence of Soviet stability, manifested by the indications of a more favorable change in American policy toward the workers' republic, the czarist emigres are publishing fake reports of tension between France and Russia. That the French bourgeoisie do not like red Russia any better than those of any other capitalist nation goes without saying, but Russia is growing in strength and no capitalist government in Europe could afford to make war on the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

Premier Herriot's occasional grunt against the Bolshevik leaders is largely for the consumption of the right wing elements who are out for his political scalp. He is trying to play both ends against the middle and is doomed to get crushed between the two forces.

ROME.—A Soviet industrial commission is expected to arrive here within a few days on a tour of study of metallurgical and mechanical developments in Italy and western Europe.

A. JOFFE, SOVIET DIPLOMATIC ACE, GOES TO VIENNA

VIENNA, Jan. 14.—A. Joffe, one of the diplomatic stars of the Soviet government, has been transferred from the far east to Vienna. This change has no connection with the organization of the anti-Soviet Balkan federation, recently formed by Great Britain for use in her war against the Workers' Republic.

British Own Austria.

The British government, which practically owns what is left of Austria, has spent large sums of money trying to frame up on the Soviet legation here. The Austrian police, working under the direction of Scotland Yard, have kept close watch on the members of the Soviet mission, but they have been obliged to confess that by no stretch of the imagination could the activities of the Soviet employes be considered in any other light than in accord with the best traditions of diplomatic etiquette.

Look to Red Russia.

The Balkans have always been a hotbed of intrigue and never more than at present. In the czarist days the Slavic countries of the Balkans looked to Russia for guidance. Today, there is a different Russia to which the oppressed workers and peasants of the Balkan nations look for assistance.

Tons of anti-Bolshevik propaganda are being sent out from here by white guard elements who, strange to say, still find financial support from American, French and British capitalists for their hopeless schemes to overthrow the Soviet power.

COOLIDGE DRIFTS TO RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA

'Cal' Just Doesn't Want to Be Hurried

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—A gradual softening of American policy toward Soviet Russia, rather than any quick, precipitate leap into recognition and renewed governmental relations, is expected here to follow the retirement of Charles Evans Hughes as secretary of state.

White House denials that there will be any marked changes in the foreign policies of the administration after Frank B. Kellogg succeeds Secretary Hughes are taken with a grain of salt. Between foreign offices such denials are usually characterised as "diplomatic denials."

Soviet Foes Disappear.

Circumstances have combined since congress assembled in Washington six weeks ago to remove some of the bitterest opponents of any trafficking with Soviet Russia. One was the death of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, another was the elevation of Senator William E. Borah to the chairmanship of the senate foreign relations committee. A third comes now in the resignation of Hughes.

The United States now [illegible] unique position in being the only major power that has not granted some degree of recognition to Soviet rule. One by one, Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and the others have fallen into line and sent diplomatic representatives to Russia and Japan has just completed a treaty of alliance and amity with the Soviet authorities.

Admit Russian Progress.

It was regarded with some significance that even while the White House was denying that any change in the Russian policy was contemplated, President Coolidge permitted it to become known that he, at least, considers that Russia has made material, even tho slow, progress toward the conditions laid down as precedent to renewed relations with America.

Coincident with the cabinet and diplomatic shakeup that has startled Washington as has nothing else since the war, were reports in reliable quarters that Frank B. Kellogg's tenure as secretary of state probably would be brief, and that he would be succeeded within the year by another. Gossip in political circles links the name of Charles B. Warren to this post. Warren will become attorney general within a few days.

BORAH IN FAVOR OF MISSION TO SOVIET RUSSIA

Plays Political Poker with Cal Coolidge

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics may be given earlier by the government of the United States as a consequence of the resignation of Hughes and the selection of Kellogg as secretary of state. And even so, it may be delayed a long time.

After the bombshell contained in the announcement of the Hughes-Kellogg shift had reverberated around Washington for a week-end, and the cabinet members, chiefs of the republican national committee and standpat senators of the old guard had each confessed that they had had no warning of the explosion, they found this to be the most acceptable theory.

First—Coolidge was tired of being called a little man, surrounded by big men such as Hughes, Hoover, Mellon and Stone.

Second—Mellon was tired of the unwavering superiority of Hughes, and of the activity of Stone in cleaning up the department of justice—in spots that were wet.

Third—Kellogg, a born courtier, had made a great fuss over Coolidge when the vice-president first came to Washington, while other senators looked with disdain upon the "dumb bell" presiding officer.

Fourth—Mellon, as the real manager of the Coolidge regime, approved of the obsequious quality of Kellogg, and of Kellogg's having telephoned to Hughes whatever transpired in meetings of the senate foreign relations committee.

Fifth—Coolidge knew he dared not offend Mellon, but he could replace Hughes and Stone by personal agents of his own without causing Mellon to shed any tears.

Sixth—Coolidge and Mellon, knowing that Hoover wants to run for the presidency next time, were willing to let Herbert stay or resign as he may see fit, after witnessing the fate of Hughes and Stone.

Recognition Sentiment Grows.

But Russian recognition is another matter. Dwight Morrow of Morgan & Co., classmate of Coolidge, has been a pro-recognition fan for a year past. So has Col. Blethen of the Seattle Times, who begged the president to do something in that direction, last summer. Coolidge replied to Blethen as he replied to senators, that he would take action "after a while," when conditions were more favorable.

Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee keeps silent. He was not consulted as to Hughes' successor, altho it was well known that he had voiced to Coolidge his impatience at Hughes' stubborn refusal to face the Russian issue. All he knows is that Coolidge has not been so anti-Russian as Hughes has been, and that if Coolidge is convinced that American business wants diplomatic relations with Russia restored, Coolidge will order Kellogg to begin negotiations. And he knows that with the departure of Hughes the tendency of business opinion will be to swing toward a recognition policy, not wholly dissociated with hunger for mineral concessions. Moreover, Coolidge needs Borah's help in getting anything thru the senate in the next two years.

Would Sound Out Soviets.

Borah wants Coolidge to send an unofficial commission to Moscow to study the situation and sound out the Soviet cabinet on terms of commercial and diplomatic peace. Borah and Coolidge will now sit down to a game of political poker.

Their father, Nelson Spriggle, in an adjoining room, was forced to jump from a second-story window, after making ineffectual efforts to rescue his children.

EMME AND VOTAW EXPELLED FROM ST. PAUL ASSEMBLY IN DEFIANCE OF UNION LAWS BY REACTIONARIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 14.—After elaborate preparations and the application of the most high-handed methods, the reactionaries in the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly succeeded in expelling Comrades Julius F. Emme and O. R. Votaw, both delegates from Machinists' Local Union No. 459, at a meeting held Friday night. Every available reactionary vote was necessary, and right wing delegates were in attendance who had been seldom seen before.

Since the election of Frank T. Starkey as president two years ago, he has succeeded with the active cooperation of a gang of business agents, in building up a reactionary machine in the central body which has determined apparently to wage relentless war upon every progressive who has succeeded in being elected to that body. A campaign has been carried on in the locals to defeat progressive delegates, and the attack upon Comrade Emme and Votaw was timed to come when the greatest reactionary strength had been marshalled.

Our Farmer-Labor Fight.

The recent contest for representative in congress furnished the long-looked for excuse for charges preferred against these two comrades. A pamphlet appeared in the course of the campaign in support of Comrade Emme on the farmer-labor ticket, in which statements which have not even yet been denied were made about the activities of Starkey and Mahoney who were supporting Oscar E. Keller, a reactionary on the republican ticket.

It was charged that these comrades were responsible for the pamphlet, and that its appearance and their conduct was detrimental to the labor movement of St. Paul. The trial committee composed of reactionaries, had refused to hear the charges on their merits, by limiting the hearing to one evening and by not requiring the accusers to prove that the statements were not true. The committee accepted Secretary Seigel's "assumption that the statements were false," as fact.

Every principle of fairness and parliamentary rule was violated in the determination not to allow a discussion of the conduct of the trial or of the merits of the case before the assembly. Only after the committee's report sustaining the charges and a motion that the delegates be expelled was Comrade Emme able to get the floor. Altho repeatedly interrupted and heckled by the chairman, he succeeded in presenting the essential facts to the body, but facts and fairness did not count, because the reactionaries had the votes.

Gang Destroys Record of Hearing.

The chairman ruled that sections of the constitution of the A. F. of L. could not be read, many decisions of the chair were appealed from and sustained by the reactionaries. So ashamed of their methods and afraid that the rank and file unionists might get hold of a transcript of the proceedings were they, that the notes taken by a union stenographer were ordered turned over to the secretary who immediately destroyed them.

Both delegates insist that they will fight the case to the limit, and intend to carry the question of their expulsion to the local unions in a referendum under a provision of the by laws, which right the reactionaries tried to deny them. Their local will doubtless back them up since, it is one of the most progressive in the city.

A United Front with Capitalist Press.

The widest publicity was given to the expulsion in the capitalist press. Either a reporter was admitted for the purpose, or else some reactionary very carefully prepared the news stories, which contained some minute details. Especially notorious was the attempt to discredit delegates of the Teachers' local who fought the reactionaries on the floor.

The reactions of fair minded people in the local labor movement to last night's election is decidely favorable. They are beginning to see where the leadership is leading—to the ruin of the labor movement.

ARGENTINE PROFESSOR KNOWS THE YANKEE IMPERIALIST CHRIST

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 12—Dr. Alfredo Palacios, dean of the faculty of juridical and social sciences at the University of La Plata today declined an invitation sent him by Samuel Guy Inman, executive secretary of the American section of the so-called "committee on co-operation" in Latin America, to attend a congress on christian work to be held at Montevideo, Uruguay, beginning March 27.

Dr. Palacios' refusal is based on the ground that the holdings of such a congress on the initiative of American churches implies "the extension and strengthening of the material powers of North America over the South American peoples."

COMMUNISTS IN CHAMBER ATTACK FASCIST TERROR

Herriot Expulsions Aid Mussolini

ROME, Italy, Jan. 14.—The 19 Communist members of the chamber of deputies attended parliament yesterday, and made speeches denouncing the fascist government and Mussolini's electoral law. The Communists charged that Mussolini is giving only one vote to the workers as compared to two votes for the fascist bureaucrats and three votes for the nobility.

Former Premier Salandra has in his possession a document showing that the fascisti have organized violence as a means of keeping control of the government in the various provinces. Former premiers Orlando, Salandra and Giolitti have united to fight the fascisti electoral law. They declare Mussolini is not qualified to conduct a new election and must resign.

The pope, who in the main works hand in hand with the fascisti murderers, has declared the law aimed at free masonry in Italy may affect the religious orders of Jesuits, Dominicans and other "holy" orders. The pope has let it be known that he knows Mussolini will do nothing against him, but is afraid the law may be interpreted to his detriment by some later government.

The under secretary of state for internal affairs declared that one of the Communists expelled from France by the Herriot government has been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment by an Italian court for "arson." He declared that all of the Italian Communists expelled from France were arrested at the frontier and are being held in prison. The under secretary's speech showed clearly how Herriot has been playing into the hands of the fascist government by his attacks on the Communists.

The meeting of the council of ministers has decided to submit a bill to parliament conferring dictatorial powers upon Mussolini by permitting him and his police to make any changes in the civil and penal code which they see fit. The bill increases greatly the penalties in the penal code which can be directed against the opposition and the Communists.

Yesterday thirty Communists were arrested at a meeting they were conducting in Rome.

Deputies belonging to the Aventine opposition continue to remain away from parliament.

Steel Production Declined Ten Per Cent in 1924

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14.—Exports of iron and steel in 1924 were ten per cent less than exports in 1923, the department of commerce announces. Production of both pig iron and steel ingots was the lowest since 1915 last year, with the exception of the depressed years of 1921 and 1922 according to the department.

Pig iron production was given as 31,160,000 long tons in 1924, as against 40,361,000 long tons for 1923, while there was a drop of 16 per cent in the production of steel ingots and castings as compared to 1923.

FASCISTI JAIL 40 COMMUNISTS FOR "TREASON"

Fear Attack From the French Border

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Jan. 14.—Forty Communists were arrested yesterday by the fascisti in Rome, charged with "plotting against the state."

Many conflicts broke out in cities of Italy. Workers held large parades, carrying the Red Flag.

Fascisti, in trying to capture the flags, precipitated clashes in which both sides suffered casualties.

Mussolini, fearing that French and exiled Italian Communists will organize in France and attack the fascisti thru the French border, is massing thousands of soldiers along the border. In this maneuver of fortifying the French border, however, Mussolini is weakening his armed forces in the central and southern portions of Italy.

The Unita, Communist daily paper printed in Milan, has been again suppressed, after being confiscated 40 times by the police in the ten months of its existence.

The newspaper Messaggero Toscano, in Pisa, has been burned to the ground. The Communist organizations, workers' clubs, and even some religious organizations have been destroyed in Pisa.

Mussolini's attack against the free masonry of Italy is now in full swing, and the masons are being persecuted in Italy wherever the fascisti can lay hands on them. Minister of Interior Federzoni jointly with Minister of Justice Rocco, has introduced a bill in the Italian parliament that aims particularly at the masons, stipulating that all associations and institutions must submit their constitutions to the police, together with a list of their members. The move against the masons has been inaugurated by Mussolini in an attempt to induce the pope to take a more active part on behalf of the fascisti. However, many of the fascisti belong to the masons, and if Mussolini's acts go beyond the stage of threats a split is expected to develop in the fascisti.

Can't Produce "Ben Hur."

The American motion Picture company producing the spectacle "Ben Hur" has become entangled in the political dissension in Italy and will return to the United States, according to a statement issued today by the company.

"Due to the uncertainty of conditions, both political and social, the company will return to America Jan 17," the announcement said.

Information which reached London today regarding the departure of the film company producing "Ben Hur" appeared to have been censored. The company has been working in and about Rome more than a year.

er, but they realize that unless they hang together they may hang separately. Stranger things than the latter have happened. Judging by the speed with which fascism is traveling downward today, Mrs. Drake may not enjoy her membership very long.

GREGORY ZINOVIEV, president of the Communist International took the whiskers off George Bernard Shaw's criticism of Marx and the Communist movement during a speech delivered recently in Moscow. "Shaw, flower of the petty bourgeoisie, considers himself above Karl Marx but if we compare both, Shaw appears as a scarcely visible speck of dust," said Zinoviev. He pointed out that the teachings of Marx had conquered one-sixth of the earth's surface and expressed the hope that Shaw would live long enough to see the workers take over the rest of the world, an operation which would very likely involve the loss of many swelled heads. Shaw is a clever fellow and a luxury to the bourgeoisie, who enjoy his sharp thrusts at them. They do not fear him however, as he proved his loyalty to the ruling class during the war when he prostituted his intellect in support of the British government—for pay.

THE editor of the Davenport Free Press, a socialist publication, has not much confidence in the future of the socialist party. Eugene V. Debs, as if rising Rip Van Winkle-like from a pre-war slumber, calls for the reorganization of a "militant socialist party, based upon the class struggle." The Davenport editor says: "The S. P. will hold a special convention in Chicago on the date of the C. P. P. A. confab, and it is not unlikely that the S. P. will decide to go back to its job of furnishing raw material for old party platform planks. The trouble is that the S. P. has been 'reorganized' about forty eleven times and will not stay organized more than thirty days." Rather snappy!

Nurmi, White Guard, Is Labor Renegade; "Brass Check" Press Greets Him

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the "Brass Check" press throws its columns wide open to Paavo Nurmi, the long distance runner, from Finland. Editorials are solemnly written about him. He is hailed as a new world wonder.

The subsidized press speaks of Nurmi as one "Brass Check" to another. For Nurmi turned traitor to his class in Finland; and treason to the working class is applauded the world over by capitalist press harlots. That is an international policy generally accepted. Nurmi has sold himself for a price. He is accepted.. He can therefore depend on a tremendous reception in all capitalist lands, as well as in the United States. But he will not go near Soviet Russia. That would be different.

• • • •

Nurmi was of the Finnish working class; paper hanger by trade. He belonged to the Finnish Workers' Athletic Club that has produced some of the world's best athletes. The time for deciding just where he stood came to Nurmi during the Finnish revolution, when the workers of Finland sought to establish their own Soviet Republic. It was Red or White, and Nurmi turned White.

Nurmi as a member of the Finnish Workers' Athletic Club would not be welcome in the United States. He would be denounced as Bolshevik, and Communist, and immediately deported as a threat to the stability of American capitalism.

But Nurmi the White Guardist is received with open arms. He is honored for having turned renegade to his class. He is applauded for joining the White Guard Finnish athletes who went to the capitalist Olympian Games. Being expelled from the workers' athletic clubs and rejected by the working class is held to his credit. That is the way oppressors fawn on those who surrender to them out of the working class.

The story is told of the Persian couriers employed by the Turkish sultan to run from Constantinople to Adrianople and back. They were good and obedient slaves; as docile before their master as Nurmi is today. If they had made the fight for their class they would have suffered the fate of the heroic Spartacans under the Roman Caesars.

Olympic chronicles tell of the Greek runners like Ladas, who fell dead as they completed the course. It is told how they were buried in state, crowned by the victor's chaplet. They did not win less notoriety than football heroes and baseball stars do now. Today, and in the thousands of years ago, the story has always been the same; these sports have been used to keep the minds of the masses off their real troubles.

But all that has changed, as Nurmi well knows, because very few Finnish workers in this country attend the running contests in which he engages. The masses of Finnish workers in this country belong to the Communist movement. They have an effective boycott against Nurmi. These workers are allied, not only in Finland, but also in this country, with the Red Sport International. With the spread of the social revolution this Red International must gradually eclipse the capitalist Olympic Games.

Thus do the rising Red waves of labor's world struggle for power even touch this phase of our lives.

Pardon Sales by Governor Winked at By Kansas Solons

TOPEKA, Kans., Jan. 14.—A legislative probe of the pardon situation in the administration of Governor Johnathan W. Davis, is not contemplated, it was intimated today by C. R. Hope, new speaker of the house.

James Finley, personal attorney of Governor Ben S. Paulen and head of the joint investigating committee of the last legislative, will submit his committee's report when the session reconvenes tomorrow and the committee will be discharged, Hope said.

A canvass of leading members of both houses of the legislature bore out the attitude of the speaker. They declared that the investigation was fathered by a group of democratic friends of Davis. Governor Paulen and Finley Sunday were preparing for the investigation, but now, it is indicated, the legislature would be permitted to take its own course without recommendation from the governor.

In the meantime all steps in the pardon action are marking time. The county attorney's office was gathering evidence for the preliminary hearing of Davis and his son Russell on Jan 23.

organized; he forced Herriot to make raids on the Communists and he got the pope to issue a denunciation of Soviet Russia.

But the tory government is singing a different song today. It was denied at the foreign office today that Britain had anything to do with the formation of the anti-Soviet federation; that it protested against the Soviet legation in Albania or that it protested to France against the turning over of the Wrangel fleet to Russia.

To Conclude Agreement.

On the contrary it was intimated that the tory government would endeavor to negotiate another trade agreement with the Soviet government as soon as the election threats fade into the hazy recesses of public memory. Trade between Russia and England has been picking up lately and the British business appetite is whetted for more profits.

The effect of the report of the British trade union leaders on what they found in Russia has been conducive to this change of attitude on the part of the tory government, tho it was generally believed by those who watch politics closely that the tory election threats were only vote catching maneuvers and not to be taken seriously.

Build the DAILY WORKER!

THE new Assistant Secretary of the Navy has proposed that the Navy's slogan be changed from "Join the Navy and See the World" to "Join the Navy and SHOW the World." To the American Imperialists this should be an acceptable amendment. To us—well, the question is, are the Imperialists going to SHOW us or are we going to SHOW them? A former soldier answered this RIGHT when, today, he sent to us $25 of the bonus money he had just received. He sent it to the DAILY WORKER for insurance policies, because he knows that the DAILY WORKER leads the offensive against Imperialist wars. This ex-soldier is willing to help SHOW the Imperialists. AND YOU?

NINE SCHOOL JOBS STRUCK BY GLAZIERS

Board of Education Favored Open Shop

The violation of an agreement with the Glaziers' Union by the board of education's supervisory architect, Edgar W. Martin, is tying up construction of nine new public schools which are to house part of the 100,000 children now crammed into insanitary, unsafe and uncomfortable makeshifts.

It is a fight against the "open shop" Landis award committee, which has evidently persuaded Martin, if not more of the board of education, to fight the building trades unions which do not accept the Landis "open shop" agreement, even if an agreement with the union has to be broken.

Board of Education Broke Promise.

George H. Myers, the Glaziers' business agent, declares that Martin let contracts to the open shop firm of William Hallis and company after promising to cease hiring non-union men on the same job with members of the Glaziers' Union.

Meyers says, "I saw Martin several months ago and told him it would not do to have union men and Landis award men working on the same job. At that time this Hallis outfit had a contract for two schools and Martin promised he would not be given any more. But since then Martin has let contracts to the firm for nine schools and our union members were called off the job and will be kept off until Martin keeps his word."

Painters' Union May Be Involved.

As the Glaziers' Union is a part of the Painters' Union, which has a written contract with the school board, the building trades workers expect that further action may be taken by the larger unions of the building trades.

The schools affected are the Grant, Brenato, Shurz High, Tilden Technical, Douglas, Crane High, Shakespeare, Warren and Wentworth additions.

Shuts Off Competitive Bidding.

Martin, it appears, is also shutting off competitive bidding by juggling construction specifications to favor the open shop contractors.

The strike may tie up the nine school jobs until fall instead of permitting them to be opened for use in May.

COURT REFUSES TO TRY RADICH, CROATIAN CHIEF

Holds Charge Against Him Inadequate

BELGRADE, Jan. 14. — The king and queen of Jugo-Slavia left Paris a few days ago for a mountain resort 'somewhere in Jugo-Slavia," but will not return to Belgrade in the near future unless present plans are changed.

There is a very tense situation resulting from the reign of terror carried on by the present government against the workers and peasants. Raditch, the Croatian peasant leader, who was recently arrested here, on a charge of high treason, was ordered released by the court as the charges could not hold water.

The government attorney appealed from the court's decision and pending the outcome Radich and his associates remain in prison.

I. A. M. CANDIDATE SHOWS UP FAILURE OF 'B. & O.' GANG

Points Out Loss of 250,000 Members

By H. S. McILVAIGH.
Candidate for Vice President of the I. A. of M.

The quadrennial convention of the International Association of Machinists, held in Detroit during the month of September, among other things amended the constitution so as to provide for a reduction of eight officers in the staff of the grand lodge. This amendment was ratified by the membership in the November referendum, and because of this action a special election will be held in 1925 to elect an entire staff of grand lodge officers.

In accordance with the constitution, nominations for office must be made in the month of January, and the two highest nominees for each office will appear on the final ballot in April at which time the election will be held.

The race for nominations is now on. Many aspirants for office have entered the field, placing their names before the membership and requesting nominations for the various offices to be filled. Oceans of literature are surging thru the organization telling a depleted membership of the great qualifications possessed by most of the candidates, or group of candidates, who aspire to guide the future destinies of the I. A. of M.

Many of the candidates lay great stress on the number of years they have held membership in the organization, and what they have sacrificed for the benefit of the rank and file. This fulsome praise constitutes about all that most of them have to say regarding the coming election in our organization.

Nothing is said about the deplorable conditions existing in our trade and the crying need for a constructive program to prevent our organization from going out of business entirely as a labor union. Nothing is said about a plan of action that will recoup our scattered forces and bring the I. A. of M. back to the position of a militant aggressive trade union which it once occupied.

In contrast with the above there are a few candidates in the field who are supporting a practical program. A program that has a plan of action to meet the awful conditions existing in our trade, and one that will rebuild the organization on a militant fighting basis.

These candidates lay stress on the need of a constructive program and pay little attention to the personality of the men who are seeking nominationn in support of this program. They point out the need of industrial organizations thru amalgamation, and call attention to the results of the open-shop drive on our organization to prove that closer unity thru amalgamation is the only solution that will save us from complete destruction as a labor union.

They are opposed to a policy that commits us to so-called "co-operative" schemes between the masters and the workers, and to prove the fallacy of such a policy they point to the ruthless methods pursued by the masters in their efforts to annihilate any effective organization on the part of the workers.

This group of candidates is known as the left wing, and is made up of class conscious machinists who understand the class struggle and the methods we must pursue to overcome the present conditions prevailing in our trade.

Militant Program.

At the forefront of these methods the left wing raises the following issues, which no other candidates have endorsed, but which no other candidates can or will dispute the importance of:

(1) Amalgamation of all crafts in the metal industry into one industrial union covering the entire industry. (2) Development of shop committees. (3) The organization of the unorganized. (4) Independent working class political action for a workers' and farmers' government. (5) Against racial discrimination. (6) Freedom of expression within the union, and reinstatement of suspended and expelled members who have been discriminated against merely for radical activities. (7) Against the "B. & O." plan and all other forms of class collaboration. (8) For a convention every two years. (9) No exclusion of young workers from union or its affairs. (10) The recognition of Soviet Russia, the first workers' republic. (11) Closer international solidarity of all metal workers.

The left wing candidates are aware of the loss of membership in our organization and know that the structure of our present union is obsolete when its membership drops from more than 330,000 to less than 80,000 in 4 years. The left wing stands for a plan of working class education that will teach the workers their position in society, and show them the way out of the present dilemma.

As stated before, the left wing group is the only one having a practical program in the coming elections and their candidates should be endorsed by all local lodges having the interests of a REAL machinists' union at heart.

TEXTILE CAPITAL, BY GRABBING GERMAN MILLS, WILL BE ABLE TO CUT WAGES IN UNITED STATES

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Wanted—a law to restrict the emigration of capital to cheap labor areas abroad. Without such restriction the attempt to protect American standards by means of tariffs and immigration laws will become a farce.

Where the competition of cheap foreign labor is sharp American capitalists are already buying an interest in these foreign competitors, planning to make their profit at the expense of the jobs of workers at home.

This means that American capital is participating to an increasing extent in the competition which will eventually force American labor to choose either a lower standard of living or unemployment. According to a special article on the outlook for American industries in 1925 in the Annalist:

"There are plenty of industries which due to the plethora of cheap labor abroad must be prepared to see ever growing foreign competition in which American capital cannot help being a participant. When it is made impossible for the world's surplus labor to go to the world's surplus capital the latter will go where it will find labor."

Of course, there is plenty of labor in America, but it isn't cheap enough yet.

The purchase by the Botany Mills of an interest in two large German textile concerns is a concrete instance. The New York Journal of Commerce commenting on this move says:

"An American company which can provide the funds necessary to utilize the well equipped plants of Germany has a great advantage over its competitor who tries to invade the market from without. It profits by the acquisition of all the advantage of lower costs of operation, particularly lower wages; it profits by the lower transportation charges. Moreover the business of an American concern owning its own European plant will not suffer from the tariff duties or the forms of discrimination encountered by foreign importers."

"Purchase by American concerns of interests in foreign firms along the lines indicated by the reported deal," says the Journal, "is only a minor variant of the many attempts that are now being made to divide up international markets by private agreements in defiance of trade barriers and political rivalries.

"Such arrangements, which are in large part financial, illustrate very clearly the truism that capital is international and therefore prepared to jump the obstructions set by fearful politicians. It may prove to be the case that tariff questions will assume subordinate importance. If capitalists find it more profitable to develop the business of foreign concerns than it is to compete with them, they will not hesitate to do so."

In plain language this would read: "If capitalists find it more profitable to employ cheap foreign labor than American labor they will not hesitate to do so, immigration laws and tariff laws to the contrary notwithstanding." Which means that capitalist attempts to interest labor in such laws as major issues are in reality efforts to divert labor from the real issue which is international.

Capital is going to profit by its acknowledged internationalism while labor suffers from the narrow nationalistic attitude encouraged by the propaganda of the capitalist press.

HERE'S CHANCE FOR GARY, COOLIDGE AND ROCKEFELLER TO ENFORCE LAWS

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 12.—Open defiance of the new state law prohibiting work of women between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m. in New Jersey is announced to State Commissioner Andrew F. McBride in a letter from manufacturers.

The employers say that they will continue to work women at night and that they believe that the courts will find the law prohibiting such work unconstitutional. Their claim is that the law is confiscatory and therefore invalid. McBride is notifying employers that if they do not comply with the law by Jan. 17 he will proceed against them.

Big Jersey woolen and cotton mills, laundries in Jersey City and other places, and glass factories work women in night shifts and are defying the regulation. Botany Worsted Mills, Forstmann & Hoffman Co., Garfield Worsted Mills, New Jersey Worsted Spinning Co., Gara Mills, R. H. Steele Laundry Co., Owens Bottle Co., and Lamond & Robertson Co. signed the letter to McBride. They claim interest in the welfare of their employes "because our business interests are dependent upon this" but say they won't have this law.

GERMANY FACED WITH RUIN FROM PLUTES' MISRULE

Trade Treaty With France Deadlocked

BERLIN, Germany, Jan. 14.—Finance Minister Hans Luther's attempts to form a new cabinet have so far met with failure, the socialists and democrats refusing to acquiesce in the formation of a right wing cabinet, and the centrists refusing to enter a cabinet unless their party receives the dominating control.

The deadlock may be broken by the establishment of a dictatorship, if Luther fails to form a right wing cabinet. The possibility of President Ebert taking over the government without backing from parliament is being broached vigorously. Ebert would have the authority of article 48, of the constitution, providing for "emergencies," it is claimed by those favoring dictatorship.

While Germany is vainly striving to solve her internal problems, France is raising tariffs on German products and the negotiations for a trade treaty between the two countries are at a standstill. Germany, at the time when her internal affairs are confused by the failure of any one party to secure enough strength in the last elections to form a government, is faced with the stupendous task of battering down the excess tariff walls created by the allied nations. Germany is faced with economic ruin because of impossibility to make satisfactory foreign trade agreements, and internal disruption growing out of the confused economic and political situation.

COMMUNISM ONLY HOPE OF NEGRO, SAYS BOB MINOR

Tells Open Forum of Stagnant South

The average Negro worker in the southern states will never cast a vote until the time comes when he chooses his delegates to take part in the Soviet republic of America, Comrade Robert Minor, writer and cartoonist for the DAILY WORKER, told the audience at the Workers Party open forum, in the lodge room of the Ashland Auditorium, Sunday night.

Comrade Minor, speaking on the subject of "The Stagnant South and the Revolution," told how the northern capitalists, in penetrating the solid south, had made a compromise with the semi-feudalistic form of society which hung over from slavery days, and which denies the Negroes even the farcical "rights" of equal franchise.

Minor declared that in the south the problem of the class struggle has been made the race problem by the capitalists and that the only party which boldly announces its attitude on the race problem and mobilizes the Negroes as workers fighting for their rights beside the white workers is the Workers (Communist) Party.

"With conditions as they are in the south today, the capitalist class is not likely to grant the so-called democratic-political rights to the Negroes—the south's exploited masses," Comrade Minor said. "In the south there iss not the modern capitalist form of government, nor is there the modern capitalist political system. For example, in Mississippi only one person in every twenty-two casts his ballot. Only the wealthy classes are allowed to vote.

"The key to the stagnant south as a problem of the proletarian revolution is the Negro question. Everywhere in the south any question of organizing the working class or the exploited farming class, runs afoul of the race question. In the labor unions of the south the Negro is either entirely barred, or in cases where the Negroes must be taken into the union, they are separated from the white workers in the union meeting halls, and are forced to conduct separate meetings, with separate chairmen and separate voting.

"The southern ruling class has inherited the tradition of slave labor, and has kept that tradition alive as a guiding spirit," Comrade Minor declared. "Race hatred is played upon as the standard means of preventing the development of the organization of the workers. The Negro workers have been used to break strikes of white workers, and the white workers have been used to break strikes of the Negro workers."

Minor told how in many southern states the petty officers of the law arrest unemployed workers and sell them to employers for so much a head, often selling these workers into slavery for as long as a year. These "vagrants" are sentenced to terms at "hard labor." They are then placed under whipping bosses. Wherever this crude system is not in effect, other petty depredations, are made in the so-called free wage laborers. Comrade Minor told how he had seen raids on railroad construction camps where petty officers of the law, working in conjunction with the employers, arrested half a hundred workers on a fictitious charge of playing cards on Sunday and fined them a total of all the wages due them.

"Some parts of the South where modern capital has penetrated and opened up a modern form of production, such as in West Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia, we find the beginnings of a primitive militancy of the working class," said Comrade Minor. "In the unpenetrated portions the class conflict comes oftenest in the guise of race conflicts. The most exploited strata of labor and 'peasantry' is in these portions composed of Negroes. They, especially since the world war, have gone thru a disillusionment, and pacifist theories have no very strong hold on them. The average Negro of the south already has a faint glimmering of his proletarian standing. Hardly a day passes that his mind is not dwelling on the fact that he can rely on nothing but his own direct acts for his self-defense."

Comrade Minor told of the massacres and lynchings which are the punishment meted out by the bourgeoisie for the attempts of the Negroes to organize and to fight for their rights.

The key to the solution of the problem of the stagnant south is the direct tackling of the race problem by the only element that can finally solve the problem—the revolutionary Communist Party. The Workers Party has offered the solution to the race problem. Comrade Minor concluded. He presented the program of the Workers (Communist) Party on the Negro question and urged that as many intelligent Negroes as possible be brot into the party and that the Negroes be mobilized for the struggle for the overthrow of capitalism.

ILLINOIS LABOR DEPARTMENT REPORTS SLIGHT BETTERMENT OF BIG UNEMPLOYMENT CRISIS

R. D. Cahn, chief statistician of the Illinois department of labor, has issued a survey of the industrial situation in Illinois during December, which indicates a very slight betterment in the unemployment figures, tho it leaves tremendous unemployment still with us and offers no solution to remove it.

The review, stripped of all its optimistic prophecies, states the following as the more important observed facts given by labor department statistics:

"The regular monthly survey shows that there has been an expansion of 2 per cent in the aggregate amount of employment in the manufacturing industries during November. 1182 employers in a wide range of industry had 276,195 workers in December, a gain of 5,500 over the number the identical employers had a month before.

"Evidence of improvement is indicated in the reports for the month of the Illinois free employment offices in 13 of the principal cities of the state. There was a slight increase in the ratio of applicants to jobs open at the state free employment offices. In December the index stood at 149 per 100 which was not appreciably above that of one year ago. Placements by the offices in 13 of the principal cities of the state totaled 10,105 in December, which was 832 more than the same month last year.

"The larger industrial cities lead in the extent of expansion of the month. In Chicago, there was a gain of 4.8 per cent and average weekly earnings increased to $33.06 per week for males and $18.95 for females, higher than for some time.

"As the leading railroad center of the country, Chicago receives more migratory unemployed in the winter when the out-of-door industries are closed down. Nevertheless, there were only 144 registrants in Chicago for each 100 jobs open at the state free employment office in that city, the lowest point since April and 60 points better than in June and July.

"At East St. Louis, Rockford, and Aurora the gain in the number of factory workers was of substantial proportions. At Moline, Peoria and Rock Island, the gain was smaller while at Bloomington, Danville, Decatur, Joliet and Quincy employment declined.

"The metals, machinery and conveyance group, represented in the reports to the department by 385 employers, had 1.2 per cent more workers than a month previous and 9 of the 12 industries made progress during the month.

"The agricultural implement industry added 10.6 per cent more people. In the past four months this industry has added 38 per cent more workers.

"Blast furnaces had new labor requirements during the month and employment in this industry increased 3.5 per cent for the 114 employers, following gains of slighter amount in October and November.

"The machinery industry which is a highly sensitive barometer to industrial changes reported an increase in employment to the extent of 3.8 per cent. There was also a minor gain in November. In previous months, however, the changes were decidedly downward.

"A recovery of some of the lost ground is shown in the reports of the car builders. The employment increase amounted to 2.5 per cent.

"The apparel industries have become seasonally active. 26.5 per cent was the addition made to the forces in the men's clothing factories, 17.5 per cent in millinery, and 10.9 per cent in women's furnishings.

"The outstanding change in the food industries was in meat packing. During December hog receipts at the Chicago stockyards reached the highest point of any time in the past 10 years and cattle and sheep receipts were high for the time of year. This resulted in an expansion in work forces. 19 reporting packers in December had 5.4 per cent more people than they had a month ago.

"An analysis of the reports by size of firms shows smaller firms are at least keeping pace with their larger competitors. Thus, in the metals, machinery and conveyance group of industry employers of fewer than 101 persons reported increasing the number of their workers by 5 per cent, which was not exceeded substantially by any other group and was considerably more than the increase by employers of over 1,000 workers.

"There has been improvement in the mining industry during the month. 11 mines, some of which have been closed for two years, reopened in December. At other mines orders have justified an increase of the forces or an increase of operations to full time.

"There has been a reduction in the number of workers working only part time and during December there was an increase in the number working overtime. As reported by 1,043 employers who responded to the question of the extent of operations, it appears that 77 per cent of the workers are on a full time schedule. 24 plants are still closed down.

"1,503 employers in all industries reported that they had put into circulation as wages during the week of December 15, $10,707,108, which was 4 per cent increase over the amount they paid out in the week of November 15. The expansion was even larger in manufacturing concerns, the reports for 1,181 of them showing disbursements for the week of December 15 as 5.4 per cent larger than in the like week of the preceding month.

"Building authorizations for the month of December display the usual seasonal characteristics. December permits declined from the November total in practically all of the cities but the bulk of them were at least as large as a year ago. 24 cities issued 2,163 permits calling for $26,259,625 worth of work. The value in November was $35,671,087 and December 1923 was $28,691,691.

Wall Street Cashing in on Dawes Plan

PARIS, Jan. 14. — It was learned from British sources today that the United States will be awarded two and one-quarter per cent of the Dawes' receipts from Germany in payment of America's war claims of $350,000,000.

America's two and one-quarter per cent will continue as long as the Dawes' plan is operative, it was said. In no case, however, would America be paid more than 45,000,000 gold marks toward its war claims in any one year.

The army of occupation costs would be payable at the rate of $2,000,000 gold marks annually, beginning in September, 1926, but with the time reckoned from September, 1923. The American reparations would be reckoned from September, 1924.

BRITISH MAKE HUGE CHANGES IN WARSHIPS

Bigger Guns, Many Planes, Less Speed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 14.—England has marked the end of the dreadnaught era in battleship building and has started the construction of a completely new navy along lines as revolutionary as to alter all conventional notions of fighting craft, it was learned today.

H. M. S. the Rodney and the Nelson, the two new ships laid down under Washington treaty, will be at the same time fortresses and airdromes, with radii of action of thousands of miles, the London Express announced, making public the salient features of the new battleships.

Nine 16-inch guns will be mounted in three turrets on the new ships. No guns will be visible on the after part of the ships, which will be used as landing space for airplanes.

Each ship is expected to carry several airplanes.

The magazines also will be forward, permitting the reduction of the length of armor plates alongside the ship.

The speed of the new craft will be around twenty knots, much slower than the first line fighting ships which preceded them. This is a result of the beam of 106 feet, the widest of any battleships yet constructed.

Glenn Young Too Dirty for Even the Ku Klux Klan

MARION, Ill., Jan. 14.—Announcement that the Illinois ku klux klan is clearing its skirts of S. Glenn Young, gunman, was made here by publication of a letter of Charles Palmer, grand dragon of the Illinois klan. Palmer announced denitely and emphatically that he did not want Young in Chicago to take part in the hearlded "cleaning up" of that city by the klan.

The Williamson county ku klux klan organization has practically deserted Young to his troubles for some time, allowing him to face numerous charges of crime against him in Herrin as best he can. "You may be definitely assured that Young would not be employed by me in any event," Palmer wrote to Marion klansmen.

SECOND CHICAGO DEFENSE MEETING SHOWS BIG GAIN

4,000 Tickets Out for Feb. 5 Show

The second full meeting of the Chicago conference for Defense and Relief, held at 722 Blue Island Ave., last Saturday, Jan. 10, showed a fine gain over the first meeting held a week previous. This time 26 organizations were represented as against 11 for the first meeting. These included German, Polish, Greek, Finnish, South Slavic, Russian, Ukrainian, Czecho-Slovak, six English branches (Englewood, Northwest, North Side, Douglas Park, Midcity, Cicero), three Lithuanian branches (No. 5, 3, and 74), Scandinavian Karl Marx and Lakeview, Nucleus No. 5, and Italian No. 1, and Young Workers' Leagues No. 1, 3, 5 and 6.

6,000 Must Attend Show.

Comrade Kruse, acting local secretary for the conference, reported on the arrangements for showing "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" at Ashland Auditorium, Feb. 5. About 4,000 tickets had been placed in circulation, about 30 ticket stations were established, advertising posters were out and about $40 worth of advertising had been solicited for the program. To be really successful 6,000 people would have to attend the show, and this means that every member would have to bring out six fellow workers. Every delegate reported on the action of his organization on these points and special committees were appointed to cover affairs brot to notice thru the delegates' reports.

The advertising program will be a 30-page book, 9x6 inches in size, giving the story of the film in word and picture, and containing advertisements from friendly business and professional men as well as greetings from branches and fraternal organizations. Rates: Full page $20; half page $11 and so on down to card space $3.00. Every member should get at least one three-dollar ad. Copy to 19 S. Lincoln St., International Workers' Aid, not later than Jan. 30.

Defense Reports on New Drive.

Comrade Maurer reported on the great Ruthenberg Defense Drive now being launched by the Labor Defense Council. Trade unions had already begun to send in resolutions of protest and speakers would be sent out to bring the case before the organized workers.

In answer to a question it was explained that defense and relief work could be carried on much better jointly than by two conferences, and this met with the enthusiastic approval of the delegates. Language committees were made up of the delegates from each language group and these will be enlarged into sections of the larger conference in charge of its work among the workers of their respective nationalities.

The next meeting will be held at 722 Blue Island Ave., next Saturday, Jan. 17, at 3:00 p. m.

Unions in Omaha Back Up W. P. in Child Labor Fight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 14.—The campaign of the local Workers Party and T. U. E. L. militants on the child labor question is already getting results.

The Stonecutters' Local Union here has passed the following resolution on the child labor question:

Resolution Against Child Labor.

"Whereas, the physical and moral well-being of the children of the working class in this country is being destroyed thru brutal exploitation in the mines, mills, factories, and sweatshops to create larger profits for employers; and

"Whereas, thru the exploitation of the children the employers are enabled to reduce wages and lower the conditions of labor, and to weaken the trade unions; and

"Whereas, the children of the workers and small farmers are entitled to a full education, without being penalized thru lack of the necessities of life that forces them into hard work in their childhood, thereby stunting their lives; and

"Whereas, children are forced to work because of the poverty of their parents, and a child labor law without government support for the child going to school would have little value; therefore be it

"Resolved: That we demand the immediate ratification by the state legislatures of the Child Labor Amendment to the Constitution, and that Congress shall immediately pass a law prohibiting the labor of children under eighteen years of age; and be it further

"Resolved: That since the child labor amendment would be meaningless without government maintenance of the school children of the workers and small farmers, the state and federal legislatures shall provide by law for full maintenance of all school children of workers and small farmers, the funds for this purpose to come from special taxes on high incomes, and be it further

"Resolved: That we favor setting aside of all discriminatory clauses in the constitution of the trades unions and admitting all young workers into the unions with equal rights, and that dues and initiation fees be adjusted for the young workers in order that they may strengthen the unions against the employers; and be it further

"Resolved: That our organization is ready to enter a common political struggle against child labor exploitation and for full government maintenance of the school children of workers and small farmers, and pledge ourselves to co-operate with other workingclass organizations to this end."

Adopted at a regular meeting of Omaha Local, Journeyman Stone Cutters of North America, held at Labor Temple, Omaha, Nebraska, January 2, 1925.

And So We Call Upon District 1 to Report

In this self-same corner of our daily, for the next twelve days, district after district of the Workers Party will report its accomplishments to date in our insurance campaign. We are sure that there is not a member in the party that has not heard about the insurance policies and how their sale will vitalize and make secure our daily.

But as sure as we are of this, we also know that less than half of the party branches has responded with remittances to date. And so we are going to call the roll. We are going to have every branch, as its name is called, tell whether it has yet helped the daily to an eventful, successful 1925, how much it has helped, or whether its first dollar has still to reach us.

The Job Before District 1

District 1 has a totaal of 99 party branches. Of this number 42 have made remittances. But many of these 42 that have remitted have not nearly sold Insurance Policies to all their members.

There are 57 branches in District 1 that have not yet sent in a single dollar. We will be glad to hear from every one of them within the next two weeks.

The quota, upon the basis of three dollars per member, given District 1, is $6,330. Of this amount the 42 branches that have remitted sent in a total of $828.75. There are an average of 2,110 members in District 1. Altho the quota assigned is $3.00 per member, we have not yet received even $1.00 per member from this district.

We know that District 1 is going to make good. We expect that when next we print a report from District 1, the total remittances will average at least $1.00 per member. And then on to the $3.00 per member goal.

John J. Ballam, the district organizer, must be backed up in this campaign by every branch secretary, C. C. C. secretary, DAILY WORKER agent, federation district organizer—yes, by every member of the party in the district.

HELP HIM TO SECURE ACTION FROM THE 57 BRANCHES STILL TO BE HEARD FROM. HELP HIM TO SECURE FULL QUOTAS FROM THE 42 BRANCHES THAT HAVE ALREADY REMITTED.

NEWARK'S ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED REACHES 50,000

Crisis, Not Prosperity, Follows Coolidge

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 14.—There are 50,000 unemployed workers in this city, with no relief in sight. The large factories are working on part time or are completely closed down. The Crucible Steel company, the Hyatt Roller Bearing company, the Edison and Ford factories, the Western Electric company and other large factories all closed down for a few weeks during the holidays. They have used the shutdown as a means of cutting wages, the workers finding their wage scale reduced when they returned to work.

Business conditions are very bad and the wheels of industry are not moving. Workmen are beginning to talk of a severe crisis as the only result of Coolidge's election, which it was predicted by the republicans would bring prosperity. The workers of this city—one of the largest industrial centers in the world—are largely unorganized.

Five hundred men are applying for jobs at the municipal employment bureau every day. Applicants to the employment office are increasing steadily and practically all are turned away. Superintendent E. A. Brennan states. In 1924 the bureau secured 10,000 less jobs for unemployed workers than they were able to secure in 1923. Calls at the Green St. employment office by social service agencies are also increasing, and the newspapers are printing many stories showing that destitution caused by unemployment is widespread.

Brennan, the superintendent of the city employment bureau, is an American Federation of Labor official who grabbed the first fat job which came his way. Brennan is the man responsible for preventing William Z. Foster from speaking in Newark using his office of "director of public safety" to attack the Communists.

EVEN IGLESIAS, LABOR FAKER OF THE CARIBBEANS, HAS TO COMPLAIN—BUT TO DEAF EARS

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—In the face of Gov. Towner's long cablegram to the Literary Digest, claiming that the election in Porto Rico on Nov. 4 was peaceful and orderly and registered the will of the voters, President Coolidge has been forced to order the war department to investigate.

When Santiago Iglesias, president of the Free Federation of Workingmen of Porto Rico and leader of the socialist party in the island, saw Coolidge on Jan. 2 he carried with him a letter to the chief executive from William Green, new chief of the American Federation of Labor.

"On behalf of the A. F. of L. I bespeak for the request of the Porto Rican workers adequate, impartial investigation, serious consideration and favorable action," said Green. "The charges are of so grave a nature that our government should take steps to secure authoritative information. I urge this matter for your immediate attention with the earnest hope that you will give all possible aid to this effort and assure an understanding necessary for the realization of the high ideals of our government."

Coolidge listened to Iglesias' statement of the theft of the election by the plantation owners' and corporations' political agents, and to his account of the misery of the workers in Porto Rico, and received from him a series of affidavits in support of his plea for a federal investigation. He promised to take the matter up with the secretary of war and "do his best." Secretary Weeks notified Iglesias next day that he would meet him for discussion of the whole matter.

CLERKS BLAME COOLIDGE FOR THEIR DEFEAT

Urge Workers Support Bills S. 3674

An indication of the post office clerks' resentment about the deal Coolidge put over them is given in a letter received by the DAILY WORKER from the Chicago Post Office Clerks' Union No. 1. The letter is signed by P. H. Seegaard, treasurer, David W. Johnson and Earl W. Wiley, the legislative committee, and says in part that the postal clerks have been defeated in their fight for a living wage. They point to Coolidge's maneuvers.

Coolidge managed by threatening to withdraw patronage to get one more than the one-third vote to sustain his veto. He got one over the 29 senators, which would make one-third of the house and thus the bill was killed.

However, in sustaining the veto, Coolidge said that his purpose was to make an economic balance of receipts and expenditures in the post office department which is accomplished by the new bill S. 3674. This bill recommends increase in salary and at the same time increases of postal rates on certain classes of mail.

The postal clerks in their letter urge the support of all workers to the administration bill S. 3674.

NEWSWRITERS IN SCRANTON GAIN SALARY RAISE

(By The Federated Press)

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 14. — The Scranton newswriters' local, affiliated with the International Typographical Union, has concluded a new wage agreement with the newspaper publishers, raising wages two to six dollars a week, Secretary B. B. Powell informs the Federated Press.

Under the new scale reporters with five years' experience receive $52 a week; day copy readers get $54 and night copy readers $58.

Afternoon newspapermen work from 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., with an hour for lunch. The union was not able to get Saturday afternoons off for the afternoon newspapermen and Sunday afternoons off for the morning newspapermen.

Cub reporters, corresponding to appentices in other trades, get much smaller rates. The necessary five years for full pay men need not have been served in Scranton. The union rates are minimums. The publisher is allowed to raise the ante as much as he pleases to hold extra valuable men.

All the working newswriters of the city are in the union, 38 in all.

Castro to Get New Trial.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 14.—A stay of execution from January 16, to April 5, was granted Jose Castro, Mexican, today by the Indiana supreme court on petition of Colonel Russell B. Harrison, Indianapolis, representative of the Mexican government who said he would seek a new trial on the ground that Castro, a drug addict, convicted of the murder of Paul Budich, an Indiana Harbor detective, had not had a fair trial.

DIST. 1, MINERS MOVE TO IMPEACH PRES. CAPPELLINI

"Outlaw" Strikers Win Wide Support

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

WILKSBARRE, Pa., Jan. 14.—Unless a special convention is called by Wednesday, Jan. 14, impeachment proceedings will be started by the miners of District One, United Mine Workers of America. The above, in substance, is the ultimatum given by a joint general grievance committee meeting, held here last Saturday night and which lasted nearly four hours.

To ascertain if such a special convention will be called by the district president or the executive board by that time, a committee consisting of the chairmen of four of the general bodies will visit the district office in Scranton and failure to receive satisfaction, will be the cue to start another special committee.

Good Standing Locals to Impeach Cappellini.

This committee, consisting of two men from each of the good standing general bodies, is already selected, and if they are not assured by Wednesday that a convention is being called, they will begin to prepare the charges on which to impeach the officials.

That they have a clear cut case is evident from the fact that about seventy locals have made a request for the convention, Cappellini himself having informally admitted that such is the case. This means that the charges will be for "flagrant violation of Article 7, Section 2 of the district constitution" which reads: "Special conventions of the district shall be called by the president upon the written request of five locals, who shall state the object of the convention in their request."

District Nine Offers Solidarity.

No immediate general strike was spoken of at the Saturday session, but various reports were made to the effect that the miners of District Nine, the Shamokin district, at a meeting there a week ago, voted to give aid and their "full moral support" to the miners of District One in any move District One miners might make.

Stanley Edmunds, former president of Local Union 699 at Edwardsville, Pa., the first local in this district to have its charter revoked for alleged "outlaw" striking, spoke for a half hour. He recited efforts to bribe him on the part of both coal company and Miners' Union officials, of invitations to banquets, all for the purpose of persuading him not to encourage strikes that were necessary to save the conditions existing at the mine he worked in.

Lewis and Cappellini Stand Pat.

A letter from John L. Lewis was read, in which he stated that he would take no action in this affair until he received a report from the special committee of investigators, who were sent here at the beginning of the strike. This and a statement earlier in the day by Cappellini, that there was only one grievance of the Pennsylvania men that was "good enough" to present to the conciliation board, moved the delegates to the decision they have made.

Cappellini was not present at the meeting, altho he was invited to attend. He did, however, attend the meeting of the Hudson general body earlier in the day, but that was probably because they threatened to call out the twenty thousand men of that company immediately, unless he did so and agreed to take up their grievances within a week.

Grievances Two Years Old.

With members of the executive board he appeared and harangued the delegates and argued the merits of their complaints for nearly six hours, but finally agreed to take up their troubles with the company within a week. A report of this session made at the later joint meeting brot out the fact that many grievances supposedly taken up two years ago were still untouched.

Our Pioneers Must Be Strong!

Regular hours for meals, with dinner at noon for children uder seven years of age, are best for growing boys and girls.

Boy Killed: Parents Injured.

DECATUR, Ind., Jan. 14.—With his parents being treated for injuries received in the accident which resulted in his death, funeral arrangements were made today for 9 year old Thomas Baker, killed when a Pennsylvania passenger train struck the motor car in which he, his parents, a brother, Walter, S. and Mrs. Robert Chronister were riding.

REPORT ON ECONOMIC SITUATION IN SOVIET RUSSIA PAST YEAR SHOWS INCREASE IN INDUSTRY PRODUCTION

The economic situation of Soviet Russia at the beginning of the new year was described in detail in a cabled report to the Amtorg Trading corporation by Isaiah J. Hoorgin, chairman of the board of directors of the corporation, who is at present visiting Moscow in connection with the business of the Amtorg.

Progress in Industry.

In his review Hoorgin points out that during the year just passed the economic development of the Soviet Union has considerably advanced. In all branches of industry production has increased, the total output amounting in value to 3,000,000,000 gold rubles, and the roductivity of the individual factories and works was raised to a higher level.

The year 1924 witnessed a revival of trade, the turnover registered on the exchanges exceeding that of the preceding year by several times. The amount of money in circulation grew to 750,000,000 gold rubles. The Soviet currency has not only been firmly stabilized but its rate of exchange has already reached the pre-war par, and the State Bank is proceeding with the further issues of notes in strict conformity with the rules governing their fullest security.

The foreign trade turnover of the Soviet Union during the past year almost doubled as compared with the preceding year and reached a total of 800,000,000 rubles in pre-war values with a favorable balance, the exports exceeding the imports by 100,000,000 rubles.

Wages Increase.

There was also an increase in wages and the general well-being of the population has improved as witnessed by the increased demand for industrial products. Thus, the textile industry was operating to the fullest of its capacity and importing enormous quantities of cotton from abroad, including the United States. Its total output amounted to over 800,000,000 meters (about 1,300,000,000 yards) of fabric. But, still in many localities a shortage of textiles is felt owning to the increasing demand of the population for the product. The growth of the economic prosperity of the Soviet Union is also reflected in the fact that the foreign credits advanced for the Soviet foreign trade have increased many times over the sums advanced in the preceding year. The partial accumulation of capital as a result of the new economic policy enables the Soviet state to satisfy the needs of the population and of industry to a gretaer extent than heretofore. Thus, there have been purchases of sugar made abroad in order to meet the increasing demand of the peasant population for this product, altho the output of the sugar industry this year amounted to over 250,000,000 poods, which is nearly double the output of last year.

Marked Growing Prosperity.

The effect of the poor crop in the Volga region was, of course, to slow down the pace of the growth of the country's resources. However, the crop yielded over 2,700,000,000 poods covering to the full the country's need in grain cereals. Instead of the grain exports of the past year the Soviet Exportkhlieb (grain export bureau) is furthering the exports of other products of agriculture. Preliminary deals effected in some of these products show that their exports will surpass even the pre-war level.

The recent drought has hit chiefly the wheat regions. But the resources of the country have sufficiently improved to enable the state to satisfy the needs of the population in wheat by the importation of certain rather insignificant quantities of wheat flour from abroad, mainly for the port cities which are the furtherest removed from the wheat growing sections These flour purchases are a result of the growing prosperity of the country and the increased demand of the population for higher grades of bread, and they furnish in fact, another proof of the stability and strength of the economic situation of the Soviet republic.

POSTAL CLERKS UNDER COOLIDGE SPEED-UP SYSTEM

Demand Congress Investigate Coercion

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14.—The postoffice department is denying postal employes their sick benefits and making them work more than eight hours, T. F. Flaherty, secretary of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks charges in a statement issued here. The U. S. postoffice department has nullified protective laws and instituted a reign of coercion by means of the speed up system, Flaherty charges, demanding a congressional investigation.

"Apparently not satisfied with having won its fight for a low wage policy when the president's veto of the postal salary bill was sustained, the postoffice is nullifying protective laws and using a reign of terror in the postal service," says the postal clerk's statement.

"New York postoffices have abandoned the eight hour law and many employes are forced to work overtime every night. In Chicago the speed up system has been inaugurated that required all carriers to weigh their output of mail, which move is designed to harass the men to the limit of human endurance."

"Scandalous" Says Judge.

In New York Judge Winslow, of the federal court, refused to sentence four postal clerks, before him charged with transferring cancelled stamps. "The pay of these men is scandalous," Judge Winslow said of the postal clerks. The four men, William [illegible], Arno Schaler, William M. Gallagher, and James Connolly, employes at a postal sub-station, have records of service extending from 16 to 21 years. They received $1,890 to $2,000 a year, and all are fathers of large families.

Longer Hours in New Hampshire.

EAST ROCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 14.—Working hours at Cocheco Woolen Mills are increased from 50 to 54. Amoskeag and other large mills in New Hampshire operate 54 hours weekly. Cocheco has not announced wage cuts. Governor John G. Winant urged a 48-hour week for workers in his inaugural address a few days ago.

Board to Discuss Seat Shortage.

At the board of education meeting this afternoon at 650 S. Clark street a report showing the seat shortage in Chicago schools will be presented. The report was prepared by Ambrose B. Wright, assistant superintendent and bears the signature of the superintendent. It is listed under "Congestion in Our Schools."

Alloting the Loot

The loot that is expected to flow into the coffers of the allied nations as a result of the work of the Dawes plan, has been allotted and the capitalist press heaves a very audible sigh of relief. Everything is lovely and the goose hangs high.

The limitation of $350,000,000 as the share of the American robber clique was eliminated and the House of Morgan will proceed now to take all the traffic will bear. The rest of the allied bankers will squawk, but it will do them little good. They all owe the enterprising firm of Morgan a lot of money that they cannot pay and for that reason will be treated like insolvent debtors usually are.

The important thing about the conference was that it indicated a temporary sinking of the national antagonisms under the leadership of the bankers of Great Britain and the United States. Some sort of harmony is greatly desired by the finance-capitalists who rule these nations in view of the serious crisis in Germany, Italy and the Balkans.

It is fairly certain that the continued and rapid improvement of the economic, political and international status of Soviet Russia had much to do with the handshaking that took place in Paris Tuesday betwen the allied delegates.

Signing the agreement were delegates representing Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, the United States, with the little jackel nations of Portugal, Greece, Roumania, Jugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slovakia and Brazil.

We predict that this harmony will last until the first payment under the Dawes plan is due. Then there will be more dissension among this carrion crew.

The party has decided to devote one whole page weekly to the work of the Trade Union Educational League and the activities of the militants in the trade union movement of the United States. This is a very important innovation in developing the industrial work of our party, and the Communists active in the economic organizations of the workers should assist in making the proposed page the livest department of the DAILY WORKER and a powerful stimulant to our industrial activities.

What we want for this page is news of the class struggle, strikes, lockouts, stories of left wing battles with the reactionaries, elections in unions, everything that deals with the struggle of the workers in the industries.

As our industrial director, Comrade Foster points out, the success of this innovation will be a tribute to the efficiency of our young organization on the industrial field. The appeal to participate in making this page a success is directed to every reader of this paper and particularly to active leaders of the Trade Union Educational League.

All material intended for our special page should be sent directly to the national office of the T. U. E. L., 1113 West Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

The Movies—An Industry

When the motion picture industry is mentioned one is inclined to think only of Hollywood and its contributions to the first pages of the yellow press. Nevertheless, the production cost of the industry, amounts paid out for labor and materials in making pictures, reached a total of $86,418,470 last year—an increase of 11.7 per cent over 1921.

It is evident from the above that there are great numbers of workers exploited in this industry altho the figures on profits are not given. Most of them are unorganized and are fed on romance rather than wages. Strikes are not of frequent occurrence in the movie industry, but as standardization and specialization make progress in line with all industrial development in the United States the romance will depart and the same sordidness of all of capitalism's undertakings will show thru the silver screen that now hides from the movie fans the exploitation of thousands of workers that makes possible their pleasure.

We will soon begin to hear of union and non-union films and read appeals from the workers who, in the popular conception of the movie industry, are supposed to feed on nectar and ambrosia.

Herbert Hoover, our well-known secretary of commerce, has had another brainstorm. He claims to have found a method of lowering the high cost of living without reducing either wages or profits. We venture the prediction that he will revise his plan to allow for the reduction of wages, but that profits will be let severely alone to soar to new heights in company with the aforesaid h. c. l.

The Wobblies and Their Song Book

The present controversy among the I. W. W. has caused [illegible] wing to be forced out of headquarters. As a result we notice that the twenty-first edition of the "Little Red Song Book," which has just been published, contains "Casey Jones" (a little censored), "Should I Ever Be a Soldier 'Neath the Red Flag I Will Fight," "Might Is Right," and some other of the battling songs which made the old wobblies famous, but which have been taboo since John Grady's counter-revolutionary faction seized power in 1922.

Merely changing a few songs in the official hymn book doesn't accomplish much in itself, but it may indicate a change in sentiment.

The Red International Affiliation Committee and the Workers Party have been urging for a long time that the I. W. W. abandon their pacifist position.

The new edition is supposed to be dedicated to the Centralia defendants of the capitalist class dictatorship, but there is little to indicate it except three words on the cover and Ralph Chaplin's poem to Wesley Everest on the fifth page.

The spirit of militancy which resides in the rank and file of proletarians unpolluted by frenzied dogmatism, and which crops out occasionally in the left wing leadership between its moods of "tired radical" cynicism that devastates all inward prompting to action and turns the temperamental rebel from the political (class) struggle to pornography and playing the races—this reservoir of militancy in the ranks of the I. W. W. has yet to be organized and put into action, if the I. W. W. is to show any true respect for the fighters of Centralia.

If this fertile field of revolutionary action is not to go to seed, and if the remnant of revolutionary leadership is going to justify its existence and do anything more constructive than wander around in theoretical circles and curse Jim Rowan, it will have firstly to solidify itself by uniting definitely around the program of the Red International Affiliation Committee, and secondly move forward in an organized, militant struggle against the bourgeois ideas and their spokesmen.

It is sufficiently shameful a comment upon the revolutionary element of the I. W. W. that at this moment, when Ford and Suhr are half forgotten in Folsom, one hundred members behind the bars of San Quentin and, not to mention more, the eight Centralia victims are doing what amounts to a life sentence, all victims of the capitalist dictatorship, that the membership should permit its servant, its general secretary-treasurer, so to insult the memory and the work of those who died in open struggle as to deliver a speech defending capitalist "democracy" under the guise of an attack on the theory of proletarian dictatorship.

How long will the membership of the I. W. W. bear the infliction of a dictatorship of noisy mediocrities who, incapable of taking the offensive against the capitalist, and cynically indifferent of the profound need of unity among all working class organizations in defense against the capitalist dictatorship, hope to acquire a little passing notice, to be crowned with a little flickering halo, by taking the offensive against the Communists—and in so doing to place themselves in a position of making a united front with the class enemy of the workers to prevent and disrupt the unity of their forces?

The answer to this is the answer to the question: Is it a sufficient proof of a revolutionary policy in present-day affairs to put Wesley Everest's, Joe Hill's and Frank Little's pictures, and Ralph Chaplin's poems in a song book, while the organization is taught to forget and instructed never to apply the policies of Everest, Hill and Little, and a squawking flock of inferiorities are permitted to force Chaplin's abilities into the service of the master class instead of making them an aid to the organization?

Not until the revolutionary elements accept the idea, the aid and program of the left wing bloc organized around the T. U. E. L. will the wobblies stop from going from bad to worse.

Cracking the Landis Award

The Landis award, touted by the open shoppers as the harbinger of peace in the Chicago building industry, has tied up the work on nine school buildings. The school board has let contracts for glass work to a firm employing scabs and the inevitable result has been a strike by the Glaziers' Union.

The contracting firm in question, William Hallis and company, has broken its agreement with the Glaziers' Union to employ no Landis award scabs and there will be no glass work done until the agreement is lived up to.

The strike comes shortly after the glowing review of the work of the scab Landis award board for the past year, prepared by its secretary, and shows that contrary to the boast made that the building trades unions had been whipped into line, there is still considerable fight left in them and that only the traitorous conduct of some union officials has made it possible for the Landis award to be a factor of any strength whatever in Chicago.

The exportation of monkeys from India for the gland trade in Europe coincides with the frantic efforts of European capitalism to restore its virility by the injection of such a desperate remedy as the Dawes plan into its rapidly hardening arteries.

FARMERS PLEAD VAINLY FOR AID FROM COOLIDGE

No Relief Is Expected From Congress

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14.—The plan of President Coolidge to quietly sidetrack all legislation for relief of the farmers received a setback in the senate when democrats and independent republicans, many of whom must cater to their rural constituency, raised a plea for farm relief legislation.

Senator Borah of Idaho, who recently aided Coolidge in defeating the pay raise for postal employes, called for legislation to provide for immediate relief for the farmers. Borah's action will not cause any definite break with the Coolidge administration, it is thot here, as Coolidge understands that Borah must make a grandstand play for the benefit of his farmer supporters in Idaho, even if his talk brings no beneficial results to the farmers.

Administration leaders are trying to prevent the calling of an extra session of congress to deal with farm relief. Coolidge made embarrassing promises to the farmers in his recent election campaign, and in order to save his face, the bankers and industrial capitalists who are in control of the national council of the farmers' co-operative marketing association have been spreading propaganda that the farmers do not want government relief. Former Governor Lowden of Illinois, Barnard Baruch and other Wall Street men are officers in this association which in no way represents the voice of the farmers.

"The voters were assured last November that the fundamentals of agriculture would be settled immediately to their full satisfaction," Senator Swanson, democrat from Virginia said in bringing the subject to the attention of the senate. "There ought to be an extra session of congress to provide relief for the farmers." Borah added that further disaster threatens the farmers unless congress provides some basic remedies for poor marketing facilities.

These senators, however, admit privately, when not talking to build their political fences, that congress can do nothing, even if Coolidge wanted to to save the thousands of bankrupt farmers in this country.

The only thing that will finally save the farmers who are now destitute will be when they are given the ownership of their land and allowed to participate in a workers' and farmers' Soviet government.

Davis Keeps His Job, Leaving John L. Lewis Holding the Big Bag

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—James J. Davis, secretary of labor, has withdrawn his tentative resignation, submitted some time ago, and will remain in the cabinet, it was announced at the White House today.

Simultaneously with this announcement it was stated that President Coolidge "expected no other cabinet changes."

Skeptical observers, however, recalled that the same announcement was made only a few days before Secretary Hughes resigned and Attorney General Stone was named for the supreme court.

LENIN MEMORIAL MEETINGS

The spirit in which the first anniversary of Lenin's death is to be commemorated is not one of mourning, but a living proof of the fact that while Lenin is dead, Leninism lives and grows toward the realization of our common goal, the Communist state.

In the United States we must make these meetings a real demonstration of party strength, of Leninist following and devotion to our greatest leader and teacher.

It is important that every city in which there is a party organization hold a Lenin Memorial meeting. Many such meetings have already been arranged and speakers assigned.

Every party unit which has not already done so should immediately arrange to hold a Lenin Memorial meeting and send into the national office the date of the meeting, name and location of the hall, time, name of the person in charge, and state whether local speakers are available or whether assignment should be thru the national office.

HOLIDAY GREETINGS FROM LOWER DEPTHS OF 'FR.SCO, CALIF.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The merry holiday season in San Francisco is over. A girl drowned herself because she faced Christmas without funds or home; a man shot himself because he could not get a job. A convict serving a jail sentence for a petty offense was refused permission to attend his baby's funeral; a well-known gambler serving time for bootlegging was given leave of absence from the same jail to enjoy a Christmas dinner with his family. The usual New Year entertainment at San Quentin penitentiary was held without the 150 Negro prisoners, who were kept in their cells all day because two of them had a quarrel in the dining hall and the new warden thought an example must be set. The week was marked by the coldest spell of the season, and the jobless men on the skid-road—Howard St., the employment office district—enjoyed a chilly, dinnerless Christmas and New Years. A dry agent was killed while on a booze party. Several denominations announce the beginning of a special week of prayer. The new year has begun.

Railroads Put It Over on Law.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14. — The great railroad mergers being carried out by the Van Sweringen brothers are "illegal" under a strict interpretation of the Esch-Cummins Transportation act, Ben B. Cain, counsel for the American Short Line Railroad association charged today before the senate interstate commerce commission.

Senate Again Changes Mind on Muscles Shoals

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14.—The senate today passed the bill of Senator Norris, providing for the government ownership of Muscles Shoals, after having earlier in the day passed the Jones bill, amending the Underwood bill by postponing action on Muscle Shoals until next December. The Norris bill which was passed by a vote of 40 to 39, provides for the operation of the $150,000,000 power and nitrate project under direction of a federal corporation for the manufacture of nitrates and fertilizer.

Norris proposes to establish a federal chemical corporation to develop power at Muscle Shoals and to carry on the manufacture of nitrates for sale to farmers. The Jones bill provided for a commission of three to investigate ways of disposing of Muscle Shoals and reporting back to the senate in December.

The Underwood bill provided for the sale of Muscle Shoals to private interests.

War Vet Pleads Insanity.

George Shaw, war veteran who killer his father, Bruce Shaw, with a saber, in a quarrel at their Oak Park home on the night of December 14, was arraigned in criminal court today and pleaded "not guilty." His attorney, Robert E. Cantwell, is expected to present a petition for an insanity hearing.

FOSTER'S VOTE IN WEST SHOWS PARTY GROWS

Communist Strength in Agrarian Districts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 14.—The vote for the Workers Party candidates, as recorded by counties, shows a surprising Communist strength in the industrial centers of the state.

Dubuque, where we have not a single party member, heads the list with 668 votes. Next comes Polk County (Des Moines) with 513 and Webster County (Fort Dodge) with 430.

Votes in other industrial centers is given as follows:

Boone	286
Davenport	226
Marshalltown	116
Muscatine	119
Sioux City	73

The mining camps showed a good vote, Centerville (Appanoose county) recording 56 votes, and Albia (Monroe county) 41 votes.

Surprising strength is also shown in certain agrarian districts, particularly Story county with 184 votes and Crawford county with 165 votes.

Industrial Vote Predominates.

In Iowa there are 99 counties, of which 92 counties record a vote for the Workers Party ticket totaling 4,037. Of this over half, or 2,431, is recorded in eight industrial centers. Two small mining camp districts record a total vote of 97 votes. This indicates a vote of 2,528, or two-thirds of the total for the state, from ten industrial districts.

It must be noted that Iowa has only 32 party members, most of whom are in Sioux City, and that this remarkable vote was polled in the face of the terrific LaFollette sweep which netted 350,000 votes in the state for the LaFollette ticket.

The extent of the campaign in the state was a tour by Comrade Snyder, and a speech by Comrade Foster in Des Moines. Comrade Snyder worked under extreme difficulties to get the party on the ballot, having to go into the various towns and personally hunt up sympathizers to assist him in securing the necessary petitions. As a matter of fact, he had to put the party on the ballot by practically his own efforts, with the exception of such help as the Sioux City and Omaha (Nebr.) comrades could give.

Fighting LaFollette Sweep.

Dubuque county (Dubuque) gave LaFollette a majority of 10,000, yet Foster and Gitlow were given 668 votes. There are no party members at Dubuque, nor at Boone, Marshalltown, Muscatine, nor Davenport, so far as we know. Des Moines and Ft. Dodge also have no party members. These were all LaFollette strongholds, yet recorded Workers Party votes ranging from 119 to 668.

This indicates a clear-headed vote for the Workers Party and Communism as against LaFollette. The S. L. P. was also on the ballot, but polled only 400, or ten per cent of the Workers Party vote, while elsewhere their vote ran about the same as the Workers Party (counted) vote.

A Communist Opportunity.

These eight industrial centers offer an opportunity to the Workers Party to build and strengthen the Communist movement in this country.

Comrade Snyder has been placed in the middle-western territory by the national office, but he has to attend to Kansas and Missouri, as well as the Iowa territory. He can be depended upon to get good results for the party in Iowa, and in this work he must be given every possible assistance by the comrades in the national office territory. The central executive committee has recognized the need of organization work in this territory by placing Comrade Snyder in the field.

It should be remembered, however, that he has to work in a territory without party members, and but scattered connections in the way of sympathizers and readers of party publications. This presents entirely different problems from organization work in territories where there are party members to co-operate in the various localities.

Comrade David Coutts, of Omaha, will assist Comrade Snyder in the Iowa work to the extent of the time he can spare, particularly in extending the Trade Union Educational League. This branch of the party activity will, of course, be of great importance in connection with the work of organizing party branches in the Iowa industrial centers.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

DeWolf Hopper Company at Great Northern Theater.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

That most astounding of comedians DeWolf Hopper, and his company have hopped into the Great Northern theater to give a series of revivals of more or less old time musical comedies.

They opened last Sunday with "The Mikado," by William S. Gilbert and Arthur S. Sullivan. The story of this operetta will not be sketched here. In the first place it is too well known and in the second I don't know what it is myself. After two careful reading of the libretto and a painstaking attention to what was going on on the stage I still can't figure out how the thing is untangled.

Old Man Ko-Ko, lord high executioner in Titipu is engaged to marry his ward Yum-Yum. She is in love with Nanki-Poo, a strolling trombonist, who proves to be the mikado's son. Nanki Poo is supposedly executed by Ko-Ko. An element of danger to Nanki-Poo is brot in the shape of an elderly lady Katisha, who is on his trail with matrimonial intentions. Of all of Gilbert's plots this is the most elaborate, most involved, and, while not the funniest filled with that particularly sarcastic burlesque on politics as they are played in London or Washington or Berlin, of which Gilbert was a master.

Sullivan's score is, of course, bright and catchy and very English. Here was a man with a happy genius for light opera. Outside of "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "The Lost Chord," for which he is to be forgiven, these operas to Gilbert's texts are the only compositions of his that are played any more. Why this should be it is difficult to explain. If one will turn to the musical journals of thirty and forty years ago, one will find favorabl reviews of a great deal of music of diversified types by this man Sullivan.

The work of the cast centered entirely around Hopper himself, who played Ko-Ko. Exactly how old Hopper is the press agent doesn't make known, but he looks seventy or over. He seems to have lost none of his vigor and youth. He has the same terrible bass voice, the same squaking falsetto, the same drunkenness of style. Imagine a man seventy years of age lying on his side on the proscenium, warming his hands at the footlights, singing the famous foolish song "The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring" in that position, and, at the end rolling off the stage! That's what DeWolf Hopper does.

As for the rest of the cast, they were all very good except for Miss Ethel Walker, who played Yum-Yum. Her acting is unconvincing, and her voice harsh and unpleasant and not always in tune.

George Shields as the Mikado was a pleasantly bloodthirsty monarch. Poo-Bah, Lord High Everything Else who was born sneering at persons of lower rank than himself, was taken by Herbert Waterous. Miss Ethel Clark who played Pitti-Sing, Yum-Yum's companion, was a delight to the eye and the ear.

One fault the entire company has only Hopper excepted. They can no sing English understandably. That is a great pity, because some of the cleverest verses in the language are in Gilbert's libretto for "The Mikado."

NO JAIL FOR CALLING SCAB

C.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO, Jan. 14.—Charles Brown, militant union printer, will not have to spend two days in jail for accusing strikebreakers at a local printing plant of being scabs. The court of appeals upheld Brown against the decision of the lower court, which had been based on the violation of an injunction. Nine other members of Local 63, the oldest union in the city, were permanently restrained, however, from picketing or conducting strike activities.

AS WE SEE

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE trail of Captain Jacqu[illegible]doul who was sentenced to death by a French military court in 1919 for "deserting to the enemy" was adjourned, after the prisoner was granted temporary liberty pending continuance of the trial. The case has international interest. Sadoul was a member of a French military mission to Russia. He informed the court that Clemenceau refused to give the Russians any assistance against the German ruling classes after Kerensky's fall and therefore the Brest-Litovsk peace had to be signed. Sadoul told the court that he was a Communist but liked France so well he wanted it saved by a revolution such as took place in Russia. Evidently this viewpoint impressed the court, as the captain was granted temporary freedom!

COURTS are not generally swept off their feet by oratory. The main reason for France's dilatoriness in carrying out the court martial sentence is fear of the consequences. Sadoul has the goods on the French government, the government of Clemenceau. The labor movement is back of him and the French workers are inclined to suit the action to the word. It is not likely that the death sentence will be carried out in the case of Sadoul. This is evidence of the power of the Communist movement in France rather than an indication of soft heartedness on the part of the French bourgeoisie.

PREMIER HERRIOT is still suffering from a sick foot, but his illness does not prevent him from making an occasional attack on the Soviet government. In this respect he is following the example of Ramsay MacDonald. The latter won considerable notoriety when he threatened not to "stand any monkey business from the Soviet government." But the tories made a monkey out of MacDonald, while the Bolsheviks are holding the fort gayly. Moderates are unlucky devils nowadays. Those who are neither hot nor cold, politically speaking do not fit in this era of crises, wars and revolutions. Herriot is destined to follow his foot into retirement.

ANOTHER gentleman who is destined to follow in the footsteps of MacDonald and Herriot is Calles of Mexico. A headline in a local paper describes the Mexican president as making an attack on the reactionaries. On reading the text however we learn that Calles is attacking the radical agrarians who helped put down the De La Huerta counter-revolution. Stung to anger because his treachery was exposed, Calles insists that he is still true to the revolution but will "uphold law and preserve order." The fact of the matter is that Calles has sold out to the Wall Street bankers and is how being held to his agreement by his American masters. He is a social democrat and is playing the same role in Mexico that the yellow socialists of Europe are playing.

DEMANDS MEXICO FREE BOURGEOIS, BUT LEAVES RUTHENBERG IN PRISON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. — The state department today instructed American officials in Mexico to make an immediate investigation of the report that Dr. William F. Lorenz, of Madison, Wis., has been arrested and imprisoned at Progreso, Mexico.

The American embassy at Mexico City was instructed to urgently request that telegraphic orders be issued to the appropriate authorities at Progreso to release Dr. Lorenz immediately if he has been imprisoned arbitrarily and unjustly.

The American consul at Progreso was instructed to request urgently Dr. Lorenz's immediate release if he is satisfied that the Wisconsin man has been unjustly arrested.

Governor John J. Blaine, of Wisconsin, telegraphed the state department that Dr. Lorenz, "was on a voyage for his health under my direction and it is unthinkable even to suggest filibuster or any other charge against him."

OMMUNISTS IN HAMBER DEFY FASCIST RULERS

Workers Will Crush the Fascisti, Says Deputy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 15.—The workmen and peasants, led by the Communists, will take over the power in Italy the moment Fascism falls, Comrade Grieco, Communist member of the chamber of deputies, said in a revolutionary speech before the chamber yesterday.

Deputy Grieco's speech, in which he hurled the defiance of the proletariat at the fascisti, was marked by many interruptions from Mussolini and the president of the chamber Casertano.

The nineteen Communist deputies entered the chamber from the extreme left. Rich ladies in the galleries looked at them as if they were strange animals. Comrade Grieco beginning his speech declared, "The other opposition groups oppose the fascisti because they say the fascisti are common criminals. We Communists oppose them and fight them because they are the exponents of the bourgeoisie. The Communists will crush the bourgeoisie with the proletarian revolution."

When Comrade Grieco attacked the Dawes plan, and urged the German proletarian to tear the Dawes plan to pieces, President Casertano broke in: "You must speak on the electoral law. Don't talk of foreign countries and foreign policies." Comrade Grieco, however, retorted, "I am entitled to say whatever I please," and reviewed the conditions of the workers thruout the world, explaining that international capitalism is going thru a crisis, leading to world dictatorship by the proletariat.

"The Matteoti trial will not be held by the tribunals of this prostituted justice, but by the workers and peasants. The present situation seems stable, but the fascisti are keeping down the workers by using terror and violence. Fascism has not the courage to continue its revolution. The presentation of the electoral law by Mussolini shows that fascism is taking recourse to the lowest methods of bourgeois parliamentarism. Now that the proletarian revolution impends, the fascisti and the opposition will unite against the Communists in a last attempt to save the bourgeois state.

"The use of force by Mussolini showed his weakness, which is shared by the opposition, for both need the proletariat, and they are following us toward the Communist revolution."

Comrade Grieco declared that Mussolini's electoral bill was an iniquitous, impudent attempt to abolish universal suffrage by giving the bourgeoisie plural voting power. "We are glad to have the general elections," he said, "because they offer us the possibility for the propagation of our ideas among the masses."

The crisis in the affairs of the fascisti has grown suddenly worse. Mussolini has asked King Victor Emanuel to abolish the Italian parliament, and the king has refused. Mussolini has disarmed the entire nation wherever he could find arms on the workers. Mussolini has provided his militia with the best of guns and ammunition, and has equipped 75,000 irregular troops, in preparation for the impending revolution.

All except fascist newspapers have been suppressed while linotype machines and presses have been smashed and newspaper buildings burned. Social and intellectual clubs have been closed.

The Italian proletariat is fighting the fascist machine desperately.

AVERAGE WAGE OF $14 A WEEK FOR FALL RIVER WORKERS AS BOSSES CUT MANY 22 PER CENT

FALL RIVER, Mass., Jan. 15.—An average weekly wage of $14 will be the result to Fall River textile workers in many mills if the announced 10 per cent wage cut is accepted, according to John Campos, executive council member United Textile Workers.

A committee found that Fall River mill owners had been quietly reducing wages even before concerted action was taken and that with 10 per cent more off many workers would be suffering 22½ per cent cuts.

HUTCHESON'S TOOL MAKES THREAT TO AID CONTRACTORS SMASH THE CARPENTERS' UNION, DETROIT, MICH.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 15.—When Sam Botterill, general organizer of the Carpenters' Brotherhood, and personal agent of General President Hutcheson, was called upon to explain the various curves and angles of Hutcheson's peeve over Rosen's victory in this district, he took the attitude usually adopted by discredited reactionaries and attacked the progressives terming them the "rebellious element."

Breaks Faith with Union.

Hutcheson has broken faith with the Detroit district council by removing the paid organizeds he had maintained in this field and at the same time refusing to relinquish his control so that the district council could take hold and really organize.

Hutcheson's puppet, Botterill, an old dotard who could well justify the old carpenters' home scheme by removing himself to that distant place, has started a red baiting campaign here by piously spoken insinuations and threats. In this activity he has found a questionable support in one William Shipp, a former Hutcheson employe whose chief and oftspoken claim to fame is that he is not looking 45,000 years ahead "like the Communists." He isn't! Forty-five seconds would strain his mental vision

Seeing Red.

Botterill has read Phil Murray's speech before the last Carptenters' convention or the shade of Sam Gompers haunts him for he sees the hand of Moscow behind each criticism of "his highness" in Indianapolis and he sputters dire threats of a speedy reckoning.

Delegate Shipp "defended" Hutcheson by pointing out that if he really gets sore he will tell the big international contractors to smash the Detroit organization. This threat of open treason to the organization in the name of Hutcheson met with the smiling approval of Botterill and another general organizer, one Alger, appointed by Hutcheson after less than two month's membership in direct defiance of constitutional provisions. It remained for the radicals to properly resent this threat and brand it for what it was.

Hot Meeting.

James Sharrock, president of the district suggested to the delegates that they carry on under the conditions imposed by Hutcheson, until they were broke, and with the last one hundred dollars in the district should circularize every local union in the international outlining Hutcheson's attitude.

The meeting lasted until 11:30 p. m. during which time many delegates expressed resentment and disgust at the attitude of Hutcheson and his flunkies. After adjournment, an official of the district who claims to know Hutcheson very well expressed the opinion that "one must admit that he is a big man." When Hutcheson's reaction to the Rosen vote in Detroit was instanced he said, "Well, he is at least a big man in a small way." He won the argument.

MACHINIST LODGE 84, ENDORSES LEFT WING, NOMINATING EMME

Lodge 84, International Association of Machinists, at their regular meeting Tuesday night endorsed the entire left wing slate. The Johnston machine is having very little successe in spite of the fact that the secretary-treasurer is trying to convince the membership that wage slavery can be abolished thru banking, and that the "B. & O. plan" is another word for shop committee.

The left wing candidates are exposing all of these class collaboration schemes in the campaign for nomination of officers in the union.

The left wing slate is headed by Julius Emme of St. Paul for international president and Tim Buck for general secretary.

MONARCHISTS WIN GREAT POWER IN GERMAN CABINET

Ebert Helping Kaiser to Return to Throne

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—President Ebert, social democrat, this afternoon appointed Dr. Luther chancellor of Germany. Luther is a member of the national peoples' party, and adheres to the idea of restoration of the kaiser, altho not so openly as the extreme monarchists of the nationalist party, to whom, however, Luther has delegated two seats in his cabinet.

These are Martin Schiele, as minister of the interior, an appointment which caused a sensation because Schiele is the official leader of the monarchist group supporting the return of the Hohenzollerens; and Count Kanuitz, a monarchist of the first water.

The Trend Toward Monarchism.

Luther has been dickering with the various parties which stand for a capitalistic "democratic" republic tring to inveigle them into supporting his cabinet, by arguing that he was bringing in the monarchists "to share the responsibility for conducting the nation's affairs." The catholic center party finally agreed to support the cabinet, as all the center parties, including the social democrats, seem a great deal more inclined to support the monarchists, than to support the working class party, the Communist Party of Germany.

In return, Luther has given three positions in his cabinet to catholics the ministries of labor, posts, and justice. And in return for his generosity to the monarchist nationalist party he has agreed to withdraw attacks against members of the former cabinet for their support of President Ebert.

Ebert—A Willing Lackey.

Ebert, the social democrat, is permitted to stay as president as long as he appoints monarchists, declare martial law against the workers, outlaws the Communist party and jail its leaders, but offers no criticism of the widespread propaganda to bring the kaiser back to the throne. He is a despicable figure.

Vanderlip Settles Harding-Marion Star Case Out of Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MARION, Ohio, Jan. 15.—The suit of the owners and publishers of the Marion Star, against Frank A. Vanderlip, growing out of a speech by Vanderlip at Briarcliff a year ago, charging that President Harding received an exhorbitant sum for selling the paper, has been settled out of court. Mrs. Vanderlip has issued a statement, declaring that Vanderlip is ill and cannot be told of the settlement, but that "President Harding had been most scrupulous as to the properties in the negotiation and in the final transfer."

"This has been most gratifying to Mr. Vanderlip," said the banker's wife.

MINNEAPOLIS LABOR FAKERS LOSE TO 'REDS'

Smith, A. F. of L. Agent, Fails to Deliver

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 15.—Paul W. Smith and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor stand repudiated here by the action last night of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly in the case of Dan W. Stevens and William Mauseth, delegates from Painters' Union No. 186 and Machinists' Union No. 91 respectively, after a bitter debate lasting over three hours.

A Close Vote

The Assembly, by a vote of seventy to sixty-nine seated these two Communists as the rightful representatives of their local unions.

The reactionaries ran in forty new delegates at the meeting. These delegates came from unions, many of them reactionary, that were not previously affiliated with the central body. These delegates were apparently caucus-bound to support the unseating of Stevens and Mauseth.

Make Communism the Issue

Both delegates took an uncompromising position in this fight by frankly announcing and making an issue their membership in the Workers (Communist) Party, and pledging themselves to support Communist principles either within or without the Trades and Labor Assembly.

RUTHENBERG IS "NO. 17,332" IN MICHIGAN STATE PRISON; SERVES 10 DAYS OF SENTENCE

By THURBER LEWIS.

JACKSON, Mich., Jan. 15.—C. E. Ruthenberg's number in the Michigan state penitentiary here is 17332.

He has served ten days of his indeterminate three to ten years sentence under the Michigan criminal syndicalism law. The first two weeks of his sentence he is spending in quarantine.

It required maneuvering for the DAILY WORKER to see Ruthenberg. The prison rule is that the quarantine is to be broken only under very special circumstances. The DAILY WORKER made the circumstances special enough to persuade the warden to allow an interview.

The warden of Jackson prison, Harry L. Hulbert, told the DAILY WORKER he was very much surprised in Ruthenberg. He had expected, he said, to receive a very recalcitrant and ungentlemanly "anarchist." He expressed admiration of Ruthenberg's bearing and culture.

May Get 30 More.

The warden inquired how many more Communist he was going to be asked to take care of. When told that, if the trials were unsuccessful for all the defendants he would have 31 more guests, he intimated it may be necessary to build a new wing to the dormitory.

He asked about Ruthenberg's vocation. The reporter told him it would be difficult to find a more competent executive. "Hm", said the Warden, "I'd better watch out for my job. I see I have competition."

"What do the rest of the defendants do?" "You will find among them, poets, electricians, journalists, machinists, carpenters, editors, bricklayers and cartoonists," he was told.

"What does Foster do?" "Foster is a railroad man," was the reply. Hulburt thot awhile. "I'll have a little trouble finding a job for him", he said.

Can't Get "The Daily."

"Can Ruthenberg receive copies of the DAILY WORKER here?", the warden was asked. "No", was the reply. "That paper is against the government and that's what Ruthenberg is here for."

The Warden called for a chubby, little, short-sighted deputy.

"Take this man to see Number 17332." He gave the reporter a pass. "I shouldn't let you in. The prisoner is in quarantine. But in view of the circumstances you mentioned I'll give you a few minutes with the prisoner in one of the deputies' room."

"Too Lenient" Thinks Deputy.

The short-sighted deputy led the way. Up a stairway; over a tier; thru another gate; down-stairs again; a gate; thru a hallway to another gate; the deputy finally led the reporter to the end of a long whitewashed corridor where lay the office in which the interview was to take place.

Throut the journey, the short-sighted one had mumbled more to himself than to the reporter," This country is too lenient with them guys. Over in Europe they make 'em toe the chalk-line. Were too lenient with 'em—too lenient."

The reporter said something about special prisons for politicals in Europe, but it didn't matter.

Ruthenberg was waiting. He smiled and shook hands. He looked a little wan against the white walls of the office, but the days of quarantine confinement left his customary serenity undisturbed. He was not yet in prison uniform. He was togged in quarantine clothes, a khaki shirt and rust-colored, dungarees trousers.

Hears of Fight for Liberty.

Ruthenberg was pleased to hear that his attorneys were busy; that Isaac Ferguson was in Lansing trying to arrange for bail; that Ferguson was to appear with Attorney Frank P. Walsh this coming Saturday before Justice McReynolds in Washington to plead a

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT AGAIN REFUSES RUTHENBERG'S RELEASE

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 15.— The Michigan supreme court today denied the petition asking for a reversal of the decision of the court affirming the sentence of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, now imprisoned in Jackson, Mich. penilease of Comrade Ruthenberg as presented to the court today by Isaac Ferguson, attorney for Ruthenberg.

The petition of O. L. Smith, assistant attorney general, asking that the sentence of Comrade Ruthenberg by Judge Charles White of Berrien county to from three to ten years in prison, and a fine of $5,000, was upheld by decision of the court today.

The next legal battle for Comrade Ruthenberg's release will be staged next Saturday, when Frank P. Walsh, and Isaac Ferguson, attorneys for the executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, go before the U. S. supreme court and ask that Comrade Ruthenberg be admitted to bail on a writ of supersedas.

Fail to Keep the Croation Party Off Election Ballot

BELGRADE, Jan. 15.—The Croatian peasants' party will now undoubtedly enter the elections, following the decision of the Agram court that there was insufficient evidence to continue prosecution against Raditch and other leaders of his party.

The opposition in Jugo-Slavia is demanding that the government resign. The Croatian peasants' party cannot be prevented from entering candidates in the coming elections, as the Agram court decided that Premier Pasich could not abolish the list of opposition candidates nor prevent them from going on the ballot.

Declare Lorenz Released.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 15. — Gov. Blaine has been notified by President Calles of Mexico by wire that Dr. W. F. Lorenz had been released from prison shortly after he was taken by Mexican officials. Dr. Lorenz is now on his way back to Wisconsin.

Hit the Religious Dope Pipe.

PARIS, Ill., Jan. 15.—Paris is now in the second week of a religious review, the first of its kind in the religious history of the state. Six protestant congregations combined for the campaign and the pulpit is occupied by the local pastors in turn.

Build the DAILY WORKER!

TURN IN ALDERMANIC PETITIONS!

THE petitions filled out to place the candidates endorsed by the Workers (Communist) Party on the ballot in the coming aldermanic elections must be in at the local office by Friday, Jan. 23. There are nearly two weeks yet in which to secure signatures.

Candidates of other organizations are also in the field, therefore the Workers Party and Young Workers' League must be very much on the job to get signatures.

Also to make the campaign a live one, we shall need money to carry on meetings, distribute literature, etc. Branches of the party and league should make every effort to raise money either thru donations of the branch, collections from friends and sympathizers and send it in to the local office.

Comrade Overgaard, captain of the 22nd ward, where Comrade L. Gejka is candidate, reports that the comrades are on the job getting signatures. Also the 28th ward, Nick Dozenberg, candidate, Comrade Ozol, captain, phoned in that they already have about 300 signatures and are out to put over a big campaign.

Let us hear from the rest quickly.

UNCLE SAMUEL, WORLD SHYLOCK, WANTS MONEY

Demands His Pound of Flesh, Blood and All

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—With complete accord reached at Paris, on the allocation of Germany's payments under the Dawes plan, and the international atmosphere consequently more clarified than it has been at any time since the armistice, administration officials are now prepared to press for an early settlement of the $7,000,000,000 worth of war debts that still remain unfunded on America's books.

An early renewal of negotiations to this end can be expected, it was stated in official circles here, with the United States exerting pressure on France for some serious talk about how she is to discharge her debt of four billions.

Think Dawes Settled Things

Settlement of the reparations problem, in the opinion of administration officials, removes the last remaining barrier to debt settlement negotiations will all European debtors. Heretofore France and the smaller debtors have offered the argument that they could not talk settlement with Washington until they could ascertain just how much they were to get from Germany. The Dawes' plan agreement settled that, so they think and now the excuse becomes no longer tenable.

Commenting upon the Paris agreement, administration officials pointed out that the subject of war debts is the last of the great international problems of a controversial nature left by the war. It is made plain that this government, at least, considers the time now ripe for tackling this problem in earnest.

Show the Color of Your Money.

The French government has already been informed, thru diplomatic channels, that the "unofficial and personal" memorandum on the subject of the debt, sent to Washington some days ago by Clementel is not satisfactory, and that Washington would appreciate something more concrete and official.

The discussions at Paris between Clementel and Winston Churchill, British chancellor, over the status of France's debt to Great Britain, are regarded here as a hopeful sign that France soon will submit to both her creditors a definite statement of her intention to pay and the measures by which she intends to do it. The French debt to Britain is approximately $3,707,000,000, and to the United States, with interest, $4,137,000,000.

SCANDINAVIAN SECTION OF WORKERS PARTY SAYS, 'IT'S A HEALTHY SIGN'

"It is indeed inspiring to know that the party is looking ahead of time in order to insure the continuance of its press, instead of the old happy go lucky system by first assuming a load of debts and then after a while be drowned in it. This is a healthy sign of foresight in our movement and gives promise of a steady and healthy progress.

"I hope and trust that every section of our party will be able to grasp the importance of this and respond 100 per cent."—Juel Christensen, secretary Scandinavian federation.

PREMIER REFUSES AID TO UNEMPLOYED.

OTTAWA, Canada, Jan. 15.—Premier King refuses to grant money from the Canadian treasury to meet unemployment in Ottawa. He gave this answer to a deputation which represented the city council and the unemployed, and which was introduced by one of the local members of parliament. In reply to a request for the construction of public works the prime minister said that all such expenditures would have to be approved by parliament.

J. J. Ryan, chairman of the unemployed men's organization, told the premier that there were 2,000 unemployed in the city.

writ of supersedas in an attempt to get him released pending the decision of the United States supreme court.

He said the books that the workers in the national office of the Workers Party had given him just prior to his departure served as excellent companions in his days of confinement in quarantine.

He had no complaints to make. It seemed to be a little better, in some ways, than Sing Sing (where he served a year and one-half under the criminal syndicalism law of New York) but it is a capitalist prison.

He'll Interpret Capitalist News.

Ruthenberg didn't have to be told he would not be allowed to receive the DAILY WORKER. He asked that certain metropolitan dailies be sent him in case his bail were denied. "Those will give me the news. I can make my own interpretations."

He smiled gratefully and expressed satisfaction when he learned that the entire forces of the International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council was being turned in behalf of the Michigan defense.

Time of Interview Over.

The time was up. Ruthenberg was led back to his cell and his books. The reporter was conducted back thru the labyrinth of corridors, stairs and gates to the grey outside walls.

In Michigan they don't like to have Jackson penitentiary called a prison. They call it a "state industry" because fourteen million pounds of twine and rope are turned out there every year.

But that's where Ruthenberg is. And as long as Michigan continues to lock men up in it for having ideas, Jackson penitentiary will be known as a particularly black and sordid prison.

Brown's Heresy Trial Rushed By Packed Jury

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 15—Bishop Brown's heresy trial is being rushed thru by the eight bishops of the protestant episcopal church sitting in judgment on the ideas expressed in Brown's book, "Communism and Christianism," in the Trinity Cathedral hall here.

"Jury" is Packed.

When Joseph Sharts, Brown's attorney, declared that the court was hastily constituted for the express purpose of hearing charges against Bishop Brown, he was immediately over-ruled, and Bishop W. A. Leonard of Ohio, presiding at the "trial" of the church's board of review, told the prosecutor, "I hope you will be brief, Mr. Dibble, there is hardly any reason for discussing it."

Sharts charged that the trial court had no jurisdiction over Brown, on the ground that he must be tried in his own diocese. He declared that twenty-three quotations from the book were stripped of their context and misrepresented the author's views. He devoted several hours of his speech to reading extracts from the book, and expounding Bishop Brown's opinions.

Refused Defense Depositions.

Sharts charged that the trial court erred in refusing to permit the taking of defense depositions to prove that there was no agreement on doctrines among church leaders.

Dibble, the prosecutor, said Bishop Brown was a "jungle worshipper." Brown wanted to substitute matter, force and law, for the father the son and the holy ghost, Dibble said.

The court of review is hearing Bishop Brown's appeal from his conviction last June.

DAILY WORKER PARTY IN CHICAGO NETTED $124.39 FOR PAPER

The net proceeds from the Chicago celebration of the first birthday of the DAILY WORKER, netted $124.39 after all expenses had been paid. The profits were turned over to the fund to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

The Chicago birthday party of the DAILY WORKER was arranged on only a few days' notice, and the receipts are considered high considering that fact.

Bosses Groom Dever for Try At White House

Elbert H. Gary and John D. Rockefeller, jr., together with other members of the executive committee of the committee of one thousand for "law enforcement," have injected themselves into local politics in order to groom Mayor Dever to run as the next democratic presidential candidate, local politicians charge.

Dever spoke at a secret meeting at the Chicago club, which was attended by Clifford Barnes, and other leader's of Gary's committee of 1,000. The Chicago crime commission was ignored at this meeting, speakers declaring the commission to be an obstacle rather than an aid because it heckled and irritated the Dever administration."

It is being recalled that Dever was greeted after his New York speech by Rockefeller and Gary with the prediction that Dever would have their support for the nomination as the democratic candidate for president. Dever told in New York how he had "driven the bootleggers and beer runners out of Chicago." He did not mention that those who had left Chicago have stepped across the city line to Cicero, which runs wide open as the wettest and toughest town in the middle west.

Speeches delivered in the city council against the "crime wave," included a statement by Alderman Wiley W Mills that he has been in Chicago for thirty years, and that every winter there is a crime wave. It was revealed that there are 100,000 unemployed workers in Chicago, many of whom are entirely without resources and this was given by some aldermen as the real cause of the "crime wave."

May Call Mellon.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Former Attorney General Harry Daugherty and the present Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon are likely to be called as witnesses in the trial of Gaston B. Means and Col. Thomas Felder, charged with accepting money to bribe Daugherty. Mellon and Daugherty will be asked their connection with the bribery plot executed by Means. Felder has admitted that he was for many years business and personal associate of Daugherty.

M'ANDREW ASKS OPEN SHOP RULE FOR TEACHERS

Plan Comes Up at School Committee Meeting

The matter of secret markings, which has been bandied about for several months now by the board of education thru Superintendent McAndrew's refusal to meet the teachers and thrash out the matter with them, came up again at the last board of education meeting.

Again action was put off. The committee on secret markings offered a recommendation for a meeting of the teachers' representatives with the board of superintendents. No one knows who the board of superintendents are or whether there is such a body. Finally Attorney Mullenbach assured the meeting there was no such body. President Moderwell recommended the change that the "superintendent" meet with the committee of teachers and it finally passed in that order. But no definite date was set for the meeting with the teachers on secret markings.

Open Shops to Rule in Schools.

Superintendent McAndrew, who is responsible for abolishing the teachers' councils will give the teachers a new brand of teachers' councils it was learned at this meeting. Anyone who still doubts that McAndrew is the open shop school superintendent of Chicago will now be convinced. The superintendent says he will now permit teachers' councils. In fact he never was against teachers' councils providing they are the right sort. And the right sort of teachers' councils are those in which the teachers will get together by order of the superintendent to listen to what boss McAndrewe and his array of minor bosses want them to do.

The new organization, according to recommendation to be submitted by the superintendent, will be known as the Chicago public school teachers' council, and will consist of representatives from the following groups:

Two representatives from the Chicago teachers' federation.

Two representatives from the teachers' league.

One representative from the women's federation of teachers.

One representative from the men's federation of teachers.

One representative from the principals' club.

One representative from a truant organization.

One assistant superintendent.

One member of the board of education.

The superintendent of schools.

McAndrew to Preside.

This is to be known as the central administrative committee over which Superintendent McAndrew will preside during its meetings.

There will be no general council meetings of the teachers either during or outside school hours with the exception of those held under the direction of the individual principals.

Akron, Ohio, Unions Waging Bitter Fight on Department Stores

U. S. Richest Nation on Earth Until Soviet Star Eclipses Capitalist Sun

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, Americans are asked to wax 100 percent jubilant over the census bureau report that the wealth of the United States at the end of December, 1922, totalled $320,803,862,000.00.

The inhabitants of these United States are asked to get especially excited over the fact that this was an increase of 72.2 over the estimate of $186,299,664,000.00 in 1912. In ten years the wealth of the nation was three-quarters on the way to doubling.

No mention is made about who owns this wealth. That might put a crimp in the shouting. The multi-millionaires, directing the destinies of their class, want to hide from the masses of exploited the fact that two percent of the inhabitants of the land own 65 percent of the nation's rapidly increasing wealth. The amount of wealth in the possession of the many millions becomes so insignificant as to be almost unworthy of passing mention.

Altho the wealth of the United States has been rapidly increasing during the last 75 years the gain during this last ten year period, which included the years of the world war, have been most phenomenal. Here is the showing:

Year	Total
1922	$320,803,862,000
1912	186,299,664,000
1904	107,104,190,000
1900	88,517,307,000
1890	65,037,093,000
1880	43,642,000,000
1870	24,054,818,000
1850	7,135,779,000

Today it is possible to number on the fingers of one hand the billionaires who own more wealth than was claimed for the whole nation 75 years ago. The gain during the last ten years was greater than the total wealth in 1904, when "Teddy" Roosevelt, as president, was most active in his trust-busting adventures.

* * * *

Even before the world war the United States was the richest country on earth. In the estimates published by the Journal of the Royal Statistical Society, in London, the wealth of the United States, in 1914, the year the world war began, totalled $204,393,000,000; the nearest approach to this being the wealth of Germany totalling $80,540,575,000; this being less than the wealth of the United States in 1900, when American capitalism entered upon its era of present great development.

The same authority gives Russia, then in the hands of the czardom, wealth totalled at $58,398,000,000; this being behind the United States, Great Britain and Germany, and equal with France.

But what is the outlook for the future?

Wealth in the capitalist nations is privately owned. The greater part of this wealth, under capitalism, is not only in the hands of the few, but tends to concentrate in fewer and fewer hands. This year, 1925, will be remembered not as a year for the organization of new trusts, but as the year of the trustifying of the trusts already in existence. It is to be the year of greater combinations of wealth in private hands for the increased exploitation of the many.

On the other hand, wealth in Soviet Russia belongs to the many. The Bolshevik revolution took wealth away from the few, the bankers, the landlords and the industrialists, and but it in the hands of the workers and peasants. In Soviet Russia the many are enjoying the increasing production of the land and industry.

* * * *

The greatest struggle in all human history results from this present clash between these two social systems—Communism and capitalism. This struggle is the big fact of life today. It overshadows everything else. It is the last struggle of an oppressed class.

There can be but one outcome. Capitalism, with its private ownership of wealth, cannot survive. The hundreds of millions of wealth producers will not remain long enchained to its profit treadmill.

Communism, with its common ownership of wealth, will triumph. The workers of the earth will learn to toil for themselves, to produce for themselves; when all labor becomes a joy.

Let American capitalism rejoice over its privately owned wealth. Its day of joy will not be long in passing.

Its sun will soon be eclipsed by the Soviet Star.

NEW YORK ANNOUNCES TREMENDOUS LENIN MEMORIAL DEMONSTRATION FEB. 1 AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The Lenin Memorial meeting to be held in Madison Square Garden on Sunday, Feb. 1, at 2 p. m., to commemorate the first anniversary of the death of the Bolshevik leader, promises to break all previous records for radical demonstrations. It will be remembered that last year 25,000 persons tried to jam their way into the Garden to do honor to the memory of Lenin. After the hall was filled to capacity, it was necessary to immediately hire another large hall uptown to take care of the immense crowd which could not get into the garden.

This tremendous mass demonstration, this great outpouring of workers from all fields of industry, was a phase of last year's celebrations, not only in this country, but thruout the world. In every city and town, wherever men and women, toil with hand and brain, there was an overwhelming tide of sentiment in honor to the proletarian leader.

With the new developments in the international situation, with the immediate threat of new and more terrible wars, of increased exploitation of the workers and of the onward march of the black forces of reaction, looming up in the near future, the memory of Lenin, the man, has taken on a new meaning. Today, he stands as the chief exponent of the principles which laid the foundation of the Russian Soviet Republic, the first milestone in the road to the ultimate emancipation of the working class of the world.

In addition to this changed situation, there is the added attraction of a new and most interesting program for the occasion. Full details will be given later.

Tickets for the Lenin Memorial Meeting are on sale at: 208 East 12th St. Freiheit, 153 East Broadway, 1347 Boston Road, 46 Ten Eyck, St., Brooklyn. 350 East 81 Street, and at other Workers headquarters throughout the city. Results of Membership Meetings

CORRECTION.—In this column Thursday, Jan. 15, the results of the discussion at two branch meetings in District No. 8, both of which voted for the minority position, were erroneously reported as RESULTS OF MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS. The branches were, the South Slavic branch of Sheboygan, Wis., and the South Slavic branch, of Joliet, Ill.

The votes recorded in this column apply to joint city membership meetings only, not to branch meetings.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 15.—City Manager Hopkins of Cleveland, in addressing the meeting of the Great Lakes Harbor association in session here today, termed converting of 10,000 gallons of water a second from the Great Lakes by the city of Chicago was a "frame up" and "gigantic water steal."

German-Polish Treaty Signed.

LOCATE SECRET MONEY DEPOSITS FROM OIL GRAFT

Big Sums Deposited in Canadian Banks

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special counsel engaged by the government to prosecute Fall, Sinclair and Doheny in the naval oil cases, are tracking down the secret distribution of a fund of about $3,000,000, raised by the Sinclair and Standard Oil interests after Fall began to give away the naval oil reserves to Sinclair, Standard and Doheny.

Deposited in Fall's Name

They have publicly made affidavit, in the courts of Canada, that $90,000 in liberty bond coupons from this secret fund have been found deposited to Fall's credit. It is reported in Washington that another $130,000 has been traced, and that they expect to locate the whole of the $2,400,000 collected by a Canadian lawyer named Osler from the dummy oil-purchasing contract and $750,000 collected from another similar deal.

Moreover, it is rumored in financial quarters in Washington that Harry F. Sinclair will presently resign the presidency of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Co., and that a vice-president of Standard Oil of Indiana will likewise step down. A Canadian court has ruled that Olser, who formed the dummy Continental Trading Co., ltd., in his office, must disclose the names of the persons to whom the secret fund was paid, and the identity of the client who instructed him to form the dummy company which bought oil at $1.50 a barrel and resold it at $1.75 under most suspicious conditions.

Osler Is Buyer

The Pomerene-Roberts affidavit, filed in the Canadian court in the effort to secure an order that Osler must talk, set forth that Sinclair and Standard set up Osler as buyer of the oil, and then had their own companies pay him for doing nothing and taking no risk of any sort. Osler drew $2,000,000 in this way until on May 25, 1923, when the senate investigation was seen to be serious, the contract was surrendered for a cash settlement of $400,000 in place of the $4,000,000 which was guaranteed on future deliveries of oil. At the same time another contract brought Osler an additional $750,000 on oil purchased at $1.20 and resold at $1.45.

Conceal Ownership.

Questions the federal investigators will try to push in court are: Did Sinclair and Standard Oil of Indiana arrange for the creation of Osler's dummy company, which concealed its ownership by a system of stock warrants? Why were all records of that company destroyed by Olser? Did Fall get all of the $2,150,000? If not, who did get it?

Osler is identified by Pomerene and Roberts as a director of the Midwest Refining Co., a Standard Oil subsidiary.

HOW CAN J. P. MORGAN'S LAWYER BE 'UNETHICAL'? WE BET HE'S CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15, — The senate judiciary committee yesterday held up approval of the appointment of Attorney General Harlan F. Stone to the supreme court because of charges of "unprofessional conduct" filed against him by Col. James A. Owesby, mining operator of Colorado.

Owenby charged Stone was guilty of unethical conduct while representing J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., in litigation against him. Owenby filed a record of the case, showing Stone's connection, and a complaint against elevation of the attorney-general to the supreme bench.

"MELLON BRIBED WITH BURNS AND HARRY," CHARGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. — Testimony at the trial of Gasten B. Means, "right hand man" of former Attorney General Daugherty and William J. Burns, formerly head of the investigation bureau of the department of justice, charged with conspiring to bribe the attorney general, was that a $65,000 bribe was to be split three ways by Secretary of the Treasury Andrew J. Mellon, Burns and Daugherty.

Samuel Goldblatt, of Chicago, testified that Alderman Joseph A. Kostner of Chicago acted as lawyer for the Glass Casket company officers, who were caught selling fake stock. Kostner is a member of the law firm of Kostner and Herr in the Ashland block. Kostner is now in the St. Anthony hospital in Chicago. Altho Attorney Hiram C. Todd, special attorney prosecuting the case, calls Kostner a "co-conspirator" with Means and Col. Thomas B. Felder, on trial with Means, he admitted the Chicago alderman has not been indicted. Kostner, who is supposed to be ill, has received many visitors at the hospital.

Means was given the money in return for promised immunity from indictments in the stock selling fraud. Rosenblatt said Felder admitted thru his counsel, Frank P. Walsh, that he was a personal and business associate of former Attorney General Daugherty. He denied accepting the bribe in his law office.

"Isador Padorr of Chicago told me if I went with my associates to Washington we would get the trouble wiped out," Rosenblatt testified. "He said there was a deficit in the 1920 republican national campaign fund and they were trying to make it up. Jarnecke, Means' man, at first objected to a lawyer when we met him in Washington. He said the reason he did not want a lawyer was that they had a deal with Morse to get him out of Atlanta for a certain consideration and when he was out he told Means to go to hell." Finally, however, Jarnecke said Means agreed that Kostner was in on the deal, Rosenblatt said.

"We went to New York about Oct. 16. We wet Jarnecki. He said he had just left Means, who was with Daugherty and Burns at the Waldorf, and they were waiting for Secretary Mellon. He told us to go to Felder's office. We wanted to know why there was another lawyer in the picture, and Jarnecke said that Felder and Daugherty worked togethér."

Means told the Glass Casket men, who operated out of Altoona, Pa., that his superiors were Daugherty, Burns and Mellon.

They paid the money, but the indictments against them were finally issued, in spite of their bribe.

FARM CRISIS ACUTE, BORAH TELLS SENATE

Coolidge Throws Another Feed

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15.—Following Senator Borah's speech in the senate demanding an extra session of congress to provide farm relief legislation promised the farmers by Coolidge in his campaign, President Coolidge held another breakfast party this morning and entertained his special agricultural commission.

The Commission, which was appointed to report to Coolidge on American farming conditions, with recommendations for emergency relief, in its first report made no recommendation which would aid the farmers. Coolidge is opposed to an extra session of congress to consider relief of the farmers, so that the recommendations of his commission, appointed for election campaign purposes, cannot be acted upon.

The commission advised that the agricultural credits act be amended, eliminating the provision which prohibits rediscounting by federal intermediate credit banks of loans negotiated by federally chartered agricultural credit agencies. Until this legislation is acted upon by congress, the report of Coolidge's commission is so much waste paper. Coolidge is, therefore, holding up even the work of his stupid "economists" by preventing an extra session of congress.

Borah, in his senate speech, declared that Coolidge received a large farmer vote on the strength of his promise of immediate legislation for government direction of the co-operative marketing movements. Borah said the Dawes' plan would never be a success as long as Germany is dominated by foreign governments. He did not directly attack the Dawes' plan for throttling Germany, however, but said it should be supplemented by determination of the final amount Germany must pay the allies.

"Those who believe that the farm question in this country has been settled either by the crop failures abroad or the Dawes' plan alone have made a serious mistake in attributing to temporary relief that which we would ultimately hope might become permanent relief," Borah said.

Borah inferred that Coolidge had decided upon his farm policy on advice from the U. S. chamber of commerce. "I wish the chamber of commerce would take to the president some of the country weeklies thruout the great agricultural regions of the west," Borah said, "in which three or four pages are devoted to tax sales. In my opinion, the fundamental problem is not changed at all and better conditions in some localities are due to transient causes."

The government aids the manufacturers by fixing a protective tariff, Borah said, and lends the railroad magnates money when they get into trouble, but the farmers seem to be on the outside of the power which controls the government, looking in.

Borah gave figures to show that the farmer is practically bankrupt as a class, the profits on his crops being made by the railroads, the middlemen and the industrial capitalists.

Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, in an address to the N. S. chamber of commerce here advised business men as to how they can make more profits. Hoover spoke against any legislation for the betterment of the farmers. "Betterment of the farmers' position in the national economic structure can be accomplished by voluntary co-operation in industry and commerce without governmental regulation," Hoover said. Which means in plain English, that now that the campaign is over, the farmers can go to hell, as far as the Coolidge administration is concerned.

APPEAL SENT BY A COMRADE WHO SAW RUTHENBERG IN JAIL

This morning's mail brot us the following appeal from a comrade living in Benton Harbor, Michigan who has visited Comrade Ruthenberg at St. Joseph before he was transferred to Jackson. We print his letter in full:

Dear DAILY WORKER: I wish you would publish the enclosed notice.

Dear Comrades: I want to ask you all to write to Comrade Ruthenberg. It will take you only a few moments time but will do our comrade much good. It will also show the reactionaries of this state that our comrade is not alone in this fight. A few letters from each state in the union I am sure will make them take notice. Address: C. E. Ruthenberg, care State Prison, Jackson, Mich.

I visited our comrade the day after he was put in prison. I took him over some good things to eat, also the DAILY WORKER. He requested me to bring him the daily papers, but when I got over there the next morning he had already been taken to Jackson.

Comrades, we must do everything we can not only to liberate Comrade Ruthenberg but all political prisoners. I am not in a position to help much but I am sending $1.00 and I wil send more.

Yours for the workers' and farmers' government.

Gustave Glade.

Support of Old Party Bosses Doesn't Mean Much for Children

(By The Federated Press)

COLUMBUS, O.—Despite even the endorsements of Maurice Maschke and Burr Gongwer, political bosses of the republican and democratic parties, it is not certain that the Ohio legislature will ratify the child labor amendment. Both bosses take the attitude that legislators should abide by the platforms of their paties but powerful influences of the Manufacturers' Assn. and state employer bodies are being swung into the fight against the children.

The State Federation of Women's Clubs, the Federation of Labor and every progressive body in the state is bringing pressure on the legislators, especially those from the farm counties, to act favorably on the amendment. Nevertheless because of the opposition of the State Grange and the farm bureau federation, friends of the amendment fear the best to be obtained will be an order for an advisory referendum vote, similar to the Massachusetts referendum.

Hearty Response to Subs for Prisoners

Harlem English Branch Leads Again.

THE appeal thru our pages a few days ago to pay for subs to class war prisoners has met with a prompt response. The Harlem English branch of New York, which played a leading role in all the New York sub drives for the DAILY WORKER, rushes in again at the head of the procession with money to pay for a sub which has been applied to Teddy Arinski, serving time in the Moundsville, W. Va., jail for his part in the famous "March of the Miners" in 1922.

In the same mail a remitttance from Anton Kratofil of Norwalk, Ohio, pays for the sub to both the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly for Frank Bodo, another of the militant miners in the Moundsville jail. In addition he sends five dollars for the Labor Defense League now calling for funds.

An anonymous friend of our comrades in jail contributes his share which pays for the sub of Chas. Ciallella, another militant miner in Moundsville.

Clara Knappe, of Milwaukee, sends a remittance to cover subs for the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly for Ernest Erickson, imprisoned at San Quentin, having learned our comrade is most anxious to receive both.

These are expressions of class solidarity that will serve to brighten the long days of the militant class war prisoners.

FIRST PARDONS GRANTED I. W. W. DEPORTEES ARE HAILED BY THE RED INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—"The effect of the president's recent pardon of Herbert Mahler, William Moran, Pietro Nigra and Joseph Oates will naturally be favorable on the other deportation cases pending," stated Attorney Isaac Shorr in charge of the I. W. W. cases.

Shorr went at once to Washington to get the department of labor's action in cancelling deportation warrants warrants speeded up.

Applied For Pardon.

Attorney General Harlan F. Stone recommended that these former political prisoners who had served under wartime convictions be pardoned. The men were first ordered ready for deportation on Sept. 18, 1923. Stay of 60 days was granted during which time application for pardon was made.

With pardons granted the possibility of ordering deportation as "undesirable residents" due to their former conviction was removed and for that reason Shorr hastened to get the department of labor's cancellation of deportation warrants which would become effective January 17.

Red International Committee Pleased.

CHICAGO.—"Every adherent of the Red International of Labor Unions will be glad to learn that the American working class is not to be deprived of these revolutionary workers in whose behalf our committee has been rousing the workers of many nations," said Harrison George, chairman of the Red International committee of the I. W. W., when informed of the pardons granted in Washington.

"Some months ago," he continued, "when deportation of Mahler, Nigra, Oates and Moran seemed impending, the Red International Affiliation Committee requested of Fellow Worker Morris, then the secretary of the I. W. W. defense, the complete data upon the cases so we might carry on a world-wide propaganda thru our international connections.

"An Example of Yankee Justice."

"While we did not receive all the assistance desired and expected, we were given enough data upon which to begin a militant campaign to stimulate a protest of these deportations by foreign workers on the basis of an exposure, as we termed it, of 'an example of Yankee justice.'

"This exposure consisted of inconvertible proof that the federal government itself was flagrantly violating not only the federal constitution's plainest provisions, but also the treaty rights of foreign-born residents of this country. The deportations, if the government had dared to persist, could have been carried out only at the expense of further disillusioning further great masses of workers in other countries as to the hypocritical claims that America is a land of 'democracy.'

R. I. A. C. Articles Widely Published.

"American imperialism which has its own game to play against the governments of Europe, very much likes to have the impression that America is a 'free country' remain in the minds of European populations. The articles sent out by the R. I. A. C. thru its international connections were published widely in hundreds of papers and in all countries by the Communist and Red International publications. The publicity and protest evoked evidently had a great bearing on the government's decision to issue a pardon—the very first pardon granted any of the I. W. W. imprisoned by the scores during the war.

"In addition to this international campaign, the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League carried on a special campaign in this country, making the deportation of these four workers an issue in the A. F. of L. and independent unions, the T. U. E. L. getting out a special resolution on the cases, which was taken up in local unions."

Gompers' Widow Asks Probate Court to Act Against Sammy's Will

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. — The expected protest against the admission of the will of Samuel Gompers, late president of the American Federation of Labor, to probate was filed in the probate court here by the widow, Mrs. Gertrude A. Gompers, who was left in the will only the minimum allowed her by law.

She would not have been left less by old Sammy, unless he had divorced her, so he cut down his widow's part to as little as possible under the law, and willed several hundreds of dollars away to various lodges to buy American flags.

By a previous will dated Sept. 21, 1921, Mr. Gompers left the bulk of his estate to the widow. He revoked this will by writing across its face and he then tore it almost in half.

Samuel J. Gompers, son of the labor leader and executor in the later will, is charged by his step-mother with having unduly influenced his father into revoking the first will and executing the second. Either the son, or some one unknown to the widow, exorted the undue influence, the widow's caveat asserts.

Mr. Gompers was 71 when he married a second time and his bride was then 38.

'VICTORY' FOR BANKERS MAY LEAD TO WAR

U. S. Practically in the League of Nations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—On the heels of the Kellogg-Churchill agreement in Paris, whereby the United States is to get 2¼ per cent of the Dawes plan annuities in satisfaction of American war claims, there arose here today a marked division of opinion as to whether the achievement at Paris represents a victory or a defeat for American imperialism.

While it is true that the American representatives at Paris forced the allied powers to agree to American claims and compelled them to grant equal participation in the German payments, the net result of such agreement, it was pointed out in senatorial quarters, is that for the first time since the war the United States is thus made a direct party to the coalition of powers seeking to compel Germany to pay.

The United States now has a direct stake in the reparations controversy, amounting to 2¼ per cent, or some $600,000,000, and in this respect, the American position now is no different from the position of Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy.

In this connection the question was raised in senate circles:

"Suppose Germany defaults in her payments now, and the allies agree to impose punitive measures such as further occupation of German territory—will the United States become an active participant in disciplining Germany Can we again conscript an army of 4,000,000 and make them believe it is a war for democracy?"

The state department, however, is disposed to regard the Paris agreement as a decisive diplomatic "victory."

LENIN MEMORIAL MEETINGS

The spirit in which the first anniversary of Lenin's death is to be commemorated is not one of mourning, but a living proof of the fact that while Lenin is dead, Leninism lives and grows toward the realization of our common goal, the Communist state.

In the United States we must make these meetings a real demonstration of party strength, of Leninist following and devotion to our greatest leader and teacher.

It is important that every city in which there is a party organization hold a Lenin Memorial meeting. Many such meetings have already been arranged and speakers assigned.

Every party unit which has not already done so should immediately arrange to hold a Lenin Memorial meeting and send into the national office the date of the meeting, name and location of the hall, time, name of the person in charge, and state whether local speakers are available or whether assignment should be thru the national office.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

SHE HATED BABIES.

ONE fiercely cold morning in December while on my way to meet an early train I stopped to talk to the little newsgirl whose voice directly under my window every morning, rain, or snow or frost, would awaken me with musical tender tones calling "Maw-nn-ing Pe-a-a-per-r-r."

I had often wanted to talk to this little girl whom I could see from my window. But she was always gone when I started for the office. This morning I was very early—she was just starting home. I caught up to her.

"Hello, going in this direction?"

"Paper?"

"Yes, going home?"

"Yep. Must make breakfast for the kids and go to school. I go to morning school. That starts early."

"You sell papers and make breakfast too? My, you're a smart girl. What is your name?"

"Antoinette."

"I hear your voice very early every morning, Antoinette. Do you chase the moon every morning, too?"

"That's right. I get up at 4 o'clock every morning."

"Four o'clock! O you don't, really—"

"Yes, I do! My father and me. We go get papers and we sell them. This is my birthday. Guess how old I am."

I looked at the little person walking beside me. She was so tiny. So thin Her olive skin and black eyes looked tired and used up. How old was she? She might be five, she might be fifteen.

"I'll guess, if you tell me how many candles in the cake."

"None. I'm ten. I never get birthday parties. I never get Christmas presents.

"We have a new baby. She is seven days old."

"Is that so. Eyes open yet?"

"Oh, babies' eyes open when they're born. Only puppies' eyes stay shut. I like puppies but I hate babies. We're always getting babies at our house. We've got eleven. Two are twins. My father and I, we don't like the babies. Always crying. And you've got to mind them. I wish we never get another baby."

Then I had to hurry away to make my train. That was how I made the acquaintance of the little songbird who woke me every morning with her little song. She works every day from four in the morning until she goes to bed. She helps her father with the papers and her mother with the babies. After selling papers she must feed the children and get them off to school. They just got a new baby. No wonder the poor kid hates babies. And she never had a birthday present.

The next morning I brot a box down to Antoinette.

"Here's a present for you, Antoinette."

"Oh, thank you!" She was aglow with excitement. She opened the box. There lay a big chocolate baby!

With a twinkle in her sparkling eyes she chuckled: "That's the kind of babies I like!"

Our DAILY WORKER was not born yet. We had no Junior groups. And now I am very far away from where Antoinette sells papers. But I think she'd make a good little Junior, don't you?

Philadelphia Open Forum to Discuss the "Church" on Sunday

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 15.—Samuel Sklaroff, noted Philadelphia lecturer, will speak at the Workers Party open forum on Sunday, Jan. 18. The subject will be the "Class Function of the Church." Comrade Sklaroff had shown that he is very capable in handling this subject and an uncommonly interesting lecture is expected.

This subject is not as some comrades would think an "abstract subject." It has become quite an issue in the labor movement and the trade union movement in particular. It is quite a known fact that the churches are part of the machinery in the hands of the capitalist class for doping the minds of the workers and perpetuate itself in power. We have seen in Pennsylvania, during the steel and coal strike how the church machinery was employed as a scab herding agency for the employers. The pope at Rome calls upon all catholics to wage a fight against Bolshevism as a world menace. Finally we take a copy of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, the chief spokesman for the Philadelphia capitalists, and an editorial glares us in the face, congratulating the New York Central Labor Union, for their decision to launch a drive for $15,000 in order to erect a cathedral to remain as a symbol uniting labor with christianity.

With these facts in mind it is very important that every workingman should have a clear understanding on the real role of the church.

The forum meets every Sunday 8:15 p. m. at Grand Fraternity Hall 1628 Arch St. Admission free, all workers are invited.

HEALTH COMMISSIONER BUNDESEN of Chicago has issued an order which imposes a fine of $25.00 on anybody caught eating raw oysters. The object is to save the life of the consumer and no doubt is well intentioned but why did not the health commisisoner issue an order making those who sell raw oysters liable to a fine? That would be interfering with the sacred right of trade so the consumer must pay for running the risk of poisoning himself.

MUCH nonsense is coming from London about Soviet propaganda in India and thruout Britain's eastern possessions. That Communist propaganda is making great headway there we will admit, but the stories that German and Austrian agents who were inciting the natives against Britain during the war are again on the job under the direction of Russia, is undiluted hokum. The best Communist propagandists in India are Hindoos and the most fertile cause of revolution is the rule of the British government. Incidentally, fear of a revolution in India is one of the strongest reasons for Britain's backdown in its threat of war on Russia But neither kind words nor threats affect the policies of the Communist International.

THE Central Trades and Labor Council of New York and the New York Building Trades Council have appointed a committee to represent both organizations in the work of raising funds to complete St. John the Divine's church, an episcopalian cathedral. There is nothing surprising in labor fakers assisting in setting up opium joints to further dope the minds of the workers but what are catholics like Coughlin, Quinn and Sullivan doing in putting up a temple to the devil? Does not the catechism (for catholics) tell us that only those baptized in the catholic church will go to heaven? It seems that a labor faker cannot even take his superstition seriously.

THERE is something amusing in the predicament the "little powers," associated with the allies in the war on Germany find themselves in. After the big powers, United States France and England had their innings and agreed on a division of the spoils the small nations were given a few minutes to lodge a protest. They got a little time but no cash. Their treatment was similar to that given Sam Gompers by the republican and democratic conventions before the last elections. That is the usual fate of lickspittles.

THE Jewish Daily Forward declares that the socialist party in New York City alone gained 23,000 new members last year. This was stated so brazenly in the headlines that one could read it upside down. But the worst was yet to come. Our amazement steadily grew as it became evident that the story was based on the board of estimates report declaring that there were 23,000 new enrolled socialist voters this year. Before confering the thistle on the Forward's scribe it should be said in mitigation of punishment that the New Leader claimed the socialist party received almost 5,000,000 votes in the late elections. On what kind of hop doth our yellow socialists feed that they should speak thus?

Omaha, Nebr., Gives You a Few Tips How To Put It Over Big

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 15.—"The Beauty and the Bolshevik" went over big in Omaha, Monday, showing to more than 600 people at the Alhambra, a neighborhood theater. About fifty dollars was cleared from the showing for the International Workers' Aid.

The crowd seemed to thoroly enjoy the wholesome comedy of the film kiddies as well as grown-ups. The hypocrisy of old "Kulak" is well portrayed and of great educational value The actors deserve to be named, particularly "Commander Kombrig" and "Kulak." Their work compares favorably with any of America's high salaried players.

Russia in Overalls was also well received. Featuring industry rather than personalities, this film is totally different from those previously shown. The beautiful scenes along the Volga are alone worth the price of an ordinary admission.

Local branches of the I. W. A. and other workers' organizations should not fail to show these films. Our strong point in advertising was the distribution of cards (in envelopes) house-to-house in the neighborhood about the show. Sending tickets to sympathizers thru the mail, with the name of the recipient on the ticket, also helped. These mehods gave us our overflow house.

District 2 Campaign to Insure "Daily" Is Gaining Headway

District 2 entered the campaign to insure the Daily about a month later than the other districts, due to local circumstances. This considered, the returns to date are highly satisfactory.

The comrades of this district volunteered to contribute $10,000 to the $50,000 fund to insure our party organ for the coming year. Ten thousand dollars is a big sum to raise, but for Communists no task should be too difficult to accomplish.

It will be noticed, by a study of these contributions, that several branches have made a very never-say-die Communist effort to raise large amounts to insure our Daily. In District 2 the English branches are certainly doing their full duty. Another encouraging sign is the activity of the District 2 Y. W. L. branches in the campaign.

But what worries us much is the following list of branches from which not even a single dollar has yet been received. It should worry these branches, too.

A Lot of Hustling Necessary in District 2.

There are 138 branches in District 2. Of this total 52 have already lent a hand by remitting substantial sums. The branches that have remitted should now elect a committee to visit the members that do no attend branch meetings, so that they may also learn of their obligations and meet them.

In District 2 there are 86 branches that will have to do some hustling if they desire to save their Communist reputations. We want to hear from all these branches quick, and from this date very often. They have not yet made a first remittance.

District 2 is the largest in the party, in point of membership. Its average membership of 3,019 contains hundreds of comrades who are exceptionally fit to speak at branch meetings for the sale of insurance policies. We call upon these comrades to give their services to Chas. Krumbein, the district organizer, and L. E. Katterfeld, the DAILY WORKER agent, so that not too many days will pass before every District 2 branch has contributed in this campaign.

ESPECIAL ATTENTION TO THE 86 BRANCHES NAMED ABOVE WHICH HAVE NOT YET SENT IN A SINGLE DOLLAR.

BIGGER ROBBER FORCES OTHERS TO COMPROMISE

Wall Street Gets Big Share of Plunder

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The United States has become a party to the Dawes' plan without the consent of the senate thru the signing in Paris of an agreement which makes Wall St. a beneficiary of 2¼ per cent of the German reparation annuities under the plan.

The agreement was signed on the direct authority of the Coolidge administration despite the constitutional provision which places foreign relations under the control of the senate.

Waited For Results.

Considerable speculation was aroused in the capitol over the latest move. It was noted that the bankers' commission which formulated the Dawes' plan was sent over without congressional consent and at first as an unofficial body tho with the sanction of the administration. The political strategy behind it was, that in the event of the commission's failure, the Coolidge cabinet could disavow it, whereas in the event of its labor's being crowned with success the administration could claim credit for its work.

Set No Limit.

The agreement in its final form was a victory for Wall Street. At first there was a limit of $350,000,000 set on the amount of war damages to be paid the United States from the Dawes' receipt. This means that Wall Street will receive its 2¼ per cent annually until all its war claims are satisfied.

In order to satisfy the American demands, England and France had to compromise but it appears they "compromised" at the expense of the little bankrupt nations who are now howling for their share of the loot.

Strike Wins Overtime Pay.

DAYTON, O.—Two hundred men at the Dayton body-building plant of the Maxwell Motor Co. discovered the benefits of united action when they walked out tather than work overtime at straight pay. When a few of their number were discharged for refusing to work overtime at 61c an hour, the rest of the men struck in sympathy. They were taken back a few days later when the company agreed to pay time and a half.

The Maxwell Co. advertises far and wide for mechanics for their Dayton plant in an effort to keep a large oversupply of labor on hand, union mechanics complain.

CAN LOGGERS BE SHOT WITHOUT REDRESS? OR, AS WELINDER WOULD SAY, "LONG LIVE DEMOCRACY!"

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Whether Idaho courts consider that loggers can be deported, roughly handled and shot at without redress. merely because they are members of the I. W. W. is an issue to be met when seven damage suits against the Bonner's Ferry Lumber company for the assault, deportation and arrest of I. W. W. strikers are heard.

Suits to Have Political Effect.

The suits are intended to curb the use of the criminal syndicalism law and charge that employers themseves are guilty of criminal syndicalism by resorting to "crime, violence and unlawful methods of terrorism to accomplish industrial ends."

Richard Moore, an I. W. W., plaintiff in a suit for $125,000 damage charges that during the lumber strike of May, 1923, 200 armed men, led by agents of the Bonners Ferry Lumber company, attacked the strikers' picket camp, threw Moore into a truck and put him over the Montana state line, threatening him, if he ever came back. He was roughed up and shots were fired after him.

Returned for "Liberation"—Got "Dictatorship."

Later, returning for redress, he was arrested under the criminal syndicalism act at the company's instigation. Moore's arrest, says the suit, was part of a conspiracy to "intimidate and deter the plaintiff from causing criminal prosecutions from being instituted against said defendants for the felonies committed by them against the person of this plaintiff."

Three of the suits will be heard by Federal Judge Bourquin. The American Civil Liberties Union is handling the case.

MOSCOW, Jan. 15.—There have been numerous indications lately of the interest shown abroad for Russian art. Thus, the sale of paintings of the Soviet section at the recent art exhibition in Venice was very successful. An order for a large party of Russian paintings has been received from the New Zealand Museum. Generally, in connection with the discontinuance of export of art production from Russia since the beginning of the war in 1914, there is a big demand for such articles now on the part of foreign museums and collectors.

Central Body Aids Union Negotiators.

CLEVELAND.—The Cleveland building trades council has a statistician preparing a survey of living costs to be used at the expiration of many union contracts in March. Detailed reports will be made on the budgets of six families for this year compared with years since 1920.

HEARST SCAB DAILY IN SEATTLE MAY SETTLE WITH PRESS UNIONS

SEATTLE, Jan. 15.—Wm. Randolph Hearst's Seattle Post-Intelligencer, which has been unfair to organized labor since May, 1924, when 135 printers, stereotypers and mailers walked out, is about to return to the fold, it is whispered around the Labor Temple. Typographical representatives have been conferring with Hearst's emissaries from San Francisco for several weeks, and declare a settlement satisfactory to the unions is imminent.

One reason, it is believed, why Hearst is now willing to resume his former relationship with the unions is that Cornelius Vanderbilt, millionaire publisher, owner of papers in San Francisco and Los Angeles, is planning to enter the morning field here after launching his Miami, Fla., and Detroit newspapers. Vanderbilt's shops are 100 per cent union, and he will see that his Seattle paper is too, he said on a recent visit here. Rumors have been current that Vanderbilt would convert one of the afternoon dailies into a morning publication.

The strike has already cost the Post-Intelligencer thousands of dollars in circulation, advertising revenues, and local prestige. The printing trades unions, with the help of almost the entire organized labor movement of Washington state, blazed fierce publicity against the Hearst scab sheet.

VANZETTI FEELS BETTER NOW IN STATE HOSPITAL

Mental Troubles Only Temporary Condition

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 15.—Bartolomeo Vanzetti is improving in cheerfulness and general health at the Bridgewater state hospital for the criminal insane where he was sent early this month after alienists had pronounced him insane. Vanzetti's commitment to the Bridgewater hospital came at the end of five years he has spent in prison on framed-up charges of highway robbery and murder.

Dr. Abraham Myerson, a noted New England alienists, who examined Vanzetti at the request of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee states that in his opinion Vanzetti's present mental troubles are only temporary and were brought on as a result of his imprisonment.

Has Prison Psychosis.

Myerson's report follows in part: "I believe that Vanzetti is suffering from a prison psychosis of temporary nature brought on by the extraordinary situation in which he, a man of intense mental life, finds himself. The long legal battle, the bombardment of attention on the part of the press of the world, and of international organizations, the impending sentence of death, prison discipline, confinement with lack of outdoor exercise have brought on a transient paranoid state."

The two alienists for the state who examined Vanzetti and who testified at the hearings in court which resulted in his commitment to the Bridgewater hospital, held it as a sign of Vanzetti's insanity that he believed much of the testimony produced at his trial, was perjured.

Two years ago Niccola Sacco, codefendant with Vanzetti was sent to the Bridgewater hospital as insane and a few months later discharged as cured. At that time Dr. Myerson diagnosed Sacco's condition as "prison psychosis." The correctness of that diagnosis was proven when Sacco was pronounced sane after a few months away from the dull monotony of jail life. Friends of both Sacco and Vanzetti feel confident that Vanzetti will be cured within a short time.

Dr. William T. Hansen, medical director of the Bridgewater hospital, has stated that Vanzetti would remain under observation in the hospital until examination had demonstrated his recovery.

Case at Standstill.

While Vanzetti is in the condition of being in the eyes of the law, insane, the case against him will remain at a stand still. However, the case of Sacco will be pushed by defense attorneys before the state supreme court. They are asking for a review of the first trial and the ordering of a new trial. The two cases are so closely interwoven that anything done on behalf of Sacco will be for the good of Vanzetti as well.

The Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee issued the following statement on the commitment of Vanzetti to the hospital for the criminal insane.

"It is certainly a very great shock to us that Bartolomeo Vanzetti, whose calm serenity inspired all of us during the many dark days past, should now be declared insane. The conditions described by Dr. Myerson are bad enough to break a mind of steel and a heart of stone. It would not therefore, be surprising if Vanzetti after nearly five years of patient and quiet endurance of intolerable suspense has broken under the strain.

"But it is no hallucination for Vanzetti to believe he did not get a fair trial; that witnesses committing perjury; that prejudice operated against him as a foreigner and radical workingman. If these are 'delusions' they are shared by hundred of thousands of workingmen everywhere. It is no hallucination for Vanzetti to believe himself in the shadow of the electric chair. It is a grim reality! The shame is upon those who have tortured this gentle spirit. The shame is upon those who knowing of this injustice have remained silent. The shame will be stamped indelibly upon American labor if it does not now raise its voice in mighty and heroic protest against any further delay in granting a new and speedy trial to Sacco and Vanzetti. Both of these innocent workingmen have cried out many times that they desired liberty or death to end their painful ordeal. Labor should answer 'Liberty for Sacco and Vanzetti.'"

COLLEGE STUDENTS APPEAL TO COLLEAGUES TO REFRAIN FROM PLAYING THE STRIKEBREAKER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 15.—The Rochester Industrial Service Group of 1924, an organization composed of students from nine eastern colleges with headquarters in Cambridge, sent out the following open letter to college students. In this letter, signed by two members of the group, college students are prevailed upon to quit acting as strikebreakers during strikes. We print the letter in full:

Shall College Students Act as Strike-Breakers?

Fellow students: It has for years been the practice of the railroads and of other corporations, when their workers go out on strike, to send to the colleges, universities and technical schools for strikebreakers. In numerous cases, students have accepted employment under such conditions without realizing what they were doing.

Spent Vacations in Factories.

The members of the Rochester industrial service group of 1924, composed of students from nine eastern colleges, spent their summer in the city of Rochester, New York, as laborers and factory workers and had the opportunity of associating very closely with workingmen and studying the conditions under which they work. They also had an opportunity of obtaining an intimate and impartial view of some of the problems relating to industry. As a result of their summer's experience, they adopted the following resolutions for submission to the college and technical students of this country:

Whereas, in the past, college men have been engaging in industry under strike conditions without adequate knowledge of the true causes of the strike, and

Whereas, such actions by college men have caused many strikes to be lost for the workers, whose cause was absolutely justified, and

Whereas, such action by college men disturbs the feeling of fellowship between the college man and his industrial brother, creating suspicion and mistrust and breaking the bond of common fellowship in the interest of which we are working to establish better industrial relations.

Be it Resolved, that we, the members of the Rochester industrial service group of 1924 hereby openly sympathize with the worker in his struggle for the betterment of labor, affirm our belief in the inalienable right of the workers to strike, and denounce the acts of college men who have in the past been instrumental in breaking strikes and condemn strikebreaking as an utter disregard of the workers' necessary struggle for a decent livelihood.

What it Leads To.

Fellow students: Let us stop and consider what we have been doing in helping to defeat the workers in their struggle for better conditions. The labor movement has come to regard students as enemies and universitier as strikebreaking agencies. Is it right for us to interfere in these industrial disputes? Is it fair for us to take the jobs of men who are striking for a better living for themselves and their families? How would WE feel if we were on strike and students broke our strike?

Let us begin to think for ourselves and study these questions thoroly. Discuss the accompanying resolutions in your club, society or student conference and let us hear from you.

Harry Rolnick, Rutgers College.

Labor in Winnipeg Politics.

WINNIPEG.—The seven labor aldermen on the Winnipeg city council, walked out in a body as a protest against the other 11 aldermen uniting in a solid rock to prevent any chairmanships of committees going to labor. Labor polled 41 per cent of the votes in the November elections, and have a right to that proportion of chairmanships and appointments on outside committees. Labor was given but three places on committee out of about 35 to be filled.

In the Manitoba legislature labor has four representatives, three to represent the city of Winnipeg, and one member for Kildonan and St. Andrews.

SENATE SOLD OUT TO MORGAN POWER TRUST

Muscle Shoals Finally Given Away

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15.—After weeks of wrangling, the senate today passed finally the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill, turning the $150,000,000 power and nitrate plant over to private interests. The power trust, controlled by J. P. Morgan banking interests, will thus be the final recipients of the huge project, for millions of dollars below its original cost to the government.

The Jones commission plan, which was passed by the senate earlier in the week, was again before the senate, but was defeated to make ready for the passing of the Underwood bill, turning the plant over to the Morgan interests.

Administration senators who had previously voted for the Jones bill, reversed themselves on the ballot and supported the Underwood measure, which was pushed thru by Coolidge support. The passage of the Underwood bill is one more proof that Coolidge is owned by Morgan and his clique of Wall Street bankers. The general electric company and its affiliated organizations, which make up the power trust, have demonstrated their ability to make the government of the United States do their bidding.

The vote on the bill was 43 in favor of the bill and 38 against.

Senator Heflin, in debate on the bill, pleaded against the "blight of socialism" and against government ownership of the Muscle Shoals project. Heflin was made to look cheap, however, when Senator McKellar of Tennessee read a speech delivered to the house in 1912, pleading that the Alabama Power company be given the notorious Coosa River power site permit. This Coosa power bill was one of the scandals of the last year of the Taft administration. McKellar charged that Heflin worked for the passage of the Underwood bill because of his determination that the Alabama Power company shall have an even better gift from the government than that under the Taft administration.

Corporations Want Ohio Constabulary

CLEVELAND.—Financial backers of the proposed Ohio constabulary laws are not to be found among the farmers, but in the offices of the industrial corporations, according to the Cleveland Federation of Labor. The bill has been represented as the demand of farmers for rural police, but the federation challenges the lobbyists to produce the list of contributors to the lobbying fund.

The Starvation Policy

Five members of Local 181 of the Carpenters' Union have been deprived of their means of making a living at their trade thru a ukase delivered by General President William Hutcheson. Our readers are justified in assuming that those penalized workers committed some serious offense against trade union principles to merit such drastic punishment. But what are the facts?

The penalized members are admittedly among the most active trade unionists in Local 181. Far from being punished for violating any trade union principle, either in letter or spirit, they are punished for defending those principles against the bureaucracy which uses the cowardly weapon of starvation in order to take revenge.

When the fakers signed an agreement with Chicago contractors which provided for punishment to the extent of suspension from the union of any member who refused to work with strikebreakers or to handle non-union-made material or to work under the protection of police and gunmen, the expelled members, with others, signed their names to a resolution protesting against this scab contract. The resolution was passed by the local and sent to the international convention. After the convention was over and Hutcheson felt that he could use highhanded methods with impunity, he instructed his local stoolpigeons to prefer charges against those who signed the resolution.

The story of the farcial "trial" has already been told in the columns of the DAILY WORKER. There was no trial but instead a huge frameup. The chairman of the trial committee falsified the record and the president of the local declared the five members expelled against the almost unanimous protest of the local.

Those five carpenters were expelled for being sterling trade unionists. For taking the lead in legally protesting against a scab agreement they are threatened with permanent divorce from occupation at their trade. This, mark you, not by the employers directly, but by the officials of the Carpenters' Union acting for the employers.

That the expelled members have the confidence of their fellow workers has been demonstrated by the action of the members of Local 181, who have taken up their cause and are fighting splendidly for them. Even tho the fakers have pronounced the expelled militant non-members, the latter have attended every meeting of their local since their illegal expulsion over the protests of the reactionaries, who used uniformed gunmen to awe the rank and file without success.

This is a fight which concerns not alone the members of Local 181, but every union carpenter in America. It is part of the struggle waged by the left wing in the labor movement against the tools of the bosses who now pose as labor leaders.

The illegally expelled members of Local 181 are good fighters, and the local is to be congratulated for the splendid example of working class solidarity it has given in standing shoulder to shoulder with them. There must be no let-up in this fight until the reactionary bureaucrats are forced to surrender and another victory chalked up for militant trade unionism.

Drifting Towards Recognition

Nothing succeeds like success! This old truism hits the nail on the head in reference to the undoubted change in the political atmosphere at Washington on the question of recognition of Soviet Russia.

Hughes is almost out and Sam Gompers, his chief labor lieutenant in the anti-Soviet camp, is dead and nearly forgotten. The Soviet government, for whose downfall the capitalists of the world have prayed and worked for several years, is growing in strength every day. Most of the great powers have made up their minds already that they must make the best of a bad bargain and recognize facts. Hughes, the champion optimist of the diplomatic world, held out after all others had given up hope. He expected that the czarists led by the yellow socialists would yet be able to bring the Soviet regime tottering to the ground. His exit from the state department speaks eloquently for the faded hopes of the American bourgeoisie.

One year after Lenin's death the proudest government of the bourgeoisie is about to acknowledge the power of its hated and implacable foe. When Lenin died the enemies of the working class drew a breath of relief and renewed their hope for a weakening of the proletarian dictatorship and a consequent weakening of the Soviet power. But tho Lenin died, Leninism remained and the mighty monuments to Lenin, the Russian Communist Party and the Communist International welded the workers and peasants of Russia together into a chain which the imperialists of the world were unable to break. And behind the workers and peasants of Russia stand the workers and peasants of the world who battle to the death to defend the Soviet regime which is the government of the world proletariat.

The United States is drifting towards recognition of Soviet Russia, not with benevolent intentions but out of necessity. The world bourgeoisie would rather use the dagger, but they know it would be splintered on the steel shield of the Red Army.

The Sun Never Sets on the American Dollar

United States marines are busy in Shanghai. South America is dotted with them, but that is Wall Street's special sphere of influence. The average American baseball and cross word puzzle addict, thinks it just as natural for Wall Street to send American troops to collect its bills in Honduras, or Brazil as it is for an employer to use the police to beat up strikers. Wall Street is not alone the unofficial capital of the United States, but also of South America.

But what about China? A country on the other side of the world! China is a long way off, it is true, but not too far away for the American dollar to establish a footing. And wherever the American dollar goes, there also goes the American marine and the American battleship and the American army. That is just what the United States' armed forces are for—to protect the dollar.

The people of China are fighting to release themselves from the embrace of the American dollar and the British pound and the French franc. They want their country for themselves and they want the fruits of their labors for themselves. The capitalist powers have different aims. They want to keep the Chinese disunited so that they can fleece them separately and gobble up their country.

The struggle for the unification of China now being carried on under the leadership of Sun Yat Sen is fought by the imperialists under the leadership of America and England. Soviet Russia alone stands for the unity and prosperity of the Chinese masses. The American dollar is out for profit at the expense of the Chinese, therefore American marines are in Shanghai to defend the dollar.

Immune from Jail

Communists are anything but immune from jail, but it's different with a Communist paper. The DAILY WORKER has as hard a time trying to break into prison as Communists have trying to keep out or break out after they get in.

There are thirty-eight miners imprisoned at the Moundsville, West Va., penitentiary. They are there because of participation in a demonstration during a strike when the gunmen of the operators opened fire on the miners. In the melee a sheriff was killed.

The rank and file miners were instructed to plead guilty by their attorneys who were also the lawyers of the district officials of the United Mine Workers of America. The miners hold their fake leaders responsible for the incarceration of their comrades, who are now serving prison terms as high as ten years in some cases.

Those prisoners were glad to read The DAILY WORKER which the warden consented to admit some time ago. But the exposure of the treachery of the fakers in recent issues was instrumental in inducing the leading faker in district 7 to make a visit to the Moundsville penitentiary, not to assist the imprisoned miners but to deprive them of the consolation of reading a working class daily. The warden, on the appeal of Pat Fagan, barred The DAILY WORKER from the prison.

It seems there is no limit to the treachery of the labor fakers. They have resorted to many despicable methods in their efforts to remain on the backs of the rank and file and assist the bosses in keeping the workers in slavery, but when a labor leader's vengeance reaches in behind the prison bar where his treachery has landed his victims, words fail to describe such perfidy.

Coolidge established the custom of settling certain political matters after a breakfast table discussion. Most of the troubles of the workers under his administration spring from the fact that their problems consist largely of the difficulty of getting breakfast.

Landis Scabbery

Thomas E. Donnelley, president of the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award, was quick to answer the challenge thrown down by the Glaziers' Union when they tied up nine school jobs rather than work with scab Landis award sheet metal workers.

Donnelley, chief of the scabs, speaks up and organizes open shoppers for battle. Where is John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor and the logical man to take issue with Donnelley? Fitzpatrick spoke vehemently against the Communists at the last meeting of the federation. It seems that he is not so ready to even speak against the open shoppers of Chicago.

The Landis award, the board of education, the school committee, Mayor Dever and all other capitalist lackeys and groups are united against the glaziers. This is but another proof of the futility of the non-partisan political policy of the reactionary labor leaders. It is further evidence of their complete bankruptcy.

Donnelley, the scab leader, has spoken for his class. What has Fitzpatrick, the trade union leader, to say?

Send in that new "sub" today!

HUGHES BROKE HIS DIPLOMATIC NECK OVER RUSS

Politically He Is Now as Dead as Gompers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The opinion that Secretary Hughes decided to quit the Coolidge cabinet because of a difference with the president over relations with Soviet Russia is becoming stronger every day.

Senator Borah has not denied reports that he delivered an ultimatum to the cabinet on this question which is one of the big planks in Borah's platform. Coolidge does not relish the idea of having the Idaho senator on his neck, and as the president has no past worth speaking of to live up to, except a reputation for silence, he does not feel that a reversal of policy on Russia would detract from his fame.

The feeling is becoming stronger in Washington that the Hughes' policy toward Russia had a very detrimental effect on United States interests in the orient. The American capitalists believe—without justification, however—that Soviet Russia's benevolent policy toward China and her approachment with Japan was in retaliation against the United States. The Soviet government's policy in China is in harmony with its program for international peace and the lifting up of the oppressed and subject peoples and the emancipation of the workers of all lands from exploitation.

Hughes In Dumbbell Role.

According to reports credited here in political circles, Coolidge recently asked Hughes for information on the treaty now under negotiation between Japan and Russia. Hughes replied that his spies were not able to get a copy of the draft, but did not consider it of any consequence to the United States, as Russia was a negligble power in his opinion. This answer was so childish that it angered the president, who told Hughes that Senator Borah's views on Russia were more in accord with the senate's views than those of the secretary of state. It was then that Hughes politely informed Coolidge, he would like to go on a long hunting trip.

An American commission to discuss terms with Soviet Russia may be appointed by Coolidge shortly after Mar. 4. It would follow the same procedure as that of the committee that smoothed the way for the resumption of diplomatic relations with Mexico.

Dever's Traction Plan Gives Magnates All—City Nothing

Mayor Dever's traction ordinance sells out the people of the city of Chicago, to the traction magnates, who are the only ones receiving any benefit from it, it was disclosed in the city council. The bill gives the private traction lines a franchise of 40 years, which is just twice the length of the franchise now allowed by city law. It allows the traction lines to retain control of the city lines until all certificates issued are absorbed by the city.

The ordinance allows a rate of fare sufficient to pay all charges, without the necessity of obtaining authority from the Illinois commerce commission, relieves companies from orders of the commission, relieves them from having to pave their rights of way and from paying taxes, and allows them to retain control of the traction lines until every cent of indebtedness is paid by the city.

The subways may be used free by the traction lines when built, according to the ordinance.

Coolidge and the Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.— Calvin Coolidge today assurred reporters that no immediate change in foreign policy need be expected as a result of the resignation of Secretary of State Hughes.

While the president was careful to calm the fears of the most anti-Russian section of the American capitalist class, that a complete reversal of policy on Russia was to be expected, in the near future, it was significant to note that he said, "Russia has made some progress toward conditions necessary to renewed relations."

This is considered the diplomatic way of saying that by the time the unofficial steps which it is expected Coolidge proposes to take, looking toward relatins with Russia, have developed sufficiently, the president will decide that the Soviet government has made enough progress to warrant official recognition.

STRIKEBREAKER JUDGE CAUGHT IN GRAFT DEALS

He Issued Injunction Against Strikers

By MARTIN A. DILLMON
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Jan. 15.—Former referee in bankruptcy Charles B. Thomas, now under investigation by the department of justice, was appointed to office by federal Judge English, notorious injunction judge during the railroad strike. Thomas resigned under fire, but his quitting will not halt the probe of his alleged activities in connection with an alleged bankruptcy ring.

Thomas, it is alleged, was permitted while referee to appear before Judge English as attorney in bankruptcy cases, contrary to federal statutes; that the funds of firms and individuals undergoing bankruptcy in English's court were deposited only in certain banks, in some of which English and Thomas were stockholders; that despite his status as referee, Thomas was appointed receiver by English at bloated fees of many concerns.

Stole a Million.

Representative La Guardia, New York, attacked English in a speech on the floor of the house last May, after the judge had dealt leniently with a notorious war profiteer. Said the congressman: "We read in this morning's newspapers the disgusting report of a federal court judge, who stole $1,000,000 from the government during the war, on the pretext of a weak heart was let off with a fine of $12,500. This man is Henry Joyce, who was the marine manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. His two corporations that participated in the loot did not plead guilty to a weak heart, but pleaded guilty to the crime and were let off with a fine of $1,000 each. I consider such a slight fine simply disgraceful". Asked to name the judge, the congressman replied, "Judge George English."

The favorable balance of trade was close to $1,000,000,000. An excess of $[illegible],000,000 gold exports over imports for December, was announced. It was the first month since 1920 in which exports exceeded imports.

Gold imports for 1924 totalled $319,720,000 compared to exports of $61,648,000. Last year $322,715,000 in gold was imported and $28,643,000 exported.

New York Wiped Out in a Day

THE civilian population of New York City will be slaughtered in the next war. This world's financial center and metropolis will be turned into a burning charnel house under the attack of poison, asphyxiating and incinerating gases by an air fleet of a foreign power. Inhabitants, fleeing to the outskirts of the city will die there as the gases from the aerial bombardment take effect.

Fine prospects! Brig. Gen. Lord Thomson, secretary for air in the recent labor government of England tells us this good news! The nation which, when the next war breaks out, has the biggest, swiftest and best air fleet will be the nation which will sit upon the highest peak of the mountains of human skeletons the next war will produce.

The DAILY WORKER received $50 from Frederick, South Dakota, today. There must be comrades in this city that are not at all enamored with the prospects the next imperialist war holds out to us. These comrades know that the DAILY WORKER is one hundred percent opposed to imperialist wars and for proletarian ascension to power during the war, should it come.

And that ex-soldier, who sent us $25 of his bonus money yesterday, sent another $25 to the WORKERS MONTHLY today. He must mean business. And you? Are you helping to insure the DAILY WORKER for the coming year, You'd better. For we'll need it to help us fight the vultures, to assure a workers' victory over the murderous imperialists.

COMMUNIST LEGISLATOR IN NORTH DAKOTA POINTS OUT CLASS NEEDS OF WORKERS AND POOR FARMERS

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 16.—The workers and poor farmers of North Dakota are fortunate in having in the legislature of that state the one Communist, A. C. Miller, elected to such a body.

Not that one Communist can attain for them all that is their due as workers and farmers, but he is actively pointing out to them the only means whereby their needs as a class may be attained—and explaining that the burden of fighting for their betterment and emancipation must lie with them, and not be trusted merely to the capitalist controlled legislature.

The secretary of the agricultural district of the Workers Party, Alfred Knutson, has issued in the name of the district executive committee, a statement outlining the program of Comrade Miller in the legislature and among the workers and farmers. The statement is as follows:

Calls for Class Struggle.

"The farmers and the workers of North Dakota and the United States will never be able to emancipate themselves from the exploitation of the banks, the investment companies, the grain combine, the railroads, the steel trust, the coal barons, the Wall Street financiers—in short the whole capitalist system of business and its government—without a fight, without a struggle.

"As far as the broad masses of farmers and workers are concerned there can be absolutely no compromise with these business interests. Any harmony and peace talk with the capitalists, big or little, who are robbing the farmers and the workers, is a clear betrayal of their basic needs and can have no other outcome for them than certain defeat and disaster.

Calls for Pressure on Legislature.

"The following bills and resolutions constitute the legislative program of the Workers Party and are being placed before the North Dakota legislature by its representative, A. C. Miller, member of the house of representatives from the 41st legislative district. Every working farmer, who is a member of the state legislature, should give his whole-hearted support to these measures which touch the immediate needs and demands of the farmers and the workers, and all farmers and workers thruout the state should by resolutions, petitions and letters to their representatives in the state legislature, urge their immediate and prompt adoption.

No Foreclosure—No Eviction.

"1. A bill prohibiting foreclosures of mortgages on land tilled by working farmers. No farmer shall be evicted or dispossessed for failure to pay his debts. All lands held by trust companies, banks, and corporations generally, to revert back to the state without compensation. This bill or resolution is to be based on the principle that the land belongs to those who toil upon it.

"2. A bill providing for state aid to co-operatives controlled by workers and working farmers.

"3. A resolution prohibiting the use

REFUSAL of the Norwegian government to grant amnesty to the imprisoned Communists may result in a general strike according to news dispatches from Oslo, formerly Christiana. The trade union leaders acting under pressure from the rank and file, have warned the government that unless the Communists are released labor will down tools. The yellow socialist press was recently chortling over the split in the Norwegian Communist Party when the right wing leaders refused to carry out the instructions of the Communist International. But the Communists know how to win the masses to their side.

THE continued existence of Dr. Sun Yat Sen is seriously embarrassing the capitalist press. The wish that he were dead is father to the tale which is partly responsible for tales of his demise, and other tales of serious illness. The latest complication from which we are told Sun is suffering is an abscess on his liver. The capitalist reporter who concocted the liver story says that unless Sun is operated on he will die. Sun refuses to permit an operation. Therefore he will die. Everything is quite logical, except the facts.

THE letters from Theodore Roosevelt to Henry Cabot Lodge now running in several papers, reveal the former as a shallow time-serving politician. There is no redeeming feature in the correspondence. "Teddy" was an accomplished mountebank tho not so nauseating a hypocrite as his competitor Woodrow Wilson. Roosevelt's advice to Lodge was to stick to the G. O. P. machine, even while differing with it. Lodge saw in Roosevelt the makings of a good demagogue and kept his eye on him, while Roosevelt needed Lodge's erudition and political sagacity. They made a good team; Roosevelt attacking big business and Lodge, his second, assuring the plutes that "Teddy" was only addressing the votes.

THE Soviet police have exiled 90,000 Russians without trial according to a Kerensky paper published in Berlin. Those of you who have short memories are reminded that a person by the name of Kerensky held out in Petrograd for a few months in the year 1917 after the czar was given a vacation by the petty bourgeoisie at the instigation of Great Britain. It might also be of interest to learn that the private diary of the British Ambassador Buchanan, stationed in Petrograd (now Leningrad) at the time proved conclusively that it was Britain's revolution. The czar was going to make peace with the Germans so J. Bull pulled his stuff. But he did not keep his name on the revolution very long. Before long Lenin put his John Hancock on it. Of course, Kerensky has a kick coming and so has the czar (if he could only kick) but Kerensky is lucky that he still has his head on his shoulders.

BY the way what has happened to a once rather well known Hell an' Mariar Dawes? He made a lot of noise during the election period and it was epected that he would play opposite to Calvin Coolidge in the White House during the next four years, Dawes supplying the fireworks and Calvin the silence. Surely the general did not use up all his obscenity during the election fight!

BISHOP BROWN STANDS BY THE TEACHINGS OF HIS COMMUNIST BOOK

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 16.—Bishop William Montgomery Brown affirmed his beliefs stated in his book, "Communism and Christianism," and refused to retract any of his teachings. The court of review declared they found no error in the trial last June when Bishop Brown was convicted, and allowed the "sentence" to stand. "It is the judgment of this court that you, William Montgomery Brown, should be deposed from the sacred ministry," Bishop Leonard declared at the end of the hearing.

Bishop Brown's "conviction" of "heresy" will now be reviewed by the house of bishops, the only body with the power to put the "sentence" into effect. The house of bishops will review the case at the general church convention in New Orleans next September. It takes a two-thirds vote of the house of bishops to confirm the sentence, and failure to obtain a two-thirds vote of the bishops would amount to disapproval of the sentence.

AMERICAN RULE LIKE MINE, SAYS FASCIST LEADER

Mussolini Says U.S. Also Has Dictatorship

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Jan. 16.—Mussolini declared today that his dictatorship is justified by dictatorship which now exists in the United States. "The executive power in America has passed almost completely out of the control of the legislature," Mussolini said. "When the parliamentary system of any country is discovered to be failing, the executive authorities must assert themselves to take the situation in hand, must assume full executive control. Look at America for instance."

Mussolini also said that the "principles of the British electoral systems" had been incorporated into his electoral bill, which allows the nobles and the bourgeoisie three votes to one for the industrial workers and peasants.

The opposition in the chamber of deputies took the offensive by presenting a motion that it is impossible for the present Mussolini government to hold a general election, as long as it curtails freedom of speech and of the press, and "the individual liberty of its citizens."

The motion was put forward by the three former premiers, Salandra, Giolitti and Orlando, and is signed by 27 deputies, forming the petty bourgeois wing of the opposition.

JEWISH BUREAU SENDS BIRTHDAY GREETINGS TO DAILY WORKER

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The Bureau of the Jewish Federation has sent the following telegram, greeting the DAILY WORKER on the occasion of the paper's first anniversary:

"The Bureau of the Jewish Federation of the Workers (Communist) Party sends its flaming greetings to the DAILY WORKER, the first Communist daily newspaper to be printed in the English language, on its first birthday. The DAILY WORKER is a beacon light in the darkness of the political life of the United States.

"The DAILY WORKER'S faithful adherence to the principles of the class struggle, and its penetration into the depths of proletarian life and struggle and leadership in all political, economic and cultural activities of the workers has made it an organizational center of first importance and a hope for the future power of the working class.

"Long live the DAILY WORKER!

"Long live the Workers (Communist) Party!

APPEAL TO HIGH COURT IS GIVEN HEARING TODAY

Headgear Workers Support Communist Fight

Attorneys for C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, will appear before the United States supreme court in Washington today, and apply for permission to argue the validity of the Michigan procedure and to have Comrade Ruthenberg released on bail pending the highest court's decision. Comrade Ruthenberg is now serving from 3 to 10 years in the Jackson, Mich., prison for his Communist principles.

Labor unions thruout the country are taking action on the Michigan outrage to free speech and assembly involved in the conviction. The Headgear Worker, official organ of the Cloth Hat, Cap, and Millinery Workers' Intl. Union, declares thru its editor, J. M. Budish:

"The inherently vicious tendencies of these anti-syndicalism laws is best illustrated by the sentence imposed by a Michigan court on Charles Ruthenberg. Neither he nor the convention which he attended have been accused of any criminal act or of even any attempt to commit any criminal action. There is hardly possible to imagine a more sinister attack upon all our liberties and inalienable rights."

The honor of being the first unit of the Workers Party to send money to the Labor Defense Council for Comrade Ruthenberg's defense, goes to the Detroit English branch, which sent $26.30, to the Labor Defense Council office at 166 W. Washington St., Chicago. Close upon the heels of this contribution came $20.00 from the Young Workers' League of Philadelphia, the money having been raised at the Liebknecht memorial meeting there.

The city central committee of Hartford, Conn., sent a check for $23.00 to go toward the defense of Ruthenberg and the other Communists arrested at the Bridgeman convention of the Communists in August 1922. Robert Minor, writer and cartoonist for the DAILY WORKER, will appear at the Berrian county court in St Joseph, Michigan for trial early in February.

All comrades and sympathizers who wish to write to Comrade Ruthenberg are given the following correct mailing address: C. E. Ruthenberg, No. 17,332, Jackson State Prison, care mail superintendent, A. L. Van Horn, Jackson, Michigan.

Two Workers Killed, Three Are Missing In Factory Fire

An aged watchman, Frank Korda, 1932 North Francisco Ave., and Russell Watson, a chauffeur for the City Distributing company, are known to have been killed and three people are missing, as a result of the explosion and burning of the Varnish Manufacturing company belonging to Frank S. Lewis.

The explosion was followed by the burning of gasoline, and other volatile liquids stored in the factory. It was rumored that the varnish factory was being used to make moonshine whiskey, and one theory of the fire is that a still exploded.

"Onlooker" is Executed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 16.—Three youths were hanged in California prisons today. John Sears, 21 years of age, and Jack Ferdinand, 30, were hanged in San Quentin prison, and John Geregac, 22 years old, was executed at Folsom prison. Geregac died for a crime in which he claimed to have played the part of an unwilling onlooker.

In Memoriam

MANIFESTO OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY ON THE COMMEMORATION OF THE FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF THE DEATH OF LENIN.

TO THE WORKERS OF AMERICA:

It will be one year on January 21 since our great leader, Vladimir Ilyitch Lenin, breathed his last.

Do you remember how, one year ago, all the bitterest enemies of the working class hailed with joy the death of Lenin?

Do you recall the deep sorrow at our loss expressed by the millions of oppressed people around the globe?

One year ago the enemies of the proletarian revolution hoped to rob us of our greatest achievement, the Workers' Government of Soviet Russia, and from that march on toward crushing the entire labor movement. Millions of workers were apprehensive because the giant brain and powerful hand of Lenin was no longer at the helm.

But Lenin, embodiment of the working class revolution, proved as powerful in death as in life. For he had created that which cannot die so long as there is still a working class struggling against the exploitation of the capitalist class; and this, Lenin's greatest service to the toiling masses, is the world party of the proletariat, leader of the struggle for the new society, THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL.

In this World Party of the workers, Lenin is still the leader. Thru the years of struggle which culminated in the Workers' Government that holds one-sixth of the globe, there has been accumulated in the Communist International all the revolutionary knowledge and determination of the working class. In the teachings of Marx and in Marxism, and in these teachings applied in the epoch of imperialism, the final stage of capitalism—in the teachings of Lenin and in Leninism—the working class of the world has the sure guide that protects the fruits of past struggles and leads ever onward to new and greater victories.

On January 21, millions of workers in every land will come together in memory of Lenin. The spirit of these gatherings will be, not so much of sorrow, but rather of iron determination that our great cause of which Lenin was the greatest leader shall forge onward, overcoming all enemies, continually gathering mightier masses of the army of the toilers, continually uniting itself more firmly, continually extending its dominion over the minds and hearts of the workers, continually leading the struggle that can end only with the destruction of the capitalist dictatorship, the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat, and thru this, the building of the Communist society.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America, section of the Communist International, the party of Lenin, calls upon the entire working class of America to observe the 21st day of January in the spirit of revolution, in the spirit of Lenin.

Unite for militant struggle against the forces of capitalism!

Unite to resist the daily aggresssions, the wage-cuts, the "open shop" drives, the union-smashing campaigns!

Unite in support of the Michigan Communist Defense as a part of the defense of the working class!

Unite to destroy the blood-sucking capitalist system and all its instruments of oppression that are used against the workers!

Unite with the revolutionary workers of the entire world under the leadership of THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL!

Join the Workers (Communist) Party of America!

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
William Z. Foster, Chairman.

WEEK'S PROGRAM OF MEMORIALS IN EVERY LAND

Great Gathering to Be Held Here Wednesday

The workers of the entire world will gather in demonstrations next week, to honor the memory of the great leader and teacher of the working class of the world, Vladimir Ilyitch Lenin.

The Russian workers and peasants, under the leadership of Lenin, in 1917 established the first workers' government of the world, which stands today as the shining example and inspiration to the struggling proletarian movement.

An Indestructible Monument.

Lenin's monument is everlasting and indestructible. It is the Russian Soviet government, the Third (Communist) International and above all, the legacy of Leninism.

The members of the Workers (Communist) Party, the American followers of Lenin, call on the workers and poor farmers of the country to join with them in these great demonstrations, in honor of the man who forged new weapons and new tactics for the accomplishment of world proletarian revolution.

At the Chicago Lenin memorial meeting the speakers will be Earl R. Browder, William F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, Arne Swabeck and [illegible] Owens.

The list of Lenin memorial meetings planned for the United States will be found on page two.

WEAVERS STRIKE AT FALL RIVER OVER WAGE CUT

Big Resentment Stirs the Textile Workers

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 16.—Turmoil reigns among the textile workers as the bosses begin their assault on wage scales. Small craft strikes are beginning, little detachments of workers are being defeated, but underneath a promise of an uprising wave of greater strikes may be observed.

One thousand weavers were out on strike at Fall River from the Davis, Granite, Lincoln and Barnard mills, but yesterday the 300 from the Davis mills went back to their looms. These are all fine goods mills.

Accepted 10 Per Cent Cut—Got More.

The weavers struck over what they termed was an excess cut, over the "agreed" ten per cent cut. The treasurers of the various mills held meetings with the weavers' union officials trying to convince the workers that their pay wasn't cut so much as it was.

More weavers joined [illegible] the strikers from the Lincoln mill. The strikes so far being confined to the weavers, no effort apparently being made to spread the strike to other departments and crafts. From the Granite mill, No. 3, 150 weavers struck on Tuesday.

Weavers Only Strikers.

Notices of the cut were posted that morning, and at once the upper weave shops struck, went to the lower weave room and took the workers there out with them, but made no effort to call out the workers thruout the mill, confining their action to weavers.

They declared that the new scale cuts their wages more than 10 per cent and in some cases 15 per cent. Resentment prevailed at union headquarters, and complaints were made that the cut of pay made the weavers unable to live. Protests were heard against the limited craft character of the union, and the fact that even the weavers in Granite Mills No. 1 and 2 did not strike.

United Promises Mass Picketing.

The Dyers' and Bleachers' Union, a part of the United Textile Workers, was organized Monday with the 50 Kerr Mill dyers as a start. This un-

SHEET STEEL WORKERS GET CUT IN PAY

Class Collaboration Is Working Fine, For Boss

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 16.—Notwithstanding the booming business in steel production and the phenomenal rise in steel shares, the wages of the sheet and tin plate operatives in the union mills will be reduced one and a half per cent during the January-February period, according to the bi-monthly wage agreement between the independent manufacturers and the officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers.

Because of the class collaborative union agreement, whereby the wages of the workers are slashed every time the bosses have to make a low price to beat the slave labor of the German workers driven by the Dawes plan, the infinitesimal loss of a nickel on the 26, 27 and 28 gauge black sheet having sold for $3.40 instead of $3.45 a hundred for the last 60 days, the workers are required by the union and boss combination to lose that and maybe more off their pay checks.

The same settlement will probably cause a cut of wages to be declared by the United States Steel corporation against both the union and the unorganized workers, as the scale gives the steel trust an excuse to claim that "competition forces us to cut wages, too."

sia on their return to England has proved a very effective counter to the anti-Soviet moves of the tory government. In an article published in the Russian press, A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trades Unions, congratulated the Russian workers on their progress and denounced the yellow socialist press for their lies against the Soviet republic. The article will appear soon in the DAILY WORKER.

ANSWERING questions concerning the illness of Leon Trotsky and his differences with the Communist Party, President Rykoff informed a convention of school teachers meeting in Moscow, that the war minister's illness was not dangerous tho acute. Trotsky was going south on the advice of his physicians. Referring to the dispute with the party, Rykoff said: ". . . these are party matters which cannot be dealt with here. They will be solved in due course. The chief point of controversy is Trotsky's attitude towards the peasantry but I can say in advance that neither the Communist Party nor the Soviet government is in the slightest danger thru these disputes, nor is there any probability of a split in the Communist Party. Trotsky himself has no intention of hampering either the government or the party." This is for the purpose of reassuring our readers in case they may read a report of Trotsky's presence crossing the ice between Spitzenbergen and Greenland on two wooden legs.

STATE'S ATTORNEY, Robert E. Crowe, is a man of his word at least in some instances. He was a fiend for enforcing the law against strikers before his re-election and no doubt will continue this policy in the future. Even the gory Chicago Tribune, which is not happy unless somebody is getting hanged—workers preferred—blew Crowe's horn, before the election. But now the horn is silent. For Crowe has made peace with the Tribune's enemies in the republican party and nolle prossed the indictments against several crooks who were indicted for robbery during the Thompson regime in this city. Crowe promised them a nolle prosse provided they support him in his election fight. They did. Crowe kept his word. Three cheers for the majesty of capitalist law!

WHO killed Dean O'Banion? A rather impudent question to ask in this city, and we would hesitate to run the risk of offending public sensibility, but for a caption in the local papers over the picture of two natily undressed ladies, who were snapped wintering at Miami, Fla. The caption read: "Gunman's widow at winter resort." The story reads that Mrs. Dean O'Banion went to "recuperate after the murder of her husband." The strain must be terrible but perhaps the thrill of angling for another will more than make up for it.

Billion Dollar Trade Balance Last Year is Troubling Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the writers of the capitalist class, economists in the "Goose-Step" universities, and financial experts on the "Brass Check" press, are much worried about the trade balance for 1925 in favor of the United States of nearly a billion dollars. They are wondering what is to be done with it. None of them wants to hit at the truth.

• • • •

George W. Hinman, ex-college president, but now one of Hearst's writers on finance, says this huge trade balance will be offset by American spenders travelling abroad. That is an echo of theory that the rich will keep their stolen surplus in circulation thru riotous living. In this way the apologist for capitalism tells us the capitalist will not get too rich. What he doesn't spend his parasitic heirs are supposed to take care of.

But the great American fortunes have become lasting institutions under capitalism, even proof against indolent heirs. So the American spender abroad cannot overcome to any appreciable degree the growing American trade balance. Not even the marrying of American girls of the dissolute rich to foreign titles affects the growing indebtedness of Europe to this country. This is especially true since the title market has been considerably crippled by the revolutionary wave originating in Soviet Russia in 1917.

The capitalist economists, of various schools, have many nostrums. Some say, donate the surplus in charity to Europe, or write off a few debts. Others say, cut down the tariff and make it possible to buy foreign goods, cheap goods. Some favor making new loans to Europe. But these are all merely surface applications. None of them really have a lasting effect on the growing surplus. They also fail to take into consideration that the American capitalist is in business to make profits for himself, not to bestow charity on Europe, or to allow European capitalists to sell goods cheaply in this country, to steal part of his market.

The American capitalist, offspring of American capitalist imperialism, is in business not only to exploit the United States, but to spread the fields of his exploitation to every country on earth that will yield a satisfactory return.

Seven thousand islands of the seas are now under the domination of Wall Street's "Stars and Stripes." They weren't picked out either as summer or winter resorts for the idle rich.

The limit has been reached in developing new markets. Another method of getting markets is to steal them from other nations. Germany lost her markets during the war. But she is back in the struggle to find new places to sell her goods. Germany must find markets to sell her goods or the Dawes Plan isn't worth the paper it is written on. France is not a great exporting nation so she isn't worried. The Paris statesmen say, let Germany export and turn over the money to us. But England is a great exporting nation. Her trade balance has turned against her. She must sell or starve. Busy coal mines in the Ruhr may mean reparations payments to France, but they also mean tens of thousands of idle coal miners in England. That brings England directly into conflict with Germany.

But that billion dollar trade surplus for the United States means that American capitalism has a billion dollars on its hands that it wants to re-invest in foreign lands, if it cannot find profitable investments at home. That explains, for instance, the effort of American imperialism to tighten its grip on China.

This brings American capitalist imperialism into direct conflict with the needs and the ambitions of the capitalisms of Great Britain and Germany, not to mention the lesser nations. And these conflicting trade rivalries always lead on to new and greater imperialist wars.

There is only one country on the face of the earth today that can have a trade surplus and enjoy it. That is Soviet Russia.

The first Workers' Republic does have a trade surplus. That means that it exports more than it imports. This is one of its greatest achievements, coming so soon after the victory of the revolution. It is a sign of recovery at home.

• • • •

A trade surplus for Soviet Russia means credits in foreign lands; new opportunities to purchase the things that the Russian workers and peasants need. The greater the surplus the better able the Soviet Republic will be to satisfy those needs and lift the standard of living of the Russian masses.

American capitalism is not interested in lifting the standard of living of the American workers and farmers. It is only interested in piling up its profits thru the worst exploitation possible.

That is the difference between capitalist rule and Soviet rule.

• • • •

It is easy to see why the capitalist economists and financial writers have a difficult time reaching a favorable conclusion for capitalism, in their studies of the world financial situation. If they studied conditions rightly, as they dare not do, they would see the path of progress everywhere leading to the World Soviet Victory.

CHICAGO SOUTH SLAVIC BRANCH OF WORKERS PARTY GIVES $50.00 FOR DEFENSE OF C. E. RUTHENBERG

The South Slavic Branch No. 1, of Chicago, voted to give $50.00 for the defense of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, and sent the following telegram to Comrade Ruthenberg at Jackson prison:

"C. E. Ruthenberg,
"Michigan State Prison,
"Jackson, Mich.

"You are in prison for struggling for the emancipation of all exploited and suppressed workers and farmers.

"We assure you that we will carry on the struggle for your freedom and for the emancipation of the toiling masses. Yours for the proletarian revolution, South Slavic Branch No. 1, of Chicago."

The Lettish branch of Chicago took similar action this week.

"LABOR UNIONS OF THE ORIENT," SUNDAY TOPIC

The Force to Destroy Imperialism

What forces are there within imperialism to throttle it and stop its malevolent exploitation of the oppressed peoples? This exploitation, remember, is vitally affecting your wages and hours right here in America, tho all the noise and fighting is going on in the far east, in China, perhaps, where American marines are "protecting American interests" that are not your interests to protect.

The answer to this question, of what forces inside imperialism are historically arising to destroy it, will be given in the lecture next Sunday night, January 18, of Alfred Wagenknecht, who recently returned from China, and the Philippines.

Comrade Wagenknecht was in touch with the nascent labor movement of the east, and the subject of this lecture, which will be given to the open forum of the Workers Party at the Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren street, at eight o'clock tomorrow night, will be "The Rising Labor Movement of the Orient."

The fight against imperialism should be borne first of all by the working class of the imperialist country, they should take the burden, and not lay it upon the more oppressed countries of imperialism's victims. Hence all workers should attend. Come early and bring your friends.

ion has put pickets on the plant and promises to continue. The management refused to meet delegates of the union and would issue no public statement. Organiser Horace A. Riviere of Manchester, New Hampshire is expected to take charge of the strike and mass picketing is expected.

In New Bedford the Ring Twisters' Union, met on Tuesday, with only [illegible] out of the 1,000 voting on whether to accept the wage cut and go back to work Monday or not.

New Bedford Unions Full of Rats.

The ballots will be counted by the union officials and the result not announced till tonight. It is significant that this union was full of stool-pigeons of the Sherman Detective agency as was the whole Textile Council of New Bedford. The DAILY WORKER of a few months ago exposed William Morgan Butler, campaign manager of Coolidge as the superintendent of these rats.

Now the president of the Textile Council is trying to arrange a conference with the bosses. Many workers are murmuring against this, asking for a rank and file delegation to be made up of representatives from the various mills.

A Speed Up Reduction in Pay.

In the mills of American Thread company at Fall River the dye house employes contend they were reduced 10 per cent in their wages. The corporation is then said to have discharged a number of workers and speeded up the remaining help to do their work. This was in addition to the reduction in wages. The employes refused to do the work and left.

Spokesmen for the strikers contend that the additional work imposed on them is a heavy cut in itself.

Previous Reduction.

It is acknowledged that some corporations put a wage reduction of their own into effect previous to the usual conference between the manufacturers and the Ttextile Council. In some instances it is reported the cut was as high as 12½ per cent.

Another 10 per cent over what had already taken place, in reality means a reduction of 22½ per cent.

The night of the acceptance of the wage reduction it was freely predicted that if these manufacturers insisted on reducing wages beyond what had already been put into effect, a strike was certain.

More Work for Less Wages.

The dyers in the Kerr thread mills came out on strike in resistance to a cut which, according to the statement of John Campos, agent for the Doffers' Union, means a reduction of 10 per cent in wages, is aggravated by an imposition of extra work on the dyers which they figure as a cutdown of 25 per cent.

Williams' House Is Bombed on Eve of Coroners' Jury Meet

Rev. Elmer L. Williams, of the Better Government Association and Chicago's vice crusader, for the second time in nine months has had his home bombed. The last time was Wednesday at midnight just as he was returning home from a conference at the Auditorium Hotel.

Rev. Williams said that he can explain the bomb by the fact that the Dean O'Banion coroner's jury meets on Thursday and he had subpoened two prominent characters of the underworld. Williams has been keeping after the O'Banion murderers refusing to let the case be dropped.

FARM CRISIS FORCES ACTION ON MANY STATES

No Real Relief Is Yet in Sight

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The financial distress of the farming population of the country has been forced to the attention of most of the state legislatures as well as upon the United States congress.

Coolidge has ignored the cry of the farmers for relief and is bitterly opposing farm relief legislation in congress.

At the same time that Coolidge spoke against farm relief he authorized secretary of the treasury, Andrew Mellon to approve the program for spending $150,000,000 for public buildings in Washington, D. C. and other parts of the country.

"I am authorised to state," said Mellon, "That the bill is not inconsistent with the financial program of the president."

In his inaugural address John Hammill, governor of Iowa, dwelt at length on the extreme poverty of the Iowa farmers. Hammill advocated a plan of co-operative marketing under state control to alleviate the present condition. Nothing good for the farmers will come from such a state law, however, it is said in Des Moines.

The agricultural crisis also poked its head in the Indiana legislature now meeting in Indianapolis, when the agricultural committee of the senate met to consider a bill providing for farmers' co-operative marketing. The committee faced the opposition of grain dealers and grain elevator men. A similar bill was passed by the last assembly, but was vetoed by Governor McCray. Senator Roland Hill, a grain and coal dealer, is trying to sidetrack the co-operative marketing bill by introducing a valueless substitute.

The message of Governor Nellie Ross, of Wyoming, first woman governor in the United States, delivered before the Wyoming state legislature at Cheyenne, stressed the need of financial relief for the farmers. Mrs. Ross also recommended ratification of the federal child labor law and "equal rights for women."

Secretary of agriculture, Gore, who is following out Coolidge's policy of throwing cold water on the co-operative marketing organizations, has issued a letter to the American farmers, urging that they "give careful consideration to the economic need for co-operative organizations before they start marketing ventures on that basis."

THE COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN IN MUNICIPAL ELECTION SPEEDS UP AS PROGRAM APPEALS TO WORKERS

The Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, has now gotten into full swing in the local aldermanic municipal elections on Feb. 24, 1925. There are running nine candidates endorsed by the Workers Party.

At the meeting of the elections committee on Tuesday night, Jan. 14, much progress was reported. All the ward captains feel confident that the necessary signatures to place the Communist candidates on the ballot will be obtained by Jan. 25.

Getting Candidates on Ballot.

The third ward where our colored comrade, L. L. Doty, is candidate and Gordon Owens is captain, is swinging into line.

The Eleventh Ward, Victor Zokaitis, candidate, has over half of the signatures needed.

The Twenty-Second Ward, Louis Cejka candidate, A. Overgaard, captain, reports the same.

The Twenty-Fourth Ward, Hyman Epstein, candidate, W. Kruse, captain, will probably get sufficient signatures on the big drive next Sunday.

Twenty-Eights Ward, Nick Dozenberg candidate, August Ozol captain, has done very well, over 400 signatures being secured to date. A propaganda committee of seven is on the job to make the campaign a success and the comrades there are working very hard.

In the Thirty-Second Ward, Comrade Peter Lucas candidate, M. Stolar captain, states that all the comrades are on the job.

Thirty-Fourth Ward, Harry Brooker candidate, I. L. Davidson captain, the DAILY WORKER sub campaign is going along very successfully, while also securing petitions, they have set as their aim 200 new subscribers for the DAILY WORKER in this ward.

In the Thirty-Fifth, J. Louis Engdahl candidate, N. J. Christensen captain, next Sunday should see the ward over the top, and the same goes for the 44th ward where Jack Johnstone is the candidate and Walt Carmon captain.

DAILY WORKER Distributed and Subs Gotten.

Comrades are all taking bundles of the DAILY WORKER and sub-cards when going out and report some successes. Bundles are being mailed to the ward headquarters so that comrades will be certain to take them along in getting signatures.

There are two Sundays left to make final drives for signatures. Sunday night, Jan. 25, every signature obtained must be in the hands of the ward captain or city organization.

The election campaign is also speeding up in other directions. Meetings are being scheduled by the captains of the wards, and in addition, arrangements are being made to cover election meetings and open forum meetings of other organizations so that propaganda to the fullest extent may be put forth.

Will Cover Many Meetings.

An organization called the Chicago public affairs association has arranged for the discussion of a number of municipal problems in Chicago, chiefly of a middle class character. The meetings will be held in public schools. These schools are available for these meetings on first and third Mondays of each month.

Our comrades everywhere are urged to attend these meetings in order to extend the scope and broaden the agenda and get our message and program before the meetings.

There is no doubt that despite the petty bourgeois middle class character of these meetings, working men and women in the neighborhood will be attracted during the campaign to these meetings, and our comrades must therefore reach them with our literature, spoken word and every other way possible. To these so-called open forums, aldermanic candidates are to be invited.

Meetings under the direction of the Workers (Communist) Party are also being arranged by ward captains.

In other columns are listed the schools, location and the wards of the so-called "open forum" meetings scheduled.

Further publicity telling what these "open forums" really are will be dealt with in further issues of the DAILY WORKER.

To Distribute 50,000 Copies of Communist Program.

The municipal program put forward by the Workers (Communist) Party and which the candidates it endorses are supporting, has been summarised in leaflet form. It is expected that 50,000 copies of this leaflet will be distributed in the shops, factories, from house to house and at all other meetings possible.

This leaflet, dealing especially and plainly with the main issues before the workers, will have the effect of bringing the Communist program before tens of thousands of workers and getting them closer to the Workers (Communist) Party.

Every party and Y. W. L. branch should immediately order these leaflets thru their branch or ward captain and make arrangements for systematic distribution.

The municipal election campaign being conducted by the Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, and the aldermanic candidates it endorses, links up all phases of the national campaign and issues being conducted under the direction of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Campaign to Reach Unions.

Efforts are being made to reach the trade unions and other working class organizations on the question of child labor, Sacco-Vanzetti, defense of Ruthenberg and Minor, race discrimination, unemployment and many other burning issues.

Extended Beyond Parliamentary Activity.

Our campaign is not being conducted on purely parliamentary lines, but every other avenue of activity is being utilized. The Communist municipal program is a program which touches the requirements of every working man and woman of Chicago. But, as our program points out, the only final solution of labor's problems is to do away with capitalism; to take over political power into their own hands and then take the necessary measures to insure control of industry, and work to put the Communist program into effect.

Letters are being sent to trade union and other working class organizations to enlist them in the support of the candidates endorsed by the Workers (Communist) Party on the basis of the program set forth.

In subsequent issues of the DAILY WORKER there will appear articles dealing with each phase of the program and the progress of the campaign.

FOES OF CHILD LAW RAISE CRY OF BOLSHEVISM

Know Communists Only Worthy Opponents

(Workers Party Press Service.)

The opponents of the child labor amendment are actively carrying out a concerted campaign designed to defeat it in the various state legislatures. While the complicated machinery of the American capitalist government is grinding, the little children are also being ground into profits by the American capitalists.

The big sum of $50,000 was spent in the state of Massachusetts alone, on a campaign of misrepresentation during the recent elections. One of the favorite arguments of the money barons against the amendment is that it is fostered by the Communists. That this accusation should be levelled against the Communists proves that the capitalist class realize that the Communists are their only redoubtable foes. In Russia, the only country in the world where the Communist Party is the governing party, there is no child labor. The capitalists know this, therefore they try to frighten liberal elements who are sentimentally opposed to child labor by raising the cry of "Bolshevism."

Al Smith's Treachery.

How little the workers can trust to their alleged friends in the capitalist parties was demonstrated by the action of Al Smith, governor of New York, who had the support of the A. F. of L. machine in the last election. His opposition on the question of child labor was so reactionary that it even drew a rebuke from the labor leaders. Smith is a catholic and the Roman church is bitterly opposed to any laws that would prohibit the exploitation of little children. So much for organized religion!

Even such a notorious reactionary as Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, speaking recently in the senate, declared that the moral arguments raised against the amendment by big business was insincere and was only concerned with getting cheap labor.

The appearance of James Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, as foe of the amendment recalls the Mulhall-Emery scandal of 1913.

Rights of Individual!

John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, speaking recently before students of the University of Illinois, denounced the tendency of the federal government to usurp the power of the state government and interferes with the rights of the individual. The notorious reactionary did not express very much consideration for the rights of the individual when a Communist convention was raided in the year 1922 by the stoolpigeons of the department of justice and he is not so very concerned over the action of the Michigan supreme court in confirming the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party, who is sentened to from 3 to 10 years in the penitentiary for merely assembling with his comrades at a convention.

Their Own Government

The wails of the capitalists and their paid hirelings against interferennce with the rights of the individual comes with poor grace from a class which owns the selfsame government and uses it against the workers every day in the year.

There can be no effective stop put to child labor so long as the present robber system exists. It can no more help exploiting children than a flea-bitten dog can help scratching himself.

HIT THE CAPITALISTS HARD, DEVELOP MUSCLE HUNGER, SAYS THE WORKERS' SPORT ALLIANCE

By A. L. FORMAN.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—When you have muscle hunger and you see a road you want to walk it. When you see a hill you want to climb it. When you see a horse, you want to ride it. If you have no muscle hunger, there is something wrong with you. No one is healthy who lacks this muscle hunger. Muscle is the firmest basis of proper physical and intellectual activity.

Have you the muscle hunger? Muscle hunger can be cultivated and in the most sedentary occupation. People engaged in indoor work which requires sitting all day or most of the day; those whose effort is extended more upon mental than physical lines, are the ones most prone to loss of health and impairment of physical and mental vigor.

Take Off Your Hat.

To keep your mental and bodily functions at par, begin and end the day with setting-up exercises. Contract and relax your muscles freely during the day, and occasionally take some full deep breathing when you move briskly. Step lively and on your toes. Every time you come to a deserted street take off your hat and do a little double time to the next corner. Double time means 180 steps a minute.

Just to be alive should be fun and amusement to the healthy man. To be healthy means more than merely to keep out of the sick bed.

How about your vital surplus? Vital surplus is the balance in the savings bank of life. Vital surplus should not only be safeguarded but accumulated as a reserve for middle age. If the vital force is gone, life is gone. Look out! Do not squander your vital force. Build it up! In it lies the secret of personal efficiency and therefore maximum movement efficiency.

Makes Healthy Communists.

How does this most important bank account in your life stand? What are you doing to safeguard it and increase it? Check up on it now! Healthy bodies means healthy minds. Healthy minds means good Communists.

The obect of this little article is to help arouse in you an ambition for good health and interest in that which leads to good health The Workers' Athletic Club is vitally interested in your physical and mental well-being It aims to keep you fit by providing that form of exercise which every human body needs. Get started now! The Workers Athletic Club meets every Sunday, 10 a. m. at 208 E. 12th St., and extends a cordial welcome to all.

The Fakers Get Cleaned

The capitalist labor lieutenants in Minneapolis thought they were going to have an easy job cleaning up on the Communists in the Trades and Labor Assembly. Having first driven the fear of mammon, the faker's god, into the hearts of Robly Cramer and a few other fake progressives, the reactionaries launched a drive calculated to eliminate the radicals from active participation in the official labor movement of the Twin Cities.

Their first move was to expel Comrade Hathaway, district organizer of the Communist Party, from the assembly. His union promptly re-elected him. The fakers refused to seat him.

Elated over their success, the reactionaries decided to oust two other Communist delegates, Dan W. Stevens and William Mauseth. Stevens has been a delegate from the Painters' Union to the assembly for the past twenty years. Mauseth is from the Machinists' Union. The fight against the Communists was directed by Paul W. Smith, A. F. of L. organizer. The charge against them was that they were Communists.

The fakers ran in forty new delegates to the meeting which was to decide the fate of the radicals, but after a three-hour debate the assembly voted in favor of keeping the Communists in the assembly. Despite the fact that the reactionaries combed the city for every yellow bellied lickspittle of reaction available, 70 votes were cast for progress against 69 for reaction. This is a splendid victory and puts the labor movement of Minneapolis again on the progressive map from which it was pushed by the treachery of the fake progressives of the Cramer type.

Stevens and Mauseth made a clean fight on Communist principles. They did not win by camouflaging their opinions. They declared themselves members of the Workers Party. That was the only charge made against them.

This victory should hearten the progressive elements thruout the country and it should be a warning to the fakers that the Communists are not alone willing to fight, but that they also know how to fight.

The Minneapolis victory is another vindication of the Trade Union Educational League policy of fighting on the inside of the unions, of staying with the organized workers instead of allowing themselves to be inveigled into the mire of secession and dual unionism which has proven such a ghastly failure for the revolutionary movement in America.

Communists in Parliament

Radicals who sneer at Communist parties for taking advantage of bourgeois parliaments for the purpose of bringing their propaganda to the masses, should read the story published on the first page of the Chicago Tribune Thursday. It was an Associated Press dispatch with a Rome date line and was entirely composed of excerpts from a speech delivered by a Communist deputy in the Italian parliament.

The speech was a violent and damning attack on the fascist regime and a plea for revolution. The Communist speaker did not confine his remarks to Italy, but took in the whole world. He urged the workers of Germany to tear the Dawes plan to pieces.

The Communist deputy explained that the other opposition groups oppose the fascisti because they are criminals, but the Communists fight against the fascisti because they are exponents of the bourgeoisie and the Communists will try the whole bourgeoisie by revolution.

This challenge to the black shirt dictatorship was heard around the world. It was an inspiration, not alone to the suppressed proletariat of Italy but of the workers everywhere. It was proof that the parliamentary rostrum could be used to sound the clarion call of revolution. It was another blow at capitalism and at the infantile disease of petrified leftism and anarcho-syndicalism, which holds that the workers should keep out of politics and out of parliaments.

Communists hold that the governmental organs of the capitalists cannot be modified to serve the workers even when the workers come into power. They must be destroyed and supplanted by the organs of the proletariat. But in the meantime bourgeois parliaments offer opportunities for propaganda which the revolutionists cannot afford to miss. The widespread publicity given to the speech of the Italian Communist deputy proves the value of parliament as a revolutionary sounding board particularly in times of crisis.

It is reported that Slemp is to be replaced as Silent Cal's secretary because the silence was too [illegible]ch for him. He may be sent to a deaf-mute uni[illegible]ity in order to prepare for re-entry to human [illegible]y.

Ruthenberg in Prison

Comrade Ruthenberg is behind the gray walls of Jackson, Michigan, penitentiary. It is not his first time in a similar situation. But he has never been on the wrong side of the prison bars, except for one crime, that of fighting for his class, the working class.

That is the unforgivable crime in the eyes of the capitalists. Had Ruthenberg been indicted for graft or fraud or some offense which would not threaten the life of this fraudulent capitalist system, he would be looked upon with benevolent sympathy by courts, prosecutors and wardens. They all take liberties with the law in order to get something at the expense of others. They may get caught. But against one whose aim is to do away entirely with the robber system, the benficiaries of capitalism put up a united front.

Ruthenberg is sentenced to a term of imprisonment of from three to ten years. The revolutionary movement needs him on the outside. The workers need his services. The Labor Defense Council is charged with the task of raising funds and directing the legal battle to secure his release. Every worker, every reader of this paper should join in the fight to get Comrade Ruthenberg outside the walls of Jackson prison so that he can again render service to the cause of freeing the workers and the human race from capitalist slavery.

We Vote Against this Raise

The Workers Party stands in the forefront of a militant campaign to oppose the reduction in wages of the working class. "Instead of lower wages—higher wages!" That is the slogan of the Communists in the bitter battle to protect the living standard of the workers from the savage assaults of the bosses.

In this campaign against wage cuts, which are taking the very bread out of the mouths of millions of workers, the life blood of the working class is at stake. And do we hear any support being given this campaign, and aid being given the workers by the alleged "leaders" of the labor organizations? No!

Instead we have the astounding sight of a labor faker, Wm. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, asking a raise, not for the members of his union, but for the bosses! He pleads, probably with tears in his eyes of sympathy for the impoverished railway presidents, for "adequate compensation for the presidents and other high officials of the leading railway companies."

Can perfidy of a labor "leader" and perversion of the function of a labor union go further? With tens of thousands of railway workers unemployed, and the employed workers (in the railway shops, especially) forced to accept any beggarly wage, with no unity among the sixteen rail unions and consequently no chance for a united struggle for more pay for all railway workers, Bill Lee has the audacity to ignore these needs of railway workers and ask for a raise in pay for the bosses!

Only in America would such perfidious betrayal of rank and file interests be permitted by the members of any union. Will the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen stand for it? We would like to hear some protests. We would be better pleased to see some action.

William Montgomery Brown

"I forgive my colleagues. I love them, every one. I am sorry for the church that it saw fit to uphold my conviction of heresy. I love Bishop Leonard most of all. He made me a bishop."

This is ex-Bishop William Montgomery Brown, of the protestant episcopal church talking. The above christly speech was delivered in Cleveland by the aforesaid ex-Bishop Brown after his brothers in christ put the "ex" before the bishop which formerly adorned his cognominal equipment.

If that is the way Brown feels about it, we should have no kick coming. Perhaps the old rebel feels grateful to his foes for scraping the antedeluvian barnacles off his exterior. He gave his brain an enema long ago.

What was Bishop Brown's crime? Were his fellow bishops justified in giving him the gate?

Bishop Brown wrote a little book entitled, "Communism and Christianism," which left the church as full of holes as a Swiss cheese and as smelly as Limburger. His remarks on the immaculate conception would make the ears of a divorce court judge tingle. After he got thru with Jesus, he looked like a human being, in fact very much like Eugene V. Debs, tho it is doubtful if Jesus would stick to the socialist party after it had fouled its nest, as Debs did.

"Banish the gods from the skies and capitalism from the earth," was the motto of Brown's little book. The book was printed by the hundreds of thousands in several languages. It was a regular god-killer. What the bishop left of god intact even a self-respecting atheist could accept without losing his dignity.

In view of this it is not surprising that a collection of fossilized bishops should decide that Brown did not belong with them. He doesn't. A man with his views should feel just about as much at home with his formed associates in the vineyard of superstition, as an ear of sweet corn in a barrel of dung.

William Montgomery Brown has our respect, but not our sympathy. We believe the punishment has added to his manhood. It is further testimony to his sterling character.

Another crime drive is under way in Chicago. Some of the biggest criminals in the city are running it. It should be a success.

N. Y. COMRADES TO HAVE LENIN CORNER, FEB. 1

Tremendous Celebration Is Being Arranged

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The school children of Soviet Russia have established a quaint custom of setting aside of a corner of each school room as "Lenin's Corner."

This "corner" is kept sacred to the memory of the dead leader and many original schemes have been devised by the children of Soviet Russia, by which the "corner" is kept as a fitting tribute to his memory.

Lenin's Corners Thruout the World.

This unique custom has quietly forced its way to the most distant parts of the earth and every corner of the earth wherever there are workers, whether of hand or of brain, may be fitly termed "Lenin's Corner." In every corner of the globe where there are workers groaning under the yoke of capitalist oppression and slavery, Lenin has come to stand for the promise of a new life and a new freedom.

On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 1 at 2 p. m. the corner of 26th street and Madison avenue, upon which stands the historic structure of Madison Square Garden, will be turned by the workers of this city into one gigantic "Lenin's Corner." Toilers from every part of the city will pour in a massive stream to do honor to the dead proletarian leader on the first anniversary of his death. On that day New York's "Lenin Corner" will be dedicated with fitting revolutionary speeches and music. The complete Freiheit chorus of four hundred trained voices has been secured for the occasion. In addition there will be a full symphony orchestra of forty pieces. The speakers for the demonstration will be William Z. Foster, Moissaye J. Olgin, Ben Gitlow, Jack Stachel and C. E. Ruthenberg, national secretary of the Workers party. There has been an unprecedented demand for tickets, which are now on sale at the following places: 208 East 12th street, N. Y., the office of the DAILY WORKER and all Workers Party branches.

VIJTAUER, EDITOR OF OBRANA, IS LATEST DEPORTATION VICTIM

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The only method that the United States appears to know of, in order to crush the revolutionary movement, is to imprison or deport the leaders of the revolutionary movement. That, at least, is the method that it is employing at the present time, before proceeding to more stringent measures.

The Latest Victim.

The latest victim of this systematic campaign is Emanuel Vijtauer, editor of the Obrana, the Czechoslovakian labor paper. Comrade Vijtauer is an old revolutionist, with a record of activity in his native country. He came to the United States in 1923 and forthwith entered the revolutionary movement in his country— as all revolutionists do. He wrote and he spoke—and because he dared to defend the proletarian revolution in Soviet Russia, and the Soviet government; and because he declared that the workers of this country, too, would be obliged to put an end to capitalism, emulating the example of the Russian workers and peasants, he was arrested and now is on Ellis Island, being held for deportation.

His arrest took place only a few weeks after the arrest of Comrade John Lassen, editor of Uj Elore, the Hungarian Communist daily. Comrade Lassen is also an old revolutionist, with a record in the seat o. black reaction, Horthy's Hungary. Comrade Lassen was arrested for writing a poem—and the American government is afraid even of poets.

Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party, has been sentenced to 3 to 10 years in the state penitentiary of Michigan. Comrade Robert Minor is the next one to appear before the capitalist court of Michigan. Then will follow the other 30 comrades who were arrested in connection with the Communist convention held at Bridgeman, Mich., in August, 1922.

Hundreds of foreign-born workers are threatened with deportation for militant work in the American labor movement.

Comrades Must Be Protected.

These comrades must be protected. We must make it impossible for the government to carry out its intentions. We must raise funds for their defense. This can be most effectively done by YOUR FULL SUPPORT of the joint bazaar, which has been arranged by the Labor Defense Council and the International Workers' Aid, and will take place at the Lyceum, 86th St and Third Ave., New York City, from Feb. 11 to 14. Reserve the dates and bring all friends. Contributions should be sent to the Labor Defense Council New York Division, 208 E. 12th St., N. Y. City.

Every worker and sympathizer must do his part. The need is very great.

CHICAGO FINNISH BRANCH, WORKERS PARTY, RALLIES TO THE DEFENSE OF PRISONERS OF THE CLASS WAR

Just as soon as the sad news of Comrade Ruthenberg's sentence (from three to ten years in prison, and a fine of $5,000) were printed in the DAILY WORKER, the Finnish comrades in Chicago started a campaign to raise funds for the defense.

On Saturday, Jan. 10, they held an entertainment at the Imperial Hall, and thru other means of collecting they will be able to donate $100 to the defense. The drastic persecutions by the blood-thirsty capitalists and their lackeys will not destroy the revolutionary morale of the proletariat.

Your Attention While District 3 Reports

There are 786 members in District 3. These 768 members have to date contributed $548.25 to the insurance fund. This is a little better average than other districts have shown.

Of the branches that have sold Insurance Policies, there are quite a number that have sent in only small sums of money. These branches should connect the members who have not yet contributed with Insurance Policies at once.

Comrades that belong to the above branches should raise the question of insuring the DAILY WORKER at the next branch meeting. By the way, don't only raise the question, but demand that the comrades present buy policies.

There are 72 branches in District 3. Of these 33 have seen the wisdom of quick action and some of them have made very gratifying remittances. But how about the 39 branches that seem to have a hard time getting started?

Every active comrade in the district is called upon to co-operate with the district organizer, A. Jakira, in making this district show up big in this campaign.

Lenin As I Saw Him -

By Schachno Epstein

Editor's Note.—During this period of the first anniversary of the death of Nikola Lenin, the DAILY WORKER will publish material keeping alive in the minds of the workers the memory of our great Communist leader. Starting today, and continuing thru next week, until it is finished, the DAILY WORKER will publish Schachno Epstein's very informing and inspiring article, "Lenin As I Saw Him." Comrade Epstein is the editor of the Jewish Communist daily, the Freiheit.

I.

IN the Jewish social democratic "Bund," Lenin had very few adherents. All the "Bundists" knew that he was a strong personality with an iron will. But they hated him; they simply feared him, considering him a demagogue, a savage fanaticist and sectarian.

The cause of this hatred is understood. Lenin did not think very much of the "Bund." He did not deny the great significance of the "Bund" for the development of Russian social democracy; he also gave it due credit for its organizational ability. But he could not digest its contradictory dualism, its desire to be friendly to the Bolsheviks and mensheviks at the same time. On the other hand, Lenin foresaw danger for the class struggle in the separatist tendencies of the "Bund" and in its nationalistic aspirations.

In this respect Lenin was in perfect agreement with Plechanov, who had exactly the same attitude to the "Bund." Lenin was, however, more practical than Plechanov in that he used to utilize the inconsistent condition of the "Bund" in the factional conflict for his personal bend. Plechanov, naturally, [illegible] to do the same thing but not as ably as Lenin.

It is a known fact that Lenin, just as well as Plechanov, was a bitter opponent of the "Bund's" national program, of the so-called "national cultural autonomy." He has not criticised its program as sharply as Plechanov, however.

Why?

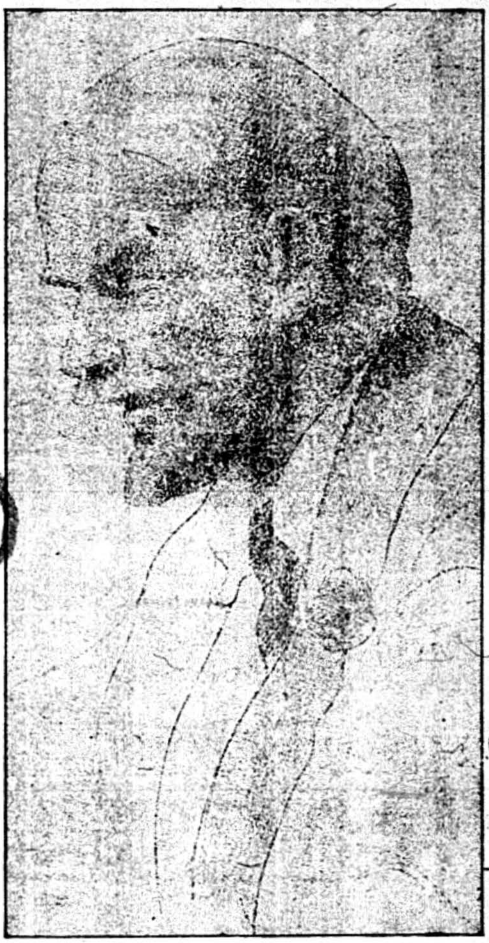
Lenin, the practical man, who has always borne in mind one thing: to win over for himself a majority in the Russian social democracy, has, with his mild criticism, always left an open door to win over to his camp the "Bund."

At the London congress of the Russian social democratic workers' party, Lenin was even ready to yield to the "Bund's" "national cultural autonomy," so as to win its votes.

Then, at the time of the London congress, the "Bund" ceased to play the role of the advanced guards of the Russian social democracy. It was soon after the first Russian revolution of 1905 that the Russian working class, the workers of the great Russian centers, of Petrograd and Moscow, came to the front; they pushed forward the revolution and its final success depended very little upon the Jewish proletariat. From that time on, the "Bund," as an independent and separate party, was really going down hill. It has even lost its former weighty significance in the factional conflicts of the social democracy generally.

If I am not mistaken, Lenin made his last attempt to win over the "Bund" at the London congress. The "gulf" between Bolshevism and the "Bund" has grown wider and wider. The relationship between the "Bund" and menshevism on the contrary grew closer and closer. Plechanov, who had first called the Bundists "inconsequential Zionists," became friendlier to them; he has forgiven the Bund a good many of the former "sins" because he found in it a supporter of and a friend to menshevism; he did not even mind the "national cultural autonomy," which was principally not more than a petit bourgeois demand, as it is now proven, at the present reality, when "democracy" is everywhere victorious.

NIKOLAI LENIN



Comrades are felling that at the London congress Lenin has tried, in private conversations, to argue with the Bundists thus: Well, I am ready to grant you "cultural autonomy." I wish to be frank with you; I need your votes, but do you not understand that in a bourgeois society, even in the most democratic, there can be no national freedom, even in the cultural sense?

This frankness Plenchanov did not possess; Plechanov was cunning, trickish. In the attitude of both Lenin and Plechanov toward the national program of the Bund one could clearly differentiate their views on the development of the revolution. Lenin had no faith whatsoever in the bourgeois democracy even then when Plechanov was strongly in favor of such a democracy. Now the question arises: Why was Plechanov so bitterly opposed to the Bund's program of "national cultural autonomy"? This is, then, one of his inconsistencies in the conception of revolutionary developments.

Recently I have had the occasion to get at the logical explanation of it; and Plechanov's opposition to the "national cultural autonomy" he expressed not the Marxian principle, but his Russian patriotism, his aspiration to assimilate all national culture into one great Russian culture. Lenin was never a patriot in this sense; he was never for compulsory assimilation, and when he did oppose the national program of the Bund, it was from a purely Marxian estimate of the revolutionary development.

The comrades of the Bund did not seem to like Lenin's frankness at the London congress. "A demogogue is always a demogogue!" they kept on saying, and the majority of them never imagined Lenin but as one who is capable, in the interests of his faction, of his fixed idea, to even betray his own father. This is probably the reason why many leaders of the Bund have so energetically in 1917 circulated the rumor that Lenin is a German spy; they have explained it psychologically: it is easily believable of a "maniac" of the Lenin type, he will justify any means that lead to the attainment of his goal. . .

II.

IN a comparatively short time after the London congress, I was destined to be a political emigrant. Those comrades in whose minds those times are still fresh, can easily imagine with what thirst I threw myself on the various discussions and writings of the leaders of the Russian socialist movement outside of Russia.

I had then the occasion to hear Plechanov speak at Geneva. The impression of his readings and lectures was colossal; his satire, his brilliancy of speech, his thoro knowledge, his ability to polemise enchanted me.

At Plechanov's lectures the audience did not feel at home. The people did not breathe freely. Even the appearance of Plechanov gave the impression that he looks down to his audience, that he is fully conscious of his importance, that he is far above those around him. He was always dressed like an aristocrat in a black frock, high stiff collar and a beautiful necktie hanging down his snow white shirt; a gold ring on his finger, a monocle in his hand, his hair properly combed—all this was very often in disharmony with the poorly clad emigrants who made up his audience.

Another thing one could notice. When one dared to express his opinion in a debate, he did it with such fright as one who is undergoing an examination. This was the case not only with the ordinary rank and file but even with some of the prominent leaders of the movement.

I remember, once in Geneva, the now famous leader of the Russian Communists, Alexandra Kolontai was delivering a lecture on the woman question. The lecture was brilliant in content and form. In the middle of the lecture Plechanov appeared. Alexandra Kolontai seeing him, got confused and could not finish her speech; the brilliancy was lost, the enthusiasm gone so did he frighten her.

Usually, these things were ascribed to the great respect people had for Plechanov's great personality, to the fact that everybody felt small in his presence, fearing not to prove ignorant in his eyes.

The strange impression Plechanov's open forum made on me became stranger still when I had the occasion to be at his house having a personal talk with him.

The entire atmosphere in the house smelled with "bourgeois culture." The comfort which prevailed there was out of place for one who imagined Plechanov the revolutionist, who should also be different in his private life, not the ordinary bourgeois life—it was the comfort of a simple, bourgeois self-sufficiency, full of aristocratic snobbish "bon-tone." Such was Plechanov's behavior. One almost heard him say: Beware, dear fellow, that you stand before Plechanov himself, realize, then, the honor it gives you and be weak-kneed. . .

My knees did really tremble. And when I came out of the house my proletariat consciousness revolted. Where, then, is the example that the socialist leader and thinker must set for others by his own way of living?

I was then too naive to understand that one may be a great socialist thinker, a revolutionist in theory, and a quite ordinary citizen with all bour-

Bolshevism or Trotskyism?

THE REVISION OF LENINISM UNDER THE FLAG OF LENIN.

The last attack of Comrade Trotzky (the "Lessons of October") is nothing else than a fairly open attempt to revise—or even directly to liquidate—the foundation of Leninism. It will require only a short time and this will be plain to the whole of our party and to the whole International. The "novelty" in this attempt consists in the fact that, out of "strategical" considerations, it is attemped to carry out this revision in the name of Lenin.

We experienced something similar at the beginning of the campaign of Bernstein and his followers, when they began the "revision" of the foundation of Marxism. The ideas of Marx were already so generally recognized in the international labor movement, that even their revision, at least at the beginning, had to be undertaken in the name of Marx. A quarter of a century was necessary before the revisionists could finally throw aside their mask and openly pronounce that, in the field of theory, they had entirely broken away from Marx. This took place in a most open manner, in literature, only in the year 1924 in the recently published collection of articles devoted to the 70th birthday of Kautsky.

The ideas of Leninism at present predominate to such an extent in our country—that the "critics" of Leninism consider it necessary to have recourse to similar methods. They undertake the revision of Leninism "in the name of Lenin," citing Lenin, emphasizing their fidelity to the principles of Leninism. This "strategy" however does not help. It is already seen through by the Leninist party. It only needs a few weeks and all the sparrows on the house-tops will be twittering over the collapse of this remarkable strategy. Comrade Trotzky has overlooked one trifle: that our party is so Leninist and so mature that it is capable of distinguishing Leninism from Trotzkyism.

The attack of Comrade Trotzky is an attack with inadequate means. Nobody will succeed in liquidating the foundations of Leninism, or carrying out even a partial revision of the principles of Leninism, or even succeed in getting Trotzkyism recognized as a "justifiable tendency" within Leninism. Nobody will succeed in convincing the party that we now need some sort of synthesis of Leninism and Trotskyism. Trotskyism is as fit to be a constituent part of Leninism as a spoonful of tar can be a constituent part of a vat of honey.

What is Leninism? Leninism is the Marxism of the epoch of the imperialist wars in the world revolution, which began in a country where the peasantry preponderate. Lenin was from head to foot a proletarian revolutionary. But he knew at the same time that he had to work in a country in which the peasantry predominated, and in which the proletariat therefore can only be victorious when it adopts a correct attitude towards the peasantry. After Lenin already in the revolution of 1905 had issued the slogan of "the democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and of the peasantry," he did not cease for a single moment to be a proletarian revolutionary; he made no concessions to burgeois democracy (the mensheviki, among them comrade Trotzky, accused Comrade Lenin at that time that he, who called himself a Marxist, was an ideologist of bourgeois democracy), but he was the only one who, not with mere words, but by deeds, prepared the way for the socialist revolution in a situation when bourgeois democracy was still a force and was capable of shattering czarist despotism.

Lenin felt himself at that time to be the recognized leader of the proletarian revolution—and this he was in fact. He knew and believed that the Bolshevik party, that is, the genuine advance-guard of the proletariat, would help the working class as far as possible on the road to the realization of its class aims, that is to proceed on the road to the victory of the proletarian revolution. He knew that he and his party, in every country, would do everything possible to extract from this situation the maximum for the final aim of the proletarian revolution. He so understood the connection between the bourgeois-democratic and the proletarian-socialist revolution, that the first precedes the second, that the second solves in passing the questions of the first, that the second confirms the work of the first.

And as Lenin knew this, he maneuvered with the mastership of a genius in three revolutions, always at the head of the working class, always concretising his tactics so that every suitable historical situation is used to its fullest limits in the interests of his class. Lenin was, on Oct. 24, 1917, not the same man that he became on Oct. 26, 1917. "Who laughs last, laughs the longest" wrote Lenin some days before the October revolt in an article on the party program.

Therefore, Lenin defended at that time among other things the necessity of retaining the minimum program. But on the morrow, after the victory of the October insurrection, the ingenious commander of the working class was not the same as he was one day before this victory. My class has become stronger, the enemies of my class have become weaker, the forces of the workers' revolution have increased, hence, therefore, more pressure, more boldly forwards! That is the real Lenin! He knows that it is a very difficult way along which one has to lead millions of workers, behind whom, if we wish to be victorious, there must follow the millions and millions of peasants of our country.

From the great slogan! "democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and of the peasantry" (1905-1907) via the "dictatorship of the proletariat and the poorest peasants" (1917) to the actual "dictatorship of the proletariat" which will be realized on the basis of "alliance with the peasantry"— that is the road of Leninism.

From menshevism of the Axelrod type (1903-1905) via the "permanent" (1905-1907) variation of menshevism, to the complete abandonment of the revolution and its substitution by the menshevik free coalition (1909-1914), to the policy of vacillations (block with Tseidse and fight against the Zimmerwald left during the war (1914-1917)—that is the road of old Trotzkyism.

If one considers the literary history of bolshevism, one can say that it is esentially contained in the following works of Lenin: From "The Friends of the People," along with "Development of Capitalism" to "What is to be Done?" along "Two Kinds of Tactics" to the "State and Revolution" with "The Renegade Kautsky." These are the most important literary sign posts of Leninism.

Let us consider what these sign posts indicate. "The Friends of the People" and "The Development of Capitalism" constitute a penetrating analysis of the theory of Marxism and the most concrete, profound study of economics and of the social structure of that country in which Bolshevism commences to come into action. "What is to be Done" along with "Two Kinds of Tactics" is the incomparable criticism of social democratic optimism, the unsurpassed elucidation of the role of the workers party in the revolution together with the laying down of the tactics of the proletariat in a peasant country on the eve of the bourgeois-democratic revolution which one must endeavor so to carry thru that it begins as soon as possible to develop into the socialist revolution. The "State and Revolution" and the "Renegade Kautsky" are the application of Leninism to the world arena, are along with the book "Imperialism, the Latest Stage of Capitalism" the most profound analysis of the latest imperialism and the laying down of the tactics of the already beginning socialist revolution, which grows out from the first i. e. the bourgeois-democratic revolution.

Compare all this with Trotzkyism!

If Lenin is the classical type of the proletarian revolutionary, Trotzky is the "classical" type of the intellectual revolutionary. The latter has of course certain strong features, he succeeded sometimes in combining with the proletarian mass, but that which forms the nature of his political activity is the intellectual revolutionarism.

We give below a compressed political description of the life of Trotzkyism which possesses the authority of coming from the pen of Lenin:

"He, Trotzky, was in the year 1903 a menshevik, left this party in 1904, returned to the mensheviki in 1905 and paraded round with ultra-revolutionary phrases. In 1906 he again abandoned this party; at the end of 1906 he again defended the election alliance with the cadets and in the spring of 1907 he stated at the London conference that the difference between him and Rosa Luxemburg rather constituted a difference of individual shades of opinion than a difference of political tendency. Today Trotzky borrows some ideas from the one fraction and tomorrow from the other and therefore considers himself as a man standing above both fractions." (Lenin's Collected Works, Volume XI, Part II, Page 308-309.)

"Never in a single serious question of Marxism has Trotzky had a firm opinion, he always squeezes himself in a division between this or that differences of opinion and always runs from one side to the other. At present he is in the company of the 'Bund' and of the liquidators."

Thus wrote Lenin in an article in the revue "Enlightenment," published in 1914.

"However well meant the intentions of Martow and Trotzky may be subjectively they support by their tolerance Russian imperialism."

Thus wrote Lenin in the "Sozialdemokrat" No. 1, October, 1916.

Let us compare the literary sign posts of bolshevism with those indicating the road of development of Trotzkyism. These are the following books of Comrade Trotzky: "Our Political Tasks" (1903), "Our Revolution" (1905-1906), then his collaboration to the liquidatory journal "Nasha Sarja" (Our Dawn), then a bright moment—the book over Kautsky (1919)—which was followed by the "New Course" and "The Lessons of October" (1923-1924). The retrograde development of Comrade Trotzky finds particular sharp expression in the two last named works.

What was the book: "Our political tasks"? This book which appeared with a dedication of the menshevist patriarch P. A. Axelrod, was the most vulgar menshevist book which the history of menshevist literature has ever known. In this book Comrade Trotzky came to the conclusion of a liberal labor policy.

And what was the book: "Our Revolution," the most left of the books of Trotzky in the first epoch. In this book (see also his book "1905") there was laid down the notorious theory of the "permanent revolution" which Comrade Trotzky is now attempting to impose upon bolshevism. This "theory" was regarded by Comrade Lenin and all the Bolsheviki as a variety of menshevism. Not everybody will remeber that in this "left" book in which Comrade Trotzky to a certain extent defended the "workers'" revolution against the bolshevik idea of a democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry, Trotzky wrote:

"But how far can the socialist policy of the working class go under the economic conditions of Russia? One may say one thing with certainty: it will much rather encounter political hindrances than be supported by the technical backwardness of the country. Without direct state support of the European proletariat the working class of Russia will not be able to maintain power and transform their temporary rule into a long enduring socialist dictatorship. One cannot doubt this for a moment." (Trotzky: Our Revolution, 1904. Russian edition, Page 277-288.)

What is the meaning of the state support of the European proletariat? In order to possess the possibility of affording state support to the Russian revolution, the European proletariat would first have to capture power in Europe. In the year 1905 and in general up to the war 1914-18 there could be no talk of this. But Trotzky preached the "permanent" revolution in the year 1905.

What is to be inferred from this? Only this that Trotzky in the year 1905 either did not seriously believe in any permanent revolution or that he preached the permanent revolution in 1905 only under the condition that the European proletariat afforded us "state support," which meant that Trotzky "postponed" the workers revolution in Russia until the victory of the proletarian revolution in Europe. In the latter case Trotzky appears as the representative of the most stereotyped social democratic standpoint: let "them" first make the revolution and then "we" will "immediately" make the workers' revolution.

Trotzky wrote in those times a great deal as to a victorious Russian revolution being only possible as a part of a victorious internatinal revolution, for western European capital supported czarism with loans, etc. There was a grain of truth in this and here Trotzky only repeated that which the Bolsheviki said. But Trotzky as usual conceived this connection of the Russian revolution with the international revolution too mechanically.

Comrade Trotzky did not grasp the concrete way of the revolution in our country. He does not even yet grasp the actual importance of the peasantry in our revolution. If any proof were necessary for this, Trotzky has provided this in his last work: "The Lessons of October." We quote the following:

"It was precisely the unripeness of the revolution under the thoroughly unique conditions created by the war which delivered the leadership or at least the appearance of leadership over the petty bourgeois revolutionaries which consisted in the fact that they defended the historical claim of the bourgeoisie to power. This however does not mean that the revolution could only follow that road which it followed from February to October, 1917. This last road resulted not merely from the class relations but from those temporary conditions created by the war.

"As a result of the war the peasantry appeared in the organized and armed form of the army comprising many millions. Before the proletariat could organize itself under its own flag in order to draw the masses of the village behind it, the petty bourgeois revolutionaries found a natural support in the peasant army exasperated by the war. With the weight of this army of millions from which everything immediately depended the petty bourgeois revolutionaries exercised pressure upn the proletariat and at first drew it after them. That the course of the revolution could have been different with the same class bases is best proved by the events which preceded the war." (Lessons of October, Page XVIII-XIX.)

The road from February till October, 1917, resulted, as you can see, not only from the class relations, but also from those temporary (!) conditions created by the war. What is the meaning of this brain wave? It assumes that the war did not arise from the class relations, that is to say it was a mere chance event. Now, the Russo-Japanese war, out of which grew 1905, the general rehearsal for 1917—was it also a chance? Was that not also created by the temporary conditions? What profoundity of thought!

If there had been no imperialist war—and Leninism teaches that the imperialist war is the inevitable outcome of imperialism, as the latest stage of capitalism, therefore of the course of the class war; if Russia had not been a peasant country and therefore its vast army had not been a peasant army of a dozen millions; if

The Results and Lessons of the Party Discussion

A STATEMENT BY THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

OUR party has just passed thru its first great discussion, and from this discussion some unmistakable conclusions have been established.

The period of the discussion marks a turning point in the history of our party. Despite the intensity of the discussion, and the sharp tones with which it was carried on at times, the effects on the party have been beneficial. It was a symptom, not of decay, but of growth. These comrades who feared its effects and who became alarmed at its intensity, have missed the point. The discussion was a furnace from which the party is emerging strengthened and tempered, and better equipped for its historic task. A party which could stand such a severe discussion and grow stronger by it proves that it is maturing and developing into a genuine Communist Party.

Never in the history of our party was a minority given such full and free opportunity to put its case before the membership. There was absolutely no limit or restriction upon their rights. It was the aim of the C. E. C. from the beginning to widen and deepen the discussion and to draw the entire party membership into it. In this we were successful. Never before was the party so deeply stirred in the discussion of its tasks.

"Bolsheviks do not fight over trifles." So said Kamenev at a meeting of the Moscow party organization during the controversy with the opposition in the Russian Communist Party last year. These words of Kamenev apply very well to the discussion in our party. It should be clear now to all that the controversy which has shaken the party to its foundations, has not been over trifles.

In the discussion, the party had to consider two questions of fundamental importance. First, the question of the main line of party policy, and, second, the question of leadership. The prevailing policy of the party is indissolubly bound up with the proletarian leading group of the C. E. C. Consequently, the attempt of the minority to reverse our fundamental policy went hand in hand with the attempt to undermine and discredit the C. E. C. To both questions, the party has given a decisive answer. That answer is, against the policy and leadership of the minority and for the policy and leadership of the C. E. C.

The final results of the discussion could already be foreseen in the first series of membership meetings held on Sunday, December 28. The failure of the minority to carry such important party centers as New York, Chicago, and Minneapolis, showed that their case was hopeless. Comrade Foster was quite correct when he said that the results of the first series of meetings spelled the defeat of the minority, and the repudiation of their policy. This analysis, however, was disputed by the minority. They placed all their hopes in the second series of meetings and made glowing predictions in regard to them. But these predictions did not materialize.

Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo and Pittsburgh all gave majorities for the C. E. C. This was followed by decisive and overwhelming victories in such important party organizations as Los Angeles, San Francisco, Baltimore, Milwaukee, the mining sections of southern Illinois, the industrial towns adjacent to New York, and a number of other centers, until the question of the minority gaining a majority in the party passed out of the range of possibilities.

But the membership meetings, decisive as they were, do not fully indicate the strength of the C. E. C. To understand the full significance of its victory, one must go deeper than the surface indications. When we take into consideration the fact that the controversy revolved around the question of the farmer-labor party, it is of great importance to inquire what was the attitude of those party organizations and those party members who had been most involved in the work of our party in the farmer-labor movement. The results of the membership meetings show it was precisely those party organizations in the centers of the farmer-labor movement and those party comrades who had been most active in our labor party campaign in the unions during the past two years which made up the vanguard of the C. E. C. support. The labor party centers, practically without exception, supported the C. E. C.

Most illuminating of all were the results of the membership meetings in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia. The minority passes over in silence the result in Chicago, the proletarian center of the party; but for their decisive defeat in New York they have brought forward a number of "explanations," each one contradicting the other. The events in the New York district during the recent months are of profound significance to the party. The minority wants to attribute their crushing defeat there to an "alliance" of the C. E. C. with the Lore group. But in this, as in many other matters, the minority is substituting wishes for accomplished facts.

These "explanations" of the minority do not in any way change the fact that during the discussion, and thanks to the discussion, a new group came to the fore in the New York district, standing on the platform of the C. E. C. and that this group took over the leadership of the fight for the C. E. C. policy, and proved itself in the struggle to be stronger than either the Lore group or the minority. The Lore group could live and grow on the stupid tactics of the minority, but in conflict with the group of the C. E. C., which, in accord with the decision of the C. I., puts the question on a political and ideological basis, it will have no more success than the minority.

One of the most fruitful results of the party discussion has been the emergence and crystallization of the C. E. C. group in the New York district. The fight between the minority and the Lore group for the control of the New York district no longer occupies the center of the stage. The group of the C. E. C. has proved itself strong enough to conduct a struggle on political grounds against both groups simultaneously, and to defeat them both. The leadership of the New York district belongs neither to the minority nor to the Lore group, but to the C. E. C.

The weakness of the minority was nowhere so clearly demonstrated as in Boston. Here the party apparatus was completely in the control of the minority. Comrade Ballam has for months been using his office of district organizer as an instrument in the faction fight, even going so far as to compromise the party in the C. P. P. A. conference, in order to make an "issue" against the C. E. C. The district executive committee, under his leadership has been occupying itself almost exclusively with the passing of factional motions which were used as a basis for the propaganda of the minority. Comrade Ballam used his well-known abilities as "caucus organizer" to the limit in preparation for the Boston membership meeting. But all these "preparations" came to nothing. The Boston membership meeting was a crushing blow to the hopes of the minority and to the factionalism of Comrade Ballam.

In Philadelphia, Comrade Jakira, who exceeded all bounds in his factional conduct of the office of district organizer, made an even poorer showing. The rank and file revolt in the Boston and Philadelphia districts should be a warning to Comrades Ballam and Jakira that the party members expect party discipline and party responsibility to be binding also for district organizers.

Pittsburgh and Buffalo, which had been thoroly propagandized by the minority and which they relied on for big majorities, upset all calculations by their decisive support of the C. E. C.

Only in two cities, Cleveland and Detroit, did the membership meetings give any comfort to the minority, but these were "fluke" victories and will be short-lived. With more thoro consideration of the issues involved, the party organizations in Cleveland and Detroit are already beginning to swing into line with the rest of the party in support of the C. E. C. The campaign of the C. E. C. to re-educate the party and to purge it of farmer-laborism will have the same success in these centers as elsewhere. More thoro consideration by the party of the fundamental principles involved in the discussion will enable the C. E. C. to go to the next party convention with the support of at least ninety per cent of the party membership.

The membership meetings not only registered a complete defeat for the farmer-labor policy of the minority; their fight for leadership shared the same fate in an even more decisive fashion. The real aim of the minority, which they have pursued in a conscious and organized manner, for the past year, was to overthrow the C. E. C. To this end a nation-wide caucus organization has been maintained. The minority has confronted the C. E. C. as an organized opposition ever since the last convention and has resisted all our attempts to come to an agreement with them and to dissolve the factional organization. In violation of all principles of Communist organization, the smallest details of C. E. C. proceedings were transmitted, by means of the minority caucus, down to the branches and the party was literally flooded with anonymous "documents," rumors, "issues," etc. A number of federation secretaries and editors were incorporated into this caucus under the leadership of C. E. C. members of the minority, and it was attempted by this means to mobilize the support of the federation members for the minority.

The leaders of the minority could not by any means reconcile themselves to a situation where the party leadership was in the hands of "half-educated workers" and "syndicalists," as they characterized the proletarian elements in the party, especially those who emphasized the importance of work in trade unions. They were not willing to recognize the validity of our mandate from the last party convention. They seemed to take it for granted that we would not be able to carry out our responsibility. They expected us to turn the party over to them in desperation, since they were the self-acknowledged "Marxian trunk" of the party. Our efforts to formulate policies received no sympathy from them. And that we should actually presume to write theses, etc., was considered almost a personal insult.

The party during the past year was confronted with the most difficult problems since its founding, which tested and tried the leadership of the party as never before. The wild exaggerations and overestimations of events, which had been committed by the C. E. C. last year, reacted against the party this year with full force. We were compelled to readjust ourselves a number of times and to adapt the party to an entirely new situation. Our party was sick with the fever of "high politics" and it was no easy task to lead it back to basic Communist work. The decision of the Communist International against the "third party alliance," the collapse of the farmer-labor movement, the presidential candidacy of LaFollette, the necessity that we put up our own party candidates—all these events required a series of quick changes in policy and it was a real achievement to carry them thru without any serious disturbances or crises in the party. Coupled with these external difficulties, we constantly had the problem of the organized opposition fighting for control of the party, striving to distort every action of the C. E. C. to seize upon and magnify every little mistake, real or imaginary, and use it for factional purposes.

One of the greatest weaknesses of our young party in the past has been the lack of stable and authoritative leadership. There never yet has been, up to this year, a central executive committee which has been able to withstand an organized opposition. Continuity of leadership was a thing unknown.

"Overthrowing the C. E. C." has hitherto been any easy "pastime." There is a section of our party which still carries with it the traditions of "permanent opposition," which grew out of the long fight in the socialist party and which was even a part of the philosophy of the syndicalist and anarchist movements. This hostility and prejudice against all leaders offered favorable soil in which to start an opposition and was fully exploited by the minority. Such comrades who have not yet assimilated the Leninist conception of proletarian leadership, who draw a line between the leaders and the party membership, and who do not understand their indissoluble connection, all rallied for the "raid" on the C. E. C.

But with all these factors in their favor, with a year-long caucus organization, and with a considerable amount of fundamental opposition in the party ranks to our main line of policy, the attack of the minority on the C. E. C. met with a decisive defeat.

This has an outstanding significance for the party. For the first time in the history of the party an organized fight against the C. E. C. has failed. The C. E. C. has proved itself fully able to lead the party thru the most difficult year of its existence, to execute a number of necessary changes in tactics, to adapt the party to the constantly changing political situation, to cope with an organized opposition, and at the same time to keep a firm hold on the party and to strengthen itself in the confidence of its most active and dynamic elements. These facts are the best augury that the party ranks will be unified and consolidated, and that factionalism will soon be liquidated.

In the course of the discussion, the opportunist and revisionist character of the farmer-labor policy of the minority was established beyond all question by the minority themselves; and the reactions of their rank and file supporters merely gave it the final confirmation. From the slogan raised in Comrade Pepper's pamphlet, "For a labor party" of "A labor party or the capitalist dictatorship," it was only one step further to Comrade Lovestone's book "The Government—Strikebreaker" and his pamphlet "The LaFollette Illusion" in which the role of the Communist Party is completely eliminated from consideration. And from these deviations the proposals of many rank and file supporters of the minority, expressed at all the membership meetings, "to bore from within" the LaFollette movement and create a left wing there, followed naturally and logically.

The C. E. C. does not follow a policy of reprisal and has no desire to prolong or accentuate the bitterness of the controversy. Nevertheless, we feel duty-bound to call the attention of the party to the superficial and cynical attitude toward the party, manifested in the concluding article by Comrade Lovestone. In this article, which from beginning to end is filled with misrepresentations and perversions of facts, with flippant sneers and jibes, Comrade Lovestone even goes so far as to speak derisively of the party apparatus as the "state power." We know of nothing more anti-Bolshevik and anti-proletarian than such a contemptuous attitude toward the party apparatus, and we believe that all that is serious, proletarian and revolutionary in the ranks of the minority will repudiate it. The proletarian movement is neither a game nor an adventure. The party apparatus is not something separate from the party. The party will find ways and means of making plain its point of view on these questions.

The central feature of the "opposition" in the Russian Communist Party was its attack on the party apparatus, made in much the same spirit as that of Comrade Lovestone, and in this, as in all else, it showed its fundamental departure from Lenin's teachings. In this connection our whole party can profitably study the words of Comrade Varski, of the Polish Communist Party, who now joins the cen-

WHEN LENIN DIED - - -

By ISRAEL AMTER.

"HE is dead." Thus I was greeted on the morning of the 21st of January, 1924, by a German comrade who had just purchased a special bulletin of the Pravda. "He is dead." everybody knew what he meant. It went like a stroke of lightning thru everybody. "He is dead." The streets of Moscow were also dead.

Lenin had died and the whole population was cast into mourning. Sunday usually a day of life in the streets of Moscow, witnessed the streets entirely deserted. Every proletarian in the city was robbed of the greatest thing that he prized—and he remained indoors to ponder on his loss. The streets were deserted—not even the Nepmen were to be seen. All Moscow was bent down—the leader of the revolution, the builder of the Soviet government, the founder of the Russian Communist Party and of the Communist International—the greatest statesman that the world has known in many a century—had passed away.

Blow Came Suddenly.

For many weeks, bulletins had been issued on the state of Lenin's health. Sometimes they were optimistic, sometimes they were gloomy. Only a few weeks before the fatal blow struck down the great man, photographs were published in the weeklies, which showed that Lenin had gone thru fearful suffering—but yet he was with us. Lenin had been away from public life, had had no contact with the workers and peasants of his country for such a long time that no great hopes were entertained of his returning to active life. But the blow same so suddenly—it came with such violence that it stunned every worker and peasant.

The next day, they bore Lenin's body from the little town of Gorki, not far from Moscow to the capital. The funeral train, decked in black and red, was met at the station by delegations from all the factories and Soviet and Communist institutions. Slowly to the strains of the funeral hymn, solemnizing the death of the heroes of the 1905 revolution, they carried his body thru the streets of Moscow, followed by tens of thousands of workers. The streets were lined with masses of workers and between these lines they took the remains of Lenin to the Temple of Labor.

Peasants Travel to Moscow.

Here he lay in state so that the millions of workers and peasants might go to Moscow to see his face once more—the face of the comrade and man who had fired them to the revolution, the man who had led them in the revolution—the man whom they recognized as their COMRADE and leader.

It is impossible for us in America to grasp what this means to the Russian worker and peasant. These workers and peasants went thru the worst suffering that a working and peasant class ever experienced. They learned to suffer more thru the world war, and the counter-revolution. They sacrificed millions of their sons and fathers for the czar, that his brutal regime might be preserved. Then with one fell blow they drove him and his co-parasites out of the world. But that did not yet give them power. Kerensky, the traitor, had to be driven into the desert; all the obstructive counter-revolutionary forces had to be dissipated. Then and then only, under the masterful leadership of that giant mind, Lenin, was it possible for the workers and peasants to become the masters of Russia.

Their Friend and Comrade.

Every country has its leaders. The revolutionary workers and peasants of every country have the men they look to for leadership. But Lenin was not merely a leader. He was the inspirer of the revolution, he was the heart of the revolution, he was the dynamic force of the revolution. And in his death, the Russian workers and peasants felt the heart of the country had stopped.

OUR COMRADE LENIN

"He is mourned not only by the millions of Russian workers, but no less sincerely and deeply by the peasants of Albania and the workers of Mexico, the proletariat of New York, Chicago and the working men of Paris, and of Pekin, everywhere where there are workers and toilers. The Negroes of America, the coolies of China, hundreds of thousands of people who knew of Lenin only by hearsay, who did not read, perhaps, any of his books, but who knew only these five letters—L—E—N—I—N—understood that Lenin meant the new humanity, the new banner, the New Epoch, which opened its bright vista before them."—Gregory Zinoviev, President of the Communist International.

But no. When, in their hundreds of thousands, they streamed into the Temple of Labor; when in the bitterest cold that Moscow has experienced in many years they stood in the streets for hours, in their long lines, waiting to pass thru the Labor Temple, they were waiting to see the man whom they mourned as their nearest friend and comrade—the man whose thoughts were only of his people. They waited—then passed thru the Temple, looked upon the quiet, peaceful face of the great man, passed out into the night, grief cutting at their hearts—and took their place again in the long line, to pass thru the hall once more.

And in the Temple were intoned the strains of the Funeral Hymn, while the great man lay on his bier surrounded by flowers. At his side stood incessantly, Krupskaja, his wife and companion, his friend and comrade, tearless, staunch, grieving as all Soviet Russia grieved. Beside her, Marie, Lenin's sister, tearless and staunch, grieving with all Soviet Russia. Five days and five nights, always at his side, tearless, with breaking heart, ever looking upon his placid face—the face of a man who knows that he has created well, who has done all wthin his power to accomplish the task he set himself. For five days and nights, the line of workers and peasants streamed thru the hail, endlessly.

And for five days and five nights, there was but one thought in the minds of all the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia—the great master was gone. The peasants knew they had lost their best friend. "Ilyitch is gone." How could Soviet Russia go on without Ilyitch? How could the great questions that still confronted Soviet Russia be settled without his guiding hand? How could the great work that had been begun be finished, if Ilyitch did not lead?

Leaves Army of Leaders.

The work was to go on. Ilyitch had created not only the Soviet government, but also that great steel army of men and women who know what leadership is, who led in the revolution, who were always in the forefront where danger lurked, who formulated all the policies that Soviet Russia has given to the world—who taught the world a new concept—the concept of Communist thought and leadership in action: the Russian Communist Party. The Russian Communist Party, born out of the mind of Lenin, and trained in the discipline and strategy that he laid down, took up the task that Lenin left behind.

Knowing that the leader was gone, the Russian Communist Party mobilized the whole mass of the workers and peasants to tell them of the thoughts that had guided the life of Comrade Lenin. All over Soviet Russia during these five days and five nights, there were held meetings of the workers and peasants. In every town and village, the workers and peasants came together to hear the story of the great man.

Altho grief bit at their hearts, altho tears trickled down their cheeks when the Funeral Hymn was played, the voice of the speaker was not the voice of sorrow. On the contrary, with the leader gone, the duties of those who remained behind were so much the greater. "The struggle goes on. We must be men following the path that Lenin laid out. The master is gone, but we, his disciples, must take up the work where he left it. We who fought the revolution and achieved the victory by the side of Comrade Lenin, must go on with the work."

The tears dried. The eyes of every worker grew brighter. The women and children, to whom Lenin was as a father, leant forward drinking in every word of the speaker. "If our leader has gone, then we must COLLECTIVELY finish the work."

That was the idea—collectively we must finish what he had left unfinished. Collectively, orphaned as we are, we must continue along the long path until all difficulties are removed and our Communist goal has been reached.

And when the meeting ended—and the International was sung with the fire that only revolutionists can impart to it—one knew that out of these millions of breasts come the Communist will and determination that only a man like Lenin could have implanted.

For Five Days and Nights.

For five days and five nights—in the factories, in the clubs, in the university halls, in the great halls of the cities, in the villages, in the Soviets—Soviet Russia was one vast meeting place filled with the workers and peasants who knew Lenin so well.

For five days and five nights—few thought of work. And from all corners of the country came the workers and peasants, sent by their factories and village Soviets to see the great man as he lay on the bier, surrounded by flowers, resting with his hands folded before him, with a gentle smile on his face—a smile that indicated that he was content with what Soviet Russia had attained—Soviet Russia of his inmost feelings and thoughts.

For five days and five nights—the Funeral March sounded in the Temple of Labor, the workers and comrades stood guard, and soldiers of the Red Army kept watch over Ilyitch in death.

For five days and five nights—out in the bitter cold of the Moscow winter stood the workers and peasants, waiting their turn to see him once more—before saying good-bye . . .

Was ever a man more loved by the masses? Lenin, giant mind of the Russian revolution, leader of the World Revolution — hated by the world bourgeoisie—loved by the world of the earth.

Life in Soviet Russia

THE "HAMMER AND SICKLE"

I will endeavor to give a picture of the true state of affairs in Russia by describing the development of the work on which I am myself engaged.

This is a factory for agricultural machinery which previous to the October revolution was in the hands of foreigners. A man named Helferich was the founder of the firm. After the October revolution the factory was nationalized, but the civil and guerilla warfare ruined the factory. The material and machinery bought to extend the works were sold at the outbreak of the revolution by the former shareholders. Until the end of 1922, disorder and chaos reigned supreme in the factory, which was then merely using up the old stores of material.

All attempts to set the factory going in the right and proper manner failed. Towards the end of 1922 the factory was linked up with an agricultural machinery trust and was given the name, "Hammer and Sickle." The party made a turner from the Urals manager of the factory; this comrade had filled very responsible trade union post since the revolution. His task was by no means a light one. Part of the administrative and technical personnel were anti-Soviet, and these people obstructed the work; they sabotaged every serious attempt to improve the work in the factory. But our comrade took up his work in good earnest. He removed the head engineer (technical director of the works).

But his successor was not any better, so he met with the same fate. At one time there was a technical and administrative staff of 148 people, and in this apparatus great changes also took place. This cleansing process went on until the end of July, 1923. About 40 per cent of the old staff were dismissed and partly replaced by workers from the factory.

The results of this work soon became apparent.

Production in 1923 rose from 10,056 gold rubles' worth in January, 1923, to 135,654 gold rubles' worth in December, 1923, and in September, 1924, we produced 310,019 rubles' worth—thirty times the old level. Between January, 1924, and September, 1924, the production of each worker rose from 11 rubles per month to 240 rubles per month, and wages rose from 14.9 rubles per month to 58.3 rubles.

These figures show us the progress made by our factory this year. The total production increased from month to month. The last month—September—(the business year begins in October)—showed record figures. Our workers and staff have thereby shown that they do honor to the name of our factory—"Hammer and Sickle." We look hopefully into the future. Our production program for 1924-25 is fixed at 4½ million rubles, and even this does not satisfy the management. In pre-war times the maximum figure reached by the factory was three million two hundred thousand. (Prices remain unchanged.)

The management is in strong and capable hands. It consists of the comrade mentioned already, his assistant, also a former worker, a locksmith, and the head engineer, who acts as technical director. All the workers are interested in the work of the factory, and they are convinced that in the current year peace time production will be exceeded. This means a great deal, when you remember that the machinery has had considerable wear and tear, and that the forty-six hour week is in operation here. This is a picture of our works, just an example of what is going on thruout the Union of Soviet Republics.—S. Lid, Charkov, November 29, 1924.

"Chaos" An Old Excuse For Landing Marines—But They Still Use It

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Jan. 16.—An international landing party comprising 350 British, American, French, Italian and Japanese marines came ashore today and policed the foreign settlement. The Japanese Admiral Nouia commanded the party. He reported that the situation was "well in hand within the settlement, but chaos existed outside."

A GLIMPSE OF NIKOLAI LENIN

IN MEMORIAM.

You lived for the workers, in life you were one
Whose love knew no stint, whom no fears could appal,
And now you have died for the cause that you loved.
We greet you who gave to the people your all.
—Soviet Funeral Hymn.

SHE had known him and observed him closely at many pre-revolution assemblies of the most eminent idealists of the new society. And out of the wealth of her human experience, garnered thru her uncanny poetic divination, she characterized for me the person and soul of him:

"He took the floor only seldom, and never spoke long. In details, whether of organization or execution, he consistently yielded to the others. His intellect centered itself exclusively on discerning and tracing the threads of the indisputable universal principles involved in the basic problems discussed. But once having discovered the entire unbroken course of the thread, his pedagogic lucidity of utterance and amazing resources of historic fact, employed in a relentless, unwavering offensive, unfailingly played havoc with the great and greater brilliancy of wit and polemics of his adversaries. Tho others swayed and appeared to dominate the assembled individuals, Lenin conclusively determined the policies which the assembled mass eventually adopted."

HUNDREDS of representatives of workers' parties of more than a score of lands were in session amidst the overgorgeous splendor of the former imperial hall at the Kremlin, devising methods of promoting workers' rule thruout the world. For two days fervent, fanatical passion had vied with tempered, seasoned reasoning in the presentation of solutions for the problems at issue. For two long days the assembled delegates had with ever tenser impatience been looking forward to participation by Lenin, their undisputed international guide, to lead them thru the labyrinths; but he had been unable to suspend the incessant practical labor in which he was eternally steeped. And hardly a soul in the assembly had noticed his unobtrusive entrance, until he had already been seated below the front of the platform for several minutes, engrossed in a mass of newspapers.

Suddenly, as by some mass intuition, they realized that he was present, and spontaneously they vented themselves in an indescribably passionate ovation, that shook the vast assembly, and thrilled the massive walls, continuing and augmenting minute after minute, and seeming to vibrate with a consuming desire to make itself heard far out and beyond the walls of the assembly hall, beyond the walls of the Kremlin, even beyond the frontiers of Russia, and to din itself into the ears of the workers of all lands, that the workers of the world might realize that Lenin, their leader, was with them, with his living, inspiring heart and soul and body!

He alone remained unmoved, more wrapped than ever in the papers before him. All at once he arose, and standing beside his chair, waved the deafening din to silence. As unconcerned as were it not to him that the transcending tribute had been tendered, yet with an intense earnestness that engraved itself deep into the consciousness of every individual in the assembled multitude, he spoke to them in words so incisively characteristic of his nature and the driving force of his life: "Our task is the liberation of the workers of the world and not the idolization of any one man!"

* * * *

As we stood in the lobby of one of the Commissariats in Moscow, there entered a human being as weird as even the motley melting-pot of Moscow might only yield few. Obviously a Mongolian, he was cruelly crippled, lacking a left lower arm and a left foot, supporting himself on a single crutch, his face frightfully scarred, only some filthy rags enveloping his body. He was unable to speak more than a few Russian words, but his distorted countenance assumed what was obviously meant to be interpreted as an appealing smile as he recognizably ejaculated: "Lenin! Lenin!" and handed us a dirty sheet of paper, signed and stamped, that conveyed to us the message he himself could not impart:

He was a Southern Siberian farm laborer. Upon the disruption of the czarist army, he had left the western front, and made his way back to his native village.' But when the Koltchak counter-revolutionary forces proceeded to invade European Russia from the east, he had enlisted in the Red Guard ranks, and his appearance demonstrated eloquently, and heart-breakingly, the price he had paid for his revolutionary zeal. When counter-revolution had been finally suppressed, he had again stumbled back to his home, only to find it completely demolished in the strife. Thereupon, evidently with a stolid, unshakeable faith born of the great simplicity of his nature, he had hobbled all the way across the vast expanse of Russia, from his Siberian village to Moscow, in the supreme trust that his "tovarish"—Comrade Lenin, the providence of all the oppressed, would tender him the comfort and succor he so direly needed. . . .

We guided him to the Kremlin gates, and persuaded even the "unspeakable" Cheka guard to admit him to the presence of his Comrade Lenin.

Dear Comrade, farewell! you have gone to your rest.
Well earned by the part that you played in the fight.

LENIN BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE

By KARL REEVE

LENIN'S original contribution to the principles and tactics of the proletarian revolution quickened the course of world revolution. Lenin left the permanent stamp of his ideas upon both the capitalist class and the working class of America and of the entire world. The workers of the world have cause to rejoice at the stupendous scientific writings which clarified and made additions to Marxist thought and revolutionary tactics; at the boundless energy which Lenin poured out till the very last breath of his life to hasten the world revolution of the workers. Lenin's enemies, the bourgeoisie of the world, had cause to hate the man who guided Soviet Russia as the beacon light for the world's workers.

Feared by Bourgeoisie.

Tho the exploiters and their prostitutes hated Lenin, their fanatical ravings against him are a tribute to his power, a sign of their fear of Lenin as the capable and formidable leader of the "historically rising class."

It was an honor to Lenin that John Spargo, the most obvious mental prostitute, the basest traitor that ever sprang from the working class, wrote of Lenin as "coldly cynical, crassly materialistic, utterly unscrupulous." Spargo typified the parasites that grovel at the feet of the bourgeoisie in order to pick up the gold coins which are flung in their faces.

American Workers Mourned.

The workers of America felt the deep personal loss of their comrade and leader, no less than the millions of workers and peasants thruout the width and breadth of Soviet Russia. Lenin is gone, but Leninism is immortal.

On February 14, last year, fifteen thousand people packed the Lenin memorial meeting in Madison Square Garden. An opera house was filled to overflow, and thousands were turned away from both meetings. These scenes were repeated in every city of the world. Huge demonstrations in Berlin, Paris, London and Chicago showed that Lenin had reached the masses with the message of Communism. "Lenin is dead—long live Leninism," became the slogan of the world proletariat.

Faith in the Masses.

"Nobody had such faith in the creative genius of the working class mass, that is to say the toiling masses of all countries besides his own, as Lenin," Comrade Zinoviev tells us. "Nobody could make his heart heart beat in unison with those of the workers, whether they lived in Moscow or Berne, as did Lenin. Lenin never tried to accommodate himself to the masses, he never brought his aims down to the level of mass prejudices. Closely related to them by blood ties and affection, he saw his purpose in raising the masses to a higher level of intelligence in respect of those great aims, the herald and prophet of which he was."

Lenin stripped the bourgeoisie of the world of their complacent self-confidence. He struck fear into their hearts and made them realize that their oppression of the workers is soon to end.

Lenin Forced German Revolt.

"It was a little upstart named Lenin that defeated Germany," said General von Hoffman, who imposed the Brest-Litovsk treaty on Soviet Russia. "Germany did not play with Bolshevism. Bolshevism played with Germany. Immediately after conquering the Bolsheviks we were conquered by them." Under Lenin's guidance the Soviets triumphed over the German imperialists, forced the "republican" revolution on Germany, and advanced the cause of the proletarian dictatorship both in Germany and Russia by making a scrap of paper out of the Brest-Litovsk treaty with its tyrant's terms.

American Bourgeoisie Retreats.

In America, too, the capitalists hate the name Lenin. They, too, have retreated from the invincible onslaught of his proletarian army. Hughes spat upon Soviet Russia, but Soviet Russia is stronger and more powerful than ever before, and the American bankers have been forced to thrust Hughes into the discard.

A convention of 1,500 college professors met in Chicago to discuss means of perfecting bourgeois control of American education. They spent an entire afternoon wrangling over the merits of the "bad effects" of the Third Communist International founded by Lenin. But there was no disagreement over the fact that the Communist International has vitally and permanently affected world history. And when Peter Sorokin, formerly private secretary of Kerensky, who sold himself into the services of American imperialism for a professorship of economics at Wisconsin university, told the usual cheap lies about Soviet Russia and the Third International, he was contradicted by Elmer Daivs, a Yale professor, who is young enough at the game to be fairly honest. Davis said that the Third International was trying to propagate a form of state where the people own the industries, and that the Russian revolution would probably be known as the outstanding event of the twentieth century.

Contributions to Marxism.

Lenin introduced five important points into revolutionary Marxism, we learn from Comrade Zinoviev: The idea of combining the workers' revolutions with the peasant wars; the idea of uniting the proletarian civil war against the bourgeoisie with the movement for national liberation of the oppressed nations; the theory of the Soviet state; his appraisal of imperialism as the ultimate phase of moribund capitalism; and his theory and practice of the proletarian dictatorship.

Knew Foreign Countries.

Lenin knew intimately the history of the decline of capitalism in all important nations. One of Lenin's books on America, "The Development of Capitalism in American Agriculture," shows Lenin's remarkable grasp of the course of events in America. The book also demonstrates Lenin's theory that the speed of the establishment of the Communist state is dependent on the success of the workers in attaching the farmers to their cause.

At four o'clock every afternoon a crowd of several hundreds of workers and peasants gather outside Lenin's tomb along the walls of the Kremlin, on the Red Square of Moscow. From all nooks and corners of the vast Soviet Republics the plain people of Russia come pouring into Moscow. After being given tickets of admission across the street from the mausoleum, the crowd files in and around the dead leader as soon as the door of the tomb is thrown open at four o'clock.

These people are not all Communists. They come from thousands of miles around because they recognize that Lenin had faith in the masses of which they are a part. They know that democratic-pacifist France and imperialistic England have been forced to recognize their government because of Lenin's work in guiding the Soviet revolution. The people of Russia—the simple mouzjhiks and semi-proletarians of the towns and villages—know that Lenin gave them the land, peace and bread, and put them to work to build their own state. They know that Lenin starved and died for the cause of the proletarian revolution, and because of that they are willing to do the same.

And the Lenin memorial meetings to be held by our party thruout America will furnish another testimonial that the workers of America and the whole world are awakening to the consciousness that Lenin lived and died for their class—to the fact that the capitalist class is doomed to be overthrown by the triumph of Marxism and Leninism.

Results and Lessons of the Party Discussion

tral committee of the R. C. P. in the struggle against Trotskyism.

In a recent article in the Inprecorr, Comrade Varski says:

"We now know quite well that without the Bolshevist organizatory conceptions regarding the role of the leading circles in the party (central committee, district committee, local committee, or of the so-called party apparatus in general) and in the revolution, there can be no revolution of the proletariat whatever, and no dictatorship of the proletariat."

The leading group of the C. E. C. is a group of the proletarian class struggle, that grew out of the struggle, and whose whole aim and conception is to build and develop the party, according to the teachings of Lenin, in the process of struggle.

Nevertheless, during the discussion, the minority was constantly reproaching us with the charge that we had "done nothing" during the past year, that there were no new "grand maneuvers" undertaken, that there was no "action." If one is familiar with the conception of the minority, such an attitude is understandable. Their conception of politics is "high politics." It is noisy spectacular undertakings. It is bluff and exaggeration, and bombast. The day-by-day work and struggle which builds the party firmly and solidly and drives its roots into the labor movement, appears to them to be mere "sectarianism." They do not understand the admonition of Lenin to build the party by "quiet, patient, persistent, not noisy, but deep work." The real and solid achievements of the past year have escaped their attention. They had no answer whatever to our statement on "A year of Progress," in which these solid achievements were set forth in detail. They did not answer because they could not answer in any way, except with stereotyped sneers at the Communist "trade unionists" and other proletarian elements in the party, who have borne the brunt of this work.

The policy which guided all our work for the past year was wholly the policy of the majority of the C. E. C. The minority have not made a single important contribution to the solution of our problems and the development of our work. The minority have had such little connection with this basic work, that they are hardly aware of what has been done. They do not know about the "quiet, patient, persistent, not noisy, but deep work" which has been done during the past year by the most active and dynamic elements of the party under the leadership of the C. E. C. It is apparently a matter of small moment to theorists of "politics on a grand scale," that the beginnings of a hard and firm left wing movement have been crystallized in a number of important unions, under the leadership of the Communists; that we have made at least a beginning with systematic party educational work; that our party, for the first time, has made an election campaign under its own banner, and that we are learning how to develop concrete struggles and agitation on the basis of the united front.

The appearance of a revolutionary left wing—altho a small and weak one—in such a reactionary union as the gigantic Brotherhood of Carpenters, for example, and the strong movement we are leading in the United Mine Workers, represent nothing to the minority; and the tremendous energy, sacrifice and courage embodied in these achievements of our party, brings no commendation from them. For them it is merely another example of "syndicalism." It is time to say frankly to the party and to the Communist International that we are losing all patience with this superficial and condescending attitude towards our work in the trade unions and towards the comrades who do this work.

The year behind us has been a year of basic work and struggle and steady, if slow, achievement, accomplished in spite of all difficulties. Our party work was less spectacular than the year before, but all the more substantial; and the work for the coming year must proceed along the same line. Without in the least giving way to sectarianism, without making one single concession to routine conceptions of party work, the party must learn how to build and strengthen itself by struggle and in the process of struggle, according to the teachings of Lenin, "brick by brick." The C. E. C. will exert all its energy to lead the party along this path. The C. I. will help us in this determination and strengthen and equip us for this task.

For two whole months the party discussion has absorbed almost the entire attention of the party. We must now turn our energies toward the constructive external task of broadening its scope and drawing ever wider masses of workers into united front actions. The whole party, down to its last member, must rally to the support of our comrades in the Michigan case. The party must become a dynamo of activity over this burning question and must rouse the labor movement into action. Our party must come to the front in the fight against wage reductions. It must put life and power into the child labor campaign. It must take the lead in the fight over unemployment. It must prepare to launch a wide united front movement to defend the foreign born workers against new persecutions. The party must go deeper and ever deeper into the trade unions, and draw them into the political struggle. Every struggle of the working class must find the Workers Party in the vanguard, for it is only by active participation in the struggle that our party can live and grow.

The giant tasks confronting the party make it mandatory that we call forth all our constructive energies for the speedy liquidation of factionalism. The C. E. C. has already taken the first step to this end by appointing a special committee to work out special and detailed methods of facilitating it. The C. E. C. calls upon all the party comrades to assist in the endeavor. The basis for comradely co-operation of all party members must be established without delay. The ground for unity and co-operation must be laid so securely that the party, as one man, will be prepared to accept the final decisions of the Communist International on the problems of our party and to carry them out.

American capitalism, the most powerful and relentless in the world, is planning new and more terrible oppressions for the American workers and poor farmers and for the people of the colonies and smaller countries of Central and South America which it has brought within its sphere. History has set for our party the collossal task of leading the workers and exploited peoples into the struggle which can only end in the destruction of this imperialist monster and the liberation of the masses who suffer beneath its rule. We must go forward with full consciousness of our great responsibility, and with the firm and unshakable conviction that only a united, disciplined Bolshevik party will be equal to this task. We are on the way to becoming such a party. Let us hasten the process by all means. Let us put the stamp of our party on every struggle of the workers and show to the workers, in actual practice, that it is the only party that fights for and with the working class. In the struggle and by the struggle, our party will grow and become hardened, and will develop into a mass Communist Party capable of leading the exploited masses to the final victory.

"Sticks and Stones, a Study of American Literature and Civilization." Lefis Mumford. Boni and Liveright. $2.50.

PROBABLY the best history of the Americal labor movement is Herman Schlutter's "History of the Brewing Industry and the Brewery Workers' Union of North America." That history is a fine piece of work because it traces the working of certain factors and tendencies on a particular industry and organization. "Sticks and Stones" is an excellent piece of work for the same reason. Every one of the factors which conditioned the development of the designing and making of buildings in this country were at work on all the other phases of American life and culture. Tracing those forces as they affected architecture serves as a fine example of their workings in every other field.

Mumford sets as the ideal of society and civilization the establishing of conditions that will make possible the living of "the good life." The early New England villages came nearer to doing that than any other social organization since that time. Religion was the expression of the "good life." The villages of early New England were built around the church. When a community threatened to become too big to permit the members to attend their religious and civil duties the old settlement threw off a new shoot.

The buildings of this period were bare, almost barren, but they were honest in execution and workmanship. In these communities farming was the basis of economic life when along the sea coast and in some trading posts the economic life shifted to shipping. trade and the building of vessels for sale in foreign ports the life of the people began to change. The center of "civilization" shifted from the villages to the towns which grew into cities. Up to this time the designer of a house or building was also the man who did the actual work. He was still a craftsman who had fine pride in doing a good job well. From then on the worker was not in any way an artist expressing himself but was also the man who did the actual work. From then on the worker was not in any way an artist expressing himself but was merely a servant carrying out orders given by a superior.

After the revolution America was seized with a new fad, a return to the classic styles of Greece and Rome. The politicians and orators and those gents who took themselves to be statesmen needed a background.

The opening of the 19th century marked the introduction of machinery and the new industrialism. Buildings of all sorts; life itself became crude beyond belief. That is the homes and lives of the workers and the poor were crude and ugly. The homes of the new industrial barons and public buildings, since the industrialists controlled public affairs, "became capricious and absurd, and returned to a past which had never existed." This was the period of "romanticism." Then the machine idea made inroads into romanticism. Central heating, water closets, the oil lamp were introduced. Into the planning of cities the gridiron idea made its way as a labor saving device. This device was a great boon to the land speculator whose hold has never been loosened from the cities of America.

After the close of the civil war America was settling down. Classes were beginning to assume a stability. The rich were safe, the poor were losing the hope of riches to be attained thru a stroke of luck or the exercise of brains.

The period from 1890 to 1910 saw the shift from industrial to financial capital and the growth of imperialism.

After the imperial age came the attempt to machinize everything, cities schools, ideas and buildings.

The machine hounds were in their glory, or rather are, for the process of turning out civilization from the machine mould continues.

What's the remedy? Mumford talks sense in outlining it. Remember that in speaking of buildings alone Mumford's mind includes the whole of American civilization in the following suggested remedy. "Before the whole mass of contemporary building will be ready to receive the imprint of the architect and before the handicrafts re-enter the modern building there will have been a pretty thoro reorientation in our economic life. Whilst buildings are erected to increase site values, whilst houses are produced in blocks to be sold to the first wretch who must put a roof over his family's head, it is useless to dwell upon the ministrations of art . . ."

The method of achieving that remedy suggested is: "Once the necessary conversion in faith and morals has taken place the other things will come easily." This merely proves with another example that the liberal can be depended on to make a good job of an indictment but he falls flat on the question of how to do the job of changing the conditions he indites.

this peasant army had not been rendered desperate by the imperialist war which the bourgeoisie had to conduct; if the weight of more than hundred millions of peasants had not excercised pressure upon the whole course of the social-political life of the country—then the development of the revolution would have proceeded according to Trotzky and the astonished humanity would have experienced the apotheosis of Trotzkyism.

It apparently has never occured to our author that "if ifs and ands were pots and pans" if there had not been an imperialist war with all its inevitable consequences, there would probably never had been the revolution of 1917 and no such relatively easy victory. Our author is also obviously unaware that precisely the development of the revolution from February to October, 1917, confirmed "in passing" the already obvious truth that the whole Trotzkyism with its theory of its "permanent" revolution was nothing else than a cleverly thought-out intellectual schema which was cut according to the requirements of menshevism.

Let us refer once more to Comrade Lenin:

"Hence their (the mensheviki) monstrous, idiotic, renegade idea that the distatorship of the proletariat and of the peasantry contradicts every course of economic development. With us there appears at every crisis of our epoch (1905-1909) a general democratic movement of the mushik and to ignore this would be a profound error which in fact would lead to menshevism." Thus wrote Lenin in December, 1909.

But Comrade Trotsky even in the year 1924, does not understand that the role of the mushik in such a crisis as 1917, was not by chance not removed from the course of the class struggle.

It is obvious that it has also never occurred to our author that the course of the great revolution between February and October, 1917, wonderfully confirmed Leninism, among other things in that section in which Lenin with the theoretical ruthlessness peculiar to him, deals with the Trotskyist variety of menshevism.

A collaborator of Comrade Trotsky and the "editor" of his book 1917, Comrade Lenzner, asserts in all seriousness that already in the articles written by Trotsky at the beginning of March, 1917, in America in the paper "Novy Mir" ("New World") he anticipated the attitude to the questions taken by Comrade Lenin in his famous "Letters from Abroad." Comrade Trotsky did not even know what the question was whilst Comrade Lenin in his truly famous "Letters from Abroad" already submitted to the Russian working class the scheme of the real October worked out in almost all details.

But this is only half the trouble. The present trouble is that Comrade Trotsky can say nothing better than if there had been no imperialist war and if the peasantry had not predominated in our country, then Trotskyism would have been right as opposed to Leninism.

Is any further proof necessary that Comrade Trotsky understood the Bolshevist attitude to the question of the peasantry as little as he understands it now?

The "Lessons of October" have clearly shown one thing; that even now in the eighth year of the proletarian revolution Comrade Trotsky has not grasped the true nature of Leninism and that he now as previously is revolving round in the same circle—in the question of the peasantry—in the question which is the chief source of the false conclusions of Comrade Trotsky beginning from his error of Brest to his error in the question of the trade unions in 1921, ending with his errors at the present time.

In the "Lessons of October" there are almost as many erroneous assertions as there are assertions at all. Therefore, the Communist Youth had little difficulty in detecting that Comrade Trotsky confounded Lenin with Hilferding (in the question of the constituent assembly and the so-called combined type of the constituent assembly and the Soviets*). Hence it comes that Comrade Sokolnikov demonstrated to Comrade Trotsky that the "left" errors of Comrade Bogdatjev were ascribed by the esteemed author of the "Lessons of October" to Comrade Lenin (the history of the demonstration of April, 1917). Hence it comes that Comrade Kuusinen can easily prove by means of documents that Comrade Trotsky in the question of the German revolution) said the exact contrary in January, 1924, to what he now says in the "Lessons of October."

Hence it comes that such important episodes of the revolution as the question of the July demonstration, as the fight for Kronstadt and even the question of the July days are described by Comrade Trotsky after the manner of Suchanov and the paper "Denj" (The "Day" bourgeois) and not as they actually occurred. Hence it comes that the question of the tactics of the Bolsheviki with regard to the preliminary parliament and the democratic conference are dealt with in an equally incorrect and biased manner.

These "small" errors have been sufficiently refuted by authoritative witnesses of the events. Perhaps we shall be able on another occasion to give an exact description of some of the very important episodes of the revolution.

*For the rest we learn from the second part of "1917" that as late as October 29, 1917, Comrade Trotsky himself on behalf of the council of people's commissionars wrote in an appeal: "The only thing which can save the country is the constitutional assembly which consists of representatives of the working and exploited classes of the people." It is permitted to ask in which respect this is better than the "combined type"? ("1917" second part p. 133).

One example suffices: "We have seen there (in Germany) in the second half of the past year a classical demonstration of the fact that a most extraordinary favorable revolutionary situation of world historical importance can be missed" thus wrote Comrade Trotsky in September, 1924, in the "Lessons of October."

"If the party (the C. P. of Germany) had declared the revolt in October (last year) as the Berlin comrades have proposed, it would now been lying with a broken neck." We read these words in the draft thesis of Comrades Radeck and Trotsky in January, 1924.

In such a question one cannot have two opinions, one in January, 1924, and another in September, 1924. If however, one has two opinions regarding such a question, one must not so attack the E. C. C. I. as Comrade Trotsky has done.

Cuba Persecutes Labor Leaders.

To the DAILY WORKER:—The Cuban government at the request of sugar and tobacco trust' magnates gave the gate to 30 Spanish labor leaders in the strike that is paralyzing the life of the islands. The excuse given is always the same—a pretext, a subterfuge, but in reality is the hand of the same capitalistic monster that shot Filipinos in Hawaii, Negroes in Hayti, peons in Vera Cruz, or any noble soul crying for justice, for liberty or simply a decent living. But it forgets that in every dissatisfied worker there is a potential leader.

The czar didn't know that when he put to death the brother of Lenin: Porfirio Diaz forgot that when he sent his rurales against Madero and Zapata; England ignores that and jails Indian and Egyptian workers. When the writer was eating cold sweet potatoes at 5 o'clock in the morning under the dirty guano of a Cuban hut in a tobacco plantation at Pinar del Rio, the sugar and tobacco dukes, who then were burying everything from the defeated Spaniards, were victims of the same mental ataxia.

They never dreamed that in the famished body of that unknown, sockless, tired worker was a soul full of enthusiasm and of resentment. They never knew that in that whipped beast, working 14 hours a day for $10 a month were all the potentialities of a rebel.

Before he was a faithful catholic, seeing only visions of angels in empiric regions. But carrying 125-pound bags of fertilizer on his shoulders at the age of 19, just out of a catholic college, and sleeping all crumpled up in a dirty hammock, inhaling all night the dust in a tobacco storehouse he soon began to see as red as those the Cuban government sent back home as "agitators."

The productivity of the Cuban soil has increased hundred fold in the 20 years, according to official statistics, but the Cuban workers are just as bad off today as they were 25 years ago, while the absent landlords are in Paris, among the hectic crowds of Montmartre, in Monte Carlo or in Florida.

These aristocrats, these plutocrats, never see, or care, how miserably live the producers of the wealth they so enjoy. But the worker knows how the masters enjoy themselves in their palatial homes and first class hotels, while they and their families are continually facing the horrible specter of hunger and disease.

Wants Information.

To the DAILY WORKER: — —You have in the Dec. 26 issue of the DAILY WORKER an article dated Vienna, Austria, concerning one Stephan Raditch, an alleged Communist leader of Croatia.

Now it happens that Mr. Raditch was not in the Communist Party of Jugo-Slavia at all, but of course he called himself a leader of the independent Croation republican party.

In 1922, the Jugo-Slavs called for a parliamentary conference. When Raditch saw that the Communists were coming into power, he went on a speaking tour thru the cities and villages of Jugo-Slavia urging the masses to withdraw their support for the Communist Party.

I wish to ask, if I may, the source of your information contained in the article.—N. M. Rasovich, Muskegon, Mich.

Stephan Raditch went to Russia about four months ago. While there he joined the Peasants' International. On returning to Jugo-Slavia he immediately started propaganda for adherence to that organization by the Croatian Peasant Party with the result that a large part split away from the old leadership and joined the Peasants' International. Raditch is now the leader of that group, which has been working with the Communists on a united front. For further information we advise Comrade Rasovich to get in touch with the Jugo-Slav Federation secretary at 1113 W Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.—Ed. Note.

To the DAILY WORKER;—Colonel Roscoe Conklin Simmons, "red" baiter and commander of the corporal's guard of good nigger, handkerchief-headed, self-styled race leaders, cries like a new born babe in the Defender Dec. 27, 1924.

The colonel tells how he is abused, stoned in evil words, denounced, slandered by envy, et. Poor thing. Mr. Simmons says that he has more friends among southern white people than any living Negro. Here is an example of an ass loudly braying.

No one in the world envies the colonel. Every sane, sensible, intelligent Negro and many whites pity him. Simmons is so devoid of manhood that if a southern cracker kicked him he would grin and thank the cracker.

Simmons is so crooked that he can't lay in bed straight at night. For a few blood dollars, Simmons would lead a ku klux klan tar and feather party to the home of any Negro who shows any sign of manhood.

Roscoe Conklin Simmons, the yellow libertine, is like a faded harlot, shorn of her beauty and attractiveness, and who no longer appeals to men. The colonel is no longer able to hoodwink the Negro masses with his bunk, and he will soon be dropped from the capitalist payroll.

Tough days these for faded flowers

GORDON W. OWENS.

To the DAILY WORKER:—I want to protest against the article in the "Views of Our Readers" column of the DAILY WORKER by Doty, Bowman & Co.

Besides slandering the white workers, we are informed by this company that white workers do not suffer from discrimination, police interference and mob violence—it is only the Negroes who suffer.

As a workingman and ex-wobbly, I know this statement to be a falsehood out of the whole cloth. These fellows never heard of Frank Little, Joe Hill and scores of other victims of the class struggle. They never heard of Centralia and numerous other places where white workers were tortured and lynched by business men and thugs. The white workers are called stupid and ignorant, for good measure, by these race patriots; if they would read the DAILY WORKER they could find out that violence is practiced against union men every day all over the country—not alone Negroes.

Finally, it is demanded the DAILY WORKER must "constantly contain more editorials and Negro propaganda." I protest against race propaganda, articles filled with lies and prejudice being injected into the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

A Correction:

To the DAILY WORKER: I have just received a copy of an article that has been sent to the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Watt from Washington, D. C. I wish to make a correction:

He quotes me as follows: "We need action more than we need study." This ought to be changed to the following: We must get the comrades in the party to study, but we must understand that not all comrades can be thoro Marxian students. What we need is action in the party. We need workeres who understand the fundamentals of the movement and we must not permit the party to become a study class. We must not drive active members from the party by hurling Marxian questions at them, but rather by trying to teach them.

I imagined that with Lenin things are in some instances still worse. Firstly, had even those, who hated him, to admit, that in interpretations of Marxism and in general knowledge, Lenin was not inferior to Plechanov. All, without exception, have thought them both the greatest exponents of Russian Marxism, the great figures in the international workers' movement. It was known that Lenin and Plechanov were discussed in one breath everywhere, that they were ranked on the same footing with such personalities as August Bebel and Jaures. So Lenin is probably assuming airs and vainly proud of himself. Secondly, the opinion was prevalent that Lenin is in general a despot, a "fist," one whom nobody dared to contradict so he surely makes you fear him.

But, to my great amazement, when I was in Geneva to a lecture delivered by Lenin, I at once felt the difference of atmosphere between then and now. The audience, this time breathed freely, intimately without any strain. Lenin's appearance alone impressed me differently. Shabbily dressed, like a poor emigrant, in a worn out blue jacket, with a plain soft collar cotton shirt, dressed plainly, but neatly. In each wave of the hand, in every move and turn of his one could notice the true democrat, the simple son of his nation; not a trace of snobbishness in his manners or talk as to say: Here I am—one of yours. One who does not know Lenin takes him for a typically Russian "merchant" who just threw off his sheepskin winter coat and copies the modern ways, as shown off his yellow beard in "blange" and on his face one can easily see some Tartar lines, especially in his eyes and the jaws; but his high forehead that reaches far into the head, sparsely covered with hair, bears witness that ordinary little person possesses extraordinary power.

He does not speak as eloquently and with so much pathos and as brilliantly as Plechanov. He does not quote as many authors of so many books as this does Plechanov, but his logic cuts with the sharpness of a knife; simple words, without any highly sounding phrases set deeply in your mind. Even his opponents sit gaping. He nails them all to the wall so good-naturedly, in such a friendly manner and this inconveniences them.

There was—sitting next to me a Grusinian, an old social democrat, a menshevik; he was all hearing, and when Lenin struck blow after blow to menshevism he, the Grusinian, automatically exclaimed: Is this a beast? Everybody smiled and so did Lenin. The entire assembly was electrified, and when the discussion started everybody took part in it, even the most ordinary people. It was a heart to heart talk, and when Lenin answered questions it was not in any way delicate or vague—it was a deep cut, so deep that it was remembered for a long time.

Many comrades were there who heard Lenin speak for the first time, they shrugged their shoulders; is this the despot whom the opponents curse so much?

Despotism breathes with vileness, capriciousness, and wildness. Not a trace of those enumerated vices was to be found in Lenin's speech. He simply enchanted with his sincerity. Did he ever express wrath, was he ever excited, it was with so much frankness, so convincing that it left no after affect.

I must confess that the lecture Lenin then delivered in which he discussed the tactics of the social democrats aroused me very much and it took me some time to regain my Bundist equilibrium.

Remarkable is this that I feared to hear some more of Lenin's lectures and the same thing happened with many more experienced comrades, who played a considerably great role in the movement. It was to be noticed that those comrades tried to avoid Lenin's speeches, because they knew that he will come out the victor; it was so simple, because Lenin with his innate simplicity, sound logic, and frankness in expressing opinions, has always won the confidence of the masses.

From that time on Lenin's personality interested me very much. I wanted to know his personal life. And this not out of curiosity, but because the question of socialistic ethics of socialistic culture, of revolutionary morals has then especially occupied my mind.

Being torn off the living reality of Russia, alone in strange lands, one gives himself to self-analysis, especially, when the emigrant life was colorless and had no other interest in life but introspection. Everyday occurrences irritated me, aroused in me skeptical thoughts and moods. This was also a period of reaction, everybody was disappointed, and, therefore, was exceptionally sensitive to moralization.

No wonder, therefore, that after all I have experienced with Plechanov, I should become interested in the private life of Lenin.

Lenin Is Dead But Leninism Leads

What Workingmen Said of Lenin.

In 1907 Lenin attended a workers' congress in London. There were many workers there who had seen him for the first time. One of these workmen in speaking about Lenin said: "Perhaps the workmen in Europe have another man as clever as he is. But they do not have another man so lovable." Another workman added: "He is one of us. He is our teacher, our master, (meaning in mind) but most of all he is our Comrade."

Lenin, whom his enemies have called great, unapproachable, terrible, never passed a child playing in the street without stopping to caress him and always with great caution, touching them very gently.

One day in Gorki village, Lenin stopped to talk and play with the children who gathered around him for they all loved him and would never let an opportunity go by without rushing to greet him.

He turned to one of the comrades and said: "Those youngsters will have a better time than we had. For them life will not be so cruel."

The Story of a Revolutionist.

Dear Juniors:—I am going to tell a short story of a revolutionist of nearly two thousand years ago. His name was Spartacus. He was a Greek by birth and when the Romans came to Greece he was captured and brought to Rome to fight as a gladiator, while his mother and father were murdered. The Romans made a fighter of him so that he would supply them with what they considered amusement.

Once when Spartacus was in the arena fighting with other gladiators he discovered that he had fought with his best friend and killed him. From that time on he hated the Romans worse than ever.

One day he called the gladiators together, told them of his experiences, and said that that night they should escape and become free men, as they rightfully were. They consented and that night escaped and went to the crater of an extinct volcano.

The Romans did not know where their slaves had gone until one of the gladiators betrayed Spartacus and the rest. The Roman army marched on to the crater and a fierce battle took place.

The gladiators fought with all their might for they had nothing to lose and everything to gain, while the Romans fought for their slaves. But the great number of Romans against such a small but brave band of revolutionists was very unequal and Spartacus was hopelessly defeated.

Before the Romans could reach him, Spartacus killed his horse and then himself saying that even his horse was to good for the Romans. The Romans took all the revolutionists they could get and crucified them on one of the main roads of Rome. Spartacus bravely died a real revolutionist. And so did his comrades with him.

Just as the Romans suppressed the gladiators, so today are the Hindus suppressed by the English and Filipinos by the United States.

LAB R REACTION GETS SETBACK

Import Soviet Foe in Anti-Recognition Drive

DAN W. STEVENS, COMMUNIST, CHALLENGES UNION BUREAUCRATS IN MINNEAPOLIS LABOR ASSEMBLY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 18.—A challenge to reaction in the unions that shall ring thruout the whole labor movement of America and other lands, was the speech in the last meeting of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly of Dan W. Stevens, delegate from the Painters' Local No. 186, placed on trial before the Labor Assembly by orders of Paul J. Smith, special emissary from the executive council of the American Federation of Labor sent to expel all Communists and left wing unionists from the Minneapolis assembly.

In spite of the packing of the meeting with delegates never attending before, to vote with the reactionaries to unseat both Stevens and William Mauseth, a Communist also on trial, altho a regularly elected delegate from Machinists' Local No. 91, and in spite even of these fighting members' expectation that they would be unseated, the vote, tho very close, stood seventy to sixty-nine in their favor. Perhaps the speech of Dan W. Stevens had something to do with it. The speech, in full is as follows:

After Twenty Years of Union Activity.

"When I look back over the twenty years of my activity in the labor movement of Minneapolis, it is hard for me to realize that that time would ever come when I would be called upon to show cause why I should not be cast out this assembly as a traitor to the labor movement. If I was on trial in a capitalist court, there is no doubt but what I would put up the very best defense possible. But here it is different.

"I have been associated with many of you delegates here tonight in the local struggles of the labor movement for the past five, ten, fifteen, and some of you, twenty years. I have been an officer of this assembly for sixteen years. I have held every office in this central body. In all these years I have never run away from a fight and I am not going to run away from this one.

Fake "Democracy" in Government.

"To those of you who love to prate about democracy and constitutional guarantees, to those of you who, but recently, expressed a willingness to follow the Wisconsin crawfish back to 1776, I wish to state that whenever the dictatorship of the capitalist class is even mildly threatened (it is not necessary to do much threatening because the capitalists are class conscious are jealous of their power), nevertheless, whenever the dictatorship of capitalism is threatened by the outraged and oppressed workers, then all pretense of democracy and constitutional guarantees is cast to the four winds and they proceed with militia and their thugs and gunmen to ruthlessly crush any organized protest on the part of the workers.

"For example, I cite you to the massacre at Ludlow, Colorado, where the union miners, who were on strike and living in their tent colonies, were attacked by the mercenaries of the coal barons. Their tents were riddled with machine-gun bullets. Women and children were foully murdered and the tent colony burned to the ground. I could cite you hundreds of other instances of this nature if time would permit.

Fake "Democracy" in the A. F. of L.

"Whenever the power of the per capita tax absorbers at the head of the American Federation of Labor is likewise mildly threatened by the

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

DURING this week millions of workers thruout the world will pay tribute to the memory of Lenin. Great demonstrations will be held in his honor in the industrialized capitalist countries and the oppressed colonial peoples will pay tribute to the man who more than any other supplied them with the means by which to emancipate themselves. Millions of subject peoples who never read the Communist Manifesto or know anything about the theoretical basis of Communism recognized Lenin as their champion and the Communist International as their leader.

WHEN Lenin's death was flashed over the wires, the convention of the United Mine Workers of America was in session in Indianapolis. The fakers in control of that mighty industrial union privately rejoiced over Lenin's death, rejoiced with the capitalists. There was no expression of regret from the labor lieutenants of capitalism, over the passing of the great leader. The news of the formation of Ramsay MacDonald's fake labor government was received by the same collection of labor fakers with glee. They sent MacDonald a telegram of congratulations. Birds of a feather.

BUT after the lapse of one year, it is worth while using up a little mental energy thinking over the effects of Lenin's death, and of MacDonald's government. Lenin built something, that stays put. MacDonald left nothing behind him but a bad smell. Lenin was a revolutionist. MacDonald was and is a reformist, a clipper of capitalism's claws, not one who believes in killing the tiger as Lenin did.

WHEN Lenin died, superficial thinkers expected that the Russian Communist Party, which Lenin founded, would go to pieces and with it would go the proletarian dictatorship and the Soviet government. But nothing of the kind happened. Lenin is more potent since his death than when he was alive. He left an organization behind, which I believe, it is safe to say, can compare in idealism, discipline and leadership with anything in the history of the world. The leaders that Lenin trained have been tried during a year of trials, and they responded splendidly to their responsibilities.

AFTER Lenin's death, the Communist Party of Russia opened its ranks and hundreds of thousands of workers applied for admission. This powerful organization has today over half a million members, the flower of Russia's proletarian manhood and womanhood. In addition the Russian Young Communist League has approximately a similar number of members, the pick of Soviet Russia's youth. This organization of youth will supply the future leaders of the Soviet Republic.

LENIN'S death did not mean the demoralization of Russia. The Communist Party remained. Despite a bitter controversy within the party led by such a prominent leader as Leon Trotsky, the organization that

SOVIETS LEAD IN THE FIGHT AGAINST OPIUM

Capitalist Nations Dare Not Go As Far

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, Dec. 15. — (By Mail.)—That the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics goes before all other countries of Europe in the struggle against the spread of drugs, is stated in a letter of George Chicherin, people's commissar of foreign affairs, to the general secretary of the League of Nations, under date of Oct. 30, 1924.

The text of this letter, which, incidentally, also illustrates the stand of the Soviet government towards the league, follows:

"By letter of Jan. 14, 1924, the general secretariat of the league of nations extended an invitation, on behalf of the council of the league, to the people's commissariat of foreign affairs to take part in the conference called for November of the current year on the limitation of opium and other drug traffic.

"Later, on March 20, the general secretary transmitted to the people's commissariat of foreign affairs the proposition of the league council to participate in the labors of the preparatory committee on the same question.

"Then, on August 10, the people's commissariat received a wire from Geneva, sent by the chairman of this

RECOGNITION OF SOVIET BY U. S. EXPECTED SOON

No Dawes Plan for Us, Says Rakovsky

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Jan. 18.—That the United States will recognize the Soviet government before long is the belief of Christian Rakovsky, Soviet charge d'affaires at London, who is now on a visit to Moscow to confer with his government over new overtures made by Britain to the Soviet government.

Rakovsky addressed a convention of provincial school teachers in Moscow. Japan, he said, would soon recognize the Soviet regime, while it was likely that American recognition would come during the present year.

Fantastic Yarns.

Commenting on fanatastic yarns published in the American and British capitalist press that Soviet Russia would modify its policy in order to meet the wishes of President Coolidge, Rakovsky declared that Russia would never allow herself to become a colony of the international capitalists, like Germany. The robber powers wanted to force a Dawes plan on Russia, but this was impossible. The workers' and peasants' government refused to surrender the fruits of the revolution when its borders were black with enemies in battle fomation. Today, when Russia has vanquished her enemies there is less reason than ever to believe that any modification of Soviet policy would be contemplated to satisfy the desires of Wall Street.

Dealing with the newspaper reports about the demands of the capitalist powers that the Soviet government suppressed the Communist International and forbid it to conduct its propaganda in other countries, Rakovsky pointed out that the Third International had its headquarters in Russia just as the First International founded by Karl Marx had its headquarters in London. He pointed out that when, after the Paris commune the French government asked the British government to expel the executive of the First International, holding it responsible for the commune, Britain refused.

Two Separate Instutions.

The Soviet government and the Communist International are two separate institutions and the former will under no circumstances interfere with the latter in its task of organizing the working class of the world for the overthrow of capitalism.

The Soviet diplomat said that the past year was a very successful one for Bolshevik diplomacy. Despite the tearing up of the Anglo-Russian treaties, great gains were made by the workers' and peasants' government in its relations with England. He pointed out that Britain's refusal to ratify the agreement signed by Ramsay MacDonald and the Soviet government was not due to bad terms contained in the treaties but to a desire on the part of England and other capitalist countries to put Russia under

HUNDREDS OF WEAVERS JOINING TEXTILE STRIKE AT FALL RIVER

FALL RIVER, Mass., Jan. 18.—Six hundred and fifty more weavers joined the strike movement against the ten per cent wage cut. The new strikers are from the Granite, Barnard and Lincoln mills.

The six-loom-per-operative system is one of the demands of the Lincoln weavers. The company requires the men to tend to eight looms each. Managers of the Davis mills, where the strike movement started, are reported to have offered to cancel the new cut in cases where reduction had previously been put into effect in the last few months.

Organizer Horace A. Riviere of the United Textile Workers' Union has arrived to take charge of the strike of dyers and bleachers at the Kerr mills.

NO DECISION YET IN RUTHENBERG CASE NOW BEFORE HIGHEST COURT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Attorneys Isaac Ferguson and Frank P. Walsh, acting for the Labor Defense Council in the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, are here today in conference with Justice McReynolds of the United States supreme court upon a petition for a writ of supersedeas in the execution of judgment imprisoning Ruthenberg in the Michigan state prison for from three to ten years on a charge of "assembling" with Communists at a convention of that party. No decision was announced.

PROSECUTION IN NEW MICHIGAN CASE PROPOSAL

Judge Also Bluffs About Return of Bail Money

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Jan. 18.—The prosecution has made two overtures to counsel for defense in connection with the trials of thirty-two Communists, one of whom, C. E. Ruthenberg, is now serving sentence in Jackson prison for violation of the Michigan criminal syndicalism law.

The defense has declared its intention from the outset of demanding separate trials for all the defendants.

32 Defendants in All.

William Z Foster, the first of the defendants to be brought to trial was tried in April of 1922. The jury disagreed. Since then the only one other trial, that of Ruthenberg, has been heard. There are thirty more.

The state is beginning to worry about where all the money is coming from to prosecute all the cases. I. E. Ferguson, one of the attorneys for the defense was recently approached by the state in an effort to put an end to the cases. Ferguson was first asked to group the cases. He refused.

Then the prosecutors came with a proposition that required all the defendants to plead guilty. For this, they promised Ruthenberg would be pardoned and the rest of the defendantes let go with fines.

Defendants Reject Overtures.

The defendant would not consider the offer. They would not plead guilty to charge of which they were obviously not guilty. The prosecution is getting worried. At the rate the cases are now being disposed of the other thirty cases will occupy the whole attention of the St. Joseph Court for months to come.

An effort is being made to get a return of the bail money deposited in St. Joseph for Ruthenberg pending the decisions of the United States supreme courts prior to his imprisinment. The bail amounts to $5,000 and rightfully should be returned now that Ruthenberg is in custody.

Wants Bail Money for Fine.

Circuit Judge Charles E White, who sentenced Ruthenberg, had this to say about it, "The money will not be returned until Ruthenberg's fine is paid. Of course, if it can be proved that the money isn't Ruthenberg's, I might change my mind."

The money is certainly not Ruthenberg's. It is Ferguson's opinion that Judge White will change his mind and, as quickly as defense can bring action to recover the money.

The Supreme Court Reaction.

George Maurer, secretary of the Labor Defense Council, which is handling the cases of the 32 Michigan defendants who "assembled with" the Communist convention in 1922, had the following to say about the Michi-

ABRAMOVICH, FLUNKEY OF PARIS IMPERIALISTS, SLIPS INTO U. S. QUIETLY ON SINISTER ERRAND

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 18.—R. Abramovich, Russian menshevik, enemy of the workers' government of Russia, member of the executive committee of the second (socialist) international, participant in the counter-revolutionary conspiracy in Soviet Georgia, in which the capitalist governments of Europe attempted an armed coup, arrived in New York City on the steamship Mauretania and fires the opening gun today in a great campaign to prevent the recognition of Soviet Russia by the government of the United States.

Workers in this city who are acquainted with the record and connections of Abramovich, assert that his coming here at this moment can mean nothing else than a concerted drive against Soviet Russia in the newspapers, among the labor organizations, and in all the circles influenced by the counter-revolutionary, socialist, and white guard circles.

It is expected that Abramovich will also be used in the drive against the left wing especially among the Jewish unions. Abramovich, wherever he goes, always becomes the darling of the anti-Russian forces of all shades. Undoubtedly his slanders against Russia will be widely reprinted in all the New York dailies tomorrow.

Thruout the labor movement of New York, especially among the Russian and Jewish workers, protests are being uttered against this counter-revolutionist and enemy of Soviet Russia being greeted by so-called leaders of the labor movement.

Undoubtedly this protest will find vehement expression in the meetings of the labor organizations when they meet. Abramovich slipped into the United States unheralded, apparently in the hopes that he could do his work and leave before the workers realized who he was or what he meant. But the working class knows Abramovich, and as an enemy.

The Workers (Communist) Party exposes this flunkey of capitalism in the following declaration:

Down with the Emissaries of the Russian Counter-Revolution!

THE Russian counter-revolutionists and the second (socialist) international of Noske and Scheidemann have sent to the U. S. one of their emissaries, R. Abramovich, to raise a campaign against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and against the international unity of the trade union movement intitiated by the Russian trade unions. Also Mr. Abramovich, emissary of the Second International of Noske and Scheidemann, will attempt to raise funds in the U. S. for the Russian counter-revolution and while in America, he will assist the trade union reactionaries and the socialist party to initiate a new campaign of persecution and extermination against the left wing in the American labor movement.

Such a campaign of reaction and counter-revolution if permitted to take place without challenge, will seriously affect the standing of the progressive forces in the American labor movement, will strengthen the reactionaries and "open shoppers" thruout the country and will immeasurably aggravate the economic and political conditions under which the American working class is carrying on its struggles against the capitalists. This campaign by Abramovich will undoubtedly encourage and strengthen all those elements of capitalist reaction that are carrying on a fight to the bitter end against the recognition of Soviet Russia and that are plotting secretly for the forcible overthrow of the Soviet government. It is significant that the arrival of Abramovich in the U. S. coincides with the exit of Charles E. Hughes, the most reactionary and uncompromising enemy of the Soviet government. The United States is fast becoming the refuge and haven of international reaction and white guardism. During the past year there have come to our shores large numbers of former czarist generals, counts and princes, pretenders to the Russian throne, that are continually conspiring against the safety and well-being of the Russian masses. Now we are about to be visited by a representative of another brand of counter-revolution, a prominent menshevik and collaborator of the hangman Noske, Mr. Abramovich.

The success of Mr. Abramovich's mission will give aid and comfort in the United States and thruout the world to every enemy of labor. It will give additional strength to the wage-cutting campaign now in process, to the persecution of working class militants, as in the Michigan case, and to every attempt of the capitalist reactionaries to destroy the labor movement.

Such a conspiracy against the Soviet government, against the proposed unity of the international trade union movement and against the labor movement of the United States must be combatted by every honest worker in the United States. The Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon the American working class to raise its voice in thunderous protest against this new counter-revolutionary attempt by the socialist flunkeys of international imperialism by the agents of the "open shopper" Dawes which are known as the Second International.

Let every labor organization in the U. S., every shop, factory and mill resound with the demands:

Down with the bloody agents of international imperialism!

Down with the flunkeys of "open shop" Dawes!

Down with the emissaries of the Second International, the enemies of labor and servants of capital!

Hail the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics!

Hail the international unity of the trade union movement!

Hail the united front of labor against the united front of capital!

Hail the Communist International!

Frenzied Socialist, Forgetting Dignity, Throws Things About

PARIS, Jan. 18.—The first day of business of the new parliament was enlivened a little from the peaceful processes of capitalist democracy, by the debate over the sardine cannery strike of Douarnenez and the arrest of the Communist mayor who led the strike and set the whole country in a turmoil.

The Communist deputy Balanant made such caustic comments upon the yellow socialists defending the capitalist side of the dispute, that the socialist then occupying the speakers tribune grew so frenzied that he pitched a glass of water in the direction of Balanant, but succeeded only in drenching the desk of the speaker of the chamber. Balanant was untouched, which was more than could be said of the dignity of the chamber.

CZAR HUTCHESON WARS ON DETROIT PROGRESSIVES

Expels Wm. Reynolds from the Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 18.—When the delegates to the District Council of carpenters gathered for their weekly meeting here, the meeting was prefaced by the reading of a communication from the general executive board at Indianapolis to the effect that Brother William Reynolds, president of Local Union No. 2140, vice-president of the district council, and member of the district council executive board, was expelled from the organization on the charge of being a member of the Trade Union Educational League, "an organization antagonistic to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners."

After the reading of the communication, Brother Reynolds requested the floor to make a statement. The floor was granted and Brother Reynolds made a forty-five-minite speech, in the course of which he declared:

That during his nine years membership in the organization, no charges or criticisms of his actions, either verbal or written, had been made.

That the notification of expulsion was the first intimation that charges were contemplated.

There Was No Trial.

Reynolds pointed out that Hutcheson and the official family, including stool-pigeon Botterill, in charge locally, had acted as accuser, prosecutor, witness, jury, and judge, the only important omission being the presence of the defendant. It was pointed out that if czar Hutcheson can get away with this latest development in expulsion technique, no member of the union will be safe in his membership and his right to earn a living at the trade, and that the constitution will have become a scrap of paper. The campaign of red-baiting which has been introduced by Hutcheson, and which occupied most of the time of the last convention, was dealt with in detail. As Hutcheson is now accepting tutelage from Phil Murray and the Lewis gang of the miners' union, it must be expected that most of the resources of the organization will be used in fighting militancy in the organization and killing the spirit of the rank and file, and that the treatment of Alexander Howat at the hands of Lewis, will be metted out by Hutcheson to many members of the left wing for their fidelity to the rank and file.

Chairman Used Gag Rule.

At the conclusion of his speech, Reynolds retired and the council was called to order. The first motion made on the subject requested further information. An amendment to the effect that the district council ignore the expulsion until a regular trial was granted, was ruled out of order by President Sharrock, who is evidently a candidate for the laurels now being lost by the renegade Cappellini. An appeal from the decision of the chair was refused recognition by the chair. Altho all but three delegates spoke in sympathy of the appeal and of the amendment, he ruled the meeting in true Hutchesonian style and the will of the body was defeated.

A storm of resentment against this autocratic and unconstitutional expulsion and the abject submission of renegade Sharrock is gathering, which bids fair to sweep the carpenters' organization free of some of the dead wood (reference to Botterill's head) which at the present time, encumbers the organization locally.

The Fake Liberal.

President Sharrock, "New Republic" liberal who definitely stated some six months ago that he would stand for no expulsions in this district, is treading the path of all those fair-weather revolutionists of the phrase whom the responsibilities of office sober into obedient office boys for the big reactionaries.

If the rank and file of Detroit wish to protect themselves and Reynolds, they must wage a fight that will carry the lickspittle Botterill beyond the confines of the district and reduce the crawfish head of the district council to a position where his lack of backbone will be an advantage to him in holding a job in open shop Detroit, where the guns of the general executive board are being turned on the militant rank and file instead of against our class enemies, the arrogant open shop builders.

Communist Challenges Bureaucrats

rank and file, then that fig-leaf of democracy is cast aside and dictatorship stands out in all its ugly nakedness. They tear up their own constitution and they trample it in the mire and they ride rough shod over anybody and everybody that stands between them, their swivel chair and their $10,000 a year jobs.

"We have had with us for some time a special representative of the executive council of the A. F. of L., Brother Smith, who is a special envoy of King William I. I do not envy Brother Smith in his position. He is paid well to do the dirty work of the executive council of the A. F. of L. and he is here in that capacity tonight. Only a few days ago Brother Smith rushed into the yellow press and uncovered a red plot to destroy the labor movement of this city. Wonderful, isn't it? He must have been taking lessons from Bill Burns or else reading the Minneapolis Labor Review or, no doubt, both.

"I Am a Communist."

"He has accused the Communists of being a bunch of craven cowards, and for those of you who do not know it I want to say that I am a Communist.

"It does not take much courage to spread a lot of slimy filth in the press of the master class, but to lead the workers and the poor farmers in their immediate struggles with their exploiters, to organize the unorganized on the basis of class struggle, to work for the amalgamation of the obsolete craft unions into industrial unions, to make them an effective weapon in the hands of the rank and file in their everyday struggles and also in the final struggle of the workers for power, to carry on a campaign for the nationalization of basic industries—that kind of a fight takes real courage.

"And while the Communists have been putting up a fight of that nature where do you find the Greens, Johnstons, O'Connells, Lewises and Wolls?

Officials Are Helping the Enemy.

"They are busy putting over B. & O. plans and fake class collaboration schemes to outlaw strikes and increase the already fabulous profits of the railroad barons at the expense of the workers. They are busy organizing labor banks similar to the one we have in this city, protected by the Wm. J. Burns' Detective Agency. They are busy putting over fake insurance schemes. They are passing resolutions urging congress, the joint naval committee on naval affairs and the secretary of the navy to build more and larger battle ships.

Why More Battleships?

"Why do they want more and larger battleships? To protect the interest of the workers when they go out on strike? Hell, no!

"Do they imagine that union workers will be employed on the building of these instruments of destruction? Certainly not. These fakers know that all battleships constructed by the Wall Street government are built in the scab contract shipyards of the east.

To Force Slavery on German Labor!

"I will tell you why they want more and larger battleships—and that is to fasten the shackles of slavery more firmly upon the German working class thru the enforcement of the Morgan-Dawes plan; to protect and collect Morgan's loans to the bankrupt capitalist nations of Europe and South America.

"The American Federation of Labor at the El Paso convention, unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the citizens' military training camps and urging the organized workers to join and support this militarist institution They even went further to lay the plans for a machine to mobilize the cannon-fodder among the organized workers by providing that three assistants to the secretary of war from the executive council and one assistant from each of the forty-eight states be named by the state federations in the respective states.

Preparing Labor of the Next War.

"What does this all mean? It is nothing more than a camouflage attempt to deliver the American labor movement hog-tied, bound, and gagged to the imperialists of Wall Street for whatever purpose they care to use it in the next imperialist blood-bath

"But there is just one element that stands in the way of putting over this program of betrayal and that is the left wing of the labor movement led by the Communists. Communists have a penchant for turning the white light of publicity on the acts of betrayal of the interest of the workers by these lackeys of capitalism inside of the labor movement.

"That is why I am on trial here tonight. That is why a nationwide attempt is being made to cast the Communists out of the American Federation of Labor.

No Way to Organize Labor.

"Some of your leaders here believe that in order to make the labor movement respectable, the Communists must be unceremoniously kicked out. and then the employers will fall over each other to sign agreements with organized labor and the unorganized workers will flock into the movement by the tens of thousands.

"Naturally, as a Communist, I disagree with them on this matter. If anyone thinks for a moment that the unorganized can be organized on a bankrupt policy of class collaboration they have another guess coming.

"I Will Continue to Fight."

"No doubt, I will be unseated here tonight. Your vote on the appeal from the decision of the chair proves that you have the power to do so, and if I am unseated, the next move will be for you to take the case to the Painters' International Union and have me expelled as a member of the Brotherhood of Painters.

"Now, just one final statement and then I am thru. If I am thrown out of this assembly tonight because of my ideas, I will continue to fight until I get back in this assembly. The only time a Communist ever quits fighting is when he dies and then he dies fighting with his face to the common enemy of the working class."

In the election of officers for the assembly, the reactionaries without any other right than their own tyrannical pleasure, ruled off of the ballot all left wing candidates.

In addition the reactionaries put up their own slate, definitely pledging them to expel the Communists as ordered by the A. F. of L.

Red Baiters Lost to Center.

However, even with the left wing candidates ruled off the ballot the reactionaries lost their slate and a center group was elected, whose stability will be shown or whose weakness will be established soon by the pressure of the reactionaries who, undoubtedly, will continue the fight against the left wingers and Communists.

The hope of the reactionaries resides in the expected action of the executive council of the A. F. of L. upon the report of its lackey, Paul J. Smith. The hope of the left wing is in the tremendous resentment among the rank and file unionists of Minneapolis. The whole movement is stirred to its depths over the autocracy of the union officials.

PROSECUTION MAKES PROPOSALS

gan courts and the Michigan Communist cases:

"What else can you expect from reactionary capitalist-controlled courts? The question is, will the United States supreme court again dare to openly show its face as a boss-controlled body dispensing 'capitalist injustice,' ignoring the law?

"C. E. Ruthenberg sits in prison because he has ideas on working class problems, because he 'assembled with' an organization that believes in, predicts and strives for workers' rule as against capitalist dictatorship, and that leads in the everyday struggle of the workers against the bosses.

"The revival of the Michigan cases, the imprisonment of Ruthenberg, the calling of Robert Minor to trial in February, the expressed intention of the prosecution to push the other 30 cases to speedy trial, are the first moves in a renewed attack on labor, on all workers and their organizations, especially those who dare oppose the reactionary steamroller which 'rolls' to maintain child labor, to institute widespread wage cuts, to establish complete open shop rule, and crush the workers into subjection—and misery.

"If the courts are successful in railroading Ruthenberg, Minor, Foster, and the other 29 Michigan defendants, it means they will be at liberty to proceed to a wholesale offensive against the entire labor movement. The issue is more than that of 'free speech for Communists and all workers!' The question is, shall workers have any rights at all? Or must they submit to abject wage slavery, mass unemployment, open shop, wage cuts, injunctions, child labor, and the strike-breaking rule of reactionary employers?

"The entire labor movement must now rally, as never before, in a united front against this flagrant 'injustice' in Michigan, against the attack of the bosses on these 32 militant fighters in the labor movement, who represent a most advanced section thereof. Mass demands must be made for the repeal of so-called 'criminal syndicalism' and 'sedition' laws, and that the United States supreme court reverse convictions under them and declare such laws unconstitutional as they certainly are—unless the constitution is only a 'scrap of paper'!

Great Legal Battle Ahead.

"Robert Minor's trial is right ahead—others will follow in rapid succession. The legal battle before us will require tens of thousands of dollars. Proceedings in the courts are terribly expensive, but the Labor Defense Council wants to be able to fight with one hundred per cent power every inch of the ground. It has entered a campaign of publicity, legal defense, and money raising, and calls upon all labor unions, working class organizations, all who believe in free speech and assemblage for all workers; all who believe in the cause of the workers, to contribute funds at once and without stint.

"We will need at least $10,000 for the defense and legal battle by February 15 and more ten thousands after that. Funds should be rushed to the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, Illinois."

TEACHERS VOTE TO GET COUNCILS BY LEGAL MEANS

Bill to Legislature Is Next Move

The Chicago Teachers' Federation replied to Superintendent McAndrew's demand for a reorganzation of teachers' councils to be composed of representatives of teachers, principals and the superintendent with a motion at their last meeting to take a bill to the legislature and thus provide for teachers' councils by statute law.

"We see that we cannot get anywhere with the board of education," Miss Margaret Haley said in speaking about the superintendent's last recommendation. "Whatever they do at their meetings is changed over night anyway. Besides the teachers believe they are entitled to have their right to deliberation just as the superintendent has his."

The bill to be drafted for presentation to the legislature, Miss Haley added, will provide for teachers' councils under the principles laid down by Ella Flagg Young, former superintendent of schools.

The new plan for marking teachers' examination papers was severely criticized by the teachers. Miss Haley reported that the board had provided for a conference with representatives from the teachers' federation, the board of education and the superintendent, but that no date has been set for the conference.

The teachers voted a protest against any change in the levels of salaries and against abolition of bonuses now paid eighth grade teachers and teachers of special subjects. Both of these matters are under consideration by the board at present.

SNOWDEN SAYS U. S. SURELY IS ENTANGLED

Labor Party Trickster Laughs at America

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Paris agreement which granted the United States two and one quarter per cent of the Dawes annuities was "astounding,' Philip Snowden, formerly chancellor of the exchequer, declared today in an interview in the Manchester Guardian.

"The United States, having entered the Paris agreement, certainly will be involved in any sanctions the allies may carry out in the event Germany defaults in the Dawes plan," Snowden declared.

Says Allies Baited a Trap.

"The United States has no moral right to participate in the Dawes annuities," said Snowden. He said when the allies allowed the United States to participate it was "apparently a concession of the allies to secure the aid of the United States in enforcing the Dawes plan."

"The United States," he said, "may find she has bought this concession for a big price."

A Defender of British Business.

Snowden and United States Ambassador Kellogg disagreed at the London conference last summer and their disagreement led to a series of notes passing between Secretary of State Hughes and the British foreign office.

Snowden, who as a socialist and leading member of the British labor party, was chancellor of the exchequer under the labor party regime of MacDonald, differed violently with MacDonald over the Dawes plan and correctly said it meant a surrender to American imperialism. He warned British business that America was getting control.

American Labor Must Proceed to Power Thru Teachings of Leninism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, on the eve of the first anniversary of Lenin's death, the Soviet Power stands astride the world mightier than ever.

In the Orient, Japanese capitalism bends before the First Workers' Republic. It will soon accord it recognition.

In the Occident, American capitalist imperialism alters the personnel of its rule at Washington, in order to make the proper bow to Moscow.

Thus conquering Leninism, after Lenin, leads the world social revolution to greater victories.

* * * *

Gompers is dead. Hughes is retiring. Yet the many enemies of Soviet Rule are ever active in this country.

The czarist emigres work night and day.

The ex-grand duchess Victoria Feodorovna, wife of the "grand duke" Cyril who recently proclaimed himself Cyril I, "czar of all the Russias," was recently here. In New York, Philadelphia, and even in Washington, close to the steps of the White House, she plied her counter-revolutionary task, with the aid of the wives of American capitalist statesmen and diplomats, bankers and industrialists.

Now comes the deposed "grand duke" Boris, second in line to the imaginary monarchist throne that still lives in the minds of the emigre czarists.

But there comes also, like a dagger in the dark, the emissary of the second (socialist) international, R. Abramovich. He slips quietly into the country, seeking to keep his identity a secret, so that he might the better spread his poison in the secret places.

Abramovich, representing the left wing of the Russian counter-revolutionists, just as the unseated "grand duke" Cyril represents its right wing, will be received as a blood brother by American "socialists," from Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish (socialist) Daily Forward, down the whole degrading list.

* * * *

The Chicago Tribune adopts the style of campaign that has been carried on by "The Forward" these past half dozen years. It spreads the canard that the Russian Communists are planning to re-establish the constituent assembly, or some such parliamentary form, in place of Soviet Rule.

This mouldy falsehood, however, is immediately kicked into the discard once more by Christian Rakovsky, Soviet representative in London, addressing the gathering of provincial school teachers in Moscow.

Rakovsky told these teachers that Soviet Russia does not intend to give way in the slightest to the demands of foreign powers attacking the proletarian dictatorship. It will not pay this price for recognition. It will in no way agree to any crippling of the activities of the Communist International. It will not consider even the slightest plea coming from Washington on behalf of the principle of private property. It does not intend to have any Morgan-Dawes plan imposed upon it, no matter what the disguise.

In other words, Soviet Russia will not deviate by a single hair's breadth, from the direct road she is pursuing towards the building of the Communist society.

* * * *

When Rakovsky says, however, that the year 1924 was a very successful one for Soviet diplomacy, and that the year 1925 would be a better one, that does not mean that there are not great struggles ahead.

England is busy frantically building her anti-Soviet bloc. Behind England stands the United States.

World economic conditions are the allies of the American workers and farmers in forcing Wall Street rule in Washington to recognize the Russian Soviet Republic.

But that is hardly the beginning of the struggle in this country. This struggle ends only with the firm establishment of the American Soviet Republic against the whole front of the American counterparts of the ousted Russian grand dukes and mensheviks.

The enemy class, with its Cyrils and Abramoviches, is still in power in the United States. That is the big fact for American labor to consider on the first anniversary of the death of Lenin. And having considered, let American workers also make progress and proceed to the winning of all power, like their Russian comrades, thru the teachings of Leninism.

Police Linked With Crime and Politics, Is Charge

While Mayor Dever is congratulating himself in numerous public statements on having "driven the crooks out of Chicago," Chief of Police Collins is in the midst of a full fledged drive—in the newspapers—to reform his police force and make them chase criminals instead of accepting bribes from them.

Collins took the star of office away from Capt. Joseph Mullin of the Gresham street police station, who unfortunately for him, got drunk just when Collins needed publicity. Collins has ordered captains to keep professional bondsmen out of the police stations.

Mayor Dever, backed by the millionaires' committee of 1,000, is still issuing half-hearted statements about his "clean" administration. "I never have claimed Chicago was absolutely clean," said Dever. "No big city can be. The crime situation is not as bad as it has been painted."

Ernest Fitzpatrick, English author of "The Conflict of Nations," in a speech before the banquet of the British Empire Association, charged that in Chicago crime is an organized business linked with local politics. "The most dangerous and difficult factor to deal with in regard to criminal conditions today," said Fitzpatrick, "is that crime not only has been organized, but has entered into political alliances and has more political influence than ever before.

CHICAGO UNIONS TURN DOWN THE C. P. P. A. CALL

Without Discussion Vote "To File" It

The Chicago Federation of Labor will not take part in the C. P. P. A. conference to be held in Chicago on Feb. 21.

The federation yesterday afternoon without discussion or protest, voted to accept the report of the executive committee, which included the statement that an invitation to participate in the conference for progressive political action was received by the committee and "placed on file."

The Painters' Local 180, submitted a resolution which was carried, in favor of all street cars and motor busses having two entrances. Another delegate proposed that taxi-drivers be required to take out liability insurance before practicing the profession of pedestrian hunting.

The grievance committee reported that in behalf of the Sheet Metal Workers it had tried to have an interview with the president of the Morrison Hotel company on the subject of work to be done on the big annex. But the head of the Morrison Hotel was not to be interviewed and the committee had failed.

The local Cigar Makers report that a new agreement, with concessions made on both sides has been signed.

President Fitzpatrick of the federation was instructed by a resolution to appoint a committee of five to take up and follow the traction situation.

The motion introduced by Oscar Nelson as alderman in the city council last Wednesday, was attacked by Delegate McVey of the Lathers' Union who said that the proposed scheme of school construction of concrete, is safer than the old scheme of brick and tile.

COAL DRIVERS GIVEN A JOLT BY ATTY. CROWE

Get 60 Per Cent Out of $2 and Work Ten Hours

The coal teamsters and chauffeurs have been handed a piece of old crow in the "award" given by State's Attorney Crowe Saturday, of only sixty cents a day out of their original demand upon the Chicago Coal Merchants' Association, of $2.00 per day, was the opinion of some coal drivers interviewed yesterday.

The drivers walked out on January 1, and went back to work when their officials, as usual, after modifying the demands by cutting the $2.00 a day increase down to $1.00, finally agreed to let even that demand be "arbitrated" by the labor-hating prosecuting attorney of Cook county, Robert E. Crowe.

Great dissatisfaction may result in the drivers demanding a new deal from their officials, especially T. J. Lynch, who was so servile to Crowe that he not only left the case in Crowe's hands and promised that the drivers would abide by Crowe's decision, but actually thanked Crowe for refusing the drivers' demand on wages, giving them only six cents an hour raise and flatly turning down all the other demands.

The drivers still are working a ten-hour day, which is generally acknowledged to be no better hours than if there was no union. Tim Lynch made no effort to get an eight-hour day. Besides, in the course of negotiations, the officials surrendered even the men's demands that the unloading and carrying in of coal be given to helpers.

The men have been extremely restless while awaiting Crowe's cheating award, and the discontent, apparently, is not going to be soothed any by the results.

Two Workers Killed; Two Injured in Fall Of An Unsafe Wall

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 18.— Two workmen were almost instantly killed, and two others badly mangled, when a concrete wall, which the W. E. Walker Construction company had not properly supported, fell into the excavations being dug by the company.

The two injured men, B. Molena and A. Lyon, were left lying in the dust after being dug out of the ruins of the wall, while aid was being summoned. PHILA. BOSSES IN DRIVE FOR CHILD SLAVERY

Call Selves "Advocates of the Constitution"

By H. M. WICKS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 18.—In this city—"the cradle of liberty"—where the scab shop reigns supreme, where wages are lower and hours of labor longer than in any city of its class, the exploiters of labor have banded together into an association bearing the euphonious title "Advocates of the Constitution" for the avowed purpose of defeating the ratification by the Pennsylvania legislature of the child labor amendment.

The motive of the organization, according to its proclamations, is purely benevolent. It is no at all interested in profits to be ground out of children, but wants to protect children from the temptations of idleness and inculcate habits of thrift.

Copying the despicable propaganda of the New England textile codfish aristocracy in its assault upon children last November, the Philadelphia aggregation uses the same banal arguments in favor of child slavery that were used a hundred years ago against the demand for the shorter work day. At that time the hypocritical forbears of the present generation of bourgeois swine declared that shorter hours of labor would encourage crime and that all public spirited citizens should approve those capitalist virtues of industry and thrift.

A Fake "Survey."

One Donald Lee McCuen, one of the leading lights of the "advocates of the constitution," published the results of a "survey" conducted among working class families in some of the poorer sections of the city. Housewives, small shopmen, boys under 18 and "many others" were investigated and they all agreed that their families "would be deprived of needed funds for food and clothing should the amendment become a part of the constitution."

"The "survey" also included employers of child labor. A certain E. H. Seibert, stoolpigeon director for the Kirschbaum plant, who is known as the "personnel and welfare director" declared he is convinced that the amendment if adopted will "develop reds and criminals and would increase the population of the alms houses," and added that "thrift habits formed by employment were the building blocks of character."

Trade Union Survey.

A group of trade unionists from the Central Labor Council covered the same terirtory alleged to have been surveyed by the upholders of the constitution and could not find a single instance of workers having been interviewed by the employers' agents. The great "survey" was evidently conducted from the swivel chair of the publicity agent of the bosses.

The investigation of the trade unionists did disclose, however, almost indescribable conditions of want and poverty; whole families living huddled together in cold, ill-ventilated rooms, many of them without beds in which to sleep; compelled to lay on the bare floors. These are the homes from which child slaves are recruited—veritable pest holes, overrun with vermin and where loathsome diseases take a regular toll of death. In many of these hovels children do bead work for fancy dresses of the degenerate female appendages of the parasitic plutes. Many of the little tots sew long hours over shiny beads until their eyes are ruined—while their exploiters organized in the "advocates of the constitution" assure the rest of the city that play in the open air and sunshine would make criminals of these helpless slaves. So widespread is the depravity emanating from child slavery that even the parents frequently defend that slavery. Nowhere in the world can there be found worse degradation than in this "city of brotherly love."

So widespread is every form of criminality that for a year the city has been under martial law, with an officer of the United States marines as military dictator. The police force, the courts, every organ of law enforcement is a part of the gigantic vice machine where gambling, dope peddling, bootlegging proceeds unmolested, except for an occasional spectacular raid by the mono-maniac, General Butler, loaned the city from the army. Not even the ingenuity of a Philadelphia lawyer is sufficient to convince people that the city could possibly be more criminal than at present. And the children are being "protected" in slave pens.

At a meeting of the Central Labor Union held Sunday the officers were instructed to challenge the "advocates" to debate the question, and a whole series of meetings to combat this nefarious association will be held where the facts regarding child labor and the condition of the working class generally in this city will be brot out.

LENINISM WILL BE THE SOUL OF THE LENIN MEMORIAL MEETING ON FEB. 1 AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, N. Y.

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The organization of the Communist parties and the establishment of the Communist International separated the revolutionary workers from the workers still under the control of the social-democrats. The lines were clearly drawn between the workers who were willing to fight for the establishment of the power of the workers and poor farmers against those who still had faith in bourgeois democracy and still believed that they could use the capitalist state in order to ride into powpr.

What Is Leninism?

This alignment of the revolutionary forces was of great significance. It laid the basis for the revolutionary movement and eventually of the revolution. It has become apparent, however, that the mere formation of Communsis Parties will not achieve the revolution. Only Bolshevik parties can perform this gigantic feat—only parties trained in the tactics, strategy and discipline of a real Bolshevik party can lead the masses to the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Lenin was the father of the Bolshevik party. He was the creator of Bolshevism. His genius and insight led the vanguard of the Russian working class into and thru the proletarian revolution to victory. With a well-trained band of disciples, he permeated the workers of Russia with the idea and will to revolution, employing the methods that the revolution requires. This today is embodied in what we call Leninism.

Leninism embraces organization and ideology. It demands flexibility of tactics. It is not the raising of the torch of the revolution—but the application of "zigzag" ways to get to the revolution. Being Marxism in the period of world imperialism, Leninism demands elasticity, capacity for rapid change of method—but always based upon a keen analysis and understanding of capitalism. But above all, Leninism demands a centralized party—a party rooted in the shops—a party whose members accept iron discipline—a party capable of leading the masses and willing to fight to the end.

Capitalism at End of Rope.

Capitalism is reaching the end of its rule. To maintain their control, the capitalists will use the most brutal methods under either the guise of "democracy" or fascism. To put an end to capitalist rule will require the most minute application of Leninism. It means the emulation of the methods and tactics of that party, which, under the leadership of Lenin, carried out a successful revolution—the Russian Communist Party.

The lessons of this revolution and of the methods employed have been embodied in the Communist International. Leninism — Bolshevism — is the slogan of the hour. To meet the coming crisis, our Communist Parties must be Bolshevized—Leninized.

He who pointed and led the way finisher his work just one year ago. Nothing more fitting in this day when danger confronts the workers of the whole world than to comemmorate the day of his death by raising high the slogan that embodies his work: Leninism.

Lenin Memorial Meeting.

This will be the soul of the Lenin Memorial meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party to be held at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 1. This is the day when all revolutionary workers will once more review the revolutionary movement and learn the lessons of its struggles. This is the day when the revolutionary workers and oppressed peoples will stop to think of the great comrade who led the way and left the struggle, for us to continue in his path.

SOVIETS LEAD IN THE FIGHT AGAINST OPIUM

preparatory committee, proposing to the people's commissariat to send a delegate to the session of the consultative commission to be held on the 11th of August.

"As such a belated invitation obviously rendered superfluous any discussion of the proposal in substance, all that has been left to the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is to take up such position or other on the issue of its participation in the November conference.

Soviet Rule Leads All.

"The people's commissariat of foreign affairs must first of all state that in the anti-drug fight the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics goes before all other countries of Europe.

"The people's commissariat is in a position to declare that a number of such measures have been adopted by the government of the union against the spread of opium as other modern governments would never risk for fear of opposition on the part of private interests.

"Thus, by its own efforts and its own decision, the government of the union achieves the object set before the anti-drug conference. The participation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in this conference might only pursue the aim of exercising pressure on other states with a view to insuring the adoption of similar measures.

"Having taken knowledge of the review of the preparatory committee's labors, sent in by the general secretary's office, the government of the union observed that this committee contented themselves but with expressing the deep regret they felt at the discovery that it was impossible for them to reach an agreement over the various propositions made by the committeemen and that therefore they could not submit to the conference any final scheme. Thus the only result of the committee's labors has been to fix the impossibility for the powers represented upon the committee to reach an agreement over any practical measures in the matter dealt with.

"Now, analyzing the propositions made by members of the preparatory committee and the objections brought forth against them, the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was constrained to come to the conviction that every proposition made by different members inevitably met with the objection by other members pointing out that such proposition or other protected unilaterally the commercial interests of the proposers to the detriment of other states—an argument which, if closely considered, proved from an impartial point of view to be quite correct. For example, it was pointed out in reference to the proposition of the Dutch delegate, that it safeguarded the monopoly of the producers of leaves from which cocaine is manufactured, that is first of all the position of Holland, which would be enabled to raise prices arbitrarily. The same objection was raised against the British scheme of limitation of the production of drugs and regulation of their distribution. It appears indeed that the British plan would create a monopoly for drug producing countries, including certain British dominions and colonies, which would be able to raise prices at their own discretion. As for the French scheme, the opinion was voiced that it leaves altogether untackled the task of limiting the production of drugs, providing only for the setting up of various control and inspection methods and measures and creating obstacles to international traffic in drugs. Incidentally, the French draft contains specific attacks aimed at England in this reference.

Feel Participation Useless.

"The government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has come to the conclusion that in connection with the task undertaken of fighting the spread of opium and other drugs, the various states are striving to satisfy their own commercial interests and gain material benefits. Under such circumstances, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics regards that its participation in these committees or conferences is useless.

"Whereas the government of the union maintains its attitude, which it has repeatedly stated, towards the so-called league of nations, it did agree sometimes to participate in conferences called or committees constituted by that organization when such meetings attain, were it even in part, any really tangible and profitable results in the interests of humanity and economic necessity.

"Thus, for instance, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics partakes in the hygienic committee of the league of nations. As for the drug conference, it cannot—to judge by the work of its preparatory committee—yield positive results of any kind whatsoever."

The above document is over the signature of George Tchicherin, people's commissariat of foreign affairs of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

When Lenin Was Buried

By ISRAEL AMTER.

IT was Sunday, Jan. 28, 1924. A bitter cold day in Moscow. The workers and peasants in their millions had come to Moscow to pay the last respects and tokens of love to their great leader.

All night long they had passed thru the Temple of Labor, to get the last glimpse of Lenin in his sleep. Still the line outside the Temple was coming. In the Temple silence, except for the sounds of the orchestra, intoning the funeral hymn. Silence, while the great man lay there, with the guards of honor, and the red army soldiers on watch. At his side ever Krupskaja and Marie, his sister.

At six a. m. the Temple of Labor was closed. The time for laying Lenin in his tomb had come—in the tomb that had been erected on the Red Square, where the heroes of the revolution lie. Where John Reed is buried where Vorovsky lies. On the Red Square, where he had spoken to millions of workers, outside the Kremlin, where the czars used to sojourn.

At six a. m. sounded the funeral hymn once more—then the funeral march from the Eroica Symphony of Beethoven, followed by Siegfried's Death. Then with a burst—with the overwhelming power of the proletarian hymn—with all the concentrated enthusiasm of the victory of the proletarian revolution—sounded the International. The International that stirs the workers of all lands to the struggle—the International that signalizes not mourning, but victory—the International that strikes fear into the hearts of the bourgeois—the International which unites the phalanxes of the proletarfat for and in the struggle and leads them to the goal!

They carried Lenin forth to his tomb. On to the Red Square—to the strains of the funeral hymn.

The sun had hardly risen. A great mist hung over the city. At the right of the square stands the Kremlin—with the Red flag flying at the top of the building where the central executive committee of the All-Russian Soviet meets. Along the square the massive wall by which the czar protected himself from the workers—the "mob." At the entrance of the square, the shrine where the "faithful" bend the knee to their god and kiss the filthy image of Christ—and at the other end of the famous church with its manifold towers silhouetted against the bleak sky.

The square is lined with red soldiers, standing before bonfires, to protect them from the biting cold. All over the scene the heavy mist, made heavier by the smoke from the fires. Outside the Temple, the mass of workers and peasants. In the streets far removed from the square, the lines of the workers from the factories of Moscow, of the peasants who had come many miles from Moscow, of delegations from the farthest corners of the Soviet state. Outside the hundreds of thousands waiting to pass across the Red Square, before the tomb, and to lay their wreathes upon it.

On the platform before the tomb they place Lenin's body. Then with clear, revolutionary voice a Leningrad worker reads the proclamation of the All-Russian congress. For tho the leader is gone, the Leningrad workers are revolutionary, and know that the revolution did not depend on one man—but was the work of the masses—and this worker was one of them. Like a trumpet it cuts thru the mist—cuts thru the smoke of the fires, that raise their ruddy tongues thru the mist. Like a crystal it sounds in the mourning hour, while the workers and peasants fill the square.

The hundreds of thousands of workers and peasants who had stood from before dawn to march across the square, now begin to move. They come marching, with red flags and banners, draped with black. And as each delegation passes the bier, the flag is lowered. For six hours they march across the square. Horses' manes are frozen; men's beards are covered with ice—only faces peak out of the fur coats and caps of the peasants. Men, women and children alike march across the square, in endless stream—until the line thins out and the last workers have gone past.

Then the red soldiers, guardians of the Soviet state, and of the body of the treasured leader remain. They, too, pass out—leaving behind only the guard in front of the tomb, into which they have put Lenin's body—on the square where the revolutionary workers have been laid to rest.

At one o'clock, the clock over the gate leading to the Kremlin from the red square plays the International. When Lenin's body was placed in the tomb, the air resounded with the funeral hymn—and then the International. No longer must Soviet Russia—the workers and peasants of the glorious revolution and the masses still struggling in the capitalist countries grieve and mourn. Lenin taught us—as Marx had taught before—that the revolution is the achievement of a class. Lenin pointed the way in this period of the class struggle. He did his work and went his way. The struggle is not ended. The capitalist governments still oppress the workers and poor peasants. The oppressed peoples of the colonies still toil under the iron boot of imperialism—robbed and pillaged and enslaved. Soviet Russia, first to achieve liberation from capitalist tyranny, still has a tremendous task to perform. She must still point the way for the toiling masses in the other countries. She must be prepared to help the proletariat in their struggles. She must still defend herself from the efforts of international imperialism to destroy her. The International is the song of revolution, of will to fight, of determination to win. It is the song of victory, of triumph. The International—and the red army: two symbols, two steel realities, two walls of revolutionary struggle.

For weeks and months, the workers and peasants went to the red square to see the body of Lenin in the tomb. Placid, with his hands crossed before him, he lies there, while the myriads of delegations from all parts of the Soviet state go to Moscow to see him once more.

Here was a man of the people. Here was a man who led the workers and peasants to their emancipation. Here was a man who never shirked; never wavered, who knew which way the needle pointed and followed its course steadfastly. He was gone—but the revolution goes on—and we must fight!

Lenin As I Saw Him

By Schachno Epstein

III.

LENIN'S PERSONALITY.

AFTER I had heard Lenin's speech for the first time in Geneva, I had the occasion to be in Zurich several times. My friends with whom I stayed were very ardent Bolsheviks. They knew Lenin personally, they lived with him at times in various places; they simply adored him.

Thru these friends I often traveled in Bolshevistic circles, there I noticed that all of them are penetrated with a fanatic belief in Lenin. Lenin's name was mentioned with reverence.

A similar attitude was not to be noticed even among the most ardent mensheviks to Plechanov. Plechanov was to the mensheviks the only authority; his opinion meant everything but of fanatic belief there was not a trace.

To tell you the truth, I was somewhat shocked by the enthusiasm my new circle had for Lenin. I could not conceive how Marxists could develop such an adoration for a person.

I still remember the hot discussion we had the very first evening we met. At that time the new tendencies in the Russian literature the so-called "God seekings" which was then very much in style even among the Russian socialist intelligentsia were widely discussed, especially, have they dwelt on Maxim Gorky's "Confession" and Lunacharski's "Religion and Socialism." The mensheviks did not think much of Lunacharski's works; especially did Plenchanov severely criticize them declaring them anti-Marxian, because they turned the people into a superstitious cult. And, because Gorky's "Confession" was written under the influence of Lunacharski he did not spare Gorky either. The works of both Gorky and Lunachariski impressed me very much. Particularly was I impressed by the scene in "Confession," where a crippled girl begins to talk under the hypnosis of the mob which symbolizes the power of the masses. Plenchanov gave a series of lectures in Geneva on the so-called "God seeking" themes; he, as a Marxian proved that Lunacharski went too far with his "religious spirits" concerning socialism, using Plechanov's expression; he regretted that the genial artist Gorky fell under the influence of that spirit. Those lectures with their iron logic weakened the impression their works made on me.

In the discussion with my Zurich friends and their acquaintances I shared the opinion of Plechanov, but here I got my share. Lenin thinks differently about it. Gorky and Lunacharski gave expression to Lenin's ideas. This argument was sufficient not to pay any attention to what I had to say. I lost patience. While the discussion took place at a feast of some sort we drank wine and brandy I got heated up and called my friends and their acquaintances idolators.

Well, I needed no more:- Under thick smoke of the cigattes and under the influence of liquor I was labelled as a narrow minded and one-sided Bundist who repeats parrot-like everything Plechanov says. I used the same argument against them but I was alone—and one on the battlefield is not a warrior . . .

The dispute culminated almost in a tragedy. We parted not saying goodbye to one another. I was lucky as it was, because among my opponents there were some hot headed lads, especially one Polish social-democrat whom they had to keep back from using "striking arguments" against my menshevistic, or rather bundistic atheism . . .

To be sure, after, when the effects of the "feast" were gone, the dispute was forgotten and a closer friendship between the hot-headed fellows and myself was formed.

The following day, in a friendly manner have my friends tried to prove to me why they have so much faith in Lenin. They have told me of the monastic life Lenin leads, of his simplicity of manner, of how little he needs to get along, how unassuming he is even with the commonest people, of the comradely atmosphere he creates around himself—all this was full of touching tenderness.

All these stories about Lenin have revealed to me the following detailed characteristics: He looks for a room for his wife and himself in a worker's house. His dwelling usually consists of a poorly furnished room but it must be exceptionally clean. Lenin just loves cleanliness. Lenin can wear a suit for years and it will always be in good shape. The relation between his proletarian landlords and Lenin are so familiar, intimate, and friendly that when he parts they are deeply sorry. He very often takes care of the landlord's children, is not lazy to go to the maket with a bag in hand to buy things for the house, and does the wife feel out of sorts, he prepares the dinner for the members of the house.

Little ones are in love with Lenin; he likes to play with them and while doing it, he becomes a child himself. He is also very humorous, loves to be merry, and when his is in a happy mood he tells jokes and anecdotes that make everbody laugh. To be on an outing with him is a great pleasure, especially when he rides bicycle. He performs all kinds of stunts and the people laugh. He is also a great chess player. He never loses a chess game even to the greatest players. One more thing I learned about him: His most favored writer is Leo Tolstoi; his "War and Peace" Lenin knows by heart, especially does he love the peasant Karatayev, the hero of "War and Peace," a simple son of his nation, who is instinctively a Marxist . . .

Not long ago I read about a conversation between the German writer, Arthur Holitcher and a Zurich shoemaker with whom Lenin stayed and an article about Lenin's personality by C. N. Semashno, the commissar of people's health of Soviet Russia. Then I began to realize that my friends of Zurich have not exaggerated at all when they told me a few characteristics of Lenin.

Whether the details my friends told me of Lenin were all true did not interest me so much. I had no reason not to believe them. But the mere facts that such details are told, was sufficient to give me the key to the mystery. It was easy for me to understand why the attitude of Lenin's disciples toward him is so different from the attitude of Plechanov's disciples toward Plechanov . . .

During my migrating outside of Russia, I had no other occasion to see Lenin; I met him in Russia, however, when his pious followers consisted of millions of workers and peasants.

ON THE ROLE OF FORCE

By WILLIAM SIMONS.

When capitalist governments persecute Communists, when they resort to the white terror against the revolutionary workers, they do it "to preserve peace." They are using force to save capitalist civilization from those who would "use force to destroy existing society."

When the sugar barons of the United States wished to grab Cuba, Senator John M. Thurston made a speech for intervention on the floor of the senate, on March 24, 1898, in which he glorified the use of force.

When hypocritical capitalism wraps itself in the skin of a lamb, it should be confronted with Thurston's speech, of which the following is an extract:

"We cannot intervene and save Cuba without the exercise of force and force means war; war means blood . . .

"Intervention means force. Force means war. War means blood. But it will be God's force. When has a battle for humanity and liberty ever been won except by force? (Our emphasis.) What barricade of wrong, injustice and oppression has ever been carried except by force?

"Force compelled the signature of unwilling royalty to the great Magna Carta; force put life into the declaration of independence and made effective the emancipation proclamation; force beat with naked hands upon the iron gateway of the Bastille and made reprisal in one awful hour for centuries of kingly crime; force made the flag of revolution over Bunker Hill and marked the snows of Valley Forge with blood-stained feet . . .; force saved the union, kept the stars in the flag, made 'niggers' men. The time for God's force has come again."

"The time "for God's force" always comes, when finance capital seeks to extend its sway. God's force, says Thurston, is capitalist force; and it will hear of no other.

Bomb Exploded Under Bridge.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Jan. 18.—An attempt to wreck the railroad bridge at Slivnitza and derail the express was made today.

SCHOOLS GRIND OUT WORKERS FOR BREAD LINE

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 18.— The unemployment situation here is growing worse rather than showing any improvement.

Negro workers are particularly affected by this condition. The Colored Commercial Club reports that 450 men apply for work daily, for whom they have no jobs to furnish. Recent business failures in the city have thrown hundreds of "white collar" workers onto the slave market. The Burgess-Nash department store bankruptcy alone threw 600 out of jobs.

Meanwhile local high-schools and business colleges are turning out hundreds more of "trained office workers" who throng the business houses and employment offices in fruitless quest of work. When the occasional job happens to be open, these applicants are told that "only experienced help is wanted." And at wages ranging from six to eighteen dollars a week, the latter being about the highest figure for women workers.

Work For Meals.

Restaurants and cafeterias are even getting by to some extent with no wages, whatever. High school and college students are employed under the guise of "charity" to work for their meals.

Such advertisements as appear in local capitalist newspapers prove to be the usual "fake" soliciting proposition, offering the "ambitious" an opportunity to wear out their shoes for a slim chance on commissions.

The local chamber of commerce held out a hope to the unemployed in the shape of a Sears-Roebuck braneh which, it was announced, would employ 3,000 workers immediately. (There are fully five times that number out of jobs). The branch went to Kansas City, however. Perhaps the chamber of commerce will tell the jobless to hike down there, and join the mob which will undoubtedly beseige the "branch" for an opportunity to labor for Sears-Roebuck's famous wages scales.

Faker Urges Bonus for Workers.

Meantime, the local labor skates have launched another fake "labor paper" to sandbag the local business men. This rag announces that it wants "more soup bones for the unemployed" and tries to "kid" the Communists who would demand maintenance at union wages rather than enforced scabbery. The editor of this sheet, who fears to print his name on it, announces that this is his "soup-bone philosophy."

Considering that the capitalist charities gave the jobless one reasonably good feed on Christmas, it would seem that this amateur faker could at least suggest "soup" rather than "soup-bones." But such are the elements who now dominate the labor organizations and try to expel the Communists. The unemployed will learn to choose between them, when they come to realize the need of leadership.

NOTES FOR DETROIT

Detroit Lenin Memorial Program.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 18.—Detroit Communists will hold their Lenin memorial meeting Sunday, Jan. 25, 2:00 p. m. in the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin.

An exceptional program of appropriate vocal and instrumental numbers has been arranged, and Robert Minor, cartoonist of the DAILY WORKER, will deliver the principal address.

The memorial meeting will not be for the purpose of going into mourning. Rather will the occasion be utilized to acquaint the masses with the principles of Leninism and to awaken in them the consciousness that only thru an application of these principles in their daily struggles can they make themselves victorious in their struggle for power.

The meeting will be under the joint auspices of the Workers Party and the Young Workers' League. Admission is 25 cents.

Workers Cheer Lenin Pictures and Soviet Films Shown Here

An enthusiastic crowd that filled twice Gartner's Theater wildly cheered Lenin when the film "In Memoriam—Lenin" was shown. The other movies, "Polikushka" and "Soldier Ivans' Miracle" were also applauded by the big audience. The workers in the theater admitted to the writer that there was never such a big crowd in the place. The pictures had to be shown three times to accommodate the people. The union moving picture operator was as enthusiastic as the audience. "This is the stuff for workers," he said. "Where did you get it? We haven't got such pictures in the United States. Why don't you get some more of them?" The janitor of the theater fully agreed with him as he watched the movies with interest.

But it wasn't only the workers that praised the pictures. An old physician said: "It is the first time in my life that I waited outside of a theater for half an hour to see a movie, and I don't regret waiting. It is a wonder! It is the Moscow art only that can produce such a picture."

The committee of the Technical Aid Society, under whose auspices the pictures were shown, was so enthusiastic about the affair that they decided to run another movie in the near future.

JACK JOHNSTONE WILL SPEAK ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION AT THE NEXT MEETING OF CHICAGO BRANCH T.U.E.L.

Jack Johnstone, assistant secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, will report on the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor at the next regular monthly meeting of the Chicago branch of the league.

The meeting will be held on the last Wednesday in January at 8 p. m. in North West Hall, corner of Western and North avenues.

Comrade Johnstone reported the El Paso convention for the DAILY WORKER and traveled to Mexico with, but not as guest of, the labor fakers who accepted President Calles' of Mexico invitation to witness the inaugural ceremonies in the Mexican capital.

Johnstone has the unusual distinction of being the first Communist reporter in America to announce the passing of America's greatest labor faker.

More About Farm Problems.

To the DAILY WORKER:— I am very glad to see that there is good hope for its continuation, as I consider the paper of great importance, as to educate the mass of the people politically and economically.

As I see it, I should like the paper still better if you could give a little more consideration and place to the farm problem and the conditions of working farmers, as working farmers and laborers ought to stand together.

I, as well as all farmer subscribers would also appreciate very much if it was possible for you to have the market prices on farm products in your paper.

Your comrade,
S. O. Borsheim,
Zahl, N. Dakota.

Philadelphia Y. W. L. Held Enthusiastic Liebknecht Meeting

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18.—One of the biggest meetings ever held under the auspices of the Philadelphia Young Workers' League was the Liebknecht memorial. Judging by the crowd that filled Eagle's Temple it is evident that the propaganda of the league is reaching more workers than ever before.

The first speaker was Comrade Oliver Carlson. Comrade Carlson gave a brief outline of Liebknecht's activities in the International Youth Movement and showed that it was he that actually laid the foundation for it. Great was the applause when Carlson concluded by pointing out that it was the Young Communist International that is the highest developed stage of the youth movement and is carrying on the fight for which Liebknecht and Luxemburg were murdered.

A thunderous applause greeted the chairman's introduction of the "principal speaker of the evening" Comrade Naomi Litvakoff of the Philadelphia Juniors. The short speech made by this twelve year old girl held the audience spell bound.

Comrade H. M. Wicks was the next speaker. He started out by relating the activities of an American Liebknecht who was put behind the bars to serve a sentence of from three to ten years. No sooner had Wicks mentioned the name of C. E. Ruthenberg than the audience burst into a great applause. At that point an appeal for a collection was made for the Ruthenberg Defence which netted $81.70. Comrade Wicks then proceeded to explain the treacherous role of the social democracy that murdered Liebknechat and Luxemburg.

The last speaker of the evening was Comrade Ludwig Lore who spoke in German.

Before the meeting adjourned a resolution was adopted demanding that the government of the state of Michigan release the most valiant fighter for working class freedom—C. E. Ruthenberg.

ONE PER CENT MORE JOBS IN N. Y. STATE

But Small Rise Still Leaves Jobless Army

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Employment in New York state factories ran counter to the usual seasonal trend, rising 1 per cent between November and December, according to the monthly report of the state industrial commissioner. This brings the number of factory payrolls to a level 7 per cent under December 1923 and 12 per cent below the peak of the 1923 business boom. Tens of thousands employed in the state at that time are still out of work.

The year-end gain, according to the report, was due to improvement in the basic industries making producers' goods on which the major changes in the business cycle depend.

Sifinificant changes by industries were a 12 per cent increase in employment in pig iron and steel mills; reemployment of 2,000 workers in brass and copper establishments; increase in cotton mill operatives to the level of Jan. 1924 leaving 2,000 who had jobs during peak employment of 1920 still out of work; heavy seasonal declines in workers employed by building material concerns; heavy seasonal layoffs in men's clothing and in the canning industry.

planned the great revolution and brought the Soviet regime safely thru crisis after crisis, weathered every storm and is today more strongly intrenched in the confidence of the masses than ever.

SINCE the first Lenin memorial was held one year ago, the Ramsay MacDonald government has passed out of the picture. About all it accomplished while it existed was to put over the Dawes' plan for the capitalists who were at their wits end to pull themselves out of the morass in which the world war had engulfed them. They must have the benevolent neutrality of the workers in order to get back to terra firma. The socialists came in handy. Of course, MacDonald recognized the Soviet government, but the avowedly capitalist parties would have done that in any event. Business wanted recognition and so did the labor movement. What else could Ramsay do?

THE Ramsay MacDonald government accomplished nothing of value to the working class. It showed its willingness to serve the capitalists. When the latter decided they could get along without MacDonald they framed up on him and, now he is wintering in the Carribean Sea. Soviet Russia, on the other hand, led by the Communists has gone from one victory to another. France, the most formidable foe of the Soviet government on the continent of Europe, finally resumed relations with Moscow.

IN the East, China recognized the Soviet power and today the red flag flies in Pekin. Japan is about to sign a treaty with Russia and even the proud and vulgar bourgeoisie of the United States have given Charles Evans Hughes his walking papers because he insists on declaring that Soviet Russia is a diplomatic myth and doesn't exist. The American capitalists may be strangers to classical literature but they know a red army when they see it and Comrade Tchicherin has his name on so many treaties that it is beginning to dawn on Washington that he is a rather substantial sort of a ghost.

IT is quite likely that by the time we celebrate the next Lenin memorial meeting, after the forthcoming one, a Soviet ambassador will be stationed in Washington, with the red flag flying over the embassy where formerly the symbol of czarism waved. This will be hard on bourgeois eyes, but they will have to get used to it. It will be tough on the Russian workers to look at the flag of J. P. Morgan flying over the American embassy in Moscow, but they know that it will not be for long. They know that the American workers will take care of their own capitalist government, and that the flag of Lenin, will some day float over every capital in the world.

Chicago Wars on Other Lake Cities in Fight for Water

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 18.—The conference of representatives of other lake cities bordering the Great Lakes met here under the name of the Great Lakes Harbor Association, and planned to raise a fund of $1,500,000 to be used to prevent Chicago from receiving the 10,000 cubic feet of water per second which the Windy City is asking of congress.

District 5 Averages Nearly $1 a Member in Daily Worker Drive--Has the Lead

District 5 has 1,294 members. The contributions to date to insure our central party organ total $1,238.00. This is nearly $1.00 per member, or one-third of the quota assigned.

This district lies in the western Pennsylvania mining and steel belt. The workers here have been hardened in innumerable struggles and the party members know, therefore, that every weapon we have must be maintained and improved.

Many District 5 Branches Make Heavy Contributions

Very generous contributions have been received from many District 5 branches. We hope that the spirit shown in making these initial contributions will continue until all quotas are filled.

The Crime Hunters

Crime statistics, like advertising figures, depend on who is slinging the figures. Those in charge of law enforcement show, by figures, that crime is on the decrease. Those who would like to be on the crime hunting payroll, produce figures that prove the opposite. Thus the battle rages.

Since the Volstead act became the law of the land and violating it became the favorite indoor sport of the law-loving American people, law enforcers have more trouble than they ever had before. The competition for the job was never so keen, because never before did it pay so well.

Chicago would like to be known as a law abiding city. The capitalists who run it have grown wealthy in shady transactions and like the roues with less vitality than virtue, they are now willing to be good. Those whose fortunes are yet unmade are on the other side of the fence. Hence the tumult over crime.

The violators of the prohibition law suggest that the police get after the rape fiends, the professional burglars and murderers. The clergy, evidently thinking the burglars, rape fiends and murderers are less obnoxious to god than bootleggers, devote their time to raiding blind pigs and vice resorts. Perhaps they do this to dissipate the growing feeling that a clergyman's collar is only a license for licentiousness. The net result of the crime is that the murderers are getting cockier, the rape fiends get more fiendish and the burglars don't even get their names in the papers. But the crime hounds do.

Mayor Dever was praised by Gary and Rockefeller jr. for his efforts in enforcing the prohibition law. This despite the fact that his honor is a catholic. Since those words of adulation were uttered the mayor is unbearable. His chief of police called a meeting of captains to discuss plans to put down liquor. One captain walked in, or rather rolled in. He was the living embodiment of the fine art of putting down liquor. Chief Collins took his star away. The captain didn't care; he was gloriously drunk. Chicago is in America, not in Russia.

Now the wealthy citizens of Chicago, railroad magnates, oil barons, bankers and brokers, men who have run the gauntlet of public opprobrium for years have decided to become law enforcers. They grew rich thru various forms of robbery, robbery of the workers in particular. They are acting on the theory that a good offensive is the best defensive strategy. While they are noising about criminals, their own criminal acts may escape detection. It is mighty difficult to suspect a judge of being a crook or a clergyman of being a libertine. Do not bank thieves nowadays appear in the role of bank inspectors? One must keep up with the times.

There is money in crime. There is money in protecting it. There is no civic spirit under capitalism. "Chicago is a fine city to plunder." This is the slogan of the capitalist politicians who run it or have ambition to run it. The law enforcers are a set of grafters in competition with the other set who want a wide open city. Administrations come and administrations go, but graft, crime and vice go on forever. Social cleanliness and capitalism cannot exist together.

The Chicago city council voted to open its sessions by prayer. In order to keep on the right side of the votes every respectable sect in the city is urged to send a prayer monger. The crooks can now operate under divine sanction.

The Socialist Debacle

Monarchist supporters of kaiserism are today in charge of the republican government of Germany. Of the eight cabinet members officially appointed, six are monarchists, the seventh is an industrialist with anti-republican leanings. The eighth is a republican.

The social-democrats, watchdogs of the capitalist republic, are on the outside twiddling their thumbs. Despite their boasted victory in the recent elections, they have no more effect on political developments than a fly on the axle of a wagon wheel has on the progress of the vehicle. The pendulum has swung to the right, about as far as it can go, with Germany remaining a republic. The next step may be the restoration of the monarchy.

Six years after the German revolution sent the kaiser into exile, his supporters are again at the head of the German government. The German revolution, the much touted monument to social-democracy, is but a bad dream. The workers who made it possible to ditch the kaiser are today worse off than ever with the Dawes plan like a giant iron collar around their necks. They may thank the social-democrats for their predicament.

The socialists drowned the German revolution in the blood of the working class. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, Communist leaders, were assassinated by the socialists who fought to uphold the banner of capitalist democracy rather than the dictatorship of the proletariat. They pointed to Russia, torn by civil war, devastated by famine, and isolated by the blockade as a horrible example of workers' rule. The German workers followed the social-democrats. Today, the kaiser may be packing up his household goods for a come-back.

Only a political saphead like Victor Berger sees a danger of a monarchist revival in Russia. The czar is under the ground. He is safe. His supporters are scattered all over the world, living precariously. The Soviet republic is powerful. The workers and peasants are their own bosses. Prosperity is on the up-grade. It is the workers' prosperity. They have a dictatorship. It is their own dictatorship, real democracy. It is a dictatorship of the many in the interests of the many. Russia is no longer torn by civil war and devastated by famine, it is no longer a horrible example. It is a beacon light to the workers of the world.

The New Brain Twister

The cross word puzzle has a serious competitor in Washington political circles. The wives, daughters, friends, poor relatives and other liabilities of the politicians and diplomats who live in and on the Capitol have put their cross word puzzles on the shelf and now devote themselves to the task of solving the question, whether or not this government is entangled in European politics.

It all happened because the unofficial official representatives of the Coolidge administration signed, with the allied powers, an agreement affecting the collection of reparations from Germany under the Dawes plan. According to London dispatches, Winston Churchill, British representative, pulled the wool over Ambassador Kellogg's eyes by handing him a lot of taffy and commenting favorably on the amount of gray matter he carried under his hat. Kellogg rose to the occasion instantly, like a well-trained sucker, and put his John Hancock where Churchill's index finger pointed. The French and the British thereupon began to wink at each other and said substantially: "We got the Yankee by the shirt tail." The French and British feel it will be easier for them to soak Germany with the signature of the United States attached to the dunning bill.

But the policy of official participation in "foreign entanglements," as the capitalist demagogues like to put it, is not popular in the United States, and is a bad vote-catching bait. So, when the London and Paris dispatches came chuckling to Washington, the wise heads in the Coolidge balliwick began to sniffle danger. Hence the difference of opinion; one set of politicians saying: "We are entangled," and the administration set saying: "We are as free as the air."

But as the Moscow Pravda points out, the United was not unwittingly drawn into the Dawes plan entanglement. Wall Street is bursting with gold and needs new outlets for its surplus. The policy of isolation no longer works. Political factors must be taken into consideration, but the world is none too large for American capitalism and the policy of isolation must go by the board. Coolidge and his masters are simply getting the United States used to participation in "foreign entanglements." It is already in in fact if not officially.

Communist Leadership

The labor fakers are bitter against the Communists not alone because they advocate the overthrow of capitalism, under which the fakers are doing nicely, but because the Communists insist on getting the workers into action against the capitalists now, to wrench more of the products of their labor from the exploiters. The fakers stand in the way of any action of this sort. They are not labor leaders in the real sense. They are agents of the bosses and the last thing they want to see the workers do is fight against the bosses.

The Communists are not content with carrying on a desultory propaganda against capitalism in general among the workers. They have a program for immediate action as well as for the ultimate goal. They know that the masses require leadership. They will have either the leadership of the reactionaries, which they have now, or they will have the leadership of the progressives, which is Communist leadership. This means the unhorsing of the present reactionary jockeys and that is where the Communists hit the fakers right where they live. This accounts for the campaign of expulsions against the Communists. But in spite of all the efforts of the fakers the Communists are making progress.

The Communists have nominated a slate for the elections in the International Association of Machinists. Julius Emme, of St. Paul, is the candidate for president, Tim Buck of Canada for general secretary. Lodge 84 of the Machinists' Union, at its last meeting, endorsed the entire left wing slate.

This is only one example of the rebirth of insurgency in the ranks of organized labor. Whereas in former years such developments were leaderless and ineffective because the efforts were not coordinated, today the Trade Union Educational League is giving direction to the rebellious movement within the trade union and organizing it on a national scale.

This accounts for the desperate efforts of the fakers to drive the Communists, the leaders of the revolt, out of the unions. But their efforts will be in vain.

"Socialist" Treachery in Ebert Case

By R. ALBERT.

THERE was a time when the German social democracy was the brain and the hope of the labor international. There was at this time in the saddlers' union an active man, who was certainly more inclined to a cautious policy of reform than to preparations for street fighting, but nevertheless, was sufficiently eloquent and red; Fritz Ebert. Bygone times! What a foul vapor is more and more blotting out this glorious past of the greatest party of the Second International is shown to us in a most striking manner by the trial in Magdeburg.

We had believed that we had seen and heard everything possible in Germany, the reichstag vote of the 4th of August, 1914. Scheidemann, who agreed with the court flunkeys that he and his party should cry "Hoch der kaiser," on the occasion of voting the war credits. Noske, who caused to be shot down the proletarians who had taken his own socialism seriously. The "Vorwarts," which incited the murder of Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht, the "Vorwarts" which clings to the official legend regarding this crime. The fascist Ehrhardt, who a year ago made the revelation that before offering the dictatorship to Kapp, he offered it to Noske. The social democratic party executive which approved of the march of the reactionary reichswehr into red Saxony. And so many other execrable things which have been spoken, written down, posted up, proclaimed and committed! So that we had to ask ourselves repeatedly: When will there be an end to this cesspool of iniquity?

No, it appears we have not yet seen everything, we have not yet learned everything. From this cesspool, still further stenches arise and mingle with the thick vapor which covers the memory of Bebel and the great founders of the German social democracy. This is shown by the trial which is now being held in Madgeburg.

A German nationalist of the name of Rothardt now, after eight years accuses the reichs President Ebert of having, in January, 1918, on the occasion of the great strike in the munition factories—the first great mass rising of the German workers against the imperialist slaughter, the true forerunner of the November revolution—declared that the general strike must be continued as it would shorten the war. Abominable calumny! The citizen Ebert starts an action for libel against the base slanderer.

Hindenburg, Ludendorff, Mackenson drove their last reserves of cannonfodder into the slaughter. The empire cracked in all directions, the realm began to collapse. The general strike in the munition factories in 1918 was a "wild" strike, instigated by Spartacist agitators. When the strike broke out the social democratic party executive, of which Ebert was the chairman, joined in the strike and sent its representatives into the strike committee. These are the facts. Now witnesses appeal before the reactionary judges, who sit there with malicious joy. It is a pleasure for these judges to see the good social democratic servants of the bourgeois order oscillating between treason to the old regime and treason to the working class.

President Ebert disclaims that he ever wished to shorten the war, that would be a contradiction of his whole past. The honest man smites his bosom, the witness Scheidemann will explain everything.

Scheidemann has done so. At the hearing of the trial on December 11, he deposed that it was thanks to the social democratic party that the monarchy did not fall some months earlier than it did. "If we had not been on the strike committee, then this court would probably not be sitting today, and the war and everything else, according to my firm conviction, would have been already settled in January, 1918." These are the actual words of Scheidemann. The nationalist court of Madgeburg is one of the courts of plutocratic Germany, in which over 8,000 proletarians are pining in prison. "You ought to be grateful to us," said Scheidemann. That is also our opinion.

Questioned by the president of the court in a cynical manner regarding the influence of the social democrats at that time, Scheidemann evaded the answer and only said that if the social democratic party had attempted to oppose the strike, it would have been like attempting to check an avalanche. In the further course of his evidence Scheidemann made a statement regarding a very interesting sitting of the social democratic reichstag fraction on September 23, 1918. In this sitting it was decided to participate in the then still existing imperial government of the lost war, and Scheidemann now related that when Ebert received the last news from the front, tears came into his eyes and he said, one must enter the government in order to save what still remains to be saved.

To save what? The dynasty! The army? The colonies? The shattered hopes of profitable annexations? The bourgeois order? To save what? Everything that can be saved at any price. Of course, with the exception of socialism.

When Scheidemann was reminded that the strike of January, 1918, had put forward the demand for an amnesty, he pointed out that the party executive had rejected this in the same way as it today rejects that of the Communists. It never occurred to him that anybody having the least pretentions to honesty would, even tho hypocritically, have made a distinction between the prisons of the Hohenzollerns and those of the republic. It is true that we find practically no difference.

It would be worth while to follow all the statements of the witnesses word for word. After Scheidemann and Hermann Miller, came the turn of Dittmann, who, among other things declared on oath, that the social democrats only entered the strike committee in order, by skillful negotiations, to bring about the resumption of work, in plain language, to sabotage the movement. That is true. One can fight the working class better from within than from without. Treachery is the sharpest weapon against it. The witness Wutschik, confessed to the lack of political influence of the social democratic party executive at that moment, which, as it was no longer able to lead, only had the possibility of betrayal; the witness stated that the strike had already been entered upon up to the last man when the party executive sanctioned it.

The trial is still proceeding. The exposure of social democratic betrayals promises still further revelations. For the present we will quote the concluding words of Scheidemann:

"If we had not entered the strike committee, then the 'Deutsche Zeitung' would not be in a position today to abuse me; a tscheka would have come into existence which would have put an end to this paper and probably hanged me."

Scheidemann is right. But what did not happen in 1918 can still happen one of these fine days.

MILLION 'KIDS' NOW EMPLOYED IN INDUSTRIES

Al Smith Trims on Child Law

There are over one million children now being exploited in the industries of the nation while millions of adults are unemployed. This explains the opposition of the employers to the child labor amendment. Children can be employed at lower wages than adults. It is not concern over paternalism in government that prompts the opposition. The capitalists are anxious to have this paternalism exercised on the side of their interests. But they want no law that would even in the slightest way interfere with their right to grind profits out of the children.

Smith with Bosses

That Governor Al Smith's straddling of the amendment in his inaugural speech had the sanction of the business elements is proved by a resolution passed by the merchants' association, endorsing Smith's position on the child labor law. The governor recommended that the question be submitted to a referendum vote. This would give the enemies of the proposed law an opportunity to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to defeat it and line up the Roman catholic church machine to kill it is they did in Massachusetts.

According to the 1920 census there were 1,060,958 children at work in industry and in the agricultural regions. This count only covered those from ten to fifteen years old. Thousands of children less than ten years old have been found working by investigators from societies concerned with child welfare.

Leaders Are Asleep.

The South Carolina legislature rejected the proposed amendment by a unanimous vote in both houses. California ratified the law and the governors of Maine and New Hampshire recommend ratification.

The reactionary leaders of the American Federation of Labor are making no organized effort to defeat the exploiters of child labor. Mass meetings should be organized and the workers aroused to the seriousness of the child labor problem.

MUSIC.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

The unfinished quartet of Ernest Chausson was given its first performance in Chicago last Wednesday afternoon, on the second program of this season of the Gordon string quartet, given in the foyer of Orchestra Hall.

This quartet of Chausson is much like his symphony. That means it is highly concentrated emotional expression, the expression of some great tearing necessity within the man to give vent to his feelings in tone. There is no resisting Chausson. He sweeps one away so completely that one cannot analyze his music intellectually as one hears it. And it is because of this appeal directly to the heart and not to the head that makes Chausson, however, few of his works, one of the great composers of modern times.

The Beethoven quartet, opus 132, followed the Chausson. It might have been that the writer had not recuperated from the Frenchman's composition, but it seemed as the Beethoven were infinitely inferior to it. The first movement has the typically troubled, nervous touch of a Beethoven allegro, but the third section, which is the slow movement, is so long drawn out that it seems endless.

The Gordon quartet is composed of four members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Jacques Gordon, first violin; John Weicher, second violin; Clarence Evans, viola, and Alfred Wallenstein, violincello. The playing of this organization has the elegance and the fineness that comes with such close association as these four men experience.

Senators Want More Money to Be Spent On War Appropriations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 18.—Another attempt was made in the senate today to secure elevation of guns on American battleships, in order to increase their range. The debate on the elevation of the guns occurred when the $287,316,000 naval appropriation bill came up for passage by the senate.

Senator Hale pointed out that the bill represented an expenditure of $9,141,000 more than was given the navy during the current fiscal year.

In addition to this large appropriation Senator McKellar declared in favor of further appropriations to allow for elevation of the guns. He attacked the bill because it had made no such provision.

COMMUNIST-CHILDREN'S-COLUMN

Johnny Disagreed with the Teacher.

One day in school the teacher was reading to our class about the capitalists. After she was thru she asked the children the following question: "What are those people who do all the work in mines, factories and other places called?"

Johnny, who was a Junior, rose and answered: "The workers."

The teacher's face colored as she said: "Why, Johnny, you're mistaken! It is the capitalists who do all the work. The workers are the laziest people on earth. The capitalists are the people who do the big work of this world."

Johnny could not control his anger. He yelled out to the teacher that just the opposite is true. The teacher told, Johnny that if he spoke another word he would have to go to the office.

Johnny didn't want to say anything else to the teacher just then. "I'll talk to her after school some day soon," he thought.

Everyone in the class agreed with Johnny except Billy, who is a rich boy. Just as soon as Johnny got thru speaking, Billy shook his fist at him and passed a note to him which read: "Meet me behind the school house after school and I'll show you if capitalists work." Johnny answered on the same slip of paper: "I'll be there."

As soon as school was out Johnny and his friends went behind the school house to meet Billy. It didn't take Johnny long before he had Billy on the ground, begging Johnny not to hit him any more, and promising that he would not write such a note again.

The next afternoon Johnny talked to his teacher about the workers and the capitalists. Johnny went home very happy because he convinced his teacher that the workers did all the work at the mines and factories, and everywhere.

Hinman and His Mouthful

SOME of the papers of big business see radicalism in eclipse in the small vote that LaFollette polled. Hinman, the Hearst specialist, who noses around the crooked paths that the rolling dollars make, who claims to have studied the development of radicalism on two whole continents, tells the business world not to believe it.

Radicalism is still as busy as ever, says Hinman. "Radicals are still trying to force the class struggle upon business men by forcing workers to strike, by urging 'have-nots' to rise and smite the 'haves.' And therefore business men had better not sit back too deeply in their cushioned club chairs, closing their eyes to this imminent danger."

Hinman says more. He says that the extreme radicals have in this country the same powerful press as ever. Seventy papers printed in English, 220 printed in foreign languages, 269 imported regularly from foreign countries.

If Hinman means us when he refers to extreme radicals, then we wish that the number of papers he credits us with having was really the number we had. With 70 English papers and a couple of hundred language papers we'd be inclined to look for the revolution just around most any corner.

As matters stand we must confess to only one English daily paper. And we are trying our best to vitamine and callory this one so that it may swing a wicked fist during the coming year. Dollars, many of them, will help this paper of the "have nots" land solar plexus blows upon the "haves."

If you are with us in this fight, then you'll tell this story at the next meeting, to all the workers you see. We want everybody that's on our side to help INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

WE HAVE ISSUED $15,000 WORTH OF DAILY WORKER INSURANCE POLICIES TO DATE. HAVE YOU YOURS?

RUTHENBERG ADMITT[illegible] $7,500 BAIL BY JUSTICE BRANDEIS AS MC REYNOLDS DENIES WRIT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19.—A writ of supersedeas was granted C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party by Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court Louis Brandeis Sunday.

As soon as the technical details are arranged Comrade Ruthenberg will come out of the Jackson, Mich., penitentiary on $7,500 bail.

Brandeis set the bail at $7,500 after Justice McReynolds, who has jurisdiction over most Michigan cases, denied the writ of supersedeas and refused to admit Comrade Ruthenberg to bail. Frank P. Walsh of New York and Kansas City, and Isaac Ferguson of Chicago, made the appeal for the writ.

Law Unconstitutional

The two lawyers for Comrade Ruthenberg claimed that the criminal syndicalist law of Michigan under which Ruthenberg was sentenced is unconstitutional, as it denies the right of free speech and assemblage.

They further declare that no intent of criminal injury was shown by the Berrien county prosecution. Comrade Ruthenberg was found guilty of expressing his communistic opinions, and of "assembling with" other Communists at the August, 1922, national convention of the Communists.

Supreme Court Get Case

The United States supreme court must now pass on the constitionality of the Michigan criminal syndicalist law. The constitutionality of any state syndicalist law has not yet been passed on by that body. Benjamin Gitlow is now out of Sing Sing penitentiary on bail, pending a hearing before the U. S. supreme court on the constitutionality of the New York state criminal syndicalist law. These laws were stated at the time of their passage to be "war-time" acts" to prevent foreign enemies of the United States from engaging in activity in this country against the United States, but they have been used from the start by the employers against labor, and against those who tried to strengthen the ranks of the militant workers.

Ruthenberg Now In Prison

Comrade Ruthenberg has been confined in the Jackson, Mich., penitentiary for the past two weeks, after the Michigan state supreme court at Lansing refused to reverse the conviction and sentence of three to ten years at hard labor and $5,000.00 fine imposed by Judge Charles White at St. Joseph, Michigan. Comrade Ruthenberg had not yet been put to work in the prison, which has one of the most damnable prison labor contract systems in the country. Ruthenberg is still in quarantine.

Jackson Prison Worst

The Jackson prison boasts that the prisoners make one dollar or slightly more a day in the jute mills and shoe shops. But the prisoners are worked like slaves, under penalty of cruel and vicious punishment, and are made to turn out more work than the lowest paid non-union factroy labor. The working conditions are of the worst, prisoners frequently contracting tuberculosis in the rotten, dust filled air of the jute mill.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

GRAND DUKE BORIS VLADIMIROVICH of Russia, (there is no cash in the title in Russia), is here for a good time. Congressman La-Guardia copped a little publicity by suggesting that the duke be fumigated before being allowed to land. The aristocratic visitor denied that he is here to overthrow the government. It's being run to suit him, he declares.

THE last time Boris was in this [illegible] he distinguished himself by drinking champagne out of a chorus girl's shoe. This time he may sip moonshine from her hip, if that is where they carry their flasks. The duke is nothing if not gallant. That is about all he can show as an excuse for consuming his vitamines. The duke traveled first class, but the rest of his family came second. It's a tough world for dukes, particularly Russian dukes.

HIRAM JOHNSON is back in the news again. He saw his chance when Kellogg signed the agreement with the allied powers providing for participation by the United States in the work of skinning Germany thru the Dawes' plan. Johnson has not been so happy in many months. He introduced a motion requesting Secretary of State Hughes to come across with the documentary evidence on the Dawes' plan and everything connected with it. Fellows like Johnson stand for the capitalist system alright, but the interests they represent put a tack on Wall Street's throne every once in a while.

MUSSOLINI manages to keep his stiletto yet. But his prospects are none too good despite Arthur Brisbane's insistence that everything is alright on the Tiber. Arthur used to be a radical once, a sort of a socialist-progressive, but he is now a millionaire. He receives $100,000 a year from William Randolph Hearst for turning out his daily column of rubbish. Mussolini stands for capitalism. So does Brisbane. The latter has brains enough to know that when Benito passes in his checks, the Communists will be on his heels with a dictatorship of the proletariat instead of a dictatorship of heavy industry.

THE capitalist papers no longer refer to the socialists as "reds." They reserve that title for the Communists. A French socialist in the chamber of deputies had his dander up a few days ago and he began to throw water on his colleagues. The Communists denounced the government for its action in removing a mayor who supported the strikers in the town of [illegible]. The socialists defended the government of course. A clash followed which was headlined by the press: "Socialists and Reds Clash in Chamber." We are not complaining.

NEW YORK EDITION OF DAILY WORKER HAILED BY COMRADES

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

NEW YORK COMRADES! The publication of a special New York edition of the DAILY WORKER is a significant step, following closely the anniversary of the first year of its existence. It is the spreading out of our daily into a real national force; a power in the American labor movement.

A considerable portion of every issue will be devoted to New York news, in conspicuous parts of the paper, which is a golden opportunity for the New York comrades to use the DAILY WORKER to strengthen all of their various activities.

In our trade union work, with a workers paper, yet, a Communist paper, to back it up, the T. U. E. L. militants will have a mighty weapon to push the program they are presenting. Front page articles on local strikes, lockouts, etc., will mean a tremendous impetus will be given to this branch of our activity.

In fact, all branches of our work will be greatly benefited. It will result in the building of a stronger and larger section of the party in the east.

However, that is not enough. Each and every worker must do this or her share. They must broadcast far and wide this happy news and back it up by obtaining subs from their shopmates and friends on a larger scale then ever before.

One more thing must be done. All of us should consider ourselves a committee of one, to help supply the news to make the New York edition of the DAILY WORKER what it actually is—A WORKER'S DAILY. Send into the New York office all news of the labor movement that other workers should know about.

The New York edition of the DAILY WORKER published in Chicago is the transition period between the past and a DAILY WORKER, PRINTED IN NEW YORK CITY!

Let our slogan be: "A DAILY WORKER PUBLISHED IN NEW YORK CITY BEFORE THE END OF 1925!"

JOBLESS MINERS HOLD MEETING AT BELLEVILLE

Demand the Release of C. E. Ruthenberg

By JOHN MIHELIC.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Jan. 19.—The conference of miners to consider unemployment was held in Belleville Sunday. The conference opened at 10 a. m. and adjourned at 5 p. m.

Delegates present represented 18 locals. Reports from the delegates showed many miners in the Belleville sub-district without employment, and many mines closed down.

Farrington Helps Operators.

The delegates from the O'Fallon Local, No. 705, reporting regarding the effort of the miners to force the O'Fallon coal operators to put into practice the clause in the agreement dealing with the sharing of work between the miners who are unemployed and those working, said that the operators are trying to interpret the clause to their own advantage. The coal operators claim this clause gives them the right to dictate the terms under which the work shall be shared. The operators submitted a "yellow dog" agreement for the sharing of work to the miners, but they refused to sign. Protests were made by the O'Fallon miners to Farrington and the other District 12 officials. The officials however, did not aid the miners, practically agreeing with the coal operators' interpretation of the clause.

Call for Unemployed Organizations.

A resolution was passed by the Belleville conference providing for the organization of the unemployed miners in the Belleville sub-district. A resolution was also passed demanding state and national legislation for the relief of unemployed workers, and favoring joining hands with other unemployed organizations that may be formed thruout the state and nation.

Demand Ruthenberg's Release.

The convention demanded the repeal of all criminal syndicalism laws and the immediate release of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party from Jackson, Mich. penitentiary where he is serving a term of from three to ten years for expressing his Communistic opinions.

A committee of five was elected with power to call future unemployment conferences and carry on other work in behalf of the locals represented at the conference.

GOV. 'AL' SMITH JOLTS LABOR ON CHILD SLAVERY

Nationwide Drive Is On Against Amendment

By H. M. WICKS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 19.—The Tammanyite politicians at the head of the New York State Federation of Labor received a sever jolt from their "friend," Governor Al. Smith, when that asstute politician came out against the immediate ratification by the state legislature of the child labor amendment to the United States constitution.

Thus, the governor of New York, elected by labor and socialist votes on the democratic ticket against an avalanche of republican votes that swept every other democrat out of office, lines up with the most bitter and outspoken opponents of labor, much to the discomfiture of James P. Holland, president of the State Federation of Labor, and the local officials of the New York City Central Labor Council.

Encouraged by the successful referendum in Massachusetts where, at the last general election, the measure was defeated by a vote of 3 to 1, the exploiters of children, under the leadership of the national manufacturers' association, have become converted to the principle of "democracy" and are urging referendums in every state.

25,000 GERMAN WORKERS IN BIG LENIN MEMORIAL

Berlin Labor Denounces the Dawes Plan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Twenty-five thousand Communists paraded in Berlin yesterday to commemorate the death of Nicolai Lenin.

Floats in the parade denounced the newly formed Luther cabinet and the Dawes plan, and depicted the suffering of the 7,000 imprisoned German Communists.

"The proletarian revolution cannot be won in parliament", one of the Communist speakers declared, "with the corpse of the capitalist system only will we be able to build an eternal monument to Lenin and Liebknecht".

Denounce Dawes Plan

The 25,000 Communists marched thru the working class section of Berlin. One of the huge floats in the parade bore a guillotine, with a figure representing Uncle Sam following behind it leading a German worker to his death.

The guillotine was labelled, "Dawes Reparations settlement German labor's enslavement thru the Dawes Plan". Communist speakers at many street corners denounced the Dawes plan and told the German workers who gathered by the thousand that it meant the exploitation of German workers by the capitalists of America and the allies.

Call For Amnesty

The parade contained floats carrying prison cells, with Communists and workers inside them calling to the crowds, "Free us, free us". Groups of wailing children in the parade shouted "Give us our fathers." Women in red hats marched to the rythmical cry of "amnesty, amnesty".

The monarchists also held a demonstration in Magdaburg, where reactionary generals called for Ebert's removal in favor of a kaiser.

SHREVEPORT, La.— F. A. Cummings, a laborer, was flogged by a self-appointed Shreveport vigilance committee because he would not work at a local sawmill where he had been offered employment. Cummings says that wages were so miserably small that he preferred to starve while not employed to working and starving just the same.

94 UNIONS IN HARD COAL PITS FAVOR WALKOUT

Lewis Regime in Threat to Outlaw Struggle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 19.—Sixty thousand anthracite miners of District No. 1, United Mine Workers of America, threaten to strike on Wednesday as a result of a meeting Sunday of the joint grievance committee representing 94 local unions.

To Spread the Strike.

If the strike comes, as it seems certain to come, it will be in open defiance of John L. Lewis, international president and the renegade radical Rinaldo Cappellini, the discredited president of the district. Both of these traitors to the miners interests have, of course, warned that charters will be revoked and the miners "outlawed."

The miners, in turn, are depending on spreading the strike until so many are "outlawed" that only the treacherous union officials are left "inlawed" and the general violation becomes legal by force of numbers and power.

Miners Oppose Any Split.

Bitter hostility is shown against the suggestion raised by Tony Panne, chairman of the 12,000 Pennsylvania Coal company's miners now on strike, that these men would split from the U. M. W. of A. The miners are determined to stay in the international [illegible] [illegible] cutive and to prepare [illegible] Cappellini for refusal to call a special district convention as provided by the constitution to settle grievances against both the bosses and Cappellini.

Committee Report Brings Explosion.

Further dilly-dallying over the charge against Cappellini became evident by the report of the special committee which merely advised that if satisfaction was not secured thru the union courts, the case might get favor in the county court by a plea in equity.

It was then that Tony Panne threw the meeting into angry disorder by threatening to split the Pittston 12,000 men of the Pennsylvania company from the U. M. W. of A. if no action was to be taken and such a report were adopted.

Many motions to spread the strike thruout the district were, however, made from all sides by rank and file miners who strenuously opposed Panne's provocative utterances. But immediate strike motions were quickly withdrawn because time was needed to guard the treasuries of the locals against attachment by the treacherous officials.

Special meetings of all the locals are being held before Wednesday, when another joint meeting will be held. Also there is the double purpose of getting the rank and file sentiment solidified and to await the final action of the district board which promised a meeting to consider the question of a special convention.

Cappellini shows worry over the action of the meeting and is holding sessions with other officials at his home and the district office, meanwhile confering over the long distance telephone with John L. Lewis at Indianapolis.

HOW NOT TO DO ANY ORGANIZING OF NEEDLE TRADE

Lesson by Sigman of the I. L. G. W.

By A Left Wing Rebel.

To what straights a once militant union, by its war upon the left wing can be reduced was demonstrated at the membership meeting called recently in Philadelphia by the Internation Ladies' Garment Workers' Local Union 50. This meeting of waist and dressmakers was called to start a drive for organization amongst the many open shops of the trade in Philadelphia.

That the bureaucrats at the head of the I. L. G. W. U., have completely lost the confidence of the rank and file of the union was made very clear by this meeting. About two hundred were present. The chairman was Elias Reisberg, the speakers were A. Baroff and Max Amadur.

Reisberg spoke for an hour, said but little. He dwelt at great length on the "good old days when we had a strong union." A goodly portion of his talk was given over to a recital of how the "union" bosses were "suffering" and how they were being forced to cut the rates by the "non-union bosses." No plan of organization was presented, the one was expected because of the rumors emanating from the conference held by the officers a few days previously at which Sigman was present. Reisberg's line was the usual bunk handed out by the average labor skate.

Marshal, Sigman and Foch.

Following Reisberg, "Brother" Amadur took the floor and spoke along the same line. The high spot in Amadur's talk was when he referred to the conference with Sigman. He said: "The executive board laid out a plan just like Marshal Foch laid out his plan to attack the central powers."

This caused some of the startled members to ask about the wonderful plan. Reisberg came to the rescue and explained that they had changed their mind about the plan: "Anyway it is a simple affair we'll take down the shops and organize mass meetings.'"

Finally, 'Comrade" Baroff was introduced. Just previous to his speech. Questions were asked him by several in the audience: "What will you do if in the course of the organization drive we organize an open shop that has several expelled members working in it? And what are you doing to reinstate the expelled members?"

Before Baroff could answer, Reisberg slammed his gavel down and said "these questions do not belong to Baroff. I will answer on the first question at the meeting of the organization and on the second the general executive board will answer."

The asking of these questions caused the only real interest displayed by the members thruout the meeting and plainly indicated how deeply the membership feels about the ruinous tactics of the "International" bureaucrats in expelling the militants who have always been the life and spirit of every Philadelphia organization campaign.

"No Strike" Pleads Baroff.

Baroff's speech was a colorless plea for "no strikes." He reiterated this and proposed that the individual shops be organized and that if the organization committee (of rank and filers) worked hard and taught the workers the lesson of solidarity, no strikes would be needed.

This is a sample of the bankruptcy of an organization whose middle name once was "fight." This deplorable condition is brought about by the policy of the officialdom and their war upon the left wing. The militants in the I. L. G. W. U. will shortly demonstrate that they are the only group who are capable of mapping out the policies that will organize the unorganized and lead the workers in the fight on the basis of the class struggle.

They and the expelled members have the confidence of the rank and file and it is for this reason that the bureaucrats cannot enthuse the membership at such meetings as the one just held in Philadelphia. The fight against the bureaucrats in the "International" and for the reinstatement of the expelled members will go on with renewed vigor.

MORGAN AGENTS AGREE TO GOUGE GERMAN TOILERS

Senators Oppose New "Financial Agreement"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19.—A break between Senator William Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, and other supporters of the Coolidge administration, and the president seems likely, following the opposition to the signing, by Coolidge's representatives, of agreements with the allies at the Paris conference.

The agreement which has met opposition in the senate was signed by Ambassador Frank Kellogg, recently appointed secretary of state to replace Hughes and Col. James A. Logan, who were sent to the Paris conference of finance ministers by Coolidge.

Milk German Workers.

The Coolidge representatives agreed to a division of the spoils extracted from the German workers under the Dawes plan, whereby the United States receives 2¼ per cent of all money the allies are able to wring from the impoverished German people.

Opposition to Kellogg.

Col. George Harvey, until now an ardent supported of Coolidge, has issued a statement declaring his opposition to the United States becoming entangled in European affairs thru Coolidge's maneuvers. Considerable opposition to Kellogg over his appointment to the post of secretary of state is expected to develop as a result of the situation in the senate. The senate will pass this week a resolution asking for full information with regard to the agreement and whether the United States officially signed it without consulting the senate.

Hughes has issued a statement that the agreement was merely a "financial arrangement" to make sure America gets her share of the spoils. Hughes termed the agreement with the allied finance ministers as merely "settling American damage claims," and said the senate must keep its nose out of the whole business. Many senators, however, declare they fail to see how America can push the Dawes' plan without becoming intimately entangled in European affairs, and making treaties which must be ratified by the senate, unless J. P. Morgan continues to represent the United States government in his capacity as the banker who put the Dawes plan over and who gets most out of it.

Borah didn't think much of Hughes statement. "It is in direct conflict with the view expressed by the French minister of finance," said Borah, "Chancellor Churchill, and other European statesmen. It will be interesting and illuminating reading abroad."

Comrade Henderson's Class for New Party Members, Well Attended

Thirty-five comrades who recently joined the party in Chicago were present at the opening class on the program of the Workers Party in charge of Comrade Henderson.

Comrade Henderson gave an able lecture and the comrades were very well satisfied.

This class which is arranged for the benefit of those who are just entering the party, will no doubt be of great benefit in acquainting applicants more thoroly with the Communist program.

New members from virtually every language unit and all English branches were present at the first lecture.

Comrade Henderson gives a series of two talks. The class meets every Tuesday night at 722 Blue Island Ave., second floor.

Tonight Comrade Henderson will give another talk. The class is open to all who wish to attend and is compulsory to all new members who must attend two successive lectures.

TO DISCUSS DAILY WORKER AT NEW YORK MEMBERSHIP MEETING

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.— A general membership meeting will be held in New York, Jan. 23. The principal subject to be discussed at the New York membership meeting will be preparations for launching the New York edition of the DAILY WORKER. Details of this meeting will be printed in a later issue of the DAILY WORKER.

COMMUNISTS IN UNITY PLEA FOR CITY ELECTIONS

Issue Call to Workers' Organizations

The Workers (Communist) Party yesterday sent out letters to all labor unions, workmen's circle groups and workers' fraternal organisations in Chicago, asking their co-operation in the local aldermanic campaign. The Workers (Communist) Party has endorsed nine candidates in nine different wards who seek places on the Chicago aldermanic council. The program upon which these candidates are running was enclosed in the letters for the endorsement of the above organisations.

Party for Workers.

The letter said, in part: "Every working man and woman is, no doubt, interested in the coming aldermanic elections on February 24, 1925. Organized labor is awakening to the need of participating independently in political activity and of presenting a program which will benefit the working class, organized or unorganized workers.

"In the coming elections there are many issues and problems, such as mentioned above (traction and public utilities), vital to the needs of the workers. The Workers (Communist) Party is the only political organization of and for the workers, striving to get all possible for the workers . . . It is interested in and concerned with the present aldermanic elections and has a program to offer for all workingmen and women.

Invites Support.

"If you are ready to unite with us on the basis of the immediate demands put forward in that program on various burning issues, we invite you to work with us in support of the aldermanic candidates we have endorsed and to join with us in a united conference to most effectively conduct the campaign."

The program upon which the aldermanic candidates are running covers every phase of municipal life. It asks for the immediate removal of public utilities from the hands of private capitalists and the confiscation of all franchises.

Against Injunctions.

On the question of unemployment it says: "Work or compensation for all unemployed, not as a matter of charity but as a direct municipal responsibility."

The program demands the abolition of the use of the injunctions in labor disputes and protests against the practice of police power against workers in strikes. On the question of housing: "We demand that all rents be drastically reduced and that the extortion and 'unfair practices' law be invoked to enforce this demand."

Child Labor.

It also calls for the extension of suffrage to ALL workers, reduction of salaries of mayor, judges, etc., abolition of child labor under eighteen years, political, social and economic equality for all workers regardless of race or color and various other demands on sanitation, maternity and education.

Farmers Must Learn Liberation Does Not Lie Short of Communism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the so-called conference for progressive political action goes more and more into eclipse. It is like the pall of death falling upon something that has long been gradually slipping into the discard.

• • • •

The poor farmers join with the city workers in placing their stamp of disapproval upon this abortive effort to stem the tide toward political action against capitalism.

No requiem was sung over the remains of the "C. P. P. A." at the last meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, nor does such an organization of land workers as the Western Progressive Farmers grieve at its going.

The undercurrent of rank and file sentiment seems to be that "the LaFollette idea" got them nothing, except a lot of hard bought experience. This is expressed in clear terms in the "The Western Progressive Farmer," official organ of the western farmers specially of the state of Washington, when it says:

> "The LaFollette idea failed in this state (Washington) and many more. Judging by the way it was managed, and by the little coterie, mostly reactionaries, that were appointed to do the managing, it is no wonder. Only a handful of salary grabbers, appointed in most states from republican and democratic politicians within the labor ranks, or the republican Grange (farmers' organization), had anything to say. All the money was eaten up by these self-appointed leaders. No real progressive as a rule was sent out to work and speak in the campaign, but generally a republican or democratic lawyer. In Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Nebraska, and many other states, this was true. Those people, having captured the money, scurried back into their various parties, and the movement, so far as they are concerned, is dead. Letters from South Dakota, Minnesota, also North Dakota and other states, all express these sentiments, and all say, 'They can't work it again.' We hope not; neither can they work it in Washington again."

But the "LaFollette idea" in some new form will be worked again on the exploited workers and poor farmers unless they realize one thing: that the political struggle is a class struggle between the capitalists and the workers. The personnel of the LaFollette movement merely reflected its anti-labor class character.

Many deluded workers, both in the cities and on the land, in the last election, thought that because LaFollette said some harsh things about Wall Street, that he was therefore fighting the capitalists. Nothing is further from the truth. LaFollette and the labor officialdom, even its small "socialist" accompaniment, constitute the left wing of the capitalist class.

Once this fact is fully comprehended by the workers, they will better realize why they must fight to the death "The LaFollette idea."

In the same issue of "The Western Progressive Farmer" from which we have already quoted, there appears a symposium of views on the results of last November's elections. L. L. Ramalia, of Sequim, Wash., concludes his statement with, "Mr. LaFollette is a great kidder." But the workers and poor farmers of these United States will prove even greater kidders, if they kid themselves into thinking that they can win their emancipation from capitalism anywhere short of Communism. The next step, after having discovered the traitor role of "The LaFollette idea" is to realize that victory for labor can only be won under the leadership of and thru the principles espoused by the Workers (Communist) Party.

Salesmen and Suckers to Have Second Run on the South Side

On Thursday evening the South Side Players will give a second rendition of "Salesmen and Suckers" at 3621 S. Federal street. The South Side Players made such a hit the last time they played that they were asked by many who saw the play to give a second performance.

The author of "Salesmen and Suckers," Andrew Shelley, is a member of the Workers Party, south side branch, and the play is written around the idea that Communism brings harmony between white and black workers. The cast consists of colored and white players.

The last performance received a very fine writeup from Comrade Lydia Gibson, which was carried in the DAILY WORKER.

Comrades who have not seen the first performance can secure tickets at the box office for the Thursday evening performance for the very reasonable prices of 35c, 50c and $1.00.

RAIL WORKERS GET RAW DEAL FROM U. S. BOARD

Paltry Increase of One Cent An Hour Given

Members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Express and Station Employes employed by the 44 major railroads in all parts of the country were handed a lemon today by the United States railroad labor board, in the form of a wage increase which comes as near being nothing at all as human ingenuity could devise.

The increases range for one cent to two cents per hour! If the "lucky" slaves of the rail barons work twelve hours a day, and six days a week, they will be seventy two cents a weeks to the good. Even this miserable pittance was granted to only 87,000 of the 162,000 employes involved.

Slight concessions in working conditions, such as short vacations with pay, sick leave and Saturday afternoons off, were made by the railroads. It is recognized however that these "concessions" make for efficiency, as the few hours granted on Saturday and during vacations are made up for by speeding.

SOVIET ENEMIES HAVE MUCH FAITH IN ABRAMOVITCH

Menshevik Is Left Hand Aid of Czarism

The noise made by our "democratically" orientated American newspapers at the arrival of "His Royal Highness" the grand duke Boris and his "royal" spouse threatens to drown the thunder that another representative of the old order in Russia, Citizen R. Abramovitch, member of the central committee of the menshevik party, and member of the executive committee of the second (socialist) international, is trying to raise against Soviet Russia in the United States.

The barriers against the Union of Soviet Republics are falling everywhere. The growing strength and influence of the first proletarian state brings to terms one after another of its enemies, who only yesteryear defiantly declared: Recognize the Soviets?—NEVER! Of all the great nations there now remains only one that clings to its former determination, the United States. But even in the United States the ice is breaking. The most outstanding figure in the opposition to Soviet recognition, Charles Evans Hughes, is retiring from the office of secretary of state. The appetite for unhampered business with and within Soviet Russia is gradually overcoming all moral scruples of American capital against dealings with a mere workers' government.

In this hour of need the enemies of Soviet Russia cannot rely on Grand Dukely nonentities; but they call upon their shock-troops of counter-revolution, the socialists. And these socialists obligingly dispatch a member of the executive committee of their international to prove to the capitalist world that its cause has no staunchest defender than a social democrat.

Citizen Abramovitch has a threefold mission to perform in the United States.

First: to raise hell against the Union of Soviet Republics;

Second: to raise funds for the enemies of Soviet Russia;

Third: to raise the prestige of the Second International, completely lost somewhere on the road from the betrayal of August 1914 to the betrayal of the Russian revolution.

None of these tasks seem to run counter to the American constitution or the American immigration laws, because otherwise the guardian of these treasuries, our secretary of labor, Davis, would surely have found a way of keeping Citizen Abramovitch out.

Citizen Abramovitch is fighting on the side of the international bourgeoisie against the Russian proletariat and poor peasantry. When he reports about the struggle between these forces he speaks of the losses sustained by the camp of the bourgeoisie; he speaks of the sufferings of the bourgeoisie and its agents; he speaks of the desires of the bourgeoisie; he expresses the hopes of the bourgeoisie. The American workers can have only one answer to his entreaties, and that is to fling into the face of this agent of the international bourgeoisie the accusation: TRAITOR!

Citizen Abramovitch attempts to replenish the funds of the white Russian colonies in Paris and London by preying upon the soft hearts of American workers. Every cent he collects will be turned into a poisoned arrow directed against the first proletarian government in the world, against Soviet Russia. The American workers will show that their slogan is: STARVE THE COUNTER-REVOLUTION SO THAT THE RUSSIAN REVOLUION MAY LIVE!

Citizen Abramovitch will attempt to resurrect among the American workers some faith in the International of Noske. But the American proletariat will answer this attempt by pointing to the precious blood of its brothers on the hands of these agents of international capital, and it will thunder into the ears of the workers of the world: BEWARE! THESE "INTERNATIONALISTS" ARE THE AGENTS OF THEIR NATIONAL GOVERNMENTS.

TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE WEEKLY SECTION

CHICAGO REPORTS VARIED AND GREAT LEAGUE ACTIVITY

Garment and Metal Trades in Lead

The Chicago local group since July of last year, has been subjected to a bitter attack from all sides. A united front of the labor bureaucrats has been formed, if not organically at least ideologically. Even Levin, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, a so-called progressive, has joined in this attack.

The program of the league has been carried lately thru a series of elections in the unions. No matter what the elections were, delegate to the central labor bodies, district councils, national elections, the program of the league and the right of a Communist to hold office were the issues.

In the Chicago Federation.

Red baiting in the Chicago Federation of Labor is the order of almost every meeting. For a time only the 26 league members voted for revolutionary working class issues. The persistency of the left wingers, however, is beginning to bear fruit, and many rank and file delegates are again beginning to line up in support of left wing issues.

The endorsement of the citizens' military training camp by the delegate to the A. F. of L. convention was severely criticized by the left wing delegates. This brought a bitter attack from Nockels and his reactionary following. They were shocked by the support that the "reds" got—many of the rank and file delegates supporting the left wing in their fight against the military training camps.

A Good Basis, eh Fitz?

Fitzpatrick unknowingly paid a compliment to the league members when he said: "These people are clever enough to base their propaganda upon fundamental issues."

In the City Election.

The league is carrying on an active campaign to help put the Workers Party candidates on the ballot for the coming aldermanic election. Plans are ready to present to the next meeting of the local general group for intensified activities in the defense of the Michigan cases, against child labor, for the building up of the DAILY WORKER, the strengthening of the local industrial groups, etc.

Chicago Metal Trades.

The metal trades group is paying special attention to the nomination for general officers in the Machinists' Union. There are three slates in the field, but the left wing is the only one going to the rank and file with a progressive program. Their program is based upon the policies laid down by the T. U. E. L. The issues are clear in this election campaign. It is the left wing class struggle policy vs. the Johnston reactionary class collaboration scheme.

Two thousand copies of the special machinists' election edition of the Metal Trades Amalgamation Bulletin have already been distributed containing the names of the candidates and the left wing program. So far, four locals have endorsed some or all of the left wing candidates.

Chicago Building Trades.

The building trades group have waged their first left wing election campaign in the Carpenters' Union. In the unions and on the jobs there were 15,000 left wing election programs distributed; 5,000 copies of the special carpenters' election edition of the Progressive Building Trades Worker were circulated and 1,500 DAILY WORKERS were sold on the day of the election.

Altho the left wing did not carry any of the local unions, it established itself during the campaign as a real left wing in the union.

Since the election five members of the union have been expelled. Altho expelled, they still attend their union meetings; deprived of a working card, they still work on union jobs. The members of Local 181, Harry Jensen's own local, are solidly behind the expelled members.

The Fake I. L. G. W. Election.

Again the Perlstein-controlled joint board of the I. L. G. W. U. have removed from the ballot those who are opposed to the machine. A farce election was held, the election committee setting the date for the election so that there could be no meetings of the locals beforehand, therefore preventing any protest being made against their actions until after the election.

The strike of the dressmakers, called off last fall, is expected to be renewed this spring. A corps of organizers have come into Chicago. The expelled members have offered their support in this drive. They point out, however, that no organizing campaign can be successful unless the purpose is to carry on a militant struggle against wage cuts with a counter-offensive for wage increases.

Nor can a logical appeal be made to workers to join the union when these very officials are expelling the progressives which are needed in building up the union.

Illinois Coal Miners Fight Both the K. K. K. and Faker Farrington

Thruout the mining fields of Illinois, the T. U. E. L. is carrying on a constant agitation for the forming of unemployment councils. In Belleville, yesterday, a conference was called to discuss the unemployment situation. The unemployment program of the league was placed before this meeting for their adoption and a plan of organization outlined.

Despite the support of the K. K. K., which is very strong in Illinois, Farrington was defeated in the district election. But, defeating Farrington in the election and getting him out of office are two different things. The Lewis-Farrington machine has two major tactics—one is, to steal enough ballots to count themselves in; two, if the rank and file is so overwhelmingly against them that it is impossible to steal or pad the ballot box, then remove the candidates from the ballot.

In Illinois they can still operate with tactic number one. In Kansas and in Alberta they have to use tactic number two.

The editor of this section did not have time to compile the votes cast for the miners' left wing slate in Illinois. This will appear in next week's section.

Detroit Scraps Czar Hutcheson and Organizers

The Detroit league's activities in the carpenters' election were crowned with success. They carried Detroit for Morris Rosen, the left wing candidate for general president. This so enraged Wm. L. Hutcheson that he withdrew the organizer from that district and at the same time tied the hands of the district council. This is a covert threat that the district will either support Hutcheson or be destroyed.

This local league is also active in the organizing of the cooks and waiters, in getting endorsements for the left wing slate in the Machinists' Union, and they have taken up with renewed energies the defense of the class war prisoners. The Detroit league is one of the first three to report the passing of the resolution in the Auto Workers' Union in defense of C. E. Ruthenberg and the remainder of the Michigan defendants.

Omaha League on the Job in Two Great Campaigns

The Omaha branch of the T. U. E. L. is carrying on a vigorous campaign against child labor. They were the second local league to have passed in the union a resolution endorsing and supporting the Michigan cases.

They responded to the call of the Labor Defense Council unanimously, not waiting for the sentence to be pronounced upon Comrade Ruthenberg, who is now in the penitentiary serving a sentence of from three to ten years.

They got busy the minute the supreme court upheld the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg.

Saint Paul is No Place For Saints Lately

In St. Paul, the reactionaries were able to expel from the Trades and Labor Assembly two members of the T. U. E. L. To do this they had to resort to all kinds of deceit and trickery. The chairman would not even allow a clause from the A. F. of L. constitution to be read.

An appeal is being sent to the local unions thru a referendum vote. Both of the delegates expelled are members of the Machinists' Union and have the full support of their local and many other unions. The fight in St. Paul has just begun.

ALBERTA MINERS HAVE A BITTER FIGHT GOING ON

Kid Burns, Militant, Kept Off Ballot

Our comrades in the mining section of Alberta have just come thru a six-month strike which was betrayed by the renegade radical, President Sherman, the Cappellini of Canada. The defeat of the strike meant Sherman's defeat in the district election unless fraudulent methods were resorted to. He could not get the support of the rank and file. So he simplified the sitation by removing his opponents from the ballot and declared himself elected by acclamation.

Kid Burns, the recognized leader of the militant miners in Alberta, altho nominated for president by every local union in Drumheller except one and even nominated for another office by that one, yet was removed from the ballot because he was a Communist. A demand is now being made for a special convention for the removal of Sherman, for a fair election, and for the reinstatement of Burns as check weighman.

Three times Burns was elected check weighman, but the company refused to allow him on the tipple. Finally the miners called a strike to force his reinstatement. Sherman, not daring to come to the meeting sent Levitt, henchman of Lewes who had been called into the district by the coal operators. The miners would not listen to Levitt and drove him from the platform. However, they agreed to go back to work when promised that Burns would be reinstated within two weeks.

Nova Scotia Coal Diggers Elect a Left Wing Slate

The Canadian section of the Trade Union Educational League scored a victory over the arch-faker, John L. Lewis, in district 26, of the U. M. W. of A. The Nova Scotia miners, under the leadership of the T. U. E. L. and the Communist Party of Canada, threw off the Lewis yoke and elected a left wing district slate.

They immediately showed their contempt for the class collaboration policy of Lewis by voting 100 per cent for a strike against wage cuts. The election returns from this district undoubtedly will show a victory for the progressive miners' national slate.

Unemployed Councils in Toronto Making Demands for Relief

Unemployment in Canada is more severe than in the United States. In fact, Canada has not yet recovered from the effects of the world war. Despite these handicaps, the league in Canada has launched a paper for the carrying on of the T. U. E. L. activities, called the "Left Wing".

In Toronto unemployment councils have been formed with some 3,000 members. They are demanding from the government unemployment doles, unemployment insurance, and the opening up of public works.

JACK JOHNSTONE WILL SPEAK ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION AT THE NEXT MEETING OF CHICAGO BRANCH T.U.E.L.

Jack Johnstone, assistant secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, will report on the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor at the next regular monthly meeting of the Chicago branch of the league.

The meeting will be held on the last Wednesday in January at 8 p. m. in North West Hall, corner of Western and North avenues.

Comrade Johnstone reported the El Paso convention for the DAILY WORKER and traveled to Mexico with, but not as guest of, the labor fakers who accepted President Calles' of Mexico invitation to witness the inaugural ceremonies in the Mexican capital.

Johnstone has the unusual distinction of being the first Communist reporter in America to announce the passing of America's greatest labor faker.

WORKERS! SEND IN YOUR NEWS TO THE T. U. E. L.

Write Up the Fights of All Workers

This section of the DAILY WORKER depends upon your correspondence. There are happenings every day all over the country, events in which the left wing and the Communists in the labor unions are taking a leading role. Write in about them to the T. U. E. L., 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

But even if there isn't a left winger on the job, even if there are no Communists in sight, write up the meetings of your central labor body, what it did and what it failed to do. Write up your local union meetings and the vital matters handled there. Write up the unemployment situation in your city, or district and what, if anything, is being done about it. Send it all in to the T. U. E. L.

Write up your job. The struggles of your craft or industry. Write up the struggles of any workers you are acquainted with. Above all, write up strikes!

Do not think you have to be a member of the Workers Party or have to get credentials to write these things. Do not think that the strikes must be led by the Workers Party or T. U. E. L. militants to be justified for you to write about. No! We want stories of the struggle all the time going on, stories not printed now because we don't know about them.

Be alive! Don't think that because you know what is going on in your union, your shop, your industry or your town or mining camp, that everybody else knows. They don't! But they like to know. Write it in to the T. U. E. L., 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago.

Don't try to write fancy articles or arguments for a new system of society. Just write what happens, write facts, facts! Write them in as few words as possible and send them in any day or any night, but if you want to get them in this page next week, get them in by Friday of this week.

Address every letter, "T. U. E. L., 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

SUPPORT SPECIAL CAMPAIGNS FOR IMMEDIATE NEEDS

Fight on All Fronts Against Bosses

All activities of the Trade Union Educational League are important. At this time, however, special emphasis should be placed upon and special campaigns conducted on the following points:

Fight Wage Cuts.

Against wage cuts and increasing of hours of labor. The league is the heart and soul of the united front movement. It works as a unified left wing bloc within the trade unions. Upon them devolves the task of getting their unions to join the united front movement, raising the slogan, "Against wage cuts" and the lengthening of hours. For wage increases and shortening of hours."

Oppose Child Labor.

Against child labor and for the child labor amendment. There are over 1,000,000 child wage slaves, while millions of adults are unemployed. These children receive less wages than adults, which explains the vicious attacks by the employers against the child labor amendment. To make the child labor amendment really effective the league proposes government maintenance of the workers' children to insure their care until they are of an age to work.

Defend Your Class Leaders.

Defense of the Michigan cases. Resolutions should be passed in your local union for the endorsement of, affiliation with, and donations to the Labor Defense Council, which is handling the defense of C. E. Ruthenberg and the other Communist defendants. Comrade Robert Minor is the next to be placed on trial. A conviction of Minor will mean the trial and probable conviction of Comrades Foster, Dunne, Browder, and 26 others. This is a major activity.

Boost the Daily.

The DAILY WORKER campaign must receive the full support of all sections of the T. U. E. L. The present drive to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 is a major campaign of the league. More than that, the DAILY WORKER is a part of all our activities. Subscribing to the DAILY WORKER is not sufficient.

Pushing the DAILY WORKER is an activity for every league member. Every campaign of the league, be it for amalgamation, against child labor, or what not, the DAILY WORKER should be a part of that activity. Get the habit. Talk, and keep on talking about the DAILY WORKER.

Pittsburgh in Fight to Get Prisoners Out

The activities in the Pittsburgh district league have been of the kind that spurs one on to greater efforts. Not the least of their successes has been the pardoning of twenty-five of the thirty-eight class war prisoners, victims of the coal barons in the Collinsville strike.

The fight for the release of the other thirteen is being carried on with even greater energy. Fagan, the reactionary president of district No. 5, U. M. W. of A., is sabotaging the committee's work, even going so far as to pay a visit to the penitentiary and stop the DAILY WORKER from going to the prisoners.

In the miners' election, the Pittsburgh league reports the results from thirty-two local unions—the reactionary Lewis receiving 848 votes as against 2,935 cast for the left wing candidate, Voyzey. In the district election, in thirty-eight locals, the left wing candidate, Guiler, received 2,612 votes as against 1,175 for the reactionary, Fagan.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 17. Results of the U. M. W. of A. elections in the following locals are:

Local 2012—Lewis, 29; Voyzey, 15; Murray, 17; Staples, 26; Green, 29; Nearing, 15; Fagan, 26; Guiler, 22.

Local 2278—Lewis, 2; Voyzey, 172; Murray, 7; Staples, 181; Green, 7; Nearing, 17; Fagan, 16; Guiler, 172.

Galloway, W. Va., Local 2311—Lewis, 91; Voyzey, 125; Murray, 95; Staples, 120; Green, 109; Nearing, 106.

Philly Hits Ball in Carpenters' and I. L. G. W. U. Work

The Philadelphia league has conducted its first left wing election campaign in the Carpenters' Union. The results were surprising to the reactionary machine. In three locals, Rosen received 550, Hutcheson 224, and Brown 29 votes. Rosen, the left wing candidate, scored a two-to-one victory over the machine candidate, Hutcheson. These militants distributed 5,000 left wing programs and 1,000 of the special carpenters' election edition of the Progressive Building Trades Worker.

The I. L. G. W. U. is launching an organization campaign in Philadelphia for the purpose of trying to win back the ground lost thru their stupid expulsion policy against members of the T. U. E. L. The industry is practically unorganized. The expelled members sent a letter to the union offering their services in the organizing campaign.

At a mass meeting of the union members called for the purpose of outlining the campaign, Barrof was asked: "If you organize a shop where expelled members are working, will you expel them from the shop, or will you take them into the union?"

He called upon Sigman to answer, but Sigman was in New York. Impossible to get rid of these darned T. U. E. L.-ites in or out of the union, they hold the confidence of the workers.

Boston Leaguers Call Conference of Three Groups

Boston league reports a bad situation among the boot and shoe, textile, and tobacco workers. These workers are poorly organized. Conferences have been called by the T. U. E. L. in the textile and the boot and shoe industries.

The purpose of these conferences is to solidify the ranks of labor thru the amalgamation of the numerous craft unions, to organize the unorganized for the purpose of combatting wage cuts and the lengthening of the work day, and for a militant fight based upon the class struggle.

San Francisco Beginning to Come to Life

The San Francisco league went thru a very bitter experience with the LaFollette movement. Many adherents of the league swung over to the LaFollette camp.

The latest report from Frisco shows a reorganization of the league taking place, and splendid progress being made. The local general group is being built up and four industrial groups have been organized. They are pushing the fight against child labor, and are laying plans for an active campaign in defense of Comrade Ruthenberg.

A movement is under way to form unemployment councils based upon the unemployed program of the league. A conference is being arranged on a united front basis between the Workers Party, T. U. E. L., the Building Trades Council and many other union organizations.

In Oakland an unemployment council has also been formed upon the basis of the unemployed policy of the league and defense of class war prisoners.

"B. & O." Official Sits Up Nights Reading Our Stuff

The Workers Monthly reports that C. W. Galloway, vice-president of the B. & O. railroad, has subscribed to the Workers' Monthly. Evidently he is very anxious to know what the T. U. E. L. thinks about the B. & O. plan which is sponsored by his friend, Wm. H. Johnston. He was a constant reader, if not an ardent supporter, of the Labor Herald.

Mr. Galloway is not sure whether his pal Johnston is going to get the nomination or not. He is afraid that Julius Emme, the T. U. E. L. candidate, may beat him to it and substitute the class struggle for class collaboration.

We are only a minority, but when our enemy takes the trouble to study us closely, it is an indication that they recognize our growing strength and influence.

Los Angeles Says "Here's $50 of Russian Gold"

The Los Angeles league is another one of our local groups that is being attacked by the reactionary Hutcheson machine. Eleven members of the Carpenters' Union have been expelled for being members of the league. All of them have been in the union for from five to thirty years. Despite this attack, the league is doing good work.

All local general groups should take note that the Los Angeles league is the first one this year to put on an entertainment for the benefit of the national office. They sent in a check for $50.00. Despite the stories of "Russian gold," this sort of revenue, together with the sale of pamphlets, is the league's only income.

Los Angeles answered the call! What about your group? Say it with a check!

I. W. W. Is Aided by Red International Affiliation Committee

The Red International Affiliation Committee which took up the fight on an international scale to stop the deportation of Herbert Mahler, Petro Nigra, Joe Oates and William Moran, announces that the campaign has succeeded in getting a pardon for these workers.

The R. I. A. C., which carries on activity in the I. W. W. in behalf of the Red International, is publishing a statement supporting a free press in the I. W. W. and abolition of the censorship which has nearly wrecked that organization.

We Are Waiting to Hear From Other Leagues

The progressive miners of Christopher have the honor of passing the first resolution in the miners' union in support of the Michigan cases since the upholding of the conviction of Comrade Ruthenberg. The Omaha league was second and Detroit third. We are waiting to hear from all the leagues. What about it?

WHAT LENIN SAID ON THE PROBLEMS OF TRADE UNIONS

A Weekly Contribution from Comrade Ilyitch

No writer on trade union problems has given us so much clear-cut and definite insight into their solution than has Vladimir Ilyitch Lenin. "Without the support of the trade unions," he said a couple of years after the October revolution, "the dictatorship of the revolution would not have lasted months, let alone years."

Because he considered the conquest of the trade unions for the program of Communism as a pre-requisite to the final victory over capitalism, Lenin gave profound and detailed attention to trade union questions.

Below we reproduce a resolution written by Lenin on the trade unions, for the 1906 conference of the Russian social-democratic labor party (now the Russian Communist Party). In this resolution we see the clear foresight of Lenin, which was able, 19 years ago, to see the policy that holds good for Communists in the trade unions today. Every week a contribution from the wisdom of Lenin on some question relating to the trade unions will be printed on this page.

Resolution on Trade Unions.

Whereas: (1) The trade union movement is a necessary and integral element in the class struggle, and trade unions a necessary and organic element in the class organizations of the proletariat:

(2) In order to attain their goal the trade unions must strive to organize the widest proletarian masses;

(3) Among the Russian proletariat particular notice must be taken of the broad flow in the direction of trade union organization;

(4) The economic struggle can lead to a lasting betterment in the situation of the toiling masses, and to the strengthening of their real class organizations only by a true co-ordination of the economic struggle with the political struggle of the proletariat;

(5) In the atmosphere of a revolutionary epoch, the trade unions, in addition to defending the economic interests of the working class, draw the proletariat into the immediate political struggle, and aid in achieving a broad organizational and political unity for the working class.

(6) In this revolutionary atmosphere the toiling masses, becoming organized and politically united, are more and more coming to take their stand beneath the banner of social democracy. (Ed. Note: Meaning the Bolsheviks, now the Communist Party.)

The convention resolves that:

(1) The party must support the movement of the workers toward trade union organization, and by every means help in the organization of non-party unions;

(2) Keeping this in view, and making use of all legal possibilities, and especially of the laws regarding trade unions, it is essential continually to widen these legal limits, steadily fighting for the full freedom of the trade unions;

(3) That all party members must join the trade unions, actively participating in all union activities, and constantly strengthening among the members their class solidarity, and their class consciousness, in order to bind the unions organically to the party both in their struggles and their agitation work.

Textile Mill Workers Strike Against Pay Cut

Sporadic strikes thruout the textile centers of New England are breaking out, in protest against the latest wage cut of 10 per cent. The Granite, Barnard, and Lincoln mills in Fall River, Mass., were the scenes of strikes beginning last week. The Davis and Kerr mills went on strike several days before. Lawrence, Providence, New Bedford, are also witnessing struggles.

The strike movement is spreading rapidly, under the stimulus of leaflets containing the call to action of the T. U. E. L. and the Workers Party, for a united front and strike against wage cuts, against the multiple loom system, and against longer hours. The left wing is calling meetings thruout the district and organizing its forces to unify the labor organizations of the textile workers and to make the present movement effective.

Fight the "B. & O." Plan With a New "Left Wing" Paper

In New Brunswick the league is fighting against the B. & O. plan. Johnston, taking advantage of the unemployment situation, has been able to put his working class betrayal scheme into operation at Moncton, N. B. The T. U. E. L. and their official organ, the "Left Wing" are waging a constant struggle for the defeat of the plan.

'ABOLISH PRIVATE BANKS' PROPOSES N. D. COMMUNIST

A. C. Miller, Legislator, Fights Banks' Power

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARK, N. D., Jan. 19.—All business men in the state are pattign the nonpartisan league governor of the back for his "harmony" and "cooperation" talks, while the league members of the legislature are disgusted and frankly say that nothing can be accomplished for the farmer on the capitol hill in this session.

A "harmony banquet" was held the other evening, in which both leaguers and indepedents participated. It was supposed to be a league affair but the thing looked so harmless to the IVA that they ventured to sit down at the same table with the "free lovers." No fight took place.

Communist Active

A. C. Miller has presented his plan to the league caucus for the Bank of North Dakota to establish branch banks in various parts of the state, providing that the state banks should perform all the business of banking with a view to the eliminating of all private banks altogether.

Miller said that his bill would provide that all public funds should immediately be withdrawn from all the private banks in the state and used in the state banks for the benefit of the farmers and the workers.

The league representatives generally are for this measure but Sorlie and the league leaders bitterly oppose it.

The farmers and the workers of North Dakota have only one real representative in the state legislature, one who is not afrai dto fight their battles, one who stands squarely and boldly for a farmer's and worker's government and this is A. C. Miller, the communist.

Try to Put Teeth In It.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The first legislative step to put more teeth in the Volstead act, was taken by the judiciary committee today when it approved the Stalker bill, providing that both fine and imprisonment must be imposed by judges in dry law on dry law violators.

I. C. Wants Cheap Labor.

The Illinois Central railroad has awarded contracts aggregating six million dollars for the construction of railroad shops at Paducah, Kentucky. The shops are being constructed in Kentucky so as to be near a supply of cheap labor, the wages paid in Kentucky being far below the wage rates in and around Chicago.

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik" is coming to Ashland Auditorium Feb. 5.

SOLDIERS in battle. And when the command came to forward march, 487 did and 501 did not. Funny army!

The Workers Party faces a serious task. The life of the party, of the revolutionary movement is at stake. When the command comes to act, 487 branches do and 501 don't! Funny party!

A call is issued to safeguard the spokesman of our party, the central organ of our party. And 487 branches have answered the call and 501 have not. We ask why?

Some Arabs visited London some years ago. Their eyes turned as big as cups when they saw the magic of the water faucets. And hot water out of one faucet and cold out of another! Miraculous! So they placed an order for a camel-load of them. Little pieces of metal that could spout hot or cold water at will would certaily make trekking across the desert much more refreshing than putrid water out of a gourd.

The Arabs did not know what forces were behind the faucet that stuck its nose out of the hotel room wall.

As useless as a faucet in the Sahara—that's the DAILY WORKER without the support of every branch and member and sympathizer. The DAILY WORKER is nothing unless it has behind it every comrade that believes in it, unless it is connected with the forces that give it power.

Of the 988 branches in the party 487 are now behind the DAILY WORKER, pushing it on to greater accomplishments. And there are 501 branches that are behind, some place or other, but not behind our daily.

As a member of a party branch, it becomes your bounden duty to make the job of insuring our daily complete. It will be a complete job only then, when every one of the 988 Workers Party branches have helped to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

501 BRANCHES OF THE PARTY HAVE NOT SENT IN A SINGLE DOLLAR!

RAISE YOUR VOICE AT YOUR NEXT BRANCH MEETING AND TELL IT A THING OR TWO!

THE NEW PROLETARIAN PENNSYLVANIA

KUZBAS

(A Russian State Industry Operated by a Combination of Russian and American workers and Engineers)

WILL NEED DURING 1925

Engineers – Expert Miners – Electricians – Machinists – Steel Mill Men – Building Construction Workers, Etc., Etc., Etc.

Only men who thoroly know their work, who can stay by their work, and who have patience to start in what is going to take 20 years, should apply.

Each worker must have $200 at New York to meet the expenses for ocean transportation, etc. Each worker must have the tools of his trade and be well equipped with solid clothing.

Application forms can be obtained from the address below. Each applicant must give information about both his labor record and his industrial qualifications. Success in KUZBAS is not measured by how you feel but by what you KNOW.

SOME THINGS ABOUT KUZBAS

KUZBAS starting at zero point in 1922 expects to have a surplus of $300,000 at Kemerovo at the end of the present economic year.

KUZBAS working upon surpluses, plans to erect two more batteries of coke ovens (this will triple the output of coke and chemicals); a sulphuric acid plant costing $150,000; a nitric and chloride plant costing $300,000; and a creosote and bricket plant, etc., before 1929. Also a railroad and traffic bridge costing $650,000 at Kemerovo.

KUZBAS took over on January 1 (two weeks ago) the southern group of mines in the Kuznetzky (blacksmith) basin, including Kolchugina and Pokopevsk. They have been granted a subsidy on Nov. 17, 1924 of ONE MILLION GOLD ROUBLES to Americanize within two years the first named mines. To this enormously rich area (containing more coal then the entire British Isles) has been added the Gurievsk steel plant.

KUZBAS from Kemerovo supplies the Ural steel industry with 7,000 tons of high class coke a month, mines 17,000 tons of coal, distills ammonia, pitch, benzol, tar, naphtalene, anthracene and creosote oils, etc. The installation is being constantly enlarged under the suprevision of noted, American and German engineers.

KUZBAS incidentally has a farm, 33,000 acres in extent, a 200 cow dairy and (remember this in Siberia) a daily milk delivery, and a vegetable garden covering a mere 5 square miles.

KUZBAS has steadily improving conditions for its members. People from America are making their homes there. Workers there have economic security. A great new country (like the West after the Civil War) is opening up with its heart situated at Kemerovo and its veins reaching into all the ramifications of Siberian life.

KUZBAS will be the center in the years to come of vast steel mills, mines, power projects, electrical railroads branching away to Central Asia, India, China, and across the millions of acres of sparsely populated steppes from which the world may be fed.

KUZBAS is such a beginning, the most successful of all the projects organized in America to aid the Soviet Union.

THE KIND OF MEN WE ASK FOR IN THE BEGINNING OF THIS ADVERTISEMENT IF THEY MEASURE UP HAVE THE BALL AT THEIR FEET, SCOPE TO EXERCISE THEIR CREATIVENESS.

DETROIT LABOR FAKER BRINGS COPS TO UNION

Hutcheson's Agent Fears Members

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Jan. 19.—When Sam Botterill, the agent of Hutcheson in Detroit, went to the meeting of Local Union 420 Friday evening, he took the precaution to call Hunt street police station and have an officer of "law and order" accompany him to the House of the Masses, where the local union meets, and to remain stationed at the door until the meeting ended to protect him from the possible wrath of the rank and file for the arbitrary expulsion of Brother William Reynolds of Local Union 2140.

A motion to call the police station and request the removal of the officer as being unnecessary to the safety of any member attending the meeting was lost by a vote of 13 to 15. Assured of the continuance of his protection, Comrade Botterill maintained a rather timid defense of the general executive autocracy. His line of defense was a scurrilous attack unon Comrade Reynolds' mental equipment, his lack of experience, and the source from which he came, his attacks met with the emphatic disapproval of practically all in attendance.

"Dual Un[illegible]Poppycock.

Comrade Rey[illegible]defended the T. U. E. L. from the [illegible]pid charge made by Botterill that it was a dual union pointing out that to be dual to the carpenters' organization, the T. U. E L. must dispute jurisdiction over a given kind of work or construction with the carpenters' organization.

The membership accepted the charge of duality as being absurd and without foundation. No one except Botterill even attempted to defend the expulsion as being justified or constitutional, altho a good deal of confusion prevailed as to the proper course to be taken.

Local to Investigate Expulsion.

A motion was passed that the local demand immediate information on all the circumstances surrounding the case and the evidence upon which the expulsion was based, the procedure and the constitutional justification for the denial of a trial.

The sentiment expressed in the meeting offered Hutcheson very little assurance that the rank and file in Detroit is in a mood to accept a continuance of his high-handed methods. The only violence Botterill suffered was the amused contempt of the membership towards some of his explanations, and some genuine and unanimous expressions of indignation when he attempted abuse and heckling.

Botterill hears the rumbling of discontent and calls the police. The day is not far distant when Botterill and his kind will be ordering them to shoot those of the rank and file whom they now expel. Police and parasites! The incident is portentious.

Turks Anxious to See Soviet Goods Win The Turkish Market

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, Jan. 19.—According to Soviet consular reports having reached Tiflis, the facilities that have been granted recently to Turkish merchants by the Soviet authorities and, on the other hand, the construction by the Turkish government of new roads in Anatolia, have largely contributed to the economic revival of the Turkish districts bordering on the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The Turkish people there look upon the Soviet as their good friend and defender of the new Turkey, while the authorities are likewise disposed in the most friendly manner towards the U. S. S. R.

The Turkish farmers are eagerly welcoming the full restoration of economic intercourse with the Soviet Republics. Finding Italian and English manufactures unsatisfactory, they wish to see the Soviet goods win the Turksh market.

Kentucky Mine Blast Kills Six; All Had Families

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Jan. 19.—The body of Gooch Gardiner was recovered from the Diamond mine No. 1, near here, increasing the known dead in the blast at the mine, to two. The body of Henry Murphy was recovered last night. A "windy shot" caused a dust blast in the pit.

Four other men were imprisoned in the mine, and hope for getting the men out alive has been abandoned. The men missing are James Holt, Goldie Merritt, Hugh Teague and Joe Trayer.

The six men, all married, were shot firers and remained in the mine to blast down coal after the regular working force of about 125 men had left the shaft. The inside of the mine was extremely unsafe, there being no adequate system of inspectors to safeguard the lives of the men.

Dictator Wood Fines Filipino General 400 Pesos Without Trial

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 19.—Governor Gen. Leonard Wood, using his tyrannical power to geep the Philippine Islanders in abject slavery while his son throws millions of dollars to the winds of Europe, has "severely reprimanded" Governor Aurelio Cecilio of the province of Nuevo Ecija. Wood also ordered Cecilio to pay J. C. West, American business man, a fine of 400 pesos, altho Cecilio has not been allowed a trial of any kind.

West charges he was "insulted" by Cecilio in a dispute as to whose automobile had the right of way at a ferry crossing in Manila. West was arrested for obstructing trafic and disorderly conduct, but later complained to Wood, who avenged the "insult" by slapping on the fine.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Among the things Young said, was, that the United States and England should unite in directing the financial affairs of the world. Putting the world under a Dawes' plan, so to speak. Kahn indulged in a little unconscious humor when introducing the Briton. "If there is one thing an Englishman dislikes, it is to be praised. I shall not embarrass our guest by praising him."

YOUNG'S speech was of greater importance than will be attributed to it just now. It should not be forgotten that the rulers of the United States, the dominant figures in its economic life, were present at that gathering. Young said, that America and England have a common heritage and a common responsibility. He regretted there was such a wide expanse of water separating the two countries. Some thing was required to bring about a strong understanding between them. International financial relationship was the means.

"THERE was a time when England was the creditor nation and the United States the debtor" said Young. Now the conditions are reversed, continued the speaker. Then, "Formerly there was a unified financial control over the rest of the world from London, but the young American giant with new ideas has assumed at least an equal part in a dual control. The mental and vital resources of the United States and Britain should be so combined as to render this easy of accomplishment and I hope that mutual co-ordination of measures will help bring this about." There you are. British and English finance capital would like to form a joint partnership to divide the world between them. But can they do it? It is not very likely. But this should be a lesson to the workers who fall for the patriotism bunk that the capitalists hand out to them. The capitalists know no country but profits.

PRESIDENT THOMAS F. McMAHON of the United Textile Workers of America, brands the ten per cent wage reduction announced by the mill owners of Fall River, Mass., as an "outrage" and a "steal." It is that, but what steps is McMahon taking to meet the issue? Nothing more or less than an investigation by the legislature. What rubbish! McMahon knows quite well that only an extremely stupid capitalist legislature would refuse an investigation which will drag along until all concerned forgets about its existence. What is McMahon's Textile Workers Union for anyhow? What about the strike weapon?

VICTOR BERGER has discontinued his column in the Milwaukee Leader during the short term of congress, presumably because he is too busy listening to the speeches in the house. One would imagine that a session of congress would give Berger something to write about and relieve him of the necessity of crabbing all his stuff from other papers. Before he took his vacation, however, he announced that the Communists were losing out everywhere and that a monarchist government was due in Russia. This proves that Berger's laziness is an undisguised boon to the readers of his paper.

District Six Wins Laurels

Averages More Than A Dollar Per Member in Drive to Insure DAILY WORKER for 1925

THE many $20, $30, $40 remittances from District 6 have placed it first in point of total remittances as compared to district membership.

The attention given the drive in Cleveland helped very materially in giving District 6 first place. Upon a blackboard at the Cleveland C. C. C. meetings "INSURE THE DAILY WORKER" could be found heavily written as the first subject the delegates were to report upon.

But the branches outside of Cleveland have also shown a good spirit. We suggest that District 6 keeps its good start and thereby show its conscientious application to Communist tasks.

The sum of $36 was given a daily representative in Cleveland which has not been credited to the Cleveland branches. Together with these two sums, the total receipts from District 6 are $1,186.82. The quota for the district is $3,000, and the membership averages 1,003. District 6 has then more than one-third filled its quota.

GREAT INTEREST SHOWN IN TALK BY WAGENKNECHT

"Labor Movement in the East" Draws Crowd

A larger attendance than was had for several Sundays past came to hear Alfred Wagenknecht, recently returned from the Orient, speak upon "The Rising Labor Movement of the East," at the Workers Party open forum, Ashland Auditorium, Sunday evening.

The speaker gave an unusually interesting account of the living conditions of the peasants and workers in India, China, Japan, Indonesia and the Philippines, their labor unions and peasants' organizations and the national-liberation movements in these countries.

The tasks of the revolutionary workers of the occidential countries of Europe and America in relation to the budding workers' and peasants' organizations of the Orient were held to be: (1) A close contact with the workers in the colonies and semi-colonies and actual participation in their struggles. (2) Bringing the organizations of workers and peasants into the national-liberation movements in the east as such, so that these organizations may influence the nationalist movements and gain leadership in them. (3) Foster Communist nuclei in the nationalist movements and give material support to the small Communist groups in the Oriental countries.

Many interesting questions were asked and requests made that the data and information contained in the lecture be published.

The speaker at the open forum next Sunday evening will be Arne Swabeck. Subject: "The Two-and-a-Half International." All comrades are requested to advertise the forum meeting among their fellow workers.

Father Out of Work Children Sell Cakes to Support Family

JAMAICA BAY, L. I., Jan. 19.—A family of six live in a one-room shack here. They support themselves on the $10 a week earned thru the father's baking of cakes and the four children peddling them to the neighbors. The shack is furnished with a stove, a table, three chairs and two cots. Two of the children sleep in a bed improvised of two chairs. There is no lathe or plaster on the walls and the two tiny windows are boarded up against the cold weather. The father explained that he had been out of work a long time and finally resorted to baking buns and cookies which, sold by the children, bring in about $10 a week.

latures, and not the voters, that must ratify an amendment to the federal constitution, the referendums have no binding power, theoretically, but are merely "advisory"(?)

The "labor lobbyists" at Albany assert that they have enough promises of support to carry the ratification of the proposed amendment. The state legislature of New York, like all other similar bodies, is composed of the most petty and timid political shysters—glorified ward heelers—and they fear the wrath of the vote labor is supposed to control no less than they fear the opposition of the manufacturers. Hence the proposition to submit the child labor amendment to a referendum appeals to them, as a means of evading the issue, by being able to hide behind the decision of the voters of the state, after these voters have been bludgeoned into idiocy by a campaign of terrorism.

Democracy in Action.

In the state of Massachusetts, where the amendment was defeated by a terrific majority, the beauties of bourgeois democracy were revealed in all their majesty. For hypocritical lying and sustained mendacity that campaign was without an equal. The state was flooded with a propaganda of viciousness thru every agency that money can debauch. Never at any time was the question debated on its merits.

Massachusetts is the center of the textile industry. It was in that state that the industry had its inception in this country. From here it has extended to various other states and during the past three decades has penetrated the south, where the exploitation of children proceeds unhampered by any restraints except the limit of human agony. Many New England textile concerns have branch mills in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Tennessee. Georgia, Louisiana and North Carolina have already refused to ratify and yesterday South Carolina by a unanimous vote of the legislature and without debate rejected the proposed amendment.

In the southern states where the legislatures are openly owned by the textile octopus, the votes of the legislatures are rushed thru, while in the northern states the manufacturers seek to delay the vote of the legislature until "the people" have been consulted. With Massachusetts as the bright and shining light in the firmament of democracy those who distill the blood of children into profits are carrying this beacon into other states where the great campaign of "education" along the lines practiced in Massachusetts will be conducted.

The motive force of the drive in Massachusetts was an organization known as the "national committee for rejection of the 20th amendment," with headquarters in Washington, D. C., and offices in the Union Trust Building, where is also located (quite by accident) the offices of the national manufacturers' association. This committee is composed of the most notorious labor-hating manufacturers in the country and is as follows:

Millard D. Brown, chairman, Continental Mills, Philadelphia.

C. S. Anderson, The Norton company, Worcester, Mass.

P. E. Glenn, Exposition Cotton Mills, Atlanta, Ga.

W. A. B. Dalzell, Fostoria Glass company, Moundsville, W. Va.

R. E. Wood, Montgomery Ward & company, Chicago.

W. H. Leonard, The Denver Rock Drill Manufacturing company, Denver, Colo.

W. Frank Carter, of Carter, Nortoni & Jones, St. Louis, Mo.

The director of this committee is one Frederick W. Keough, one of the editors of the odious scab publication "Industrial Progress," which opposed every labor measure and demand the past five years and is now waging a campaign against the 8-hour day.

Then there was the Massachusetts branch of the national manufacturers' association, known as the "associated industries of Massachusetts," dominated, of course, by the textile barons. This organization, in turn lined up the anti-feminist "Woman Patriot" aggregation, composed of the codfish textile aristocracy of the Back Bay district of Boston, that carried on a propaganda of hysteria to the effect that the government of the United States, influenced by the "notorious Russian Communist" Zinoviev, was about to invade the sanctity of the home and tear the children away from the parents. (This is not an exaggeration, but an actual quotation that appeared in more than eighty different pieces of literature distributed thruout the state by the millions.)

These organizations launched the most stupendous and vicious campaign that history records. No lie was too base or fantastic to be heralded to every hamlet and farm in the state. In addition to tons of literature in the form of leaflets and pamphlets—one hundred and forty-nine specimens of which I have before me—full of filthy slime, the radio was used three times a week to broadcast harrangues by teachers, editors, platform wranglers, clergymen and all the hangers-in in the camp of the enemies of the workers, against the amendment.

The role of the clergy, always vile, was absolutely loathsome in this campaign. On October 1, the Catholic archbishop of Boston, William Cardinal O'Connell, addressed a letter to al the priests of his diocese commanding them to request their parishioners to vote against the amendment on election day. As the catholics comprise forty per cent of the vote in the state, this move was effective. Bishop William A. Lawrence, of the episcopal church of Massachusetts, became the crusader against children and spoke for the protestants, while a public harangue by the Hon. Bishop Warren A. Candler of the methodist church south, was spread thruout the state.

Then the farm papers that depend entirely for their subsistence upon the industrial advertisements they receive and whose sole purpose is polluting the minds of the agricultural population ran miles of columns of misrepresentation. This poison propaganda was aided by wide distribution of excerpts from Henry Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent, containing assertions that the adoption of the amendment would prevent girls helping their mothers wash dishes and prevent the sons of farmers milking cows. Not once was the truth about the amendment placed before the populace. As a matter of fact the amendment is only for the purpose of enabling congress to regulate the labor of children under 18 years of age, and is not a law.

Against this avalanche from the kept organs of the manufacturers, the organised labor movement did practically nothing. Instead of utilising this opportunity to expose the fraudulent arguments and the vicious motives of the manufacturers, the labor movement, according to its own statements, spent less than $2,000. Much of this was spent before the manufacturers got their batteries into action. When labor appealed to the radio broadcasting stations for an opportunity to get their side of the story before the raido fans, they were told the cost would be $50 for each ten minutes. The labor speakers that appeared before audiences gave insipid explanations of the amendment and were at all times on the defensive.

Manufacturers Endorse Smith.

Fresh from the "victory" in Massachusetts, the manufacturers have started drives in every state legislature that may consider the amendment this term. In the southern textile states, they simply give orders to their minions and they are fulfilled. In non-textile states the sacred referendum is used.

Every exploiter of labor in New York is back of "labor's friend," Al. Smith, in his approval of a referendum.

Yesterday the merchants' association, composed of vultures who exploit children in stores and wholesale houses, endorsed the so-called "labor governor" of New York and urged the referendum.

Meanwhile Mr. Holland and other labor politicians are frantically appealing to "Our Al." but to no avail. Instead of grovelling before this Tammanyite, they had better seriously consider the task of labor to expose the sinister propaganda of the manufacturers. And the militants in the labor movement, under the leadership of the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League, have, in these referendums, a wonderful opportunity not merely to expose the capitalist state and the fiction of bourgeois democracy, but to also expose the labor fakers for their half-measures and in many cases open betrayal of the interests of the working class thru their alliances with the old parties of capitalism.

Our Program Vindicated.

The program of the Workers Party contains a scathing arraignment of American democracy and shows its fraudulent nature by analysing the procedure required to amend the constitution, proving that it is a tremendous task to amend this so-called basic law of the land.

It is not by a clear majority that the constitution is changed, but by an almost unanimous agreement among all the legislatures of the country. To change the constution requires a two-thirds vote of the members of the legislature of three-fourths of the states. The program emphasizes the fact that: "One-quarter of the states, in which may live only one-fortieth of the population can prevent any change of the fundamental law of the land."

In New York we have a wonderful opportunity thru proposing child labor united fronts to place our program before the working class and to show in action that we wage a determined struggle for the elementary needs of the working class, and at the same time expose the fakers in the labor movement who because of their alliances with the old parties dare not offend the political scullion and mountebank in the New York state house.

AUTO WORKERS BEGIN MICHIGAN LABOR'S PROTEST

Pledge Support to Labor Defense Council

(Special to the Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 19.—The workers of Michigan are not parties to the conspiracy of the capitalist government of that state with the capitalists of the nation in railroading to the Michigan prison the group of Communists of whom C. E. Ruthenberg was the first victim now in the Jackson penitentiary.

Auto Workers of Michigan Speak.

At least the Auto Workers of Detroit are speaking up and in a resolution condemning the persecution of best fighting element of the labor movement, calls upon all labor bodies to support the Labor Defense Council and pledges its own help.

The resolution, which is expected to be followed by many similar resolutions and protests from all over the state of Michigan, is in full as follows:

An Anti-Labor Law—States Resolution

Whereas, since the world war many states have passed so-called "criminal syndicalism" and "criminal anarchy" laws, which are in violation of the spirit of the bill of rights of the United States constitution, and are instruments of the employing class tyranny over the workers and their organizations, and

Whereas, the state supreme court of Michigan has upheld the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg for "assembling with" the Communists in an opinion which calls for the punishment of ideas and is a denial of free speech and assemblage, and which evades the issue by ignoring the fact that, as the defense showed, there was not even a violation of the state law since nothing was done in Michigan by the defendant in the way of an overt act or advocacy, and

Whereas, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Bookwalter of Berrien county, and others of his class insist upon maximum punishment for this "crime" of holding opinions counter to their own, and

Whereas, the sustaining of the Ruthenberg conviction will mean the attempt at railroading William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne, Robert Minor, and the other 28 well-known fighters in the ranks of the labor movement, and will also encourage high-handed suppression of the workers and their organizations which dare to oppose the open shop rule of the capitalist controlled government, and

Whereas, the solidarity of the entire working class is essential to its welfare and requires that those in the forefront of the struggle must especially have the support of the workers, therefore be it

Resolved, that we, Local Union 127 of the Auto Workers, protest and condemn the action of the Michigan supreme court, and record ourselves as in support of the Labor Defense Council in this case, and call on all labor bodies and working class organizations to take the same stand. We petition the governor of Michigan to issue an unconditonal pardon to C. E. Ruthenberg in the event that the United States supreme court sustains the conviction, it being our opinion that such action on the part of the United States supreme court would be a nullification of the constitution in the interests of the employing class. We protest against any further prosecution of those indicted along with Ruthenberg. Be it further

Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the governor of Michigan, to the prosecuting attorney of Berrien county, Mich., and to the labor press.

A. S. Weaver, Chairman.
R. S. Swann, Secretary.

Adopted by Local 127 United Automobile, Aircraft and Vehicle Workers of America, regular meeting, Friday, Jan. 9, 1925.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Every day under this head you will learn not only what BUILDERS thruout the country are doing to build a greater newspaper, but also practical suggestions to accomplish more for OUR paper. Tell us what YOU are doing—and we will "tell the world."

Builders of Their Own Newspaper.

LAST week saw the appearance of THE BUILDER, official organ of the Builders of the Labor Movement—a monthly miniature newspaper published for those who are giving their efforts to build the DAILY WORKER.

This little newspaper, devoted to comrades doing the important organizational work of getting the best expression of Communism in our press to the workers inside of our party to Bolshevize it—and to workers outside of the party to add additional strength to our ranks—will be sent to all city and branch agents and to all BUILDERS of the movement who had secured new subs during the Bricklayers' campaign in October.

THE BUILDER is a practical organization paper to mold into a more efficient machine all active members of our party and other workers outside of it who are giving their efforts to the DAILY WORKER.

It will carry plans of work and organization, suggestions and experiences of other BUILDERS—all means to make the DAILY WORKER Builders a machine that will bring our party and the DAILY WORKER to greater strength and achievements.

WE WILL GLADLY MAIL ANY WORKER A COPY ON REQUEST.

A. F. OF L. TRIES TO SETTLE WAR BETWEEN MINERS AND ENGINEERS

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The mediating influences of the American Federation of Labor were exercised today to settle the controversy between the United Mine Workers of America and the engineers at the Coal River Collieries in West Virginia, which are owned by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

A committee consisting of Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, Vice-President Martin F. Ryan and Vice-President James P. Noonan were named by President William Green. The committee will meet Grand Chief Warren S. Stone, of the railroad men's organization.

President Green's action is in accordance with a resolution adopted at the last national convention of the American Federation of Labor directing the executive council to aid in adjusting the differences. The report adopted at the convention confirmed the statement made by mine union leaders that the mines owned by the engineers' union had discharged members of the United Mine Workers "for exercising their constitutional right of affiliating with the union of their craft."

To Mark Another Step in History!

The Labor Movement today is a product of the class struggle. Its ultimate goal is to assume control. But, the Labor Movement—to assume power—must of necessity have developed to a high stage of organization, theoretical knowledge and will to power.

To all these requirements, the DAILY WORKER is a great contributing factor—and when you build it—by the simple task of securing at least one new sub—you are building the Revolutionary Labor Movement into a monument marking another, greater step in history.

This brick will make a valuable addition to such a monument.

St. Louis Labor Condemns Framing of Railway Clerk

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19.—The Central Trades and Labor Union of St. Louis, demands reinstatement of Theo. E. Kaiser, a railway mail clerk who was discharged on vague charges of "disloyalty and antagonism to the postoffice department." Kaiser was chairman of the St. Louis postal employes committee in behalf of the recently killed postal wage raise. The labor body declares that Kaiser's discharge came as a penalty for his efforts and that it was intended as a warning to other postoffice employes who might be inclined to espouse better pay.

The Uncrowned Prince

While Samuel Gompers lived to mislead the American working class, one of his favorite luxuries was opposing the movement for recognition of Soviet Russia. His main line of business was betraying the American workers.

Sam's understudy was a weasel-brained satellite by the name of Matthew Woll, one of the vice-presidents of the American Federation of Labor. It was expected that after Gompers was taken to the bosom of his fathers, Woll, his faithful lackey, would inherit the crown. But it was not to be. William Green now sits in the royal chair.

Naturally little Mattie did not like it, but what could he do? He has no more chance of being president of the A. F. of L. than Grand Duke Boris, formerly of Russia, has of being crowed king of Ireland. But being accustomed to having his name appear in the papers on the strength of his position as messenger boy for Gompers, Woll took his exile from the columns of the capitalist press badly.

When his dead master's ally in the war on Russia, Charles Evans Hughes, was given his walking papers from the state department and talk of Soviet recognition revived, Mattie thought he saw an opportunity to blast his way back into the capitalist papers if even for a day. His failure was humilating. Our clipping department has not located any capitalist paper stupid enough to quote Woll as an authority on what the American labor movement thinks of the new developments in the movement for the recognition of the workers' republic.

The Federated Press correspondent in Washington visited A. F. of L. headquarters and located the loquacious Woll, who insisted on speaking for the American Federation of Labor forgetting that Sammy was dead and that there was a new president on the job whose name was not Woll. He declared that the A. F. of L. was against Soviet recognition, and that Senator Borah's views were in opposition to labor's stand on the question.

There is no doubt but the grand dukes of the A. F. of L. are against recognition, but President Green, like a cautious faker, has reserved his decision until the diplomatic fog clears off. When the American bourgeoisie decide to recognize Russia for business reasons, the labor fakers will also hear their masters' voice.

Zinoviev and Trotsky troops have not annihilated each other in the columns of the capitalist press for the last few days. Whatinell is the matter with the newswriters?

Educational Eating

There is an old saying that the way to a man's heart lies thru his stomach. Evidently the Hudson Coal company of Carbondale, Pa., came to the conclusion that food in the proper setting would have a salutary effect on the relations between their slaves and their masters, as they decided to initiate the practice of giving their coal diggers a banquet once in a month.

The coal miners and the coal company had many clashes, sometimes resulting in strikes. Now, strikes are not good for the company. It loses money when its employes refuse to allow themselves to be exploited until their grievances are redressed. Neither does the company like the idea of always complying with the men's demands. It never grants concessions except under compulsion.

"Perhaps if we would get our employes to eat with us once in a month," thought the officers of the Hudson Coal company, "they would be more inclined to listen to reason! Perhaps they would forget that they are workers and that we are capitalists!"

A very good idea—for the Hudson Coal company. No sooner thought of than done. The monthly banquet system was inaugurated and the coal diggers sat down to table with the bosses and the bosses made nice speeches about the hard times thru which the coal industry was passing, and that what was good for the coal companies was also good for the diggers and that it would be ever so much better for both if they could come together and co-operate instead of listening to those agitators who preach class hatred. In other words it was Johnston's B. and O. plan of class collaboration thru the stomach route.

But Local 877 of the United Mine Workers of America put an effective stop to this experiment in seducing the workers. Evidently this local knows there is such a thing as a class struggle and that it cannot be eliminated by having the robber and the robbed dine together. So the local unanimously passed a resolution forbidding any union member to attend any of those "educational" feasts on pain of discipline. And furthermore pickets will watch the banqueting hall to see that the bosses will dine alone.

The tempest has developed in Washington over the question whether or not the United States is finally enmeshed in European committments. The administration claims that it is not. The administration foes—and they appear not to be few—claim that it is.

It looks as if Silent Cal might yet have to become vocal. His sidekick Dawes has not been heard of for some time. Curse words and oaths were never needed more than now to drown the sound of George Harvey's thunder.

The Dawes plan is at the bottom of the tempest. How could the American bankers loan their money to Germany so that the latter could pay reparations to the "allied and associated powers" for the trouble they underwent in defeating her unless these cautious bankers were assured that the armed forces of the United States would be ready to shoulder arms whenever Germany took the notion of defaulting on payments? As the loot was to be divided among all the robbers, the U. S. included, was it not the most natural thing in the world for the plunderers to sign articles of agreement?

Of course, but besides the conflicting interests of American capitalists there are political currents inside the G. O. P. which are quick to take advantage of the present involvement of the United States in European alliances. George Harvey is astounded! George is editor of the Washington Post, Edward McLean's paper. It is reported that he expected to step into Charles Evans Hughes' shoes when that gentleman stepped out of the state department. But George is still at his editorial desk and is making more noise than a pond full of frogs. He feels that this country came home in a barrel from the Paris conference on reparations, and he is of the opinion that Ambassador Kellogg should be indicted for indecent exposure.

The "irreconcilables" in the senate will thunder against participation in European affairs. But the big fellows who rule America are for such participation and they usually put it all over the "independent" capitalists whose interests do not lie in that direction. But these "independents" can make a lot of trouble for Wall Street. By kicking hard enough they may secure some concessions and their politicians will surely get some graft out of it. But United States capitalism is in Europe to stay, until the European workers decide to assume the role of rulers.

Lenin Memorial Meetings

This week is Lenin Memorial Week, not only in the United States but all over the world. One year ago the greatest revolutionary leader in all history passed away. The enemies of the proletariat rejoiced, but their rejoicing was shortlived.

"Lenin is dead, but Leninism remains," declared the Communist International, and this slogan was answered in every land by the exploited workers and oppressed peoples. Lenin lives in his teaching and in the organization he formed to mobilize the workers for the overthrow of capitalism.

During this week Lenin memorial meetings will be held all over the United States. They will be held under the auspices of the Workers Party, but thousands of non-party workers will attend them. The influence of Leninism extends far beyond the party boundaries. The members of the Workers Party will leave nothing undone to make these meetings successful in an organizational sense. The energy used up in bringing masses of workers together must not be dissipated in a burst of enthusiasm. The occasion must be used for the purpose of bringing new members into the Workers (Communist) Party, into Lenin's party, to help fulfill the task which the great revolutionist devoted his genius to.

"Lenin. He was as mighty as the ocean. To our enemies he was as severe as the stinging frost," writes Zinoviev, the leader of the Communist International.

No greater homage can be rendered to world capitalism's most formidable foe on the anniversary of his death, than to help build the movement which he founded. Let each member of our party therefore determine to bring a member into our ranks during Lenin Memorial Week.

Stone Is O. K.

The senate judiciary committee unanimously approved the appointment of Attorney General Harlan P. Stone to the United States supreme court. His appointment had been held up pending investigation into his relations with the House of Morgan.

Senators Borah of Idaho and T. P. Walsh of Montana were curious to know whether Stone's dealings with Morgan were professional or otherwise. It turned out that they were professional, which means in plain English that as an attorney, Stone accepted money from Morgan which, according to bourgeois ethics, is permissable and even desirable, whereas had Stone divested himself of his legal character even for a moment and accepted a five-cent cigar from the Wall Street money baron, his elegibility for a seat on the supreme court bench would be questionable.

Now that Stone is thoroly cleansed of any suggestion of illegitimate relations with one of the principal stockholders in the United States government, the senate will undoubtedly take the position that he is thoroly qualified to serve Morgan and company on the supreme court bench.

Harold F. McCormick is suing his former wife, Edith Rockefeller, for possession of over $7,000,000 worth of Standard Oil stock. The suit is for the benefit of McCormick's nine-month-old granddaughter, whose father is Max Oser, a Swiss riding master. Wise jockey!

Suggestions for Organization of Shop Nuclei

Note.—The following is a letter from the organization committee of the Communist International dealing with the beginnings of discussion of shop nuclei in the Workers (Communist) Party. Since then practical steps toward reorganization have been taken in some places in this party. The letter follows:

DEAR COMRADES: It is a matter for congratulation that the question of factory nuclei is now being actually discussed in your press. We have followed this discussion with interest. In our present letter we merely want to make a few suggestions to you.

Guard Against Confusion.

It seems to us from the discussion in your press that the function of factory nuclei has been confused with that of local branches. The scheme of our organization for cities (which may be varied for smaller places by the omission of one or two instances) is as follows: 1. Factory nuclei (and street nuclei); 2, ward organizations; 3, district organizations; and 4, town organizations, with their respective leading committees. The city leadership should guide in every way the party work in their respective localities. The leadership guides and controls the activity of the party in its respective locality, it organizes factions in all the non-party mass-organizations, in a word, it takes part in and guides the whole of the party activity, as well as the work of the factory nuclei in the respective town or community, village, etc. On the other hand, the factory nuclei conduct the party activity only in their respective factories, the street nuclei in their respective residential neighborhoods, and carry out the decisions of the district leadership and the instructions of the superior organs of the party. Hence it follows that the nuclei take up an attitude on, discuss and resolve all party questions, express their opinions and adopt also decisions regarding these questions, but the superior party instances exercise authority over the nuclei as such, as well as over the individual members of the party, and have the right to call on them for some other work for the party.

The next question: How is the leading committee of the city organization elected and composed? To our way of thinking, this should be done at a conference of representatives of the factory nuclei (of course after the formation of such and after they have begun to function) upon a ward or district scale. The ward conference elects the ward leadership, but at the same time also the delegates to the district conference; the district conference elects, besides the district leadership, also delegates to the city conference. (Of course, ward and district sub-divisions are necessary only in large cities). The city conference elects then the leadership of the city organization, which has to carry out the duties already mentioned.

Proceed With Reorganization.

Concurrently with your press discussion, you should have also commenced practical work for the formation of factory nuclei. We therefore, request the party, already during the time of the discussion, thru the city organizations acting under the direct supervision of the party executive, to proceed with the organization of factory nuclei in large factories. If it be impossible to form them in all large factories, it should at least be done in those where not less than three party members are employed. In our opinion it would be necessary to decentralize the work of reorganization of the party on the basis of factory nuclei. The matter should be put in the hands of the leading committees of the cities, and even these should be commenced only according to wards and districts. After the achievement of the organization of factory nuclei and after the organization of all the W. P. members in the factories, the city leaderships should proceed to convene conferences of wards and districts (see above.)

For these reasons it seems to us that the industrial registration of members according to factories would be both superfluous and too irksome. What the executive and the local leaderships should be concerned about is to see to it that the proper instructions be worked out for the nuclei to enable them to work well. It would be desirable that one comrade on the executive, as well as on the local leaderships, be instructed to take in hand the work of the nuclei, to watch and to test carefully the work of the party nuclei. The experience thus gained (good as well as bad) should then be made known to the nuclei by means of circular letters, so that they may be guided in their work accordingly.

It is absolutely necessary for all the members of the W. P. working in a particular factory, regardless of the language group to which they belong, to organize themselves in one and the same nuclei.

Need Not Work Openly.

Of course, the difficulties of our organizational work in America are tremendous. But when an attempt is made to use the difficulties of open activity as an argument against the factory nuclei—as was done by a contributor in the "DAILY WORKER Supplement"—then it must be pointed out that the very opposite is the case. It has been demonstrated with sufficient clearness by the experience of Russia before the revolution and of Germany today, that it is just the factory nuclei organizations which facilitate tremendously even such work which cannot be carried on publicly. Even in countries where the parties work quite openly, drastic measures are frequently taken by capitalism. It is therefore desirable that the factory nuclei should not work openly in full view of the capitalists, but should rather seek to strike root in the masses, whose interests they must protect always and everywhere. If it be impossible to hold nuclei meetings in factories, they should be held elsewhere in the vicinity, in suitable places. Neither is it impossible to outwit the vigilance of American overseers if the necessary measures of precaution are adopted. Just in the factory nuclei it is far easier to prevent the entrance of all kinds of spies, to unmask them or to paralyze them, than in the other organizations, where the members do not know each other so intimately as they do in the factory.

Language Federations Considered.

The resolution on factory nuclei adopted at the second conference of your party contains a clause about the language federations (Sec. V, 5).

The language federations represent an old, ineffective form of organization. But the multitude of languages in America renders the problem more complex than in other countries. The organizational department of E. C. C. I. recognizes the difficulties of this problem and will endeavor to investigate and study it closely. But we consider it advisable to retain the language federations for the time being. At the same time, as soon as the factory nuclei are organized and their activity begins, they should be united in wards, districts and cities, while the language federations should be transformed into auxiliary organizations of the party, carrying on purely propagandist, agitational and cultural tasks. Their members should belong to the factory nuclei, or to the ward, district or thru them to the city organizations. But the language federations as such should possess no rights as local party organizations.

With Communist greetings,
Organizational department of E. C. C. I.

Lenin As I Saw Him - By Schachno Epstein

All Russia Greets Lenin.

A SNOW storm twirls, whirls like a devilish dance; whirls and roars fiercely, ruthlessly.

A north wind rages on the banks of the Neva; at this time of the year the north is full of wrath—it bellows on Petrograd with wind and cold, with the severity of a blade.

People swarm bent in three, trembling and gasping. The misty day declines and withers, and with it, the number of people in the streets decrease. Every now and then a sleigh slides by, a tramcar covered with snow and icicles hanging down. The houses are covered with snow, the roaring lamp-posts teem with dreariness.

One December night, we, a group to be exiled to Siberia, were driven over Nevsky Prospect. The houses, restaurants and amusement places glimmer with dazzling lghts, but not a soul on the main street. The wind only roared and ruthlessly chased us on, tearing our prison clothes off our back, drove also our convoy who angrily cursed us, the raging north and their own mothers . . .

The stormy wind hissed and roared and we held together so as not to fall. It felt that we crawled over a snow desert which will never end; fiery wolf eyes stared and winked at me. My head turned dizzy, and I was exhausted. I felt as if I am exhaling the last breath . . .

It this the great capital with its joy and glory, with its refined civilization and its "Asiatic" brutality?

Now, after so many years have passed, whirls the same December snow storm; but there are no dazzling lights on Nevsky Prospect. Lonesomely glitter and twinkle the faint lights of the lanterns on the main street. But people swarm in throngs on the streets and their rustle and bustle waken the severity and rage of the snow storm; they entangle you and drag you into a devil's dance, and a secret is hidden and deeply buried in the worn out soldiers' uniforms torn boots, shabby fur coats. We, a group of delegates to the eighth conference of the Bund constituted part of the human sea. Our teeth danced from cold, we could hardly stand on our feet but we were carried with the stream.

What happened?

A young girl dressed in man's clothes looked at us ironically: inteligentsia, bourgeoisie. Her face was covered with rags but her girlish eyes threw an angry look. She sieved thru her teeth whistlingly:

"Ilyitch has to pass by, that is why people have gathered here."

A brief remark, but it revealed the deeply hidden secret.

"Ilyitch"—resounded from many mouths, carried thru the snow storm and it was full of ectatic expressions.

The heart was beating.

Just an hour ago at one of the sessions of the Bund conference did the Bundist Liber bitterly attack Lenin declaring that he ruined the revolution. The delegates applauded him. And if anyone dared to express his opinion against Liber nobody paid any attention to him, reproached him that he is a Bolshevik. This was sufficient to make one descend the platform feeling guilty.

And now we stand here, bent in three gaping at the human wave that is reverently waiting for him who "ruined" the revolution . . .

I remember distinctly the words Comrade Stiopa, now dead, (who spent several years in America and was Bolshevistically inclined) has used: Well, who has influence over the masses, Lenin, the "demagogue," or the "consistent" Marxist Liber?

The words "demagogue" and "consistent" Stiopa uttered in such a tone of biting scarcasm, like everybody else around him, that we were disarmed, we had nothing to say.

In fact there, in the warm clubroom of the Petrograd Jewish bourgeisie, where the conference of the Bund was held they were busy with sophistry, casuistry, with proving thru Marxism that Lenin's revolution is not the true revolution; and here, in the dreary cold thousands of poor ragged, starving people are waiting, hoping to give an extra look at their leader.

Who is right, then, we, who found grace in the eyes of Petrograd bourgeoisie or Lenin, who is a terror for all the former rulers?

Have my comrades or I myself tho't so then, I doubt, but that a worm of doubt has gnawed our hearts, this I remember well.

We knew that that night the Petrograd Soviets had a session, where Lenin had to report about the peace negotiations with Germany. An interesting discussion was expected. After that Lenin had to address a mass meeting at the Nevsky section. People found it out and began to swarm thither from all sides.

Instead of human faces, rows of white moving figures twirling like the snow in the storm, melting in the darkness of the night with the white buildings, were seen.

Men and natural elements were, it seemed, struggling for supremacy. First one, and then another fell. Laughter pierced thru the air resounding like a whimper, and the human wave grew larger and denser; no force could halt their onrush.

Some of them even tried to sing the "Internationale;" the melody breaks and carries off with the raging storm like pieces of broken links far, far into the lamp post, over the buildings, over the monuments. These broken links are caught up by others, from a different corner so that the raging wrath of the snow storm can't race any more with the voices of the throng that hiss as sharply as the wind.

Suddenly an automobile came rushing. The human stream instantly stopped its rush as if an invisible power would put a dam to it. The storm roars at its fiercest, in the midst of that roar one hears first a woman's voice then re-echoed by the entire atmosphere.

Ilyitch!

Our group pushed toward the place where the automobile stopped, but we were flung back by the mob. I fell, feeling that another second and I am crushed under their feet. Another cram like that of an iceberg and I found myself downstairs in front of a store, pressed between covered faces with fiery eyes.

Luckily, when I came to my senses I was facing the automobile. Who was inside I could not see, but I did distinctly see the selfsame figure that I have once seen so many years ago in Geneva; the same smile on his lips, the same sharp expresion in his eyes, the same sharply pointed jaws the only difference being that he wore an old fashioned long worn out fur cap and a shabby looking coat with a small lambskin collar fur too light for the Petrograd frost. This was Lenin just a little older. The people demanded: let Ilyitch speak. And again angrily rages the snow storm whirling over the human wave Ilyitch's voice overwhelms however the bellowing of the storm; his words ring like the echo of steel.

What Ilyitch said I could hear no more because, again, like the cram of an iceberg jolted me away to a different angle; but I did hear amidst the roar of the wind the clapping of hands resounding like bullets discharged from a gun, lasting, lasting "hurrah" whirls on . . .

Returning home all frozen to the delegates' hotel, formerly a Swedish hospital, the clock was striking two.

The porter of the hotel, a Russified Swede, a tall old, grey-bearded man with a yellow parchment face with dreamy eyes complained: Some weather, it whirls like hell. Ilyitch couldn't even finish his speech.

He too had just come from Nevsy Prospect . . .

KRUPSKAJA

By ISRAEL AMTER.

SHE stands on the stage—strong, to to all appearance emotionless. It is a special session of the All-Russian Soviet Congress.

The congress was in session when the news came that Lenin died. Standing before them, Comrade Kalenin read the message—a shock went thru the congress held in the Grand Theater of Moscow. Then strong men and women—workers and peasants who had seen the most gruesome of wars, who had fought against the most brutal enemies, had starved and hungered—these strong men broke down and cried. Cried like little children who have lost their dearest one. They wept—and thru the Grand Theater could be heard their sobs. Lenin—the grand old man—was gone. The disease that had stricken him a year before had conquered. Lenin was no more.

The Soviet Congress held a special session in commemoration of his death. It was a solemn occasion. The leaders of the Russian Communist Party—Zinoviev, Stalin, Bucharin, Kamenev—spoke, telling of Lenin's work for the revolution, before the revolution in the hard days of the czar, in leading the revolution, in the hard days after the revolution, in building up the Soviet state and protecting it from the attacks of the international bourgeoisie. They told of his leadership in the social-democratic party of Russia—the forerunner of the Russian Communist Party. They told of his mighty achievement in building the Communist International. And now, leaderless, we must work on and fight on alone.

These were the companions and comrades of Lenin. They were his disciples, who had learned well at his side—in the struggle itself—learning from him, pitting their intelligence and Communist understanding against him when necessary—and always led to Lenin's point of view—to the point of view of the leader.

Then a pause. The funeral hymn—the wierd, piercing, enthralling funeral hymn—as his nearest, dearest companion and comrade stepped forth on the stage. The woman who had aided him and fought at his side—his constant comrade abroad in the emigration, in the dark days, and in the brighter days when "Russia became Soviet Russia.

Krupskaja!

Lenin's body lay in the Temple of Labor, and Krupskaja stood beside it, day by day, night after night. And now she stands before this body of workers and peasants—the mighty organ of the Soviet government—to speak to them of the man who lies in the Temple of Labor.

It was not Lenin's wife who stands before us. It is Krupskaja, his companion and comrade, who makes no claim on him as her husband, but as his comrade. She stands before us, not to tell of his traits as a husband—she tells of Lenin the man, Lenin the comrade, Lenin the revolutionist.

No sound could be heard in the vast theater. Every breath was stayed. Here stood a heroine—a real heroine of the Russian revolution, whose heart was bleeding, as the heart of all Soviet Russia was bleeding, whose tears were falling and yet her eyes were dry. And yet no eye was dry in the Grand Theater was dry as Krupskaja spoke about Lenin.

Can you imagine what it means, when your heart is breaking, when the dearest that you have is gone, to stand before an audience and speak about the comrade whom you loved best? But no, Krupskaja is of the same stuff as Lenin. He was not her dearest—no, the great Russian workers and peasants—they were the dearest to the heart of Lenin—they are the dearest to the heart of Krupskaja.

Not raising her voice, with no tremor, she speaks. Only a few minutes. But in these few minutes telling the essence, unfolding the life and soul of Lenin.

This was heroism—as all the Russian workers and peasants of Soviet Russia have learned it. As the Communists, harried from post to post before the revolution learned it. This was the epitome of the courage and indomitable will of the Russian revolutionist. And Krupskaja was their surest and best representative.

She speaks—and then the "Death of Siegfried."

A life was bared in these few minutes—a life's experience was disclosed. The wisdom of a lifetime was unveiled.

She loved Lenin, as the whole Russian people loved him.

But she loved the Russian workers and peasants—and Soviet Russia and the revolution even more.

Krupskaja.

WORKERS REPUDIATE SOVIET FOE

Lenin Memorial Meeting Tonight

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

LAST Sunday's meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor was rather quiet. The officials have several sponge-like propositions which are used to soak in the energy of the delegates until it comes near time for somebody to rise and say: "I move that all business not transacted be referred to the executive committee." This motion is always carried, as everybody is anxious to go to bed after being snoozing on the uncomfortable chairs while the label committee, the grievance committee, the schools committee or the sewage committee turns on the same old record.

THE labor leaders will find time to talk about everything but some matter that vitally affects the interests of the workers. While politics is tabooed in the unions by the non-partisan policy of the A. F. of L., nothing else is taken seriously by the reactionaries at the Chicago Federation of Labor, but politics—capitalist politics.

LINN A. E. GALE, formerly of Mexico, and other parts not so well known, has bobbed up in Aurora, Mo., as the editor of a pink (literally) sheet called The Lifted Lid. It is as crazy a rag as was ever conceived in the brain of a nut posing as a radical. Gale is an unexpurgated edition of the kind of egomaniac, who imagines that the world waits on his words. Such a specimen is Haldeman Julius, editor of a flock of magazines and husband of a woman who made a prosperous business man out of him. Julius, however, is an unabashed turncoat, who brazenly repudiated his [illegible], while Gale is still polluting the atmosphere with his nauseat[illegible]

He puts meat-eating Communists and child labor exploiting capitalists on the same footing. If he is a Communist, then I am a bishop. To prove that a man can be a Communist and a vegetarian at the same time, he cites as examples: Urban Ledoux, the freak who gets a group of hungry unfortunate victims of capitalism into a New York church every year for the sake of publicity and among others, Linn Gale. It is hard to say whether people become fanatical vegetarians because they are crazy or become crazy because they are vegetarians.

WHETHER a person should eat meat or not as part of his diet depends on many factors. It may be good for some and bad for others. But there are several hundred schools of health, and each one of them picks on some innocent article of diet and puts it on the verboten list. One of these fellows told a friend of mine that cow's milk was intended only for calves and that if meat should be eaten at all, it should be devoured on the hoof tiger fashion. He took his cue from the tiger, who usually lives in the jungles where butcher shops don't exist. Unfortunately for his theory, man and the tiger have different tastes and different duties to perform, therefore, they see about getting their vitamines in a different manner.

SOME people object to the use of meat as an article of diet on ethical grounds, for the same reason that people object to the wearing of furs by women. It means the slaughter of

COOLIDGE WOULD HUSH UP PARIS TREATY SCANDAL

Tries to Keep Dawes Plan from Debate

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The denial of Secretary of State Hughes that America has been plunged into the European political arena by Coolidge, whose representatives signed the agreement of allied finance ministers based on the Dawes plan, has by no means convinced many senators that Hughes knows what he is talking about.

Hiram Johnson of California, pointed out that "responsible parties in every foreign signatory country, take a directly contrary view."

To Gouge Germany.

The agreement signed by Kellogg, Coolidge's new secretary of state, and the European powers, is a financial arrangement whereby the United States gets a percentage of all money that is extracted from the German workers under the Dawes plan.

Altho the Coolidge administration under the control of J. P. Morgan, in [illegible] the Dawes plan, and the [illegible] the plan on Belgium, France and England, by threatening to withhold loans from these countries, Coolidge is anxious to keep the Dawes plan away from the senate.

Coolidge-Morgan Plan.

Coolidge does not want publicity shed on his close connection with the Morgan banks. Nor does he wish his political enemies in the senate to air his entrance into European affairs while he pretends to be against "European entanglements."

The European statesmen have been told of the situation and have suddenly hushed up all exultant newspaper comment on the entrance of America into the merry European game of staving off the establishment of Soviet governments, and at the same time milking the German workers dry.

London Hushes Up.

The London foreign office has manifested "disapproval" of all those "too eager to look upon the Paris agreement as the return of the United States to active participation in European affairs." Those statesmen who were themselves a few days ago making these statements are now clamping a rigid censorship on all such newspaper comment.

Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, who made a speech congratulating America on her "return to the European arena," has been roundly criticized, not because he lied, but because he untactfully told the truth, thus getting Coolidge into somewhat of a mess. He has let it be known that he will "take the first opportunity to make a speech in a different tone." The United States, has after all signed the agreement, and the European statesmen are willing to say anything that will prevent

WHY NOT BRAND 'EM ON THE FOREHEAD OR NOTCH THEIR EARS?

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—A system whereby every person in New York would be forced to carry a card containing his photograph and fingerprints, all registered at police headquarters, was recommended by Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright at a dinner given him to celebrate his return from South America.

ALL CAPITALIST GANG MOVES TO BREAK STRIKE

Government, Fakers and Business

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 20.—All the forces of capitalism, particularly its labor lieutenants, are endeavoring to throttle the strike of 60,000 miners of District No. 1 here today.

From the headquarters of the capitalist government at Washington have arrived two "conciliators," Thomas Davis [illegible], acting under orders of the secretary of labor, who now, tho unable until this date to see any grievances of the anthracite miners, is suddenly solicitous about them going on strike.

The state of Pennsylvania is also on the job, also suddenly discovering that there are things to be settled to which it was formerly deaf and blind.

"Me And God."

Cappellini is issuing statements hourly to the capitalist press trying to frighten the miners with all sorts of dread penalties of they break the "sacred" contract. One of his manifestoes sounds like the decree of a king, reading, "Therefore, as President of District 1, and by the authority vested in me, I, Rinaldo Cappellini, call upon you and urge every member of this organization to keep inviolate the contract under which we are working."

From Indianapolis, John L. Lewis, betrayer of many a miners' strike, is wiring threats against the strikers and encouragement for Cappellini.

Business men of the whole district are appealing to Governor Pinchot to avert the strike.

The special committee of the strikers and those who threaten to strike is busy protecting the local treasuries from Cappellini's attachments and discussing filing a bill in equity to prevent Cappellini and other district officials from drawing their pay until they call a special district convention to try charges against these officials.

Miners' Standing Solid.

The special committee of union officials, appointed by John L. Lewis just arrived here to make a final effort to crush the strike.

The grievance committees scheduled to meet here today are, however, standing pat and demanding both a settlement of grievances against the companies and a special district convention to hear their grievances and charges against Cappellini and company.

It's An Ill Wind, Etc.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 20.—Authority to issue bonds and increase rates to pay for damage from the ice storm which levelled wires in the central and western part of the state last month, was granted the Illinois Telephone companies today by the Illinois commerce commission.

JENSEN MOCKS CARPENTERS' CONSTITUTION

Hutcheson's Tools Make Farce of Union Laws

The "constitutional" fakers who are defying the will of the majority in Local No. 181, of the carpenters' union, gave another example of how little they care for the law of the organization, last Monday night, when the president refused to entertain a resolution preferring charges against the local president for his violation of the constitution of the international brotherhood.

The struggle in Local 181, arose over the illegal expulsion of five members of the union by a ukase from the president, acting under the instructions of Harry Jensen, a member of the local and also president of the district council. Jensen is the real "president" of Local 181 and attends every meeting to guide his tools along the thorny path which he has mapped out for them.

Jensen fears that if he missed one meeting, his flunkeys would not be able to hold their own, as they have less brains than he has, which is not saying much for them. At least ninety [illegible] against Jensen and his tools and sympathise with the illegally railroaded members.

Got A New Idea.

When last Monday night's meeting opened, the chairman made a show of being a devoted adherent of the constitution and said the meeting could not be held until the expelled members removed themselves from the hall. This was a novelty, as they had attended all other meetings since they were "expelled" and had gotten the password in the regular manner.

The new instructions from Harry Jensen, prove that the fakers are getting nervous and are afraid that the rank and file may not be able to hold their patience much longer. They have seen a few fakers holding up the business of the meeting for several weeks and they are going to stand for it indefinitely.

The Czar's Letter.

At Monday night's meeting, the president read the letter from Hutcheson which stated that the appeal of the members against the railroading pogrom did not act as a stay of sentence and that the "expelled" mem-

PROFIT SHARING AS A WAY TO CUT WAGES SHOWN IN TEXTILE MILL

NORTH ANDOVER, Mass., Jan. 20.—Sutton's Mills, manufacturers of woolen coatings and suitings, have distributed to approximately 400 employes $8,700, one-half interest in the increased profits effected in the month of December, 1924, by increased production thru their efforts.

The "nice" boss, it is thus seen, will give 400 workers $8,700 or about $22 each, if they first give him $17,400 or about $44 each. This is called "profit sharing," and the "sharing" is supposed to be done by the boss, but is always done by the workers.

And when the bosses persuade workers to follow the same game the Sutton Mills put over, they suffer a real reduction of wages in proportion to their output.

CONFISCATE ALL TRACTION LINES W. P. TELLS CITY

Dever's Traction Deal Hits a Snag

The city council committee on local transportation has demanded that the city be given either a majority control of the traction lines when it retires a major portion of the debt, or that Mayor Dever's traction ordinance be rejected.

The alderman declared that the ordinance is, in effect, a grant of perpetual franchise to the private interests now controlling the stock in the traction lines.

The traction lines, thru Silas Strawn, their attorney, have told the people of Chicago they can take it or leave it, just as they choose, but that they do not intend to give the city control of the lines until every cent of the certificates now owned by private interests is paid for by the city.

Bankers Insolent.

"The city has no money and cannot finance purchase of the lines by any other method," Strawn told the city council. The aldermen pointed out that the city may never be able to completely refund the debt, and therefore, if Dever's ordinance were passed,

CHICAGO LABOR JOINS IN HUGE DEMONSTRATION

Big Memorial Meeting at Ashland Auditorium

Tonight the thinking workers of Chicago, in myriad thousands, will bend their way towards the Ashland (Carmen's) Auditorium, to join in the commemoration of the first anniversary of the death of Nicolai Lenin, leader of the workers' revolution.

Workers Rally to Communism.

Last year thousands of workers gathered at meetings in Chicago and thruout the country to hear the slogan—"Lenin is dead—Long live Leninism."

This year, more than ever before, the truth of the teachings of Lenin is apparent to the world's workers. With the Coolidge-Morgan government actively entering Germany to enslave her workers under the Dawes plan, with the white terror being instituted by the bourgeois dictators in Europe and the colonies, the workers are rallying around the Communist International, founded by Lenin.

With the decline of capitalism, the working classes of the world realize more than ever that the road to their emancipation leads thru the Soviet state, and the tactics to be used to achieve the rule of the workers are the tactics taught by Lenin.

Prominent Speakers.

The speakers at tonight's Lenin memorial meeting are to be Earl R. Browder, acting secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party and Gordon Owens, prominent Negro Communist.

Twenty-five thousand Communists in Berlin paraded in memory of Nicolai Lenin a few days ago. The workers of the world cherish Lenin's memory because they know that it was Lenin who instilled the iron discipline into the Bolshevik Party of Russia, that enabled the Russian Communists to overthrow the imperialistic regime of the czar and the bourgeois Kerensky regime, and establish the Soviet government.

Lenin Fought Opportunism.

Lenin relentlessly fought all petty bourgeois menshevik thot thruout the world. He carried on an unceasing war against the traitorous Kautskys of the world who betrayed the workers because they thot the proletarian revolution "wasn't nice." Lenin was a true friend of the working class of America, and warmly welcomed the American delegates to the first congresses of the Third (Communist) International which he founded.

Long Live Leninism.

Tonight the Chicago members of the Workers (Communist) Party, and all who are loyal to the revolutionary working class will meet to hear America's leading exponents of Leninism do honor to his memory and explain the great contributions made by Lenin toward the emancipation of the workers by means of the overthrow of the capitalist exploiters and the establishment of the rule of the workers thruout the world.

Minneapolis Meeting.

Lenin memorial meetings are being held in all principal cities and industrial centers of the country. The Lenin memorial meeting in Minneapolis, where the Communists have resisted all efforts of the A. F. of L. bureaucrats to break up the labor movement there, will be held Sunday Jan. 25 in the Finnish Hall, 1317 Western Ave., Earl Browder will be

ABRAMOVICH IS FORCED TO FLEE AT N. Y. MEETING

Gathering Turned Into Communist Rally

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(By Mail.)—Many workers were severely injured and scores bruised when an indignant audience of workers in the new Star Casino revolted yesterday afternoon against R. Abramovich, murderous menshevik agent of the Russian counter-revolution when he started to vilify the Soviet republic, aided by the yellow socialist "Forward" gang speakers.

Sponsored by Hillquit.

Abramovich escaped in an automobile furnished by the "Forward" gang's sluggers and protected by [illegible] police called by Morris Hillquit and Judge Jacob Panken, while the meeting was turned into a demonstration for Soviet Russia and the Communist movement.

Abramovich, who came to America for the special purpose of attacking Soviet Russia, getting money for menshevik counter-revolution and inciting the labor fakers of America to more venomous attacks on the left wing, was certainly the darling of the yellow socialist "Forward" clique who took every precaution to prevent what happened.

Gangsters and Police Help.

Prepared beforehand, police and gangsters [illegible] the major part of the few thousand in the audience were seated. The committee in charge, in spite of these demonstrations of thuggery, could not for long suppress the mass demonstration that broke loose.

Tho the gangsters and the police had their share in the meeting. As a worker here and there cheered for Soviet Russia or heckled the speakers he was set upon and knocked about by the police or gangsters, yet the mass could not be repressed.

Vladeck Makes Threat.

When the meeting opened there was storm in the air. B. Charney Vladeck, chairman of the meeting, in the opening speech threatened what he called "the disturbers."

The meeting was divided into two sections. In the first three rows were the "Forward" clique. They clapped at every chance or upon instructions. The great majority of these present did not, however, applaud either Abramovich or any other speaker. The first few speakers were received in comparative calm.

The noise started when Weinberg, the chairman of the Workmen's Circle, was introduced and started to greet Abramovich. He praised the counter-revolutionist as a wonderful "socialist" and in concluding said:

"In the name of the 100,000 members of the Workmen's Circle, I take great pleasure in turning over the key of the organization to Abramovich."

Refused to be Betrayed.

Waves of shouts broke out. "Not we! Not we! Not in our name!" came from all over the hall. "Who gave you permission to turn over the key of the Workmen's Circle to a traitor against the working class?"

Pandemonium broke loose. The gangsters attacked the workers everywhere, but the battle was not altogether one-sided. The workers defended themselves while the whole

TEXTILE WORKERS STRIKE AT GOODYEAR MILL, 300 MORE OUT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 20.—A strike of 250 weavers was declared at the Potomska mill here today in consequence of a wage reduction of 10 per cent, which became effective today in New Bedford cotton mills. Sixty weavers and loom fixers, employed at the Goodyear and Fisk Tire fabric mill, had gone on strike earlier in the day.

BUILDING THE DAILY WORKER TASK OF EVERY WORKERS PARTY MEMBER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., Jan. 20.—That it is the task of every member of the Workers (Communist) Party, and not of the English language speaking sections alone, to build the DAILY WORKER, is the demand raised by the DAILY WORKER agents of New York City in a declaration adopted as follows:

To the District Executive Committee and the Central Executive Committee!

Comrades: The meeting of DAILY WORKER agents of New York, consisting of fourteen branches, unanimously adopted the following:

"That we request of the district executive committee and the central executive committee that they immediately launch an educational campaign to impress upon the membership of the entire party the fact that the DAILY WORKER is not merely the organ of the English speaking membership, but that it is the OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY OF AMERICA, and that its upbuilding is an essential task for every federation of our party and the Communist duty of EVERY party member, no matter what language he speaks."

lence began to yell at the top of ir voices. Cries of "Down with inberg! Down with the socialist itors to the workers!" were heard ove the din.

Weinberg Draws Jeers.

Finally after tremendous work on the part of the police, the meeting became fairly quiet. Weinberg tried to speak again, pleading with the members of the Workmen's Circle not to insult their chairman—himself. More shouts. "Who elected you? Whose leader are you?" Act one repeated. The gangsters busy again. The workers busy again, doing their share. Everything was turmoil.

The "Forward" clique of socialists decided to call reinforcements. Around four o'clock in walked about a score of "husky sluggers. They took their places in the aisles, like guards in a penitentiary, and waited for the signal from their bosses. They were not kept long waiting.

Vladik introduced Abramovich. Silence reigned. The first three rows stood up—looked around—saw nobody clapping but themselves, sat down again. No applause.

Workers Cheer Soviet Rule.

Then Abramovich, agent of white guardism, emissary of the blood-spillers of the socialist Second International commenced. He proceeded without interruption until he mentioned "Soviet Russia." At once the hall was shouting—"Long live Soviet Russia! Long live the first Workers' and Farmers' government!"

"Mister" Abramovich lost his self-control entirely. He could not imagine that so many Bolsheviks would turn up at a meeting in America called by the yellow socialists. He turned pale. He jumped and stumbled in speech. He was continually interrupted. The gangsters got to work. Like wolves they were. Seats were upset. The whole crowd of perhaps 2,000 people for a half hour massed themselves in one big group tumbling over the seats, rolling on the floor.

Women screamed continually as gangsters plied their trade. A dreadful sight, when socialists who pretend to represent the workers call the police of the capitalist government and hire sluggers to beat down workers who voice their protests against attacks on Soviet Russia. But above all the din the shouts came—"Long live Soviet Russia! Down with yellow traitors! Long live the Communist International! Long live the Workers Party!" And threaded thru it the song of the International.

The traitors on the platform were deathly pale. They had met much more than they wished to meet. They all tried to quiet the crowd. One after another took the chair and pleaded. It did not help. All were trying to rescue their coats and their families and go home.

Judge Panken and Hillquit conferred. They telephoned the police. A new troop of 250 police and detectives arrived, rushed into the hall. The "committees" of gangsters went outside. The police used their hickory night sticks. Abramovich found his voice and asked the crowd to be quiet. "For every lie you tell, we will shout," it replied.

The meeting could not proceed. Every word Abramovich uttered, the workers shouted "It's a lie! Long live Soviet Russia! Long live the Communist movement!"

Abramovich was very excited. "The Communists accuse me of lying," he said. "I challenge any Communist to deny the facts I have presented." A worker in the rear of the hall arose and cried out clearly, "I accept your challenge!"

Abramovich did not like that. The mass loked threatening. Thru the chairman the scoundrel answered that no question would be answered. The worker who accepted the challenge he hypocritically put out, was, of course, carried out of the hall and pummelled. This is how Abramovich "proved" his "facts" against challenge!

Vladik whispered to Abramovich and the meeting was ended. The workers streamed out singing the International.

The following is the incomplete list of workers severely wounded: Wagner, Feinzweig, M. Gotfried and many more whose names are not yet obtained. Feinzweig's face was cut by a gangster's knife. Hours later, after Abramovich had escaped by a side door into an automobile, groups of workers were singing rebel songs in front of the hall. This is the first meeting Abramovich received from American workers. It was a demonstration for Soviet Russia.

Brazier Tells of Fight Against Deportation Moves

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Richard Brazier, secretary of the New York branch of the General Defense Committee, has been fighting deportation of radicals thru Ellis Island. He reports an active movement by California authorities to get rid of active members of the Marine Transport Workers' Union, a sailors' and longshoremen's organization, via the deportation route.

Patrick L. Jordan, Karl Schurz and H. Titiand, all arrested in San Pedro, while selling union literature were held months for deportation in the Los Angeles prison and deported at the end of the year. Jordan was sent thru Ellis Island to Ireland; Schurz and Titiand were ordered to work their way to the other side from the port of Galveston, Schurz to Germany and Titiand to Norway. Others are awaiting deportation in California.

BRITISH TORY GOVT. REFUSED SOVIET TRADE GETS MORE JOBLESS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The unemployment situation in England continues to grow worse, according to a statement issued tonight by the ministry of labor. Figures presented by the ministry show 1,370,800 persons are on the lists of the unemployment exchanges. This indicates an increase of 33,918 unemployed over last week's figures, and 40,125 more than during the corresponding week of 1924.

the nullifying of the Dawes plan agreement.

At the Paris foreign office the agreement is being called the "Logan agreement," in order to shield Ambassador Kellogg, the principal American signing the agreement, so that Kellogg will meet less opposition to his appointment to Hughes' post by Coolidge.

The senate "irreconcilables" are demanding information on the reservation asked by Ambassador Kellogg, providing that America have freedom of action in any issue arising out of the operation of the agreement. The allies refused to make this reservation, but Kellogg. signed anyhow, thus making the agreement subject to senate approval. Altho this demanded reservation was widely reported in the press, the state department flatly denies, altho refusing to give the press an authorized quotation.

U. S. to Enslave Germany.

Under the agreement, according to the European statesmen, the United States may be called on to help enforce the Dawes plan on Germany, thus aiding in the gouging of the German workers by the allies.

Upon hearing of the senate opposition, Kellogg immediately got busy among his pals in France and England, and, six days after the treaty was signed, arranged with the allies to alter phrases in the agreement in a belated attempt to keep it out of the senate. "There is no question of altering the meaning of the text of the stipulations," it was announced in Paris. The changes were simply proposed to avoid the necessity of securing the ratification by the senate, thus saving Coolidge from embarassing publicity.

Changed Treaty.

Kellogg discovered that by limiting the American share of the graft taken from Germany to $350,000,000 the agreement necessitated the approval of the senate. Kellogg therefore made his move to amend the agreement after it was signed. He feared, Kellogg said, that the senate might not ratify the agreement.

Kellogg signed the full agreement applying to the amount of money all the allies should receive from Germany instead of merely signing the section pertaining to American claims.

Now the allies and the United States will go into Germany and dig out of the already impoverished people as much money as they can.

MINNEAPOLIS PLEDGES AID TO THE VICTIMS OF MICHIGAN PERSECUTION

By CARL SKOGLUND

Secretary, Minneapolis, Minn., City Central Committee, Workers Party.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 20.—The city central committee of the Workers Party of America expresses its solidarity with and will stand behind Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg and all other comrades imprisoned for political beliefs and convictions, and has already started an energetic campaign to organize a local Labor Defense Council to arouse the workers of this locality for the defense of workers who fight in their interests.

All differences of opinion must be laid aside and every worker be rallied into a united front to prevent working class leaders from being imprisoned by the henchmen of the capitalist class.

The best and most efficient way to give proof of your solidarity will be by having the organization of which you are a member to send delegates to the Labor Defense Council meeting to be held every Monday evening at 617 4th Ave. So., beginning at 8 o'clock.

Unless you answer this call to action by being present yourself and having every other worker with whom you come in contact do the same, you have not done anything constructive on behalf of the protection of the working class.

Waterways Committee At Capitol Hears Plea for Great Lakes Canal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The water level thruout the Great Lakes system has been lowered from 5 to 8 inches by diversion of water at Chicago, Brig. Gen. Harry Taylor, chief of army engineers, told the senate waterways committee today at its hearing on a proposed canal from the Great Lakes to the gulf.

Taylor says Lake Michigan lost 5.8 inches, Lake Erie 5.52 inches, Lake Ontario 5.76 inches, Lake Huron 5.8 inches, the St. Clair River 4.8 and Lock 52 in the St. Lawrence River 8.52 inches.

Teachers' Salaries Revised.

The committee appointed to study teachers' salaries met with Superintendent William McAndrew to discuss a complete revision of the Chicago public school teachers' salaries. What the revision comprises and how it will affect the present salaries could not be learned either from the committee or from the superintendent.

Muscle Shoals in Conference.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—After milling around for several days undecided what to do with the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill, the republican steering committee of the house today decided to send it to joint conference with the senate, in an effort to reconcile its differences with the Muscle Shoals bill passed by the house.

ELECTRICIANS GET INTO FIGHT ON CHILD LABOR

Omaha Unionists Call Meeting for Jan. 22

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 20.—The campaign of the local militants of the Trade Union Educational League on the child labor question is already reaching beyond the state boundaries into Iowa. As a result of this campaign Council Bluffs (Iowa) Lodge No. 93 of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen has appointed a committee of three to co-operate in the united front against child labor exploitation. It is believed that other unions in Council Bluffs will take similar action and make it possible to call a conference of locals on the child labor question in the near future.

Omaha Conference Called.

The campaign in Omaha has already progressed to such an extent as to make possible a conference, Thursday, of the committees from the Independent Club, Workmen's Circle branches, Workers Party and local trade unions.

The Railway Carmen's Local of the Bluffs passed the resolution against child labor similar to those adopted by other Omaha labor unions.

Labor Defense Calls for $7,500.00 Bail to Release Ruthenberg

The Labor Defense Council is now busily engaged in raising the $7,500.00 bail necessary for the release of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party. Comrade Ruthenberg is now in Jackson, Mich., prison, pending final arrangements for his release on bail. Justice Louis Brandeis, of the United States supreme court, granted a writ of supersedas, and set bail for Comrade Ruthenberg, after Justice McReynolds had refused to grant the writ.

According to Justice Brandeis' decision, the U. S. supreme court must now review Comrade Ruthenberg's case and decide on the constitutionality of the Michigan criminal syndicalism law under which Comrade Ruthenberg was sentenced.

Confiscate All Traction Lines W. P. Tells City

the private lines would be given a perpetual franchise to replace the present franchise which expires in 1927. The aldermen deplored the fact that Dever's plan "cannot be passed without newspaper support."

The bankers insolently told the aldermen that "we have gone very far already in allowing three neutral members on the board of control," and declared that no one has any constructive criticism to offer in place of the bankers' proposal.

Communists Offer Solution.

The traction situation will be muddled until the people of Chicago boldly take the traction lines away from the bankers and run them for the use of the people. This is the demand of the Workers (Communist) Party candidates in the coming aldermanic elections. The Communists demand "Unified surface, 'L' and subway, municipally owned." They demand the operation of the traction lines thru special workers' committees and the existing transportation unions of the traction employes. They demand the immediate removal of all public utilities from the ownership of private capitalists, and confiscation of franchises by the city. The Communist candidates are pledged to work for direct management of public utilities, with workers controlling them, and the service to be conducted for use and not for profit. They declare that thru this means better service and a reduction of fare can be achieved.

NEW COOLIDGE ATTORNEY GENERAL REVEALED AS TOOL OF SUGAR TRUST; RECORD SHAMES THAT OF DAUGHERTY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Charles B. Warren's appointment as attorney general came under fire in the senate today when a special sub-committee began an investigation of charges that he engaged in lobbying activities back in 1913 on behalf of the beet sugar interests. Confirmation of the appointment is thus held up indefinitely.

Senators Borah, republican, of Idaho, and Walsh, democrat, of Montana, are members of the sub-committee. They plan to review all the testimony relating to Warren contained in the records of the sugar investigation of 1921 and the lobby investigation of 1913.

Records of the 1913 investigation disclosed that Warren appeared as a witness and testified he had been issued stock by the American Sugar Refining Co., in six of its subsidiary companies.

Another part of the record being studied was Warren's testimoney that he bought $450,000 worth of subsidiary stocks from the sugar company so it could reduce its subsidiary holdings and escape prosecution as a "trust."

Administration leaders were somewhat perturbed over the investigation, but planned to rush thru Attorney-General Stone's promotion to the supreme court before night.

Labor Must Dispossess, Not Attempt to Buy Out Thieves of Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the treasury department at Washington informs the nation that 67 persons reported net incomes of more than $1,000,000 during the year 1922. This information is now two years old. Perhaps the government officials feared the shock of this news on the workers who engaged in the big strikes of this year, and on the million farmers who went bankrupt. But these facts are revealing just the same.

This report shows the largest list of incomes in the million-dollar class since the war profit year of 1916. It far eclipses the 15 super-incomes reported for 1921.

Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, the Pittsburgh millionaire, is himself one of the top notchers among these multi-millionaires, which also includes the two Rockefellers, "John D." and "John D., Jr." with the two Fords, Henry and Edsel, heads of America's two richest families.

• • • •

These figures help put a crimp in the widespread propaganda of the subsidized press to the effect that the masses, with their savings, are popularizing the control of great corporations. The post-election Wall Street financial boom is still being hailed as a great movement on the part of the millions, investing their money in the stocks of the great trusts not merely a gambling proposition.

Not only the lower middle class, but also workers on a large scale, are urged to invest. Thus the banks of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers urge their depositors to put their funds into railroad stocks, claiming this will be the means of putting pressure to bear upon railroad directors in wage negotiations.

• • • •

It was in the year 1915 that the Commission on Industrial Relations made its report showing how helpless the masses are in the financial grip of the Wall Street money oligarchy. This was the year prior to the greatest number of incomes in the million-dollar class. This commission found that:

The control of manufacturing, mining and transportation industries is to an increasing degree passing into the hands of great corporations thru stock ownership, and control of credit is centralized in a comparatively small number of enormously powerful financial institutions. These financial institutions are in turn dominated by a very small number of powerful financiers.

• • • •

On this basis, supported by facts, this commission declared that the final control of American industry rests, therefore, in the hands of a small number of wealthy and powerful financiers.

Thus, in the case of the United States Steel corporation, the final control rested in a single private banking house. This, in spite of the fact that this steel trust had, in 1911, approximately 100,000 shareholders. It is shown that one and one-half per cent of these stockholders held 57 per cent, or a voting majority of the stock.

Similarly in the American Tobacco Co., the tobacco trust, 10 stockholders owned 60 per cent of the stock. This is true of every other great trust.

• • • •

It might be well to restate some other facts for the benefit of those workers who are being lured by their officials into believing that they can buy out the trusts. Ten years ago, before the wealth of the nation was doubled, six financial groups and affiliated interests employing 2,651,684 wage earners, had a total capitalization of $19,875,200,000. These six financial groups controlled 28 per cent of the total number of wage earners engaged in the industries investigated. The Morgan-First National Bank group alone controls corporations employing 785,499 wage earners.

• • • •

The lives of the men, women and children of the whole working class are therefore subject to the dictation of a relatively small number of men. This group gets smaller and smaller, as the power of the money oligarchy grows. Wall Street does not mind selling stock to wage workers, and white collar slaves of the middle class, during "good times" at high prices, and then buying back this same stock at low prices during "bad times." That is part of the money-making blood-sucking business.

But even the most elementary study of the capitalist system must convince the uninitiated of the impossibility of "buying out" this money power. Only the complete dispossession of these capitalist thieves, who have already plundered labor too long, will suffice. The exploited workers and poor farmers must come to power thru their own Soviet State that will completely obliterate thru the might of the proletarian dictatorship, the whole capitalist system.

Senate Today Adopts Walsh's Report on Oil Investigation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Seven months after the close of the famous oil investigation the senate this afternoon gave its formal approval of the Walsh report flaying the Doheny and Sinclair leases and bitterly assailing former Secretary of the Interior Fall.

The report filed by Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat, of Montana chief oil "prosecutor" was opposed by administration senators because of its attack on Secretary Denby and its declaration that President Harding had acted "without authority by law," in transferring the oil reserves from the navy to the interior department. The report was adopted by a vote of 40 to 30.

South Side Streets Filthy But Dever Spouts "Sanitation"

Mayor Dever denounced Canadian power interests at public meetings held thruout the city Monday night, to ask the war department to allow to withdraw a larger amount of water from Lake Michigan. "Chicago" is trying to get as much water as possible out of the lake, but denounces attempts of other cities to do likewise. Mayor Dever spoke in the interests of sanitation, Dever said "Chicago" wanted the water, but did not say what business interests are hiding behind the municipal campaign for "sanitation."

South side Negroes who have been endeavoring for a score of years to have Federal and other streets cleaned of debris and garbage are amazed at Dever's sudden interest in "sanitation."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Postmaster General Harry S. New will remain in the cabinet after the fourth of March and all the immediate assistants to him will also remain, it was announced at the White House today. New recently aided Coolidge to defeat the pay raise for postal employes.

35 BANKS FAIL IN SIX MONTHS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Thirty-five banks with approximate liabilities of $18,000,000 were placed in the hands of receivers between July 1 and Jan. 1, it was announced today by the treasury department.

Causes of failures during the past year were given in official reports as heavy withdrawals, large losses, injudicious banking, crop losses, bad management, defalcation of officers, inability to realize on loans, excessive loans and depreciation of securit

TRAIN KILLS FATHER OF FIVE ON WAY TO WORK AT DANVILLE

DANVILLE, Ill., Jan. 20. — The Chicago bound Nashville limited on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railway due in Chicago at 10 o'clock a. m., early today struck and instantly killed Bert Crane, a laboring man of Hillsdale, Ind., as he was walking northward on the tracks. A southbound freight train on the other main track drowned the approach of the flyer. Crane was the father of five small children and was enroute to his work at the W. E. Dee brick plant when killed.

Jansen Mocks at Constitution of the Carpenters' Union

bers were not entitled to a working card. One of the defendants took the floor and asked if he would be allowed to make a statement. The president ruled that the meeting was not yet opened.

The defendant then explained the whole case, telling of the fake trial, how the secretary faked the record, that the officials of the local made a mockery of the constitution and in short, that there was no trial according to the laws of the organization.

Another defendant read the affidavit signed by a majority of the trial committee, which stated that the defendants did not plead guilty as stated by the lying secretary who acted as prosecutor, judge and jury.

Caught In A Lie.

The secretary got himself into a hole, when President Hutcheson requested information from him after the appeal against the "railroading" reached Indianapolis. The local satellite, in his letter to Hutcheson crawfished on his first statement written into his faked report of the "trial" to the effect that the expelled members pleaded guilty. In his letter to the "czar" he stated that they admitted signing the anti-Landis award resolution, which was the cause of their expulsion but denied violating the law of the union. Thus the secretary was proven a liar out of his mouth and in his own handwriting.

After the defendants had their say at last Monday night's meeting they left the hall voluntarily, as the president declared that the meeting could not be held while they were present.

Faker Under Charges.

After the "expelled" members left, charges were preferred against the president on the ground that he violated the constitution and [illegible] in the usual manner. A motion was made that they take the [illegible], which means that a trial committee would be elected at the next meeting. But the president who earlier in the evening had shown so much devotion to the constitution now showed his contempt for it by refusing to entertain the motion. Harry Jensen was on the job prompting his actors in the art of defying the will of the membership.

The fakers have substituted the dictatorship of a few reactionaries for the will of the majority and evidently they have the assurance of Hutcheson that they can ride over the constitution with impunity.

Jensen's Strategy.

The members of Local 181 are exhausting all legal avenues for redress of their grievances as well as their patience. The fakers evidently consider the constitution as a sort of bible to be interpreted in whatever way best suits the interests of High Priest Hutcheson and his altar boys. But there is a limit to human patience and it is only a question of time when the great majority of Local 181 will show the few crawling lickspittles of Hutcheson and Jensen that the rank and file intend to run their own union.

The strategy of Jensen is to tire out the members. He hoped they would lose interest in the fight. But they are not of the type that can be bamboozled. They know the fakers' game and they are determined to fight to the finish—and win!

INDIA YOKED BY BRITAIN'S RULE OF VIOLENCE

White Terror Thrusts Many in Prison

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Governor General of India, Lord Reading, has been hard pushed to explain away the extraordinary ordinance, issued on his own authority, which subjects the 320 million people of India to unlimited police violence.

"Young men of the student class have been very active in the political movements," Reading said as an excuse for instituting the white terror in India.

But the long suffering people of India fail to see the connection between this statement and Reading's ordinance which gives the police absolute and unquestioned power over their very lives. Under the terms of the ordinance, the British police can arrest any person, search any premises, and sieze any property, without warrant. The police can imprison the persons so arrested wherever and whenever they choose. The trials, before magistrates, are "confidential", and prisoners are denied the right of legal counsel. Those who turn informer are promised pardons.

The British aim by means of this white terror rule at the surpresion of the Communist Party of India and of the Swaraj party which favors nationalistic self government and opposes domination of British imperialism, but which insists on practicing nonresistance.

President Coolidge in the face of this brutal terrorization of the workers of India recently assured the British ambassador that he "desired to promote sentiments of good will between this country and England." Secretary of State Hughes at the same time spoke of the "traditions of liberty and progress and the settled purpose to resort to the peaceful processes of reason for the adjustment of differences" which prevailed in England. Hughes conveniently forgot that the English government rules in India with the great majority of the masses opposed to England's domination. The British rule in India is kept up by the business interests of England only by making use of the white terror which British imperialism is ever ready to put into force to crush the workers of her colonies.

Among other oppressive measures, the ordinance issued by Lord Reading, provides that the local government may arrest without warrant any person "against whom a reasonable suspicion exists", stipulates that the police may search any place and seize any property they desire, and try those arrested by "commissioners" appointed by the local government.

UNDER threat of a libel suit, this part of The DAILY WORKER goes on record with an apology to W. G. Daniel, of Davenport, Iowa, editor of the Davenport Free Press, for damage done to his character and his social standing, in and about the said city of Davenport and thruout the world, wherever the DAILY WORKER circulates. The libel was uttered on January 14, and it characterized said Daniel as being a socialist and his paper a socialist paper. Daniel in the lion's den did not wail any louder than our libelled Davenport editor when he began to read The DAILY WORKER of the above date.

THE demand for the apology is complied with. Had this column put him down as a Kilkenny Tom-cat or a Kentucky Doodlebug, he could raise a sore throat howling for all we would care. But calling an honest man a socialist is no laughing matter. Daniel offers as evidence of his innocence that he is called a red by the Davenport socialists and by the capitalist press. That should be enough. Comrade Daniel, consider yourself understood.

LENIN MEMORIAL MEETINGS

NEW YORK, January 20—A spectre is haunting Europe, the spectre of Leninism! At this very hour the Communists of Italy are raising the red banner of revolution at the very center of blackest capitalist reaction, in the Italian chamber of deputies, in the camp of Mussolini and his bloody band of fascisti. Defying the fascisti reign of terror, Comrade Grieco, a Communist, arose in the chamber and in stirring tones called upon the workers in all countries to overthrow the blood sucking bourgeoisie by revolution. "The spirit of Lenin in the world," he said, "is making fresh converts every hour." Amid cries of "Viva Lenin," he declared: "We must remain by the side of the Russian workers and peasants. We must salute Russia, from which springs the light that irradiates thruout the world. Long live the revolution of the Italian workers and peasants."

In America, too, the spirit of Lenin and Leninism lives today and is daily gaining in strength. Last year 25,000 workers of New York City, jammed their way to Madison Square Garden to pay their tribute to the dead leader of the proletarian revolution. All the power of capitalist publicity could not bring together such a throng to honor a public man. But the workers were drawn by something more than noise of trumpets and brass bands and the blare of the capitalist press. They were drawn by the light that shines from thousands of miles away, from Soviet Russia, from the first workers' republic, the light of Lenin and Leninism. This year on the occasion of the first anniversary of the death of Lenin to be celebrated on Sunday, February 1 at 2 p. m., at Madison Square Garden, the prospects are good for a crowd that will flood every street in the neighborhood. A continuous chain of workers may be seen at the offices where tickets are now being sold: 208 E. 12th St., 153 East Broadway, 127 University Place, 231 E. 14th St., Drug Store, Madison Ave. and 14th St., 1337 Wilkins Ave., 46 Ten Eyck St., 1817 Pitkin Ave., Drug Store Moore & Graham Ave., 764 40th St.

COOLIDGE AGAIN TO BAR POSTAL WORKERS RAISE

Senate to Vote on Moses Substitute

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 20.—The senators accepting the leadership of President Coolidge are preparing to take the next step in preventing the postal employes from securing their increase in salary.

Senator Moses will call up his bill to increase the pay of postal employes which, however, includes Coolidge's recommendations increasing postal rates to provide for the increase. It was only on the promise of supporting the Moses bill that Coolidge leaders were able to induce the senate to sustain the president's veto of the original postal bill. It seems unlikely that the Coolidge backers will keep this promise.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina declared in the senate that the treasury has ample funds to pay the $68,000,000 required to increase the salaries of the postal workers. Simmons said he will fight the Moses bill in its present form as it is "a cooked up administration substitute, admittedly based on an unsound system of cost accounting supplied by Postmaster General New, and having no justification beyond the desire of the old guard to soothe Coolidge's feelings."

The democrats intend to move to strike out that part of the bill inserted at the request of Coolidge, and if this motion passes as seems likely, the pay increase bill will again be before Coolidge in unadulterated form. Coolidge would again veto the bill and it would again be before the senate. Thus interminable delay in granting the increase in pay seem the only fate of the starving postal workers.

New Texas Governor Admits She Will Let Others Rule

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 20.—Mrs. Miriam Amanda Ferguson was inaugurated here as the first woman governor of Texas. "I recognize and freely admit my inexperience in governmental affairs," Mrs. Ferguson said in her short inaugural address "I must ask the advice and counsel of others. There is so much to do that no one mind can bring relief to the people."

Mrs. Ferguson, standing before the crowd had all the appearance of feeling out of place. She seemed anxious to get home to her family. Tonight Governor Ferguson will lead four separate inaugural balls.

Lenin As I Saw Hi

By SCHACHNO EPSTEIN.

V.

Lenin, the Builder.

Three years later, also in December, in Moscow, hungry but joyful. There was still war on many fronts, but the enemy was pushed back farther and farther from the centers of the revolution.

Regiment after regiment of the red armies were marching on. Their proud steps re-echoed on the snow-white bridge that glistened under the mild sun like crystal. The fresh frosty air was filled with jubilant music and fluttering flags.

This was the reception for the congress of Soviets.

I am not a stranger any more in the human stream of the streets. I am one of them with a purified soul thru the hard bloody trial.

The same poorly clad figures like those I saw in Petrograd on Nevsky Prospect. But now they don't frighten me any more.

Still was the day as if the frost breathed with a bright tranquility, and the human stream had peacefully smiled to the sun.

What depressed, worn-out faces! I myself have not eaten anything that day. There was no food. But who cared when the heart flourishes from joy.

During that time, on various occasions, I heard Lenin speak; I have heard him in moments of great despair, when Petrograd was about to fall, when Moscow was on the threshold of peril, and every time I have clearly sighted it, the masses went away from a speech Lenin has delivered, full of new courage, full of fresh energy, vigor and vitality in body and spirit, ready to show heroic miracles. His call: to arms! And thousands, tens of thousands of people took to arms in defiance of danger.

Not so very long ago, after the defeat in Poland, it happened. The spirit in the ranks of the Communist Party was low. It was felt at the sessions of executive committee of the Soviets, at the party conference. They were finding faults, they were trying to justify them and washed themselves white of them. Ilyitch then appeared on the platform, spoke in simple words without oratorical tinge, with brilliant effect, like an older brother when he talks to his younger ones, good naturedly, but austerely, sadly and full of determination, and a spiritual depression dispersed like smoke.

I was sitting on the platform among the journalists, wherefrom I was able to observe Lenin closely. The impression was the same from near as from far—determination, great sincerity and an exceptional memory. Many others have spoken after Lenin, he sat in a lonely corner so one could hardly see him; he did not take any notes; was sitting bent and absorbed of thought with his hardly noticeable smile on his lips, and when he answered the speakers it appeared that not a single word of all the speeches delivered was lost to him; woe to those who fall into his hands! Without any demagogic tricks he so twist one that he must give in to him. I don't remember of a single case when Lenin should not have been the victor. When he is applauded, he blushes like a child, and walks quietly away and tries to avoid a front seat so as not to be seen by the public.

The closer one observes Lenin's timidity, the more he respects him, it is of such a nature that he who possessess it must have the soul of a child. How do you account for his rocky-like character?

Herein lies the secret power.

A historical encounter occurred: on the platform appears the famous grey haired German revolutionist, Clara Zatkin; she embraces Lenin with the tenderness of a sister, strokes his cheeks. The party conference shouts with a childish enthusiasm. Lenin is greatly moved by this meeting. But he blushes so that he runs off the platform together with Clara Zatkin like a young boy who is abashed when adults pay too much attention to him . . .

Laughter of the same ecstasy accompanies him . . .

So, Wrangel too was defeated. For the congress of the Soviets had to discuss the most important problem: about the transition to peaceful work about the electrification of the entire country.

In the street are marching the red army, the factory workers, singing and playing, and from everywhere carries like a symbol the name "Ilyitch." His name is also on the lips of over two thousand delegates who arrived from all nooks and corners of the land. The streets of Moscow are full of people of all nationalities, who speak as many languages and wear as many different national costumes; all blend in one unison with the soldiers and workers of Moscow under the sun of the beautiful, purely Moscow December days under the melody of the "Internationale" sung in various languages, but in full symphonic harmony . . .

The large city theater was packed, not a pin to drop. The entire atmosphere was charged with feverish expectation, even the foreign correspondents who were sitting in their boxes facing the stage, were nerv even they became infected with festival disposition on the faces the simple peasants and work radiated with the crystal chandeli and the golden cornices.

Light and joy, glitter and sple comingled with the dowlas coats bast-shoes, with grey uniforms worn out boots, sleeveless overco and caftans. Not a single frock stove-pipe hat; and if by accident also sees in the formerly czar's a diplomat in a white shirt, it is a relic of the long forgot past . . .

Kalinin announces: the president the Soviet of the people's commis iat, Valdimir Ilyitch Lenin w speak.

Every one rose from his seat. H were taken off. The music stop playing, the people singing, faces still radiated with song.

Lenin apeared with the naivete a child when taken by surprise; motions with his hand to quiet the audience, but the entire thea from end to end is full of ecsta and all as one shout: Long live I itch! They roar and storm it is impossible to stop them.

In the midst of thundering ovati Lenin began to speak. His spee was so simple that a child could derstand him, and if anybody w still skeptical about the firmness the power of the Soviets, about th unconquerableness of the proleta revolution and about its future Lenin spoke, they lost their skep ciem after he ended.

He gives an abundance of facts, statistical data embracing every and phase of Russian life, the cond tions of other countries; dry dry statistical data, but from dry facts grows out of the epoch class struggle, of what it was, is, will be in the future.

During his speech Lenin stood one place, as if he were chained it, and his look pierced the heart everybody in the large hall; he pene trated their hearts with his logic, immense knowledge and analysis.

In the end he goes over to the ne cessity of electrification, showin what wonders it will do; he prove again and again in dry facts numbers that in ten years time Rus sia will be electrified from coast to coast. And not like a dreamer or prophet does he appear before the people; he is a builder of today, for whom every cog and screw has its proper place, and soon enough we will witness the beginnings of motion of the gigantic mechanism to the exact hour . . .

Lenin ended his speech lifting the thick book on electrification written by a commission of a hundred great engineers and scientists and said: "This is a new bible of the revolution!"

One can hardly believe that here stands a man bearing three poisonous bullets in his body. A giant not to be conquered; every word of his reaches like a hammer that destroys and creates. Swiftly and impetuously works the hammer; wreck upon wreck are heaped in front of all and above the wrecks legendary constructions full of sun and light grow out.

The theater thunders with applause, the eyes of many delegates, especially peasants, are full of tears and ecstasy; various languages melt in one long, lasting shout: long live Ilyitch, long live Lenin!

How long Lenin spoke? Who cared for time? When we came out of the theater, a deep starry sky was hanging over Moscow, and the gigantic electric signs over the theater threw their fiery slogans of fight and victory, of bloody war and peaceful reconstruction work on the endless human stream.

The Kremlin clock played the midnight "Internationale" . . .

Thus have I seen Lenin from a distance. But I have also seen him closer, at his cabinet engaged in a long conversation.

> "Lenin is great not merely because of the fact that he welded our class, the working class, and led it like one man; his greatness consists in the fact that, having taken the lead of the working class, he contrived to find for it allies which gave it a complete and durable victory."—Zinoviev.

ACHERS FIGHT I'ANDREW FOR THEIR COUNCILS

arned Against Hopes from Springfield

e Chicago Teachers' Federation Superintendent of Schools Mc-rew are having another round in fight on teachers' councils.

he superintendent has announced he will reorganise the teachers' ncils. His venture will consist of resentatives of the various teach- organizations, representatives of ncipals' clubs and superintendents assistant superintendents' repre- tatives from the board of educa- and McAndrew. It is to receive orders from McAndrew in exactly same manner that the board of cation does. Which in plain lan- ge means that there are to be teachers' councils.

Criticized Higher Ups.

The teachers' councils were meet- s of teachers for discussion of oblems that confronted them in the ecution of their duties as educators. these councils they took up matters nging from the inadvisability of ercrowding classrooms to what ould constitute a living wage for achers. The teachers freely criticiz- principals' acts and thrashed out ery problem confronting them in eir work. They even criticized the oard of education and the superin- ndent.

Big business imported McAndrew. s soon as he got here he began car- ying out the orders of those who rot him here. McAndrew fought the achers' councils on the grounds that hey take up time of school work. This ounds good for the public. But all McAndrew's moves led toward one oal; reducing the standard of edu- ation for the working class children and reorganization of the schools on the platoon system. Cultural education must be reduced to the simplest form of the three "R.'s" and the school time must be devoted to training workers' children for the factories.

Economy Talk is Bunk.

In spite of all the economy talk McAndrew sent out in the capitalist press for meeting the deficit in the school fund, even to the dropping the penny lunches, economizing on school supplies and overcrowding classrooms to require fewer teachers, thirty new school buildings have been ordered built. These new schools are to be built in such a way that they will all have the facilities for junior high schools and for the platoon system. Which points continually to reorganization of Chicago schools on the platoon system.

The teachers' federation has voted to take its fight to Springfield. The teachers should not lose sight, in this fight, of the fact that McAndrew is doing the bidding of the bosses who brot him here, and the legislators in Springfield are also doing the bidding of these same bosses. They should not forget their experience with Mayor Dever, from whom they had expected support in their fight, but who turned them down for the very same reason. And they must prepare to put up a stiff fight for their councils when these legislators turn them down.

Omaha Class in the A B C of Communism Is for W. P. Members

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 20.—Local Omaha, Workers Party, is conducting a class in the "A. B. C. of Communism" at the local headquarters, 206 Crounse Block, every Wednesday evening. There was an unusual attendance of sympathizers at the first class meeting last Wednesday, which speaks well for the future of the class.

For Party Members Also.

Workers Party members must not get the impression that such a class is for sympathizers only. The party members who get the impression that they know "all about Communism" need to be disillusioned. If we are to succeed in building a Bolshevik party in this country, we must educate ourselves so that we will be fit for membership in such a party.

Half-baked, social-democratic training is not the basis on which to build a Communist Party. By active participation in the study class we arouse the interest of the sympathizer and increase our own value to the movement. When we do that we are helping to build a mass Communist Party.

MORGAN BREAKS SILENCE OF LONG STANDING AND MAKES A SPEECH AT A BANQUET: WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The other day, J. P. Morgan, the well-known banker and multi-millionaire, made a public speech, contrary to his custom of many years standing. The occasion for this unusual outburst of eloquence, following a period of prolonged silence, was the banquet tendered to the aged banker and fellow exploiter, George F. Baker, upon his retirement. Morgan made an eloquent tribute to the virtues and merits of his associate, which was warmly applauded by the assembled money kings and was widely circulated in the plute press.

"There's A Reason."

To the student of the international revolutionary movement, the fact that the leading banker of the world suddenly breaks a silence of many years' standing, is of more than passing significance. Why did this silent but world-powerful money lord consent to step into the limelight, at this time? He could hardly have been moved by a sudden desire for fame and publicity. He has plenty of that already. Nor does it seem likely that he would employ a banquet hall or the columns of the capitalist press, to express a mere sentimental attachment and devotion for his associate. There must have been a far more fundamental reason than that.

There is but one force strong enough to force Morgan out of his shell and that is the growing power of the working class and its growing determination to finally do away with its exploiters. It is this pressure which has forced Morgan into the open in defense of a leader of his class. His glowing tribute to Baker is but an attempt to eulogize a leading representative of the ruling class and thus make the masses less dissatisfied with their present state of slavery.

Morgan and Lenin.

But Morgan's golden balm won't work. His words are as powerless as King Canute's attempt to stem the tide by a command. A new spirit is abroad in the world—the spirit that inspired the Russian workers and peasants to throw off the yoke of capitalism and establish a Soviet Republic, that spirit that is moving millions of workers to revolt against exploitation in every country of the world, the spirit of Leninism. It is this spirit which is the moving force behind the tremendous mass demonstration which has been arranged for Sunday, Feb. 1, at 2 p. m., at Madison Square Garden on the first anniversary of the death of Lenin. The great demand for tickets is taxing to the utmost the stations that have been arranged for at 208 East 12th St., 153 East Broadway, 127 University Place, 231 East 14th St., Drug Store, Madison Ave. and 111th St., Jewelry Store, 1337 Wilkins Ave., Bronx; 46 Ten Eyck St., Brooklyn; Moore & Graham Ave., 1817 Pitkin Ave., 764 40th St., Mermaid Ave. and 33rd St., Coney Island.

Japanese Communist Attacking Socialist Pampered by Wealthy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 20. — Kagawa Toyohiko is the Japanese christian socialist. He amassed a fortune by playing the philanthropist in the slum district of Kobe, and by writing about it. His book of adventure in the slum abyss was the best seller in Japan. It brought him a fortune.

His position is that of Tolstoy: namely non-resistance and non-violence. So the capitalists and their governmental officials smiled peacefully. Toyohiko was and still is washing dishes after capitalist dinners paid for thru exploitation of the working class.

His reputation as a dishwasher became so high that not only Japanese capitalists but also the bourgeoisie from abroad were attracted. As a result, he was invited by the American young men's christian association to deliver a course of lectures on dishwashing. He is now in the U. S. A. making a noise in the west. Since he came to America a few weeks ago he has been exerting himself more and more in an attack on Communists and Communism and none at all on capitalists and the capitalist system.

Consolidate Party Influence Into Organization

By MARTIN ABERN

To agitate without organization is fruitless. To gain influence over workers without crystalizing that influence into definite organizational form is, for the most part, wasted effort.

The Workers (Communist) Party thru its various activities, trade union, industrial political activity, the elections and other ways has reached many who are sympathetic to the Communist program.

Our comrades must now make every effort to bring every sympathizer, every worker who wants to be a Communist into the Workers Party. Our members carrying on agitation in the shops among the rank and file of the workers can only bring their efforts to a successful end by bringing such sympathizers directly into the ranks of the party. Trade Union and shop agitational influence must have the purpose of building the Workers Party. Never rest on a prospect until he is made a party member.

Economic and political struggles in the immediate future demand a larger, stronger more unified Workers (Communist) Party with its organizational roots as much as possible in the factories themselves. The Workers Party stands now more clearly than ever as the only geuine working class party in America. Every sympathizer or worker, beginning to sense that only the Communist movement can meet his individual and class demands and needs, must be made a member of the Workers Party and thus aid directly to carry on our struggle.

Thousands of new members can be enrolled into the Workers Party by Lenin Memorial Day. On Lenin Memorial Day our highest tribute now would be shown by bringing 5,000 new members into the party.

Organize and consolidate the Workers Party influence over sections of the workers by bringing them into the party. Every party member in the shop make a drive for another party member and thus also lay the basis for a factory, shop nucleus.

Our party is spreading its literature in the shops. Our DAILY WORKER is gaining influence and strength. Trade union and industrial agitation and activity have been increasing rapidly. Thru each and all of these things, build the Workers (Communist) Party!!

District Seven Also At Top

Has More Branches That Have Toed the Mark in Insurance Drive Than Any Other District

The drive to insure the DAILY WORKER was no more than announced but what a wire was received from the English branch in Detroit pledging $400 to the $50,000 fund. And this pledge was not a mere empty promise, as the total remittance from this branch will show.

The Bulgarian branch of Detroit held a ball and entertainment which netted $68.48 for the daily and topped this off with an additional $57 remittance. Other branches did proportionately well.

The consequence is that District 7, with 1,107 members, has remitted a total of $1,290.48. Much better than a third of its quota is in.

But what is most encouraging is that of the 49 branches in District 7 a total of 33 have shown note-worthy intdrest in the campaign to make our central organ safe. This leaves 16 branches from which we still have to hear. The number of "behind" branches in District 7 is smaller than in any other district that has so far reported.

The full quota assigned to District 7 amounts to $3,321. The comrades and branches of this district must still send in $2,030.52 to make their quota good.

We ask all party members to raise this question of making our daily secure at the next branch meeting. Elect committees to visit members who do not attend meetings. The DAILY WORKER is the official organ of every party member. Every party member must help insure its future. The active comrades in the district should also cooperate with District Organizer Edgar Owens in visiting the branches that have not yet been heard from, so that these 16 branches may also realize their Communist duty.

Militant Page Corrections

Due to the last minute rush of remittances and also due to the fact that many branch secretaries did not give the language of their branch in making remittances, several errors occured in listing the MILITANT BRANCHES upon the MILITANT PAGE of the birthday special of the DAILY WORKER.

We are glad to make corrections of such errors and hereby list three branches whose names should have appeared upon the MILITANT PAGE on January 13:

ARMENIAN BRANCH, ROXBURY, MASS.	$50.00
SOUTH SLAVIC BRANCH, McKEESPORT, PA.	16.00
ENGLISH BRANCH, RURAL RIDGE, PA.	51.00

* * * *

Errors were bound to occur in the listing of 487 party branches together with the remittances totalling $15,000 from them.

The secretary of the Russian branch, Brooklyn, N. Y., asks us to kindly make correction in the DAILY WORKER to the effect that this branch has remitted $25 to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925. The members of this branch do not want to be considered slackers, he adds. We add that this correction, now made, adds this branch to the militants in the party.

The Greek branch of San Francisco was quite disappointed in not finding its name upon the militant page. This branch remitted $31 on Dec. 29. It entered the campaign to make our daily safe at the first call to action. And the secretary writes us that the balance of the $50 they intend sending will soon be forthcoming. We add this branch to the militant branches of the party.

LENIN MEMORIAL MEETING TONIGHT

Have you seen the "RED STAR"?

If not come to the Lenin Memorial meeting tonight 8 p. m. at Ashlan Auditorium and see it glisten brightly.

There will be other unusual attractions. The Juniors will be on a very elaborate affair and the Young Workers League is going to supply the best that the musical world can offer.

Last year on Lenin's Memorial Day Ashland Auditorium was packed to the alcoves, other rooms in the building were engaged and thousands were turned away. This year an even larger turn out is expected, so get there early if you want a seat or get in.

The speakers will be Comrades Earl R. Browder, editor of The Workers Monthly; William F. Dunne and J. Louis Engdahl, editors of the DAILY WORKER; Arne Swabeck, district organizer, Workers Party; and Gordon Owens.

MINE WORKERS' LOCAL PUTS KINK IN BOSSES PLAN

Members Must Not Go to Coal Barons' Banquets

(By The Federated Press)

CARBONDALE, Pa., Jan. 20.—The Hudson Coal company's monthly banquets to the anthracite miners in the Powderly and No. 1 collieries of the company are educational in purpose. So the company says.

Local 877, United Mine Workers of America, objects to this kind of education. At an all-night session, attended by several hundred coal diggers, the union unanimously passed a resolution forbidding any union member to attend any more of these banquets on pain of union discipline. The union's decision is advertised in a notice signed by Owen M'Andrew, president and James Horan, secretary. Pickets will watch the banquet hall entrance.

Hudson Coal employes have numerous grievances, similar in part to those against which the Pennsylvania-Hillside men are now striking.

Women Use Generals to Relieve Boredom of "Peace" Society

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 20.—A meeting of the women's conference on the causes and cures of war was turned into a militaristic organization for the boosting of preparedness, when two generals were the principal speakers at the first session. Brigadier General Lord Thomas, the secretary of state for air under Ramsay MacDonald, and a well-known militarist, characterized himself as a "repentent old soldier." He still clings proudly to all his war titles, however.

Major General John F. O'Ryan was the other war veteran who was brot in to entertain the tea drinking ladies, who gazed longingly at his glittering uniform. O'Ryan has been talking over the radios of the country in behalf of the league of nations, and has cried over the terrible militarism of which, he says, he is a part "because of the necessity for preparedness."

Miners' Union Backs Workers' Movie

CHRISTOPHER, Ill., Jan. 20.—Opposition of the reactionary elements, which had prevented the renting of a theater to a local committee of the International Workers' Aid for the purpose of showing a working class picture, melted mysteriously when the local miners' union went on record in support of the venture.

Up until this time the manager of the opera house, altho compelled by hard times to keep his house dark more than half of the week, could not be persuaded to let the committee have the theater.

The program will include "Polikushka," "The Soldier Ivan's Miracle" and a news reel. It will be given on Jan. 22.

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik" is coming to Ashland Auditorium Feb. 5.

PETRUS JESUS WELINDER, LORD HIGH POOH-BAH OF ANARCHISTS, UPHOLDS AMERICAN DEMOCRACY

Petrus Jesus Welinder, secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, delivered a "lecture" on "Liberation versus Dictatorship" on Sunday evening before a diminutive audience of "professional" wobblies, one member of the proletarian party and two members of the Workers Party.

Welinder is opposed to dictatorship—both bourgeois and proletarian. To rob the bosses of their dictatorial weapons (army, police, etc.) he proposes that the workers get possession of the means of production. How? Thru education of the workers to the beauty and simplicity of the I. W. W. program.

When it is objected that the bosses will use their armed forces to prevent the workers taking over the factories, Welinder answers that the bosses are only able to support an army because of the profits derived from the labor of the workers. Cut off the supply of surplus value by the workers taking over the factories and the bosses cannot support an army. Simple, isn't it?

The proletarian dictatorship is not necessary because the working class is the majority of the population and it is impossible for the huge majority to live off the labor of the small minority of capitalists, says Welinder. Because all previous dictatorships have been for the purpose of exploiting a subject class, therefore the proletarian dictatorship can only have the object of turning the capitalists into a subject class off whose labor the workers will live in luxury!

The Russian revolution has changed nothing, according to Welinder. Only the name distinguishes Soviet Russia from American capitalism. The Russian Communists are merely interested in maintaining their positions and living off the workers—included in this was Lenin.

In the discussion the greatest applause was received by a wobbly who heaped all the capitalist lies he could remember on Soviet Russia. We suspect that the Mackenzie articles in the Chicago News have eager readers in these wobblies.

Two conclusions flow from the meeting: One, the American ruling class is extremely stupid to hold Welinder and his crowd up as terrible revolutionists. As a matter of fact, he holds a viewpoint very much similar to that of Thoreau, the pale idealist of early American capitalism. But the stupid American rulers will succeed in dignifying Welinder by naming him a revolutionary simply because he is, by mistake, secretary of the I. W. W.

Two: Sam Gompers is dead, but so long as Welinder and his gang dominate the I. W. W., we can expect the whole filthy gamut of anti-Bolshevik ideas to be spread. It is the usual trick of the reactionary to camouflage his opposition to the proletarian dictatorship under an opposition to dictatorship in general and a mouthly defense of "liberty." Both Gompers and Welinder had this in common.

Considering the certainty that capitalist dictatorship is evil and must be destroyed, while the alleged "peril" of proletarian dictatorship is—to say the least—not such a pressing question to the members of the I. W. W. Welinder's opposition to both, is nonsensical and a real betrayal of the struggle against capitalism and a real support to the capitalist dictatorship.

TEXTILE CAPITALISTS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE WANT CHILD SLAVERY

(By The Federated Press)

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 20.—Northern cotton mill owners are fighting the child labor amendment, declared Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers' Union in a speech at Central Labor Union Hall, because sixty per cent of the capital invested in southern mills, where child slavery rules, is owned by textile capitalists in the north.

Urging the need of federal safeguards McMahon pointed to the failure of southern states to pass the necessary legislation and he dwelt on the disease and misery which prevail in these exploited areas. Tuberculosis is rampant.

McMahon will carry the fight for ratification of the amendment to Concord where public hearings will be held. He is making a swing around the cotton and woolen cities of New England.

OPTIMISTIC RUBBISH

M. WILGUS.

It is noteworthy that especially during periods of industrial stagnation our captains of industry and finance assume the mantle of prophets and begin broadcasting "news" about imminent revivals of trade, cheerful outlooks for business and prosperities at hand. Now when these captains talk like that it is a safe wager that there is something rotten in Denmark. And the curious thing about it is that they know it. We quote the following from the Annalist of January, 12, 1925:

"It is highly desireable in the interest of business itself and of the general welfare that this stock taking (yearly inventories) should be extended beyond the lists of material goods on the shelves. The mental attitude of the business man toward the conduct of his business is an important part of his inventory, and there is evidence that a good many mental shelves are cluttered with 'optimistic rubbish' which ought to be cleared out and written off before the year's campaign is launched."

To get the real significance of the above paragraph, it is necessary to bear in mind that the Annalist is not a popular bourgeois organ. It is published primarily for the information of business executives, both industrial and financial. Its circulation is insignificant but for the fact that it is read and studied by those individuals in the community whose positions collectively is of enormous importance in the business world.

Hence all these rosy reports issued by Judge Gary about the imminent revival of production are to be taken for nothing but "optimistic rubbish." Judge Gary is not a fool. He knows what he is about. His broadcasting is not aimed at the business men. It is for the consumption of the dear old public. In times of unemployment feed them with "optimistic rubbish" is his motto. When the mill workers in New England are compelled to accept a reduction of 10 per cent on their already below margin of health wages, the bourgeois press sugars the reduction with a rosy picture of better times in the near future.

This should be a salutary example to the class conscious worker. One must discount heavily all the optimistic broadcasting indulged in by our bourgeois editors to stifle the growing rumblings of the unemployed. The bourgeoisie are capable of endless inventions of new lies, "statistics" and "imminent revivals of trade" to confuse the workers. That the captains of industry know they lie is evident from the more critical bourgeois journals. The Annalist is a good example.

Postpone Moslem Congress.

CAIRO—The Moslem caliphate congress originally fixed for March, has been postponed a year because of the political situation, it was learned today. The Egyptian ministry of finance is busy dealing with the claims of foreign officials in preparation for retirement in April.

On the Drug Traffic.

The drug and alcohol traffic with exploitation will not disappear until true labor leaders arise, pointing out constantly to which secret fraternal orders statesmen of drug trafficing countries belong. If labor leaders fail in this, they endanger the labor movement.—Lewis Esch.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Every day under this head you will learn not only what BUILDERS thruout the country are doing to build a greater newspaper, but also practical suggestions to accomplish more for OUR paper. Tell us what YOU are doing—and we will "tell the world."

Detroit Is At It Again!

THE Detroit local has a chronic malady that seems to be "Builditis." It's incurable and those in its grip insist on building the DAILY WORKER.

This local already has a functioning committee. They have a full-time agent to look after newsstand circulation; and now they choose Alfred Goetz to act as full-time sub-agent. And this comrade must also be infected as today's mail carries the evidence:

Every branch in the local has been visited with special sub cards on a local campaign and about 500 have been issued. The best hustlers will receive the following prizes: 1) A brief case; 2) A year's sub to the Imprecor; 3) A bust of Lenin; 4) A year's sub for the Communist International; 5) A year's sub for the British Communist Review. The branch prize will be a gorgeous red silk banner, 24x30 inches, with a sickle and hammer and name of the winning branch.

Quotas for each branch have been set—mostly at a sub per member and a banquet and dance has been arranged to be held on March 1 to wind up the campaign.

Federation papers will be asked to carry news of the campaign and something tells us that many more comrades in Detroit will be infected with that Detroit malady which builds the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party so quickly—and which we hope is so "catching" that it infects many other locals in the party.

ENTERTAINMENTS AND EATS APLENTY AT THE BIG JOINT BAZAAR OF LABOR DEFENSE AND I. W. A. IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The joint bazaar which has been arranged by the International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council will not be merely for raising funds for relief and defense. It will also be four days of entertainment and fun.

Fine concerts have been arranged for each evening. The first evening will be known as Finnish Night. The Finnish comrades of the Workers Party will do several gymnastic feats; there will be a Finnish band of 50 pieces, two Finnish singers, a violinist and dancers. The next evening there will be a pantomime, a violinist and a singer, and the German "mass" declamation society. The third evening will be the star evening: the Hungarian symphony orchestra, the Freiheit Singing Society and a violinist.

Saturday afternoon is "Junior" Day. There will be a children's orchestra of 25 pieces, the children of the Modern School in dances, and the Junior groups of the Young Workers League, will give a specifically children's program.

Saturday evening will be a costume ball—and in all probability this will be one of the finest balls of the season. Many comrades are preparing their costumes, and surprises are expected.

One of the special features of the Bazaar will be the Indian booth. All persons entering the booth will disappear in smoke and then be brought back to the flesh. There will be all kinds of Indian tricks, that will take away your breath.

In order that mothers and their children may stay all day at the Bazaar, and that the workers may go directly there from their work there will be a fine cafeteria, which the Amalgamated Food Workers is taking charge of. But to be sure that no one will go away hungry, the Italian comrades of the Workers Party are putting up a Spaghetti booth, at which spaghetti in its tastiest form will be served. The Greek and Armenian comrades will have eastern dainties and coffee. Hence if you do not enjoy yourself, it is not the fault of the Joint Bazaar Committee, which has a big force of comrades out, scouring the city for the best to be obtained. Don't forget the place and dates: Yorkville Lyceum, 86th St. and 3rd Ave., Feb. 11, 12, 13, 14. We will all be there.

The Anthracite Rebellion

The coal diggers of District No. 1 are in a state of rebellion against the employers and also against their treacherous officials who have proven themselves now more than ever before to be the loyal agents of the coal barons.

Sixty thousand miners threaten to strike today, and if the strike takes place, 94 local unions involved are threatened with a revocation of their charters by Rinaldo Cappellini, the renegade president of District 1, acting under the orders of John L. Lewis, international president of the U. M. W. of A.

The coal barons have brought to the front every agency at their command in an attempt to drive the rebellious coal diggers back to work. But they have signally failed. The miners have reached the limit of their patience. They grew tired of appealing for redress of long standing grievances, so they finally decided to act under the leadership of the joint grievance committees originally used by Cappellini in his fight against his rivals, but now branded by the traitor as outlaws.

A very delicate situation exists in District 1, a situation that calls for very careful handling on the part of the rank and file leaders. It is not surprising that in a situation like this a voice should be raised counselling a policy that would split the miners and destroy all hope of victory either over the coal barons or over the lackeys of the coal barons, the officials of the union.

This voice was that of Tony Panne, chairman of the 12,000 Pennsylvania Coal company's miners, now on strike. He said that the men under his leadership would split away from the United Mine Workers of America. This kind of propaganda will only benefit the bosses. It will destroy the unity of the miners.

The officials of the United Mine Workers are hoping that the members of District 1 will be forced into some rash act that would enable them to split their ranks, expel the radicals and drive the demoralized coal miners back to the pits under whatever terms the bosses and their labor lieutenants see fit to give them. The miners are fighting two wings of the enemies' army, the coal barons and the labor fakers. But there is another enemy in their midst; it is the secessionist, the dual unionist, who, taking advantage of the rebellious spirit among the members, urges a split policy. Of the three, the splitter is the most dangerous.

The miners of District 1 should take a lesson from the strategy followed by their comrades in Nova Scotia, who defeated John L. Lewis and his stoolpigeons by staying with the union and fighting on the inside for control of the district. This is the policy of the Trade Union Educational League and the Progressive Miners' Committee. It is the winning policy. It is the policy that Lewis fears most.

The cattle raisers asked the president for immediate relief and they were handed the usual line of capitalist bull.

Eamon DeValera denies he intends to enter Free State parliament, but he leaves a loophole, which proves that Eamon is normal.

The Singapore Base

There was a disarmament conference held in Washington in the year 1921. The representatives of the principal capitalist powers cooed like pigeons. The pacifists likewise. They thought a new era had set in. Perhaps it had, but not in the direction of universal peace.

The conference fixed the naval ratio of the United States, Great Britain and Japan at 5-5-3, allowing for equality between the United States' and British navies with Japan bringing up the rear. The conference also agreed on the status quo on naval bases in the Pacific east of the 110th Meridian. This left Singapore out.

As if no conference was held Britain decided to build a great naval base at Singapore. Naturally this caused excitement in Japan against whom the move was directed. It appears that Washington tacitly endorsed the British move. So the base is going to be built.

The scheme was dropped while the labor party government was in office. There was no great need for hurry. But the next world war is coming along on three league boots and there is no time to be lost. The Singapore base is built for war. All the "disarmament conferences" called by the capitalists are only maneuvers for future wars. There can be no peace as long as capitalism exists. The only road to peace is thru the class war for the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the workers' rule.

Lenin

The first anniversary of the death of Nikolai Lenin will be observed tonight with appropriate exercises in the Ashland Auditorium, Chicago.

Workers who glory in the greatest revolution in human history, in the establishment of the first workers' government and its successful struggle thru seven years of civil war, famine and blockade, will gather to pay tribute to the leader of the great revolution and the master mind who founded the political party of the workers and peasants that is the directing force behind the Soviet government, the Russian Communist Party, and the Communist International, the leader of the world proletariat.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America, does not call on the working class to mourn Lenin's death. Rather it urges them to rejoice in the great contribution he has made to the task of emancipating the working class and calls on them to join the constantly growing millions all over the world, who are determined to carry on Lenin's work until the banner of Communism flies over every city, town and hamlet in the world as a symbol of the complete victory of the proletariat and the death of capitalist class rule and exploitation.

The DAILY WORKER urges its readers to attend the Lenin memorial meeting and suggests that the best way for a class conscious worker to honor Lenin's memory is to join the Workers (Communist) Party, the party of Leninism, and help organize the masses for the final victory over capitalism.

What About Warren?

President Coolidge of Wall Street's political apparatus has sent the name of Charles B. Warren, to the senate as his appointee to succeed Harlan P. Stone as attorney general.

The senate judiciary committee, as usual, is going over Warren's career to see what can be done in the way of whitewashing his record so that he may appear in all his angelic whiteness to assume the responsibilities of the department of injustice.

Warren has a few skeletons in his closet that would make an awful rattle if only given half a chance. He was the Handy Andy of the beet sugar trust in 1911 and the chief of the sugar lobby scandal in 1913. But that should be a recommendation for Warren. That he has experience in serving big business should qualify him for the job to which he is assigned.

The office of attorney general is one of the most powerful weapons in the hands of the ruling class to keep the workers under its iron heel. Whoever is in that office under capitalism will serve the interests of the ruling class. The senate committee investigation is merely a smoke screen to fool the masses.

The Dawes Plan

While capitalist politicians were wrangling over the question whether the Coolidge administration got this country entangeld in the meshes of European diplomacy thru its signing of the Paris agreement on distribution of reparations under the Dawes plan, great demonstrations of workers, organized by the Communists were being held in Germany, protesting against the Dawes plan and depicting it by word and picture as a gullotine which is executing the German working class.

Every nickel in reparations paid to the robber powers who defeated Germany in the great war will be wrung out of the blood and sweat of the German workers. The capitalist class of that country will live as usual, in luxury. They will have to surrender some of their profits to their rivals, but it is the enslaved working class that will pay.

It was a touching scene at the Paris reparations meeting when the little nations were given a chance to protest against the action of the big powers in grabbing all the loot under the Dawes plan. Churchill, Kellogg and the French representatives dropped lachrimal moisture on their shirt fronts, but what could they do? The little fellows were to late. It is to cry.

Now that the workers know the total wealth of the United States is over $320,000,000,000, there should be no more talk of poverty and want. An approximately equal distribution of this wealth would give every man, woman and child in this country three thousand dollars each. Get your share. Why not? Is not everybody free and equal in the United States?

Lord Robert Cecil challenged the Geneva opium conference to prove its competence to discuss the opium problem. He blamed China for the evil. In view of the fact that the opium traffic was forced upon China at the point of British cannon, Lord Cecil's position was about as just as that of the seller of infected oysters, who blames his customers for getting poisoned thru consuming them.

Gaston B. Means, former boon companion of the late President Harding, Harry M. Daugherty, Jess Smith, et al, is now on trial in New York. He is charged with collecting $65,000 with which to induce Daugherty, Mellon and Burns, to drop indictments against certain illegitimate business men who were working at their trade. So far it appears that no witness took the stand except convicted criminals. That is as it should be.

New York reporters are having a lot of fun with the Grand Duke Boris. The duke looks as dignified as a labor faker leading the grand march at a Landis award ball. The reporters know he is broke with poor prospects. Naturally they give him the hot dog.

Reaction in Michigan

By Robert Min

THE click of the jailer's key in the lock of Ruthenberg's cell at the Jackson penitentiary two weeks ago, may be taken as symbolizing the end of a certain period in the life of America. Not that the mere locking of one man in a cell, nor the opening of prosecutions against thirty-odd more, constitutes alone a force that could alter the course of history. This new "Dred Scott" decision of the Michigan supreme court is not the cause, but rather the dramatic illustration, of the end of a period of democratic pretenses on the part of capitalist government.

Nor does the subsequent granting of bail to Ruthenberg alter the facts.

Reaction Shows Naked Face.

Quietly, almost unobserved by the average man or woman of the working class—and entirely beyond the understanding of the middle class drudge who is pictured as the type of American citizenship, this country is entering into a period of reaction which promises to be darker, more deadly and more openly characterized with violent repression, than any period before known.

Finance capital of America knows that it is facing in the near future the biggest world crisis of all history, and it is preparing. World war and world conquest are the only possible program for American finance capital. A look at the fast-decaying fabric of European capitalism gives the necessary tip. Another look at the stagnating world market gives the warning for the army and navy to prepare to open up the world market.

There is war in China, where Wall Street must step in. . . More American marines have just landed. . . There is smouldering revolt in India, where Morgan's London partners must hold on for their very lives. There are several small wars in course, and several more incipient ones barely concealed.

The "Democratic-Pacifist" Period.

The martial condition has been chronic ever since that skirmish which we called the "world war" but which was only preliminary to the real world war. Yet it has been concealed with every possible means while world capitalism tided over a breathing space. Morgan's London banking partners drafted Ramsay MacDonald into service; French capital drafted the "socialistic" Herriot; and Morgan sent Charles G. Dawes to Europe to make the necessary adjustments, and Dawes incidentally was able to mobilize a whole "socialist" international—all the "social-democratic" parties of Europe—to help; and thus with a mighty effort the great world oligarchy of finance capital created for itself a breathing space which was called "the democratic-pacifist" period, in which to prepare its forces while meek and credulous working men hung onto street car straps in all the cities and towns of the world and read of "peace" and "democracy" and "adjustment" and "labor governments."

This "democratic-pacifist" phase has been reflected in every walk of life in every country in the world.

But the "democratic-pacifist" period—the breathing space for world capitalism—has passed. In England, finance capital got thru with MacDonald, and MacDonald fell. In Germany, world imperialism got thru with "democratic republican" ministries and shifted to a monarchist ministry. In France the adjustment is managed. In America we had the "democratic-pacifist" period (under this singularly inflexible form of "republican" government) with the soft-spoken reactionary Coolidge in the saddle but with "insurgent" and "progressive" politicians flirting with office-hungry "socialists" and cavorting in and out of congress sufficiently to create the illusion of "democratic" possibilities. American capitalism also got thru with this period, and the click of the lock of Ruthenberg's cell marks its end.

National Oligarchy Alibies Itself.

In that period the democratic pretense touched even the matter of prosecutions of "radical" labor agitators in several instances. Even before the period definitely began, the federal war-time laws of suppression were repealed by congress. And the business of strangling the labor movement was related to the state laws being efficiently handled by the various state governments, thirty-five of which had "criminal syndicalist" statutes under which working class movements could be strangled in obscure state courts, while the federal government could maintain an alibi.

Thus in California and elsewhere, the small town agents of all-American capitalism exercise their "state's rights" by brutal repressions of the Industrial Workers of the World. Such repressions, if conducted openly by the federal government, would become a national political issue embarrassing to the federal government. It is interesting in this respect to consider the Mooney case. A federal president was obliged, because of national and international protest, to intercede to prevent the hanging of Mooney; yet after Mooney is proven innocent, the state government of California can safely keep him in prison for life while the federal government can make a saintly face and say "I am powerless; it is purely a state matter."

Repression of 1922.

Along came the mass railroad and coal strikes of August and September, 1922. This had to be handled on a national scale, being nation-wide in scope; so a single federal judge with the stroke of a pen, in effect, created a federal law of the most drastically repressive sort, in the form of an injunction.

But that was not all. The capitalist power was uneasy lest the mass railroad and coal strikes take on an openly political color. A prospect of a union of political Bolshevism with these strikes of so huge a scale created a nightmare among the capitalist chiefs. A blow at the political organization of Bolshevism was considered a necessary accompaniment of the railroad injunction. The same attorney general's office, thru the same corps of "detective" strike-breakers under the same William J. Burns, struck the two blows at once. The federal government, while securing the injunction against the railroad workers, secured the arrest of practically the entire leadership of the Communist Party.

However, it was not necessary for the federal government to take openly the onus of this political repression. Nor would it have been simple to do so, for there existed no longer any federal law for the arrests. Therefore, the responsibility for the prosecution of thirty-two leaders of a national political party for "assembling" in a peaceful convention was shifted to the obscure little rural community at St. Joseph, Michigan. Federal agents under the direct orders of a member of the president's cabinet conducted the arrests, supplied the evidence—the funds come from some mysterious source which a federal agent says he "cannot reveal" and federal agents direct the trial in the country town court room. But the federal government makes a saintly face and says, "I am powerless; it is purely a state matter."

William Z. Foster was tried (with the jury disagreeing) and Ruthenberg was convicted. All was going well for the course of repression.

Mass Discontent Intervenes.

But then came the big surge of mass discontent growing out of the economic situation; labor discontented and turning to thoughts of political action, farmers being evicted by hundreds of thousands and turning "radical" and both classes exhibiting occasional spurts of sympathy for the real "radicals" whom they vaguely knew as "Bolsheviks," tho generally keeping within the bounds of democratic illusion.

The period of "democratic-pacifist" illusions reached its height in America during the last presidential campaign.

The courts of capitalism—and the venal, crude and illiterate judges of the Michigan state supreme court are no exception—have ears as sharp for the political winds of the time as for the interest of their monied masters.

At the height of the period while millions of workers and farmers were staring wild-eyed at visions of "democracy" and "constitutional liberty," during the past presidential campaign, it would not have been expedient for the supreme court of Michigan to return a decision upholding the condemnation of Ruthenberg to penal servitude for "assembling."

The supreme court of Michigan did not return its decision during such a period. There was a singularly long delay.

Then Coolidge was elected. It became clearly apparent that the big capitalism of Wall Street had even greater powers of control over the masses than they had thought.

Then the Michigan supreme court brought in its decision flatly annulling its own state constitutional "guarantees." Immediately the whole machinery of reaction begins to function again thru the little court rooms in Michigan, to prosecute and send to the penitentiary all of the other arrested leaders of Bolshevism in the United States. With an avidity never before equalled, the court house vermin, the strike-breaking crew from Chicago, New York and Washington, pounce upon their intended victims.

The locking of Comrade Ruthenberg into a cell and the opening of the first of the other trials, with the announcement that Foster will be retried and that all of the other thirty Communist leaders must stand prosecution, means the recognition of the end of the "democratic-pacifist" period.

It is time for the period to come to an end, from the point of view of American capitalism. It is time to put an end to the pretense of "freedom of assemblage," freedom of political organization among the working class, and an end to the organization and maintenance of labor unions not controlled by the capitalists.

Full Speed Ahead.

World conditions and domestic conditions require that the capitalist class now mobilize every strength for the complete wiping out of all phenomena of independent organization among the exploited. It is necessary to conquer China with conscripted masses from America; and there must be no Communist Party growing strong among the American masses. It is necessary to increase the exploitation of labor with longer hours and lower reduced standards of living—to "deflate" labor—and there must be no liberties of organization among the "deflated"—especially no organized Bolsheviks among them.

The legal precedent created in Michigan, of suppressing a political party, must be extended over the whole of the industrial states. The principle of the Daugherty injunction, created at the same time on the same initiative, holding all labor unionism subject to punishment as criminal conspiracy, must be extended into a common practice of the federal government.

But whatever there is of courage and manliness among the working class and the exploited farmers must begin quick and must fight now for its very life. If the intelligent and honest workers and farmers do not support morally and financially the defense of the Michigan cases, their cause and ours will be struck a blow of disastrous consequences.

However, reaction or no reaction, momentary defeat or victory, with the leaders inside or outside of prison, the Workers (Communist) Party will continue to exist. The party of the Communists cannot be destroyed in this country, nor can it be isolated from the masses ever again. It will grow strong under this persecution, and it will ultimately lead the exploited masses to victory.

A "Farmers Press" That Isn't

By HARRISON GEORGE.

A few weeks ago the DAILY WORKER correspondent at Williston, North Dakota, sent in a dispatch commenting upon the irritation of what we termed "the newspaper which represents the capitalist dictatorship in Williams county—the 'Farmers Press'"—over the election of a Communist, A. C. Miller, to the legislature. The correspondent mentioned the fact that the irritation of the "Farmer Press" had led it to say that both Comrade Miller and another Communist, Andrew Omholt, had concealed that they were Communists during the election.

This statement of the "Farmers Press" (we by no means impute the sins of the "Farmers Press" to the poor working farmers of Williams county), Comrade Omholt rather mildly labeled as a lie.

We All Agree on This.

Under the circumstances the editor of the "Farmers Press" didn't seem to be able to contradict Comrade Omholt on this matter in a subsequent spasm he published, so it seems to be generally agreed that he is a liar.

That being the case, it is not surprising that as an appendix to the aforesaid spasm the editor of the "Farmers Press" deports the conversation to Russia and waxes wroth, quite wroth indeed, over the lack of what he calls a "free press" under the first workers' and farmers' government on this earth.

To any of the working and exploited farmers of Williams county, North Dakota, who didn't get the Communist message from Comrades Omholt and Miller, we address the following exposition of the mendacity of the pen-pusher who hopes to bamboozle them into belief that Communists mean to take away from the poor farmer and the wage worker, a "free press" which they haven't got.

No Free Press—For Exploiters.

Very well, let's go over to Russia. No Communist in Russia will think of claiming that "Communism is in full swing," they are only claiming that the workers and peasants are in control of state power. The capitalist class still exists in Soviet Russia, but as a subject class, in the process of historically disappearing as the new society evolves. So we believe in evolution as well as revolution—the latter being a part of the former.

No Communist in Russia would claim that there is any press which is "free" for the lies of these capitalist exploiters which are allowed to exist by sufferance as an exploiting class for a certain economic benefit they still have, just as the capitalists allow the workers to exist in America, and can't kill them all (even if they are "reds") because without workers they have no profits.

Real Free Press—For Working Class.

But every Communist in Russia will assert and prove that the honest worker in the shops or the peasant on the land has a real free press to air his grievances if he has them. But there is no "free press" for the English, French and American spy machine to use to help the Russian capitalists, bankers, landlords and bosses to lie to the honest people as the "Farmers Press" is allowed to do in Williams county.

For the farmers of Williams county a Communist regime would mean that they would have for the first time in history a real, genuine chance to express their opinions in meetings and in print. We, and they, know how they are gagged by the capitalist dictatorship. In the war they were told quite frankly—"Obey the law and keep your mouth shut!" And those who didn't keep their mouths shut were dragged off to Leavenworth whether they obeyed the law or not, as everybody knows. And everybody knows how the "liberty" loans were forced out of the farmers with terrorism. Poppycock on this "free country" and "free press"!

This Is Why He Gets Sore.

But in Russia the capitalists have a dose of their own medicine, and only the workers and peasants have a right to express their opinions. They have hundreds of papers to do it and it is a regular joke among everybody who knows Russia how the meetings of both workers and farmers are never-ending affairs where everyone who has anything on his chest is given hours to get it off. Just how that sort of real working class freedom would agree with the capitalist lackey editor of the "Farmers Press" we don't know, but we have a hunch he wouldn't like it.

The kind of "free press" the editor of the "Farmers Press" has in mind is well explained in a letter from A. C. Miller, who describes just how "free" the "Farmers Press" is. The Communists don't make any bones about their dictatorship in Russia. The capitalists and landlords are frankly shut out. But how about the hypocrites who claim there is a "free press" in America, and in Williston? Comrade Miller tells the following story:

A "Farmers Press"—Minus Farmers.

"The loud-mouthed fake progressives of the non-partisan league invariably controlled conventions by holding pre-conventions. They also controlled the campaign committee and by so doing always kept the 'reds' from being routed as speakers. The only time they made a balk of it was last spring at the league endorsing convention where, many of the delegates being farmers, the writer was endorsed for the legislature, likewise Comrade Omholt was endorsed for sheriff. Both being farmers in the county for twenty odd years.

"Immediately after the convention a button-hole campaign was launched by the other candidates saying, 'We are going too far to the left' . . . 'The people will not stand for this Communist doctrine' . . 'The Communists take their orders from Moscow.' Yet we were nominated.

"At the June primary election; after our nomination and about two months before election, the Farmers Press turned on its mud battery; and notwithstanding the fact that we hold paid-up stock in that paper, every issue poured out great streams of mud, saying that our program 'was un-American, that it would be a disgrace to elect a Communist to office, that the Communists wanted to overthrow this government by force and violence, that LaFollette did right in segregating the loyalist from the Communist,' and so on for weeks.

"This yellow press kept up a continual stream of filth. The result was Comrade Omholt was defeated. Not a word in the way of a reply could we get in this alleged 'Farmers Press' although we were stock holders in it. Had we not gone before the people on a speaking tour both would have been defeated. In every township likewise in the small villages where some of the farmers voted, we had a big vote over our opponents.

"This fact still rasps in the craw of this yellow editor. Since the election he tries to convey the idea that we did not advertise ourselves as Communists, and that we lied to the voters. He did so much lying in the campaign that he forgot that he reprinted a poster that one of his lieutenants took from a telephone pole near Grenora. Incidentally at Gerona, where we gave the voters a full dose of Communist program, the writer got 53 votes while his opponent got two votes."

If the editor of the Farmers' Press has anything more to say which explains what he means by a "free press," the Workers (Communist) Party has not only the DAILY WORKER, but other papers in a dozen different languages to advertise the prairie 'jackass' resounding brays.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

PRESIDENT William T. Cosgrave, of the Irish Free State, finds joy in contemplating scenes of carnage, particularly those mellowed by time and tradition. While returning to Dublin from a brief visit in France, Cosgrave was a guest of honor and in replying to a toast got the following sweet morsel off his chest: "We all cherish deep in our hearts the memory of the many pleasant occasions when the blood of Ireland and of France poured forth on the same battlefields against the same enemy." Several Englishmen who were present did not appear to relish the prospect of a revival of the happy occasions which Mr. Cosgrave served up to the diners a la carte.

THERE is an alleged labor paper published in Minneapolis, with the rather ambitious title of "Minnesota." Its principal aim is to get the Communists out of the trade union movement, and it looks as if it had a man's job cut out of it. Not alone does it see "red" whenever a Communist hoves in sight, but even a pale pink gives it the creeps. A recent issue of this rag raves about the defeat inflicted on the A. F. of L. disorganizer, Paul Smith, special representative from Washington who has put in three years in Minneapolis, in an effort to wreck the local labor movement.

WITH the aid of fake progressives like Bobby Cramer, Smith was able to unseat C. A. Hathaway as delegate from the Trades and Labor Assembly. Two other Communists were [illegible] out of the St. Paul trades council. Then the [illegible] decided to make a thoro cleanup on the Minneapolis central body. They picked on Sam Stevens, secretary of the council, and Delegate Mauseth, but found when it was too late that they had grabbed two hot potatoes. When the votes were counted, Smith and his thugs were in the minority and the assembly refused to oust the Communists.

THIS dish rag called "Minnesota" is damn mad. It doubts the reactionary sincerity of Cramer and has a sneaking suspicion that he is secretly with the radicals. We will not waste any time applying balm to the wounded feelings of the editor of "Minnesota." He can believe Cramer is Zinoviev for all we care, tho it would be tough on the latter. The fakers are sore because the Communists in Minneapolis gave them an awful drubbing. There is nothing now left for them to do but to lift the charter of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, says the fake sheet. They cannot beat the Communists in a fair battle on principle before the rank and file. Paul Smith is now gone to Washington to make his recommendations.

ON the back page of the current issue of "Minnesota" is an eulogy of the B. and O. plan. It is rather instructive. It tells how William H. Johnston, president of the Machinists' Union, visited Daniel Willard, president of the B. and O. railroad, some weeks before the 1922 shopmen's strike was called. This is Willard's version of the visit. The railroad baron reveals that Johnston, on the eve of a strike, proposed that the union men should join up with the railroad owners in getting more profit out of the railroad industry. Willard was quite shocked at first and thought Johnston might be kidding him. I suppose he could not conceive how a labor official should be such a traitor to his class.

HOWEVER, he took a chance and found that Johnston meant every word of what he said. Willard, during the course of his speech which is published verbatim in the fake labor sheet, did not say that the employes of the B. and O. made any material gains out of their co-operation with the bosses, but this is what they got: "It gives to every employe an en-

MILLIONS FOR CHURCH WHILE TOILERS STARVE

Bulwark of Capitalism Gets Blessing from Cal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 21.—Twelve thousand people were seated snugly in Madison Square Garden Sunday listening to appeals from the fundamentalist bishop of the diocese of New York for a donation of $15,000,000 to complete the cathedral of St. John the Divine, while multitudes of old and hungry women and children of the working class were shivering in rickety tenement houses, thruout the city and all over the country, victims of capitalism and destined to lifelong exploitation and suffering.

A United Front of Exploiters.

Never in the history of New York has there been such complete co-operation between all sorts and conditions of men to carry out the program of combined religion and commercialism as when the array of representatives of greedy and tyrannical capitalism swung into line for the building of one of the most elaborate cathedrals in the world.

Bishop William T. Manning was the high priest assisted by notables among whom were Mayor Hylan, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Nicholas Murray Butler, Justice Finch, George W. Wickersham, Hugh Frayne and about 200 bigger and lesser lights of this city.

If at any time there has been any doubt that capitalism is using religion as a handmaiden the Madison Square Garden meeting dispelled that doubt. From the brains of Wall Street to the strikebreaking president at Washington loud voices sounded.

Forgetting the depths of moral obliquity to which officialdom of the national capital has fallen and the utter disregard for everything that savors of common decency, Justice Finch said:

"It gives me great pleasure to read to you the telegram which I have received from the man who more than any one else has called us back to the faith of our fathers and reminded us that the well-being of our country ourselves and our children must rest upon morality and religion."

He then read the president's message, as follows:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 17, 1925. Hon Edw. R. Finch, appelate division supreme court, Twenty-fifth street and Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

"It is gratifying to know of the interest of the American people in the construction of the cathedral for religious worship. I trust the effort being made for this purpose will meet with the success its importance warrants. Calvin Coolidge."

Whereup a special selection was played by the Police Band, which, in addition to donating its service as musical entertainers, gave one hundred bucks to show that the bluecoats were not going to bear any grudge against the man who had broken the strike of their brothers in craft some years ago in Boston.

Of Course They Attack Russia.

Elihu Root was the next speaker who combined a warning against the workers' republic of Russia with a masterly dose of American hypocrisy as follows:

"We are here to make an open demonstration in behalf of a public expression of faith. We represent widely differing opinions on religious questions, but we are not here to promote any one of them. We see about us a world in which attention is engrossed by controversy regarding material things and non-essential differ-

OFFICIALS OF MINERS' UNION TRY TO BLUFF

Coaldiggers Vote on District Strike

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 21.—The joint grievance committees of District 1, U. M. W. of A., were meeting here today to determine their course in view of the failure of the district officials to call a special district convention as provided by the U. M. W. of A. constitution to settle grievances against the operators and against the union's district officials headed by the renegade radical, Cappellini. It is nearly certain that 60,000 men will strike.

These officials, together with the so-called "special commission" appointed by John L. Lewis to "investigate" the district situation, are bending their chief efforts to keep as many away from today's meeting as possible. However, it is expected that a general strike of the district will be voted.

Locals in the district, ninety-four in all, have been holding daily sessions to give each man a chance to vote on a strike. The vote has been compiled and will be made public today at the session of the grievance committees.

Prophesy No Response.

The international eunuchs of John L. Lewis, joined Cappellini in sneering at the meeting, prophesying that the call to strike would not be responded to by the miners.

COOLIDGE WANTS CONFERENCE ON THE DAWES PLAN

European Nations Asked to Washington

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 21—The way was paved for the calling of a new "disarmament conference," today when the senate this afternoon passed a bill calling upon president Coolidge to call for such a conference. At the same time the senate passed the naval appropriations bill, giving $287,316,000 for the American navy during the year.

The last conference, which the state department told us would solve the problems of the world and prevent all war seems to have had little effect judging from the clamor for another conference and the large appropriations passed for the navy and army.

Coolidge is anxious to call the European powers together, and under the cloak of the "arms conference," talk turkey with regard to the Dawes plan. The Morgan-Coolidge administration holds the money bags of the world, and the countries owing the United States money will be told to cram the Dawes plan down the throat of Germany or come across with her debts.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Jan. 21.—Thousands of visitors streamed thru Lenin's mausoleum all day to gaze upon the features of the dead Communist leader, Nicolai Lenin, on the first anniversary of his death.

Many of the visitors to Moscow were school children from all parts of Russia. The Kremlin walls above the resting place of the founder of the Soviet state were draped with red flags.

A large black and white portrait of Lenin was hung on the Kremlin wall above Lenin's mausoleum. The portrait was flanked with gilt numerals "1924-1925," marking the end of the first year of Lenin's death.

The newspapers printed articles telling of Lenin's life, and the history of the founding of the Third (Communist) International by Lenin. Thousands of pamphlets explaining Leninism were distributed to the workers and peasants visiting Moscow to view Lenin's remains. Factory work and all traffic thruout Russia ceased for five minutes as a mark of respect for Lenin.

All official buildings, and Soviet buildings in foreign countries were draped with red. The stores and restaurants were closed for the day.

TWEEDLEDUM AND TWEEDLEDEE NOT ABLE TO AGREE

But Army Will Be On Job for "Execution"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The senate today adopted unanimously a resolution calling on Secretary of State Hughes for complete information regarding the Kellogg-Churchill agreement signed at Paris whereby the United States becomes an official partner in the Dawes plan in return for 2¼ per cent of the German reparations payments.

That "Public" Interest!

As adopted, the resolution follows:

"Resolved, that the secretary of state be and is hereby requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to transmit to the senate copy of the agreement signed by Messrs. Kellogg, Herrick and Logan during the past week at the conference of the allies and associate powers in the world war relating to the Dawes plan and the payment of reparations by Germany, together with such information respecting the circumstances surrounding the negotiations and execution of the agreement as may be relevant to a full understanding of its terms."

Will American Armies Collect Bills?

By inserting a request for information concerning the "execution" of the agreement the irreconcilables hope to obtain from Hughes a statement as to what the American attitude would be should Germany default in her payments and the allies undertake to impose punishment on her.

Secretary Hughes heretofore has asserted that the United States is not bound "legally or morally" to participate in any enforcement measures taken with regard to the Dawes plan.

Rummy Senator Lies Low.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21—Senator Edward I. Edwards, democrat of New Jersey, charged with being the "head" of the New Jersey rum ring, will not attend the Jersey City liquor trial unless his testimony is requested by a "responsible party," he said this afternoon.

TEXTILE MILLS MET WITH MANY SMALL STRIKES

Even in Boston Workers Will Act

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 21.—In the midst of the confusion and disorganization prevailing in the few weak and divided textile unions, the outstanding fact is that the rule of the American Federation of Textile Operatives requiring a two-thirds vote for a strike, is blocking a general strike of the 41,000 cotton workers of New Bedford.

Deep resentment is felt among the rank and file of workers at this ruling against majority action, and some suspicion that the officers of the union counted the ballots falsely in order to prevent even the two-thirds majority from carrying.

A Rule to Break Strikes.

Especially is this suspicion being

Building Inspectors' Strike.

Seventy-one building and elevator inspectors have gone on strike today for a raise in their wages. The city council refused the increase in the new budget. The inspectors want a flat increase of $600 a year. They claim mechanics in the building they inspect receive bigger pay than they do. They held a conference with building commissioner Frank E. Doherty today.

MOSCOW FEELS THAT RECOGNITION BY U. S. IS COMING VERY SOON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Jan. 21.—World affairs demand that the United States recognize Soviet Russia, George Tchitcherin said here yesterday. "It is impossible permanently to preserve the artificial system of separation between the two biggest countries in the world, which was created by Secretary of State Hughes," Tchitcherin said. "The entry of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics into the circle of the Pacific brings it face to face with America on the same ocean.

"America will find herself in a cul-de-sac if the absurd estrangement from the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is maintained."

JAPAN GRANTS RECOGNITION TO SOVIET RUSSIA

Treaty Provides Full Trade Relations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Jan. 21.—Japan has formally recognized Soviet Russia. The treaty signed by the two countries provides full diplomatic and trade relations. Japan is the twenty-first nation to recognize Soviet Russia.

The treaty was signed by Soviet Ambassador L. M. Karakhan, representing Soviet Russia in the far east, and M. Yoshizawa, Japanese minister to China, and provides for extensive trade relations between the two countries.

Japan is given concessions, providing for the exploitation of half the Saghalin Island coal and oil deposits during a term of fifty years, in return for which Russia receives 10 to 15 per cent royalty on oil, 8 to 10 per cent on coal, and 20 per cent on oil gushers.

Treaty Ratified Soon.

The treaty is expected to be ratified by both the Soviet government and the Japanese governments within the next two weeks, as both governments have been kept informed as to the proposed contents of the treaty during the months of negotiations carried on by representatives of the two countries.

The treaty provides for mutual concessions to the nationals of one country residing in the other, and grants trade privileges to such individuals. All Russo-Japanese treaties signed before 1917 are cancelled except the treaty of Portsmouth which ended the Russo-Japanese war.

Japanese Evacuate.

The Japanese agree to evacuate northern Saghalin in the spring, leaving Russia in charge of the vast area which is rich in natural resources.

Big Effect on United States.

The recognition of Soviet Russia by Japan is expected to have a profound effect in forcing recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States government. Japan is given a supply of oil thru the terms of the treaty, which is badly needed by the United States. The aim of the American capitalists to secure control of the Pacific, is seriously threatened by the Russo-Japanese treaty.

Great Britain recognized Soviet Russia on February 1, 1924, and the Wall Street journals declared that "The London trieaties are a blow to American diplomacy."

Following close on the heels of England's recognition, Soviet Russia was recognized by Italy on Feb. 7, Norway, Feb. 13, Austria, Feb. 20, Greece, March 8, Sweden March 15. Then came another severe blow to the American capitalists, when China recognized Soviet Russia on May 31, thus undoing the American intrigue that had been carried on for control of China.

France Falls Into Line.

On October 26, France, which under Poincare had made it known that Soviet Russia would "never be recognized," gave Russia recognition, and sent an ambassador to Moscow. Krassin came to Paris to represent the Soviets. An agreement was said in the press at the time to exist between France and America stipulating that America would take her policy toward Soviet Russia from France. Following the recognition of Soviet Russia by France, Secretary of State Hughes resigned and Senator Borah, who favors recognition of Soviet Russia, became important in the councils of Coolidge.

THOUSANDS OF TOILERS ATTEND LENIN MEETINGS

Scores of thousands of American workers, drawn by the light of Leninism, will attend the Lenin Memorial meetings being conducted by the Workers (Communist) Party during the remainder of the week.

The largest outpouring of class conscious workers ever observed in this country is promised by the advance sale of tickets for the Lenin meetings in Chicago, New York, Milwaukee, Los Angeles, and in fact every large city and industrial town in the country.

Leninism shines as the guiding spirit of the American workers more strongly and clearly than ever before, the response to the Lenin memorial meetings shows.

Parade In Moscow

In Moscow yesterday, hundreds of thousands of workers and peasants paraded in honor of Lenin, who established Soviet Russia, the first workers government of the world.

Thousands upon thousands marched past the mausoleum to review the remains of the dead Communist leader. The demonstrations in Moscow were duplicated by hundreds of thousands of workers in every part of Soviet Russia, in the far east, in Europe and thruout the world.

American Workers Respond

In America, the Communists, and workers who understand that Leninism is the great liberating force that will finally crush the capitalist oppressors of the workers, are not behind the workers of their countries.

The Lenin Memorial meeting in the Ashland Auditorium last night, brought out thousands of Chicago's workers. A full report of this meeting will appear in tomorrow's issue.

Thousands Of Tickets Sold

Thousands of tickets to the Lenin Memorial meeting in Madison Square Garden on Sunday February 1 at 2 P. M. have already been sold. William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg, who is expected to be released from Jackson, Michigan penitentiary on Monday, will be the main speakers. The Freiheit Singing society of 400 voices and a symphony of 100 pieces will furnish the revolutionary music that will ring thru the big amphi-theatre.

On Saturday, Jan. 24 at 8 P. M. William Z. Foster and Max Bedacht will speak at the Lenin Memorial meeting arranged in Milwaukee. The meeting will be held in the Milwaukee Auditorium, 500 Cedar St. One hundred and fifty people will take part in the Lenin pageant which has been arranged.

The Lenin Memorial meeting in the citadel of capitalism, Washington, D. C., will take place Sunday evening, Jan. 25, at the Play House. Oliver Carlson, now of Philadelphia, will be the main speaker.

The Lenin Memorial meeting held in Chicago last night will be fully reported in the Friday morning issue of the DAILY WORKER.

GOOD BLOODHOUND GETS BETTER KENNEL AND WILL LEAD PACK

BOSTON—Harold P. Williams, district attorney of Norfolk county, who served as assistant in the trial at which Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were convicted of first degree murder, has been appointed U. S. district attorney for the Massachusetts district. His nomination has been confirmed by the senate.

It was Williams who got hold of Lola Andrews and Louis Pelzer, after they confessed perjury in their identification of Sacco at the trial, and persuaded them to swear out statements against Sacco again. Over Lola he had the power to expose her criminal past and prosecute her and over Pelzer a perjury indictment threat and his job at the shoe factory.

But You Haven't the Raise Yet.

ALBANY, N. Y.—A $900 minimum will be fixed for all stenographers and clerks in state pay, says Senator Charles J. Hewitt, chairman of the finance committee. Wages of $600 and $720 are now common.

One man's say, and probably the powers that permit him to be a senator, will not permit him even to vote for such a measure. It's a long way thru the N. Y. assembly and senate and the "friend of labor," Governor Al. Smith, has the final say, you know.

Labor Board Raises Wages.

The United States railroad labor board has granted slight increases in pay to railway clerks, messengers and freight handlers, amounting to $3,740,000 per year. Whether or not any conditions were attached to the raise were not announced. The men are employed on four different railroads.

lightened and enlarged view of his own worth and importance as part of the great organiation known as the Baltimore and Ohio railroad." The Communists of Minneapolis are honored in having such enemies as "Minnesota" and the gang of corrupt stoolpigeons back of it. Their conception of a proper labor policy is one that will enable them to sleep politically and industrially in the same bed as the bosses on the lines of William H. Johnston's B. and O. plan.

JOHN J. LEARY, Jr., is the "labor expert" of the New York World. While Gompers was living Leary was one of his chief press agents and had the inside track on everything Sammy had to say and on all his plans. Leary is now shining up to Green. In a recent article in the World, this sycophantic hack rubs the butter over the new president of the American Federation of Labor. Sammy was a wet; Green is a dry. But not so offensively dry as Gompers was wet. At least it takes Green is dry. He does not want to be considered a reactionary, tho he makes it quite clear that he is against the Communists. If Leary's article is a correct picture of Green, Gompers' successor is some political trimmer.

THE recent air bombing of the $30,000,000 battleship Washington proves that such craft are invulnerable from the air according to reports made to President Coolidge by the general board of the navy. This is good news for the private shipyards and not good for Arthur Brisbane who wants the government to stop building battleships, in fact doing anything else but build airplanes. The report did not say if the sailors who man the battleships were immune from the air bombs.

LORD Thomson, secretary for air in the MacDonald cabinet, attended a semi-pacifist convention in Washington a few days ago. The labor lord spurned an out and out pacifist attitude. Perhaps he favors a moderate amount of bloodletting. It was under Thomson's regime that British airships bombed peaceful Indian villages in order to impress the natives with British might. A report of Thomson's pacifist speech appeared in the New York Times, and underneath this pious hypoctite's piffle was a story about the Spanish war in Morocco with the head: "Spaniards Bomb Moors." The makeup man must have a sense of the ridiculous.

RUDD PROPOSES ADVERTISING IN ARMY BUSINESS

Get Them So They'll Beg for War

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—That the conviction of the need of the United States army has to be sold to the American people, is the belief of Major A. G. Rudd, chief of the recruiting publicity bureau, United States army.

He uses the advertising campaigns of the large corporations as an example of the correct method of moulding public opinion; of making others think the way you want, and supporting your ideas.

Outlines Propaganda

He states in part as follows:—

"Taking the largest activity as an example, if the country is at war the wholehearted co-operation of the public is imperative for the successful prosecution of its hundreds of different activities. The people must be taught to see the government's point of view—that its course is for the best interests. In other words, to think as the government wishes them to think—and act accordingly. But as a thot must precede every act, the first course is to start them thinking 'right.' This is the mission of publicity.

"In the army our publicity problem is not analogus to any other, but still it partakes of the basic principles of all. We are a government activity and we have something to 'sell.' Our general problem deals with the entire population—sort of 'good-will' proposition in which we seek to justify the army's existence and proper maintenance, not only as national insurance, but as a distinctly constructive factor in the economic life of the United States. Our cue here is along the line of the institutional publicity so effectively used by the leading public service and other large corporations. For years they have not sold insurance and telephones, etc., in their advertisements, but service; not the commodity itself directly, but indirectly, by showing what their company and its inventions have done for the public by raising its standards of living, etc.

"The value of a slogan in moulding thot is universally recognized. But in America in particular it seems almost a necessity. This has been demonstrated in every national political campaign, every war and countless advertising campaigns. A slogan takes a mass of scattered indistinct impressions and boils them down into a single thot which can readily be grasped.

"In the army we do not sell a commodity—we sell service, service to the individual and to our country."

WAGE CUTS BEGIN IN THE SILK MILLS OF NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 21.—The National Spun Silk Company has ordered a ten per cent wage cut for its 1,200 employes at New Bedford. The company is following the lead of the cotton manufacturers.

This cut in wages of the silk workers of Massachusetts presages an attack on the wages of silk workers further in other districts, in the opinion of many workers. These workers are expected to be urged to strike and to be supported in strike by the silk workers elsewhere, as the cut will soon become general if it meets no resistance at the beginning.

United States Is Next to Bow in Recognition of the Soviet Republic

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, altho Japanese capitalism has finally succumbed, as was predicted, and has joined the score of other nations that have given recognition to the Soviet power, the American kept press is as stubborn as ever in its claims that Washington will not follow in the steps of Tokio.

The subsidized editors along with their blood brothers, the old party statesmen at the nation's capital, try to smile away the assurance with which the spokesmen of Soviet rule at Moscow declare that the United States government not only will, but must also give recognition to the First Workers' Republic.

• • • •

There arrives by mail, from Peking, China, the oriental service of the Rosta (Soviet) news agency, dated Dec. 10, 1924, telling of Hughes' prospects in the Coolidge cabinet. Already, a month before it actually took place, and only a few days after congress had reconvened this Soviet news agency, predicted the downfall of Hughes.

It was at Peking that the Russian and Japanese representatives met to discuss recognition where world developments and the relations between nations were weighed in the balance. From this melting pot of international conflicts the Soviet news agency declared that:

> "In reference to the general expectation of a conflict between Secretary Hughes and the chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs, Senator Borah, it is learned in well informed circles that, in certain questions of international policy, particularly that of recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, President Coolidge's position is a more liberal one than that of Secretary Hughes, of whose resignation rumors are becoming more persistent.
> "The opinion exists in political circles that Hughes will resign on March 4, 1925, on the day of the president's official assumption of office. • • • • However, there also exists an opinion not unimportant, that Hughes will go much earlier, as it is said Great Britain desires that Germany and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics be invited to this pending conference (the Second Washington Disarmament Conference) which would hardly be feasible if it should be held under Secretary Hughes' chairmanship.
> "It is pointed out here that the British premier, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, is being ever more persuaded of settling relation with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and that he insists on the United States of America being a party to the solution of the so-called Russian question, promising in return, Britain's support to the carrying out of America's financial plan in Europe."

• • • •

Thus our Russian comrades not only claim that the United States will in time be forced to recognize the Soviet power, in response to the imperative demand of world affairs, to use the words of George Tchitcherin, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, but predict that the delegates of the First Workers' Republic will be invited to the next World Disarmament Conference.

It is also declared that the tory Baldwin government in Great Britain dare not revoke the recognition granted by the recently deposed MacDonald government. This is information that the subsidized press grudges its readers, when it does not acutally misrepresent it. The imperialist statesmen at Washington, London and Paris know that they are helpless before the rising tide of Bolshevism.

The Japanese may win an oil concession from the Soviet Republic on Saghalin Island in the Northern Pacific. This oil may aid Japan in its rapidly approaching war with the United States. But it will also grease the way for those conditions at home that will make possible the triumphant civil war of Japan's working class fighting to establish their Soviet power.

This same war of the pacific must also find the exploited workers and poor farmers of the United States ready to struggle for Soviet rule in this country.

The fact that 21 capitalist nations have now been compelled to recognize the Union of Soviet Republics marks another milestone on the road to the complete victory of the world social revolution.

FASCISTS FACE SENATE TEST ON ELECTORAL BILL

Say Matteotti Trial Is to Begin Soon

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 21.—Mussolini is expected to meet strong opposition in the session of the senate which opens today.

Mussolini was barely able to scrape thru with a vote of confidence at the last session of the senate.

Altho he will probably be able to line up enough senators to give him a vote of confidence again, Mussolini's margin will be so small that his prestige will suffer.

Mussolini did not speak before the chamber of deputies, as he was saving his fireworks for the senate. The opposition is counting on well over 100 votes against Mussolini's electoral bill, which passed the chamber of deputies.

The reaction of the opposition to the speeches of Communists in the chamber, shows however, that between the dictatorship of Mussolini and the rule of the workers led by the Communists, the opposition will throw its support to Mussolini.

The fascisti have decided to hold the trial of the Matteotti murderers in Aquila City, instead of in Rome, as demanded by the opposition.

U. S. STEEL TRUST BAITS ANOTHER HOOK FOR CLASS PEACE FISH

NEW YORK, JAN. 21—The U. S. Steel corporation today announced it was offering 100,000 shares of common stock to its employes at $125 a share, under the annual subscription plan.

The stock sold on the open market today around 125⅝.

A year ago the same stock was offered at $100. More than 61,000 employes took subscriptions in last year's offering, so it is claimed. But these were the office and technical staff. How many have sold the stock since, is not revealed.

'BIG SIX' TYPO UNION ACTS ON CHILD SLAVERY

Demands Assembly Pass Amendment

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The efforts of Governor Al. Smith, the Tammanyite politician and alleged friend of labor, to stab the movement against child slavery in the back received a rebuke Sunday at the hands of Typographical Union No. 6, when that organization went on record unanimously for immediate ratification of the proposed Twentieth Amendment to the U. S. constitution, which will give congress the power to enact child labor legislation.

A strong resolution against the enemies of the working class who are opposing ratification of the amendment was presented by H. M. Wicks who in a speech from the floor of the union uncovered every point involved in the controversy, exposing the fraudulent democracy of the constitution that demands a two-thirds vote of three-fourths of the states, vigorously assailing the national association of manufacturers in the recent Massachusetts elections, lambasting the governor and state legislature of New York for proposing to postpone ratification in favor of a state wide referendum, explaining the widespread ramifications of child labor in the Uited States, dealing with its devastating effects upon the earning power of the working class as a whole and relating his recent investigations of conditions of child slaves in their so-called "homes" in New York City and in Jersey City. His presentation was so comprehensive that at its conclusion the resolution was adopted unanimously and without further debate.

The resolution follows:

WHEREAS, a proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States, to be known as the twentieth amendment and that will empower congress to enact legislation against child labor is now before the various state legislatures for ratification, and

WHEREAS, both political parties with representatives in the state legislature of New York had planks in their platforms declaring in favor of the abolition of child labor, and

WHEREAS, the state legislature is now in session and certain sinister influences directly controlled by the National Manufacturers' Association are endeavoring to prevent ratification of the amendment by proposing a state referendum, in spite of the fact that all political parties have declared in favor of such amendment, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we, the members of New York Typographical Union No. 6, in regular meeting assembled, this 18th day of January, 1925, hereby demand of the state legislature immediately to proceed to the ratification of the amendment, thereby carrying out their promises to the voters of the state, instead of yielding to the pleas of the enemies of labor to postpone ratification under the poor pretext of a state referendum, the only purpose of which would be to postpone action and encourage the exploiters of child labor, and be it further

RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this meeting, a copy sent to Governor Smith, the members of the state legislature of Greater New York, to the Typographical Journal, the labor press and the daily press.

For once in its history the staid and conservative membership of Big Six received a lesson in the shams of capitalist democracy, by listening to the expose of the fraudulent nature of capitalist party platforms, who promise the voters anything before election and do the bidding of the enemies of labor after election.

In case the state legislature sends the question to referendum there will be an unparalleled opportunity for Communists in the labor movement to carry their expose of the political alliances of the labor fakers into every important center of the state. The left elements organized around the Workers Party and the T. U. E. L. are preparing to launch a state wide drive thru the labor unions and force the reactionaries, in spite of their affiliations with Tammany, to support the fight for the amendment. The unanimous action of Big Six is the starting point of a fight that should be carried far and wide until the campaign is over.

RUTHENBERG TO BE RELEASED ON BAIL NEXT WEEK

Labor Defense Completing Bail Arrangements

C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party will probably be released from Jackson, Mich., prison on Monday.

The $7,500 bail required by Justice Louis Brandeis of the U. S. supreme court, who issued the order for a writ of supersedeas releasing Comrade Ruthenberg, has been raised.

Yesterday George Maurer, secretary of the Labor Defense Council, was in St. Joseph, Michigan, deposited the remaining $2,500.00 bail required, with the court at St. Joseph, Mich., where Comrade Ruthenberg was sentenced to from 3 to 10 years in prison for assembling with other Communists at the Bridgeman convention.

The bail bond will then be taken to Lansing, Michigan, where the attorney general must sign it. The bail bond must then go to Justice Louis Brandeis at Washington. As soon as the bail bond is signed by Justice Brandeis, it will be taken back to Lansing and deposited with the Michigan supreme court. Justice Brandeis will then formally issue the writ and Comrade Ruthenberg will be released pending a hearing before the U. S. supreme court.

Muscle Shoals Soon Goes to Morgan's Electric Trust

WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 21—The Underwood Muscle Shoals Bill will be permitted to slumber on speaker Gillett's table in the house until the senate decides on its program for the conference of the joint senate and house committee. Senate Republican leaders failed to give the house assurances as to its conferences on the bill, and the house leaders decided they would not "go where they could not breath their legislative desides."

A report issued here by the national catholic welfare council declares, "In all probability some branch or affiliation of the General Electric company will undertake the operation of the property." Coolidge and his backers are winking their eyes at the turning of the $150,000,000 plant over to the Morgan power trust, and are taking their time about it.

However, it is agreed by politicians that the power trust is influential enuf to push a bill thru the house similiar to the senate Underwood bill turning the project over to them.

GET MILLIONS FOR N. Y. CHURCH

ences of opinion and the personal conflicts which arise from prejudice and passion. Meantime the more vital truths of the spirit, on which we are all willing to agree, tend to be forgotten.

"The rulers of the greatest of European nations have proclaimed atheism as the doctrine of the state and are urging it upon their millions of people with a vast propaganda. In our own country materialism grows strong.

"A nation cannot live without nobler ideals than mere material prosperity. Its people must have beliefs. They must have aims beyond mere security or comfort or luxury. Without faith a nation is sure to die.

"It is not enuf that a truth be declared and then left to be taken for granted. Men forget. Truth must be continually redeclared and kept in the mind if it is to be maintained as a living force. Words are feeble instruments to affect the human mind and heart."

Nicholas Murray Butler warbled forth the following and a lot more of the same lofty nature, which most of the audience seemed to believe was true:

"New York, the great burden-bearer of the western world, toiling while others sleep that it may render service to the poor and unfortunate, to those ravaged by fire, by famine or by flood, and to those whose noble aspirations far outrun their unaided capacity to achieve, and which strives year in and year out to mold into honorable and servicable American citizenship the myriads from all lands speaking many tongues and have come to America' shores to the gateway to New York, is now laying the foundations of its lasting fame."

"Realizing that no big capitalist coup can be quite artistic without a labor faker, the bishop had provided for this by introducing Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, who said:

"I bring you tonight a message from the organized workers of this great city to say for them that they are in most hearty accord with this movement to complete the building of the cathedral of St. John the divine, and that they will, individually and collectively, aid in every way possible in the work of completing this magnificent temple of religion.

"Religion and education are the cornerstone of civilization. They are the bulwarks and safeguards of individual and collective liberty and the mortal enemy of injustice and wrong.

"There is nothing that can be built too beautiful for the worship of God; no cost or expense should be too great for such a purpose. That is why I believe this movement is going to be the success it should be and those who lend their aid to bring it about will have the supreme satisfaction of knowing that they had a hand in not only creating this beautiful and wonderful structure, but they can also feel that they have helped to crush out racial hatreds and religious bigotries, substituting a stronger brotherhood and fraternity among men."

"Tex." Knows His Business.

Since nothing is too good for religion, Bishop Manning expressed his high esteem of George L. ("Tex.") Rickard, the ring master of prizefights, for having donated the use of the Garden for the meeting, a stroke of policy which will net "Tex" many dollars and cents in form of silence from priests and bishops when bloody fights and high rum running stunts are to be pulled off by this highly moral and religious fellow-christian.

Rich women pledged $1,000,000 and the business men's associations promised to invest upwards of $3,000,000. All of which, according to the rules of capitalism, must come out of the sweat and blood of the workers.

Views of Our Readers

To the DAILY WORKER:—In the state of LaFollette a few months ago at the T. B. Yates factory, an open shop, began to examine every new coming employe, also every person who was employed in the same shop.

A good number of employes got fired last week because they happened to have one eye, either by nature or by accident, and some of them lost one eye in the same shop and tho they worked in the same shop for over 5, 10 or 15 years.

The reason for this is, the employer and the insurance company are afraid that these workers might lose their other eye by another accident and the companies may be compelled to pay compensation.

Today, as I write this letter, Fairbanks, Morse & Co., another open shop (they are all open shop in Beloit), laid off about 250 men, with the fake promise that after New Years there will be lots of work and they will be called on the job.

All in the home state of LaFollette.

Fraternally yours,
GUST PHILLIPS.

HUGHES' PASSING MEANS RELATIONS WITH SOVIETS

Sen. Borah's Influence Is Seemingly Growing

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—While Col. George Harvey, Sen. Hiram Johnson and Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee are opening another technical dispute with Secretary Hughes and Ambassador Kellogg over the agreement signed in Paris for division of the payments which Germany may make, the consequence of the Paris incident is the strengthening of the hand of Borah in dealing with American foreign policy.

It is not too much to say that the foreign policy of the United States has passed from the autocratic control of Hughes to the dominant direction of the Idaho senator. Russian recognition, is on the way.

The corner was turned when Hughes resigned. That there would be no return to the Hughes attitude was made clear by the storm of criticism which met the last act of Hughes' European program—the signing of the reparations allotment pact in Paris.

Whatever the outcome of this dispute public sentiment is preparing to welcome a wide swing away from Hughes in our foreign policy. Borah, the new leader of public opinion on foreign affairs, will be ready, after March 4, to take up with Coolidge the framing of a program of action.

Whether recognition will be direct, through discussions between the American and Russian diplomats in London, Paris or Berlin, or will come after a special commission shall have studied and reported to Coolidge, is not yet being considered. Borah wants direct recognition, based on the right of any people to have what type of government they may choose. The commission idea is promoted by diplomats in Washington as a rearguard action. Borah would accept it as better than no action, but thinks it a waste of time.

Textile Mills Are Facing Many Strikes Against Wage Cuts

felt because the ruling is made that not only two-thirds of each local must vote for the strike, but that further blocking of strike action is made by requiring that two-thirds of these locals must so vote before strike can be called.

Results in the affiliated locals are being tabulated and "considered" by the textile councils, which furtively passes the rumor around that not enuf votes were cast favoring strike to make up the two-thirds requirement, altho it is admitted a majority voted "strike."

Locals "Barely Fail."

The story is given that the carders, ringspinners, loom fixers, mule skinners and ring twisters failed to get a two-thirds vote, the two "barely failing." The weavers, slashers, and warp twisters' locals are admitted even by the textile council officials, to have carried more than the two-thirds, the weavers voting "strike" four to one, and they are the largest local.

Small strikes are being declared thruout the whole textile district. In East Boston several hundred weavers from the Maverick Mills are out against the wage cut.

Incipient Rebellion.

At Tilton, New Hampshire, 250 employes of the Elm Textile Mills walked out, men and women together, when asked to do extra work, which is always a decrease in wages.

At Pawtucket, Rhode Island, 200 workers of the Pawtucket Hosiery company struck against the wage cut as the workers of the Greenhalgh Cotton Mills, which had been on strike were reported going back, but demanding conferences with the bosses by the United Textile Workers' local officers.

At Woonsocket, Rhode Island, 50 weavers on magazine looms are on strike at the Manville-Jackson company, against the wage-cut by means of speed-up system, increasing the looms per weaver; the fines system, which rob them of from $1 to $10 every week. In place of this treatment these weavers demand an increase in the piece work rats. One thousand looms are idle.

U. T. W. Endorses Strike.

The Rhode Island Textile Council, affiliated with the United Textile Workers, has gone on record in support of the Woonsocket strikers mentioned above. Delegates from every local in the state were present.

At Fall River the Barnard mill workers are reported to have gone back to work, while at Chicopee, Massachusetts, the Dwight company, manufacturers of cotton sheeting and tubing, notified 1,200 employes that a ten per cent cut would take place next Monday.

In eastern Connecticut there has been no organized protest against the wage cut under which thousands are now working for the last two days. No meetings or protests have yet been heard from.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.— The legality of the plan to build a canal from Chicago to the gulf by diverting water from the Great Lakes, was questioned before the McCormick waterways committee today by C. S. Ferris, attorney general of New York.

FIRST SHOP NUCLEUS ORGANIZED IN NEW YORK WILL BRING OUR MESSAGE TO 150 FOOD WORKERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The Workers Party of District 2 has organized its first shop nucleus. The party nucleus was organized in one of New York's gayest and most fashionable restaurants. In this establishment, where a Communist Party nucleus from now on will function, over 150 exploited workers entertain and serve rich pleasure seeking jazz crazed parasites.

Amter and Gitlow Speak

The Communist message together with Communist activity will now penetrate the many workers who toil the early hours of the morning in the pleasure palaces of New York's gay white way while the dollars wrung from the sweat and toil of the workers is being squandered.

The party members took up the work of organizing themselves into a shop nucleus with enthusiasm. After they had elected an organizer, secretary and financial secretary they listened with interest to a short talk that Comrade Israel Amter gave them on the activities of the shop nuclei in the Soviet Union and in Germany.

Comrade Ben Gitlow who is carrying on the work of organizing the party shop nuclei stated that the organization of the shop nucleus is only a start. He said that the work will continue in a systematic manner. He explained how the D. E. C. had adopted plans for a campaign of work that would lead to the reorganization of the whole district on the basis of shop nuclei.

When the meeting was over the workers returned to work greatly pleased with what had been accomplished. They stated that they would make the Communist shop nucleus the center of all activities in the interests of the workers in that restaurant. The organizer said "By our activities in behalf of the workers not only do we expect to make the shop nucleus the center of fighting shop committee including the most militant workers in the shop but also to draw many of these into the Communist Party by making them members of our Communist shop nucleus."

Bankers Dictate Own Traction Terms to City; Dever Quiet

The bankers controlling the stock of Chicago's traction lines will deliver their ultimatum to the city of Chicago this afternoon, when they tell the city council whether or not they will concede the city control of the street car properties when half the debt is paid the bankers by the city.

The bankers insist upon a controlling voice in the operation of the lines until the last cent has been paid by the city, Silas Strawn, attorney for the traction lines, told the city council on Monday. A final answer will be given the city today.

No thot has been expressed in the city council it seems, that the city has the right to confiscate the traction franchises and dictate the terms of the people of Chicago to the bankers. The candidates for aldermen running on the Workers (Communist) Party platform, demand, on the other hand, that all public utilities be immediately taken over by the city and run not for profit, but for the use of the people of Chicago.

Bechtold and Kosten Speak at Lenin Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. Jan. 21—The local Workers Party has just completed plans for an effective Lenin Memorial meeting to be held Sunday, Jan. 25th—2:30 P. M. at the Workmen's Circle Temple, 347 Mt. Vernon Ave. N. W.

The principal speakers for that event are both from the local ranks. Comrade E. A. Kosten, for many years an active participant in the revolutionary and general labor movement will depict the class struggle of present day America, while Comrade Engene Bechtold, general organizer of the local W. P. will speak on Lenin and the Communist International.

Among other features the program consists of revolutionary songs sung by the children's group and the Y. W. L. recently formed. Comrade Jacob Korf will preside over the meeting.

A committee will be on hand to manage the Lenin enrollment for membership in the Workers Party and Young Workers League and to make this the chief center of interest for the day.

Lenin Meeting in Washington.

Call Stop on Miners' Pension.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 21—All local unions of the Illinois Mine Workers received telegrams ordering them to stop collection of the new miners' pension fund assessment following instructions from John L. Lewis to State Secretary-Treasurer Walter Nesbit. Lewis says the fund proposition did no treceive sufficient votes for adoption.

MILK WAGON DRIVERS BOOST BOSSES' UNION

In Fact, They Strike to Make Boss Join

The attempt of the Milk Wagon Drivers' Union to organize a so-called "Regular Fellowship Club," consisting of milk dealers of the city and suburbs, may result in various strikes this year, the North Shore Dairy company said today.

The purpose behind the fellowship club is to cut out competition among milk firms and make a monopoly retail and wholesale price. Soliciting business from stores already buying from one company is prohibited, according to club regulations.

The Drivers' Union kept the North Shore drivers from distributing on tehir routes yesterday until the firm came to terms and paid a $50 initiation fee and two months' dues to the club.

Insist Bosses Must Organize.

The dues of the so-called club, it was said, are 50 cents a month for each retail delivery wagon and $5 a month for each wholesale wagon.

Dairy owners said that spasmodic strikes of drivers might be expected unless the club fails because of inability to get a majority of the dairy concerns on its rolls.

This is the latest idiocy of the Milk Wagon Driver's Union, known as one of the most reactionary bodies of the whole labor movement. At short time ago the officials of the union were elected to hold their jobs for life, and their salary raised, with permission given so that they may go to European resorts, to Florida or California and still draw their pay.

A Hard Question to Answer

Now they are trying to organize their bosses. A member of the union who disagrees with this class collaboration program, says he does not know which is the more foolish, the drivers for trying to organize their bosses, or the bosses who resist being organized.

CALLES' SOLDIERS SHOOT DOWN POOR MEXICAN PEASANTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21.—A pitched battle is reported to have taken place Saturday between 200 armed peasants and a troop of soldiers near the town of Huichapan, state of Hidalgo.

Seven peasants fell, victims of the treachery of Plutarco Calles, president of Mexico, who has opened a campaign of violence and state sanctified slaughter upon the peasants who insist upon the division of lands according to the constitution before it was modified to suit the foreign land owners and the Mexican ranch owners.

These are the same peasants who fought with the same arms against fascist De la Huerta to help this same Calles get the presidency.

Five of the soldiers are also reported dead, the peasants putting up a spirited battle.

REICHSTAG HEAR COMMUNIST CRIE AGAINST KAISE

Expose Luther an Dawes Plan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—One of the mo comical scenes in the history of th German republic occurred when Pre dent Loebe of the reichstag read th chancellor's cabinet list.

As the president paused to empha size each name the Communis shouted an insult. Thus the parlia mentary stenographers could list th cabinet as follows: Foreign ministe Stresemann, "turncoat"; minister o the interior, Schiele, "monarchist" minister of economics, Neuhaus, "re actionary"; minister of food, Coun von Kanitz, "hunger minister"; mi ister of war, Gessler, "traitor"; mi ister of justice, Frenken, "crook" minister of labor, Brauns, "foolish ness"; minister of finance, Von Schlie ben, "down with the monarchis down with men like him!"

The hypocritical statement o Chancellor Luther that his regime i not so awfully reactionary because his first gesture of official action wa a "restoration" of the eight-hour da of a few workers in certain indu tries, is laughed at by the Commu ists, who point out that reaction i always willing to give economic co cessions to block and divert the cla struggle for political power, just a they did in the beginning of the 191 revolution, giving way in industry t the workers but keeping them out o state power.

By this means the revolutionar spirit which first existed was diverte into "practical" channels. That i when the workers of Germany got th eight-hour day written into the co stitution. But after the revolutio spirit, the fighting spirit had subside again, and, the traitorous sociali were left in full power in the govern ment to do the wish of the bou geoisie, then the employers compelle the workers again to work 10, 12 o more hours, and had them shot dow by the government troops if they pro tested. So Luther's eight-hour hoax i seen for what it is, a trap.

Furthermore, no government o Germany can make the workers b lieve that it stands for the worker interests, so long as it approves of th Dawes plan, as Luther has openly an flagrantly stated that he was amon the leading fighters for this slave pla

With 7,000 Communists in priso with trials to come up at Leipsic o Feb. 11, and the Dawes plan crus ing German labor, the Communist paint Luther as a monarchist hyp crite, and in the great demonstratio on Saturday a Communist impersona ing Uncle Sam led a shackled Ge man worker by a chain thru th streets to show what the Dawes pla means. 25,000 were in line, and ba ners crying "Civil war against cap talists!" were flaunted openly unde the noses of the authorities.

Forbes Afraid to Take Stand in Bribery Tria

The defense in the Forbes-Thomp son conspiracy trial will close toda without either Col. Charles R. Forbe former head of the United State veterans' bureau or John W. Thomp son, St. Louis contractor, taking th stand. Forbes is charged with briber and corruption while in office.

This announcement was made by defense counsel just before the noon recess.

Defense attorneys also said they would not call Mrs. Elias H. Mortimer, wife of the government's star witness, whose name was joined with that of Forbes in Mortimer's testimony.

In the list of branches published in the Jan. 16 issue as not having paid in anything on the DAILY WORKER Insurance Campaign there were a number of errors, due to the fact that some branches remitted direct to Chicago, and the list was combined there. The Downtown Russian branch and the Jugo-Slav branch should not have been included in that list, as both of them have made remittances and are working to fulfill their quotas.

LABOR DEFENSE CALLS FOR RED STAR VOLUNTEERS

Open Campaign to Enlist 1,000 Workers

"In every capitalist war there are casualties which are taken care of by the 'Red Cross,' a bourgeois class relief organization. In the class war also there are casualties—men jailed or wounded or murdered, their families in need! We must have relief workers to take care of them. We need a working class relief organization to match and outdo that of our capitalist enemy. We must mobilize the Red Star Volunteers.'"

This was the decision of the third "Chicago Conference for Defense and Relief" held at 722 Blue Island Ave. A campaign to mobilize a thousand "Red Star Volunteers" in Chicago whose duty it will be to attend all working class affairs, meetings, etc., and collect funds for the defense of C. CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS PARTY STATES ELEVEN MEMBERS DISCIPLINED

The statement of the Workers Party on the disciplinary action taken against members who signed a statement injurious to the trade union left wing is as follows:

The Workers Party has found it necessary to discipline a group of its members who gave a signed document to the administration officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, during the elections within that union, which document was used to influence the elections against the left wing and in favor of the reactionary candidates and policies.

At a time when union members are deciding by their votes within their labor union, between right wing candidates and policies on the one hand, and left wing candidate and policies on the other, it is the duty of Communists, members of the Workers Party, to support the left wing whether it be composed of Communists entirely, or whether it be a common movement of Communists and non-party workers. Under no conditions is it permissable for a Communist to give support in any way to the right wing and against a left wing group. To do so is treason to the whole progressive and revolutionary left-wing of the American labor movement.

Some eleven members of the Workers Party, by signing a document at the solicitation of a right wing official while elections were going on, committed such an act. The central executive committee of the party has investigated the matter fully. It finds that while there was some confusion existing in the minds of many of these comrades which caused them to make this mistake without having any intentions to injure the left wing, yet these excuses do not mitigate the harmful consequences of the act itself.

The Workers Party cannot remain the unchallenged champion of all progressive and revolutionary elements within the labor movement unless it sharply rebukes and corrects all such mistakes as this one. The central executive committee therefore called upon the comrades in question to admit their mistake as an assurance that the lesson of the present would prevent a repetition of the same thing in the future.

The following comrades refused to admit that a mistake had been made, and defended their action in signing a document against the left wing: H. Schneid, K. Don, H. Witt, B. Weiss, and M. Sussman.

They were thereupon declared expelled from the Workers Party.

Five others admitted that a grievous mistake had been committed which could not be defended and must be corrected. Their names and the disciplinary action on each brdered by the C. E. C. are as follows:

I. Sonkin and S. Rissman, censure and reinstatement in party; J. Lieberman, suspension for three months; A. Gavlin and M. Berson, suspension for six months.

Comrade C. Rubenstein has not yet appeared before the committee.

The central executive committee makes this statement to the party in the hopes that the damage done to the left wing movement generally may be offset to some extent by the lessons the party membership may learn from this incident. In the choosing of policies and leadership within the labor movement, members of the Workers Party may never, under penalty of parting company with our organisation make common cause with the right wing elements against the policies and candidates of the left wing supported by the Workers Party, whether these have any direct connection with the party or otherwise. The Workers (Communist) Party is always the party of the left wing, of the progressive and revolutionary workers.

Central executive committee, Workers Party of America.

William Z. Foster, chairman,
Earl R. Browder, acting sec'y.

Campaign Against Wage Cuts. Adopted a comprehensive policy and program of propaganda and organization to combat wage cuts.

Conference for Progressive Political Action. Decided "to carry on an intensive campaign of criticism and attack against the forthcoming national convention of the C. P. P. A. on the ground that it represents another attempt to betray the workers; to call upon the workers to support the Workers Party united front campaigns; that we oppose sending of delegates to the C. P. P. A. by any labor organization."

Michigan Defense. Intensive mobilization of the party to support the Labor Defense Council campaign toward the release of Ruthenberg and raising funds for the forthcoming Michigan cases.

Acting Executive Secretary. Comrade Browder was elected acting secretary during the absence of Comrade Ruthenberg.

Workmen's Circle Honors Lenin.

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 21.—David Coutts and Tom Matthews, representing the Workers Party, presented a large-sized, framed picture of Lenin to Workmen's Circle Branch No. 626 last Sunday evening.

The occasion was the fifth anniversary of this live-wire branch. When the picture was presented the branch members and their friends arose and sang the International in expression of their solidarity with Leninism.

Correction.

The vote of the New York membership meeting of the Y. W. L. was as follows: N. E. C. majority 74, statement of the district executive committee 83, (the statement of Comrade Kaplan was not presented and the vote of 83 was in support of a statement drawn up by a group of the New Yorw district committee.) Third position under the leadership of Comrade Glass 11. The latter votes were in favor of the N. E. C. statement dealing with organization.

A LETTER FROM JACOB DOLLA

To the DAILY WORKER:—I am on the job trying to help circulate the DAILY WORKER. It seems hardest among the English speaking workers. They are living in a state of chronic fright under the iron heel of Gary's blood-thirsty steel corporation. The foreign-speaking workers have more spirit.

Several Hungarian families here are getting the Hungarian Communist paper, Uj Elore, and Slavic families are getting the Slavic Communist paper. Several German families take the Volkszeitung.

I am going forward preaching the gospel of our cause without fear. They may frame me up and send me to prison, but they cannot kill my spirit nor my principles. We had another hearing again yesterday. It has already cost me over $50. We have hopes of licking the steel corporation again when the case comes to court in March. The case will come before the Reading court, Berks county, where the steel corporation does not have justice by the throat as it does here in Lebanon. The workers are better organized in Reading.

I herewith enclose a check for five dollars to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. The DAILY WORKER is OUR paper. It fights our battles and gives us the truth about the working class.—Fraternally. Jacob Dolla.

NEW YORK WORLD FIGHTS AGAINST CHILD LABOR LAW

NEW YORK— Owen R. Lovejoy, secretary national child labor committee takes issue with the New York World's prophecy that the child labor amendment is doomed to defeat. The World's forecast was made in a page-length feature article, based on statements of governors and the newspaper's own correspondents.

Lovejoy shows that the enemies of the amendment have swamped the country with misrepresentation and caustically adds that the child-slavers have had no lack of funds for this purpose.

Emphasizing the need for federal protection of the child worker he cites the fact that 1,000,00 children under 16 are gainfully employed, with 400,000 of them subject to industrial disease and accident, long hours, night work and deprivation of adequate schooling.

None of the backward states have laws to protect their little toilers, since the national child labor laws were suspended, he says, refuting the claim of the World and other "states' rights" opponents of the amendment that the several commonwealths would work out their own children's salvation.

DETROIT WOMEN VERY ACTIVE IN LABOR DEFENSE

Whole City Rallies to Communist Aid

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 21.—Lenin Branch No. 553, Workmen's Circle of Detroit, celebrated its tenth anniversary Sunday, Jan. 18, by giving a sumptuous banquet in the auditorium of the House of the Masses.

Representatives for many Jewish organizations were present to congratulate Lenin branch for the spirit which has always been manifest in this branch. Edgar Owens, district organizer of the Workers Party, was called on and he told of the efforts of the Labor Defense Council on behalf of Comrade Ruthenberg and the others indicted with him and called on the banqueters to rally to the support of the men and women who were facing prison for their participation in the struggle in this country for the principles that have come to be known as Leninism. The response was $34.50

Working Women Aid Defense.

The Women's Educational Circle of Detroit is always on the job in support of working class activities. They established an enviable record for themselves for famine relief. They throw themselves whole-heartedly into all the affairs given by the Workers Party. They are a constant source of support to the Freiheit.

On the heels of Comrade Ruthenberg's imprisonment in Jackson these women pledged themselves to send $25.00 to the Labor Defense Council.

They are now busily engaged making preparations for the Defense Bazaar which will be held in the House of the Masses Sunday, March 8, under the auspices of the Detroit Federation of Working Women's Organizations which they are affiliated with.

Russian Women to the Fore.

The working women's organizations of Detroit are rallying to the Labor Defense Council. The latest is the Russian Women's Progressive Association which adopted a motion at its last regular meeting to send $10.00 for the defense of the victims of the class war, and pledged themselves to render yoeman service at the Defense Bazaar on March 8.

Total of $3,580 Places District Eight First In Point of Returns

District 8 has contributed a generous one-fifth of the total amount of policies so far purchased for the safe keeping of the DAILY WORKER. The district has 2,917 members and therefore it also, together with Districts 6 and 7, averages better than one dollar per member in remittances.

The district membership must, however, keep the quota assigned in mind. The minimum quota for District 8 is $8,751. To reach this quota the members still have a short distance to travel. We hope they will cover it on the run.

CLEVELAND ARMY OF JOBLESS IS 30,000 IN MONTH

Community Spirit Can't Fill Stomachs, They Say

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 21—At the same time that newspapers here are devoting many columns of space to advertisement of the "community chest," thousands of unemployed workers are marching on the streets looking for work. A few days ago 2,000 unemployed workers stormed the city employment bureau in the city hall and demanded jobs.

The community chest advertisements say, "Mingling in and out among the vast throng of humanity we see the spirit of community fund. The spirit needs lots of help. We'll give until the chest is overflowing."

But the hungry workers declare that community spirit does not help them when their stomachs are crying out for food and no work is to be found. They demand the right to work or else full maintenance by the government and the industry employing them.

The jobless here point to the fact that in Kokomo, Indiana there are two thousand people out of work that 33,000 people made application for work in Cleveland in the month of November alone. Over 80,000 miners are out of work in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, 150,000 are out of work in New York, and 2,500,000 at the very least are out of work in the entire country.

Big Business Controls Indiana State Legislature

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 21.—Steam and interurban railroad interests were backing the bus regulatory bill introduced into the Indiana state senate by Senator Moorhead of Indianapolis. The bill provides for consideration of existence of other forms of transportation in granting licenses to motor bus operators. The bus men are endeavoring to pass a bill providing for consideration of automobile transportation separately.

The co-operative marketing bill is expected to pass both houses, as it is so harmless the milling and banking interests are not opposing it. The bankers declare it will not detract from their profits and will stabilize the supply of grain.

LIGHT ON ELECTRIC TRUST SHOWS MORGAN BANKS REAP ENORMOUS PROFITS YEARLY

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The vast control over the nation's electric power exercised by one Morgan power trust has been placed in the spotlight by the financial trick with which the General Electric Co. is trying to slide out from under Senator Norris' indictment.

Thru a fake surrender of the ownership of the Electric Bond & Share Co. these Morgan interests have simply awakened the public to the fact that one corporation has been within its sphere of influence over 1,000 communities with a population of more than 7,300,000.

From a nominal investment of $26,000,000 the General Electric built up its system of more than 100 electric power, street railway and gas combines with a total capital of about $650,000,000. Thru constant reinvestment of profits, over all above 8 per cend dividends it raised the value of each $100 share of common stock to about $720. This increase has been at the expense of the communities served and represents the difference between what they actually paid and what they would have paid if their public utilities had been publicly owned enterprises.

The extent of control and the full magnitude of the profits of Electric Bond and Share are considered somewhat of a mystery even in the financial world. Last year's known profits were at a rate of $3.76 a share. At that rate the par value of the common stock would be replaced out of profits about once every 3 years.

The major public utility combines known to be subject to this Morgan company are:

American & Foreign Power Co. which controls companies providing electric light, power, telephone service, etc. to 39 communities in Cuba, Panama and Guatemala serving over 600,000 people.

American Gas & Electric which controls public service corporations in 6 states supplying electric light and power to 137 communities with a population well over 1,770,000. Among the communities are Canton and Newark, O., Scranton and Pittston, Pa., Wheeling, W. Va., Rockford, Ill., and Atlantic City, N.J.

American Power & Light Co. which includes Kansas Gas & Electric, Pacific Power & Light, Portland Gas & Coke, Nebraska Power, Minnesota Power & Light, Florida Power & Light, Southwestern Power & Light companies. It collects its profits from 396 communities with a population of over 2,000,000.

Dallas Power and Light Co. and Dallas Railway Co. which control the entire supply of electric light power and street railway service in this city with a 200,000 population.

Carolina Power & Light Co. which supplies light and power to more than a score of manufacturing and mill towns in the devloping centers of industrial exploitation in the south.

Lehigh Power Securities Corp., a holding company controlling companies supplying electric power and light in the anthracite counties of Pennsylvania. It reaches out to collect profits from 203 communities with a population of at least 500,000.

National Power & Light Co. which dominates the power and light situation in Knoxville and Memphis, Tenn., in Little Rock, Ark., in Houston, Tex., and in the entire steel district radiating from Birmingham, Ala.

Utah Securities Corp., a holding company controlling Utah Power & Light which reaches 168 communities in Utah, Idaho and Colorado. New Orleans Public Service monopolizing the public service of that city. And Power Securities Corp., about which facts are not available.

The ownership of all these properties is being handed over by General Electric to its stockholders thru a special corporation created for the purpose. They will get as a New Year's gift a share of this corporation for each share of General Electric which they own.

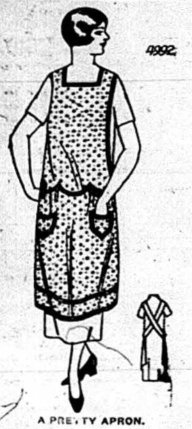
OUR DAILY PATTERNS



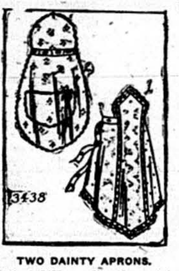
A PRETTY APRON.

4932. Dotted percale with bands of sateen in a color to match the dots, is a very good suggestion for the development of this style. Cretonne or chintz, unbleached muslin and dotted Swiss could also be used.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, medium, large and extra large. A medium size requires 3⅝ yards of 36-inch material.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

Send 12c in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE SPRING & SUMMER 1925 BOOK OF FASHIONS.



TWO DAINTY APRONS.

Pattern 3438 supplies these styles. It is cut in one size: medium. No. 1 will reqquire ⅞ yard of 36-inch material, and No. 2 will require 1¼ yard.

Lawn, dotted Swiss, dimity, crepe and embroidered materials are attractive for these styles.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

Send 12c in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE SPRING & SUMMER 1925 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

Address: The DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

PERHAPS THE "RED LIAR" IS A PRESS AGENT

"Red Revel" Publicity Makes Its Debut

Peculiar how typographical errors sometimes have more truth than poetry in them! What should have read "red star," read "red liar" in an issue of the DAILY WORKER last week. It caused a good deal of comment. It said, "watch out for the red liar" and the "red liar is coming."

When the Red Revel publicity begins to break in real earnest, some of our readers who never attended this annual event in the past will begin to doubt the veracity of the Red Revel press agent. His stuff will sound too good. Perhaps they will say: "Ah! This is the red liar the DAILY WORKER warned us to be on the look-out for."

Now, sometimes a good fiction writer is ten times more interesting than a saint. In fact, it is very doubtful if we advertised the presence of a small army of angels at the Red Revel, that we could get enough attendance to fill a taxicab.

Brains Are Busy.

The brains of an arrangements committee, that has as much experience getting up entertainments as a lawyer has in evading the law, is busy hatching plans to make the coming Red Revel the biggest and the best ever held in Chicago. Every language federation of the Workers Party will do its darnest to carry off the honors. There will be friendly competition and rivalry.

It will be a masked ball. This promises a delightful series of surprises to the adventurous. You can never tell what kind of a face may be behind an innocent mask.

The Red Revel will be held on February 28, at the West End Women's Club, 37 South Ashland Ave., corner of Monroe St. The proceeds will be devoted to supplying local Chicago with the necessary funds to enable it to carry on a vigorous organizing and educational campaign during the coming year.

Tea Drinking Women Say War is Only National Problem

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 21.—Speakers at the "conference on the cause and cure of wars" praised the league of nations, which makes its chief task the oppression of small nations, and held up Theodore Roosevelt, exponent of militarism, as a god, at their session here. Mrs Carrie Chapman Catt pleaded for a "calm, sane and sensible investigation of the whole thing," and quoted Roosevelt.

Speakers at the conference have advocated every thing from the largest army and navy in the world to no army and navy at all. The speakers have included rabbis, generals, priests, politicians, and plain ordinary liberals.

The conference has done nothing constructive since its opening. Mrs. Catt reminded the audience that the question is "national, not fanatical." The speakers evidently considered it too radical to discuss war as an international problem. The economic causes of war were not taken up by the conference.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Every day under this head you will learn not only what BUILDERS thruout the country are doing to build a greater newspaper, but also practical suggestions to accomplish more for OUR paper. Tell us what YOU are doing—and we will "tell the world."

He Simply Won't Quit!

COMRADE HARVITT of Toledo is a peculiar fellow—no question about it. He got a new job and yet unofficially he justs insists on working on his old one.

For a year he has proved one of the outstanding live wires in every one of the DAILY WORKER campaigns and everyday between them as well. And now the local comrades have taken him off his job. But read what he writes:

"I will probably feel lonesome without my job for a while, as I have always at all times had the DAILY WORKER on my mind. However I will have another party job, as I was elected financial secretary to take office in January.

"I will still do what I can to 'Build the DAILY WORKER.' I expect to have my 'Tool Box' always handy, so that I can help to build our paper, which we must keep going at all costs and sacrifices. Without the DAILY WORKER I and thousands of other comrades and workers would be very unhappy because we would not have the means of knowing how the class struggle was going from day to day and that Soviet Russia is still safe from the attacks of the greedy imperialim that still holds the workers in bondage in all the rest of the world."

This is the way a comrade speaks when he has fully realized the importance of the DAILY WORKER to the working class when he has become a BUILDER.

SOCIAL EQUALITY FOR THE NEGRO

By JOHN H. OWENS.

Whenever the Negro asks for certain rights and privileges that are being denied him, the white bourgeoisie attempt to throw a smoke screen around the issue by screaming "social equality" Deprecatingly, the Negro "leaders" insist that Negroes themselves do not desire social equality. "In all things that are purely social we can be as separate as the fingers," said the late Booker T. Washington, "yet one as the hand in all things essential to mutual progress." But can we?

The development and contradictions of capitalistic society precluded the possibility of any submerged and exploited group or class enjoying social equality or, for that matter, any equality within the social order. Unequality of opportunity is the keystone of any capitalistic state. The blacks are the most intensely exploited group in America; hence it is not difficult to understand that they must remain content with a minimum of social rights and privileges just so long as the present system is dominant

Optimistic Negroes have held forth the opinion that social privileges would axiomatically follow the acquisition of education and property. The Negro has acquired both; but this has only intensified the struggle—social equality has been pushed further into the future In the south, in things social—and in everything—the blacks and whites are as separate as the fingers. Even a bourgeoisie interracial commission could hardly declare conditions in Dixie ideal—for the Negro at least.

However, in Dixie, white men and colored women do enjoy a peculiar kind of social equality Many thousands of mulattoes have come out of the south within the past decade. It is patent that they must have resulted from closer social contact than the mere passage of a white man and a colored woman on the same side of the street.

In its final analysis, social equality is merely equality of opportunity within the social order. This, under capitalism, the Negro can never realize. It is also denied the white wage worker, perhaps in a less obvious degree.

Black and white, you have a common problem! Link up hands against a common enemy, the capitalistic system of production, that dooms you forever to a life of social ostracism.

Help the rising giant of international Communism bury forever in a sea of oblivion, race prejudice, caste prejudice, social and religious prejudice.

TENANTS WORK 66 PER CENT OF U. S. FARM LAND

Lack Any Legal Aid or Proper Schools

NEW YORK.—The 66.8 per cent of the improved agricultural acreage of the country is being farmed by tenants and this percentage is constantly increasing, no laws are being passed in the interest of the tenant farmer, the federal council of churches finds after a survey of rural problems by its rural committee.

The survey shows that America neglects her tenant farmers far more than England where the renter is beginning to get payment for soil and property improvements after his lease expires. In this country the tenant forfeits his improvements when his tenure ends. Most American farm leases run for 12 month periods, so the tenant has no incentive to improve the land and thus soil robbing goes on at an alarming rate.

Lack of educational facilities is an outstanding ill of rural life. About 6,500,000 children are in the rural schools, with 250,000 teachers. Less per capita is spent on the rural children and country teachers are paid less than city teachers.

McCormicks Squabble Over Rockefeller's Standard Oil Money

The Equitable trust company, which holds the Rockefeller foundation, the Standard Oil company of Indiana, and each of the trust committee members have been made defendants in a suit filed by Harold McCormick to recover 123,824 shares of Standard Oil stock, from Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, his former wife.

Three injunctions filed by McCormick's lawyers would prohibit Mrs. McCormick from ever participating again in the administration of the trust fund which John D. Rockefeller established for his grandchildren in 1917. McCormick wishes the trust fund to benefit Matilde Oser, granddaughter of Rockefeller and wife of a Swiss riding master.

When the fund was established it consisted of 12,000 shares, but these have been increased to 123,824 thru the stock dividends paid by the company.

Fix Pound Sterling Rate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—As the British pound is now close to approximating its pre-war value, the postoffice department today established the rate of $4.87 to the pound sterling, which has formed the basis for money order transactions between the United States and Great Britain for fifty years.

Fears Foreign Languages.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 21.—A prohibition against the teaching of foreign languages in the public schools of the state, below the university classes, will be proposed in a bill to be offered by an assemblyman Matt Koenigs, Fond du Lac.

Japan Recognizes Soviet

One more world capitalist power has thrown in the sponge after refusing for seven years to recognise the Soviet government. The latest nation to sign a treaty of peace and recognition with the workers and peasants' government of Russia is Japan, the most formidable military and naval power in the Orient. The United States, alone of all the great capitalist powers now stands outside the circle of those who have decided that they can no longer ignore a government that governs one-sixth of the earth's surface and whose stability is not now even a subject for discussion.

News of the signing of the treaty appeared in the American press on the first anniversary of the death of Lenin. It is a happy coincidence that the day on which the working masses thruout the world honor the memory of history's greatest revolutionist, should bring new evidence of the permanency and power of the proletarian government which Lenin's genius guided thru its critical days. The power that humbled the czar's government in the dust when it forced the Portsmouth treaty on a defeated bourgeoisie, today bows before the mighty power of the workers and peasants who in the year 1905 were crushed under the iron heel of the czar's tyranny. The Red Army of 1925 is not the czar's army of 1905.

One by one the bourgeois powers that would fain join hands to crush the living embodiment of proletarian rule, are compelled to face facts. They know that by recognizing Soviet Russia, they are increasing the prestige of the workers' republic and giving the Soviet government involuntary aid in reconstructing its economy along Communist lines. But if they do not recognize Russia an equally undesirable fate will befall them. Like the proverbial sinner, they'll be damned if they do and they'll be damned if they don't.

Japan knows that she will have to fight the United States one of those days. She needs oil. The treaty gives her valuable oil concessions on Saghalien island. This will not look any too good to the United States, but Secretary of State Hughes holds that Soviet Russia is a myth and simply does not exist. Japan does not think so and gets the oil. The treaty will not pour oil on the troubled political waters in which Hughes is sailing, tho he is now headed for the dark ocean of political oblivion.

There are many reasons why the United States is liable to follow in the footsteps of Japan and recognize Russia. Not the least are the diplomatic reasons which are closely related to gunpowder. It would not be surprising to hear pithy comment on the Japanese-Russian pact on the floor of the senate in the near future.

Lenin is dead, but the Soviet power grows, and the red banner of international Communism which now flies over Soviet embassies, set like oases in the deserts of capitalism, will soon wave over the capitols of the world, when capitalism has been given its death blow by the revolutionary workers under the leadership of the organization that Lenin founded, the Communist International.

Graft and Capitalism

The latest prominent figure in capitalist politics to burst into the headlines with a graft scandal added to his list of accomplishments is U. S. Senator Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey. The senator is known as a "wet," but there is considerable difference between a man who is partial to an "eyeopener" or a "nightcap" (as alcoholic libations are tenderly termed by worshippers at the shrine of Bacchus), and one who is prepared to compromise himself in an effort to bring relief to other thirsty souls.

Senator Edwards may or may not have accepted money from two stoolpigeons of the prohibition enforcement department of the treasury, as the testimony showed. He may not have directed the operations of ten policemen and a police commissioner in unloading booze off a ship. But considering the number of prominent capitalist politicians being haled into court nowadays on charge of graft, the senator starts out to clear himself under a tremendous handicap.

The fact is, that under capitalism "getting the dough" is the main object in life. "Getting away with it" brings honor, but getting caught sometimes brings jail, provided the grafter makes a poor haul. The whole social fabric under capitalism is rotten. Honesty is as much out of place in this dog-eat-dog society as flannel underwear in the torrid zone.

If the senator accepted graft, what of it? Did he not fall in a worthy cause?

A scandal in capitalist political circles is no longer news. Only recently a former governor of Indiana went to jail. He was a fool. He robbed the bankers. The governor of Illinois was never so popular in his life. He got away with a million dollars. The governor of Kansas is charged with peddling pardons. He was kicked out of office. He was also weak in the head. Fancy dealing in thousands when others were getting away with millions. A. B. Fall of Mexico appears to be in good health. If he feels hungry he can take his knife and cut a steak off one of the fat cattle delivered to him by Harry Sinclair in return for the Teapot Dome.

Senator Edwards has no reason to worry unless he proves to be a piker. This is the era of big capitalism when things are done on a large scale.

The Jobless Miners

Tales of prosperity sent out by the rotund Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, make pleasant reading for the smug and comfortable elements who feel that they are living in the best of all possible worlds. But while the workers in some industries are kept busy creating surplus values for the master class, there are other industries shut down by the bosses because they cannot see their way clear to operate them when the prospects for profits are not sufficiently alluring.

The miners in southern Illinois report extremely bad conditions in some mining sections. Several mines have been shut down for over one year and the coal diggers are reduced to desperate straits, there being no other industry except coal mining in those parts of the state.

Last Sunday a conference of miners was held in Belleville to consider unemployment. There were delegates present from eighteen locals. Delegates from one local reported that their officers tried to enforce the clause in the district contract providing for the sharing of work between the miners unemployed and those working. The bosses attempted to take advantage of this situation to interpret the clause to their advantage. The miners refused to sign a "yellow dog" contract submitted by the bosses and Farrington as usual took the side of the coal operators when the local appealed to him for aid.

The Belleville conference decided to organize the unemployed in the entire sub-district, and to link its efforts with those of other conferences organized thruout the country. While the reactionary officials of District 12 of the U. M. W. of A. are cashing in on their support to Small during the election, the rank and file are taking action to solve their problems in an organized manner. Besides aiding their unemployed comrades, the organizers of these conferences will gain experience which will prove invaluable in the work of wresting control of the union from the fakers who now use it as an auxiliary to the crook Small and the republican party machine.

Abramovich, Here's Your Hat!

Raphael Abramovich, Russian czarist socialist and counter-revolutionist, arrived in the United States recently, probably to fill the vacancy created in the forces fighting Soviet recognition, by the death of Samuel Gompers. Abramovich is only one of a liberal supply of Russian parasites who have recently been competing with bootleg liquor in getting on the inside of the statute of liberty.

This fellow Abramovich is one of the criminals responsible for the recent uprising in the Soviet Republic of Georgia. It took the Red Army only a few hours to crush it because it was the work of a collection of bandits paid by the French and British governments thru this dog Abramovich and others from the yellow socialist kennel. Abramovich and his co-conspirators against the workers' and peasants' government wanted to turn over the vast oil resources of Georgia to the French and British imperialists.

His coming to the United States coincides with a renewal of the agitation for the recognition of Soviet Russia. No doubt the capitalist and yellow socialist press will publish his vomit in generous portions. He is welcome to the space.

It does not appear, however, that the workers are so very pleased with Abramovich's presence, if we are to judge from the reception given to him at a meeting called by the socialist party in his honor in the Star Casino, New York. No sooner had a bureaucrat of the Workmen's Circle indicated that he was going to introduce Abramovich than the audience cheered for Soviet Russia. By the time Abramovich got thru, he wished he was back in his favorite haunts in Paris. Four hundred police. and a goodly number of sluggers failed to preserve "order" and Abramovich left by a side door. Where can a poor white guard yellow socialist go nowadays without running into a lot of Bolsheviks? We suggest that he try hell.

Perhaps Abramovich will pay us a visit here in Chicago!

Our New York Edition

Only a little more than a year since The DAILY WORKER was launched and we are getting out a special New York edition! The first number will be on the streets of the metropolis on Saturday, January 24. From then until a DAILY WORKER is printed in New York City, the special edition, containing news about the labor movement in the world's biggest city will appear on the newsstands of New York on the day on which it is dated.

Comrade J. O. Bentall and a corps of assistants will have charge of the editorial work, while Comrade L. E. Katterfeld has charge of the circulation end. A general membership meeting of Local New York will be held next Friday evening. Every member of the party in New York City should attend this meeting and co-operate in making the special edition a tremendous success, and preparing for the day when a Communist daily in the English language will come humming off the presses in New York.

For a Free Press in the I. W. W.

THE method of settling internal organizational affairs by a free discussion of the membership seems to be contagious, or a least provocative. There is now a movement on foot to open a discussion on the internal affairs of the I. W. W., but limiting it to one paper off in the corner, the Industrial Worker of Seattle. The Red International Affiliation Committee of the I. W. W. has issued the following statement concerning this phenomenon:

In the Industrial Worker of Jan. 10, the committee which has control over the paper submits to the record vote of the northwest branches the question of rescinding the rule against "printing controversial matter in the Industrial Worker." The "warning" is apparently unofficially added that "abuse, personalities or insinuations will not be printed."

The Red International Affiliation Committee will greet with joy any real opening of the I. W. W. papers of general circulation to discussion of the affairs of the organization, and if the Industrial Worker is thus opened the adherents of the Red International will take a major part in the discussion and endeavor to bring before the workers who read that paper the cause of the admitted disintegration of the I. W. W. and the revolutionary program of action which will make the I. W. W. an organization bigger and better than it ever was before.

The First to Demand Discussion.

From its very first statement to the I. W. W. membership, the Red International Affiliation Committee has strongly advocated open discussion. And in the headquarters controversy, on Oct. 11, two days before the sixteenth general convention met, we said:

"The fact admitted by both sides that 90 per cent of the membership is uninformed is a symptom of disease. However plausible the argument which led to the 1921 convention barring controversies from the papers of general circulation, it is a remedy worse than the disease. Every member needs and expects to find all vital news and discussion in the paper he subscribes to with that understanding. Stop treating the membership or even the unorganized as children unable to read and discuss every policy, principle and tactic. The press must be free and open. Personal censorship as now practiced must be ended."

Then, on Oct. 24, after the convention was in session ten days, the R. I. A. C. issue a statement of principles for the convention in which the following was set forth as point Number Six:

"That the I. W. W. press of general circulation shall be open to any and all members upon matters of policy. That no person or officer shall have power to deny publication, and that when a responsible committee, which should be given the decision on all questionable cases, refuses publication, it shall furnish the contributor a statement of the reasons of refusal and publish such statement in the same publication to which the article was sent."

Where Was the Industrial Worker Committee?

At that time, when the R. I. A. C. was thus advocating a free press within the I. W. W. and a discussion of the headquarters and all other controversies, both the Rowan and the Doyle groups were opposed to any such free press and both the Industrial Solidarity and the Industrial Worker had an iron-bound gag against free expression of anything.

Often some chesty official would start an attack on Soviet Russia, the R. I. L. U. or the Communists, and that was all right to go into the papers, but if members of the I. W. W. wrote replies to these ignoramuses, the replies were "controversial," or "personal" or "would add nothing to the discussion," etc., and either were declined outright or left until they were six months old and then buried in the graveyard called the "General Office Bulletin." Where was the Industrial Worker committee then?

Let it clearly be understood, then, that the R. I. A. C. has been the first to advocate the opening of the I. W. W. press to the I. W. W. membership to discuss anything they please. It was the first and only one, both before and after the controversy arose over headquarters, to demand and propagate free expression and an ungagged press.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen—One G. E. B.

This being the case, and as the general executive board seems to be too pralayzed with anarcho-syndicalism and incompetence either to know what is behind this sudden passion for free speech of the Rowanite group controlling the Industrial Worker, or too lacking in frankness or too busy playing the races to explain what it means to the membership and force a real open discussion instead of a fake open discussion, therefore, the Red International Affiliation Committee must again point the way to a real open discussion and expose the game of the hypocrite gang of friends of the Rowan-Bowerman and Grady injunctionites.

This gang is trying to put over a fake "discussion" in which they will solemnly argue with themselves and shut out the opposition, particularly the only revolutionary opposition which will advance a logical and practical program of organization affairs—the adherents of the Red International. Then they will "decide' that Jim Rowan is an angel of Irish edscen who was badly abused by Pop Edwards and should be given the general secretaryship by the unanimous consent of himself and company.

Why Not an Injunction for Free Speech?

Rowan's little game is as follows: He thinks the referendum is going to see him counted out as expelled. Not because he may not have the votes. There is a chance that a majority of the votes which come into the headquarters may be votes not to expel Rowan. But because these members have been so fond of Rowan that they have paid dues to him and not to the proper officials, such as Broman, their little ballots may all be haywire and be disqualified.

So the alternative way Rowan can keep up the fight is by opening the controversy again and, by making it a fake "free discussion," control it so that it goes in his favor and regain his lost prestige.

The evidences of this tricky scheming is quite apparent. The censors who have bitterly opposed allowing such a vital subject as international affiliation to be discussed, are all of a sudden becoming raging wild for a "free press." Beware of the Industrial Worker committee when it comes bearing giftsof "free speech" to the membership. There is an ulterior motive in it, but the Red Internationalists and the Communists in the I. W. W. know how to force this trick into the open and demand a real free press and a fair fight on policies.

Is the "Worker" an I. W. W. Paper?

The R. I. A. C. calls attention to the fact that both the Industrial Worker committee and the editor of that paper in his one-lung editorials completely ignored the general organization and the general organization's press. The I. W. W. as a whole may as well be on another planet for all that is said about them in relation to this grave situation and important matter. The R. I. A. C. challenges the inference that the Industrial Worker is not subordinate to the general organization of the I. W. W.

The R. I. A. C. and every adherent of the Red International, demands and must make their demands known by resolution in the branches and letters to the G. E. B., the following program for a genuine discussion and a prevention of fake discussions:

Proposed Rules for Fair Discussion.

1. A discussion on affairs which concern the I. W. W. must be opened at once.

2. Since it concerns the whole I. W. W. it shall be under the direct control of the G. E. B. and shall be printed in the official English organ of the I W. W.—Industrial Solidarity.

3. No member who was in good standing on July 1, 1924, shall be debarred from contributing to the discussion by any action limiting or cancelling his membership since that time. This is to give the entire Roman-Bowerman-G. E. B. group and every honest rank and file member who has supported them, full and free right to meet the arguments of the so-called "Doyle-Fisher-No. 110 group" in fair and square debate on the issues of the controversy.

4. No manuscript of the discussion shall be refused publication except by a majority vote against it in the G. E. B., each vote recorded and published together with a statement as to the reason for refusal in the Industrial Solidarity.

Such statement to be also sent by registered letter together with the refused manuscript to the contributor.

5. The subjects and the duration of the discussion shall be as follows: During February, March and April, the controversy over the headquarters; during May, June and July, the proletarian revolution and the method of realizing it, and during August, September and October, the question of international affiliation.

6. No vote shall be taken on any question until after the next convention, which shall be held in November 1925, and during the interim the actions of the 16th general convention shall be binding upon all parts of the I. W. W.

7. The referendum sent out by the 16th convention shall be recognized as valid and the officers elected by it installed and recognized as the general officers of the I. W. W.

Unity—All the Time.

8. The injunction against the headquarters shall be withdrawn by the signers to the petition for it, and Rowan and his group must withdraw by notice in Solidarity the so-called "Emergency Program." Every movement to split the I. W. W. either from the left or from the right must be stopped. Unity must prevail, both during and after discussion.

9. Representation to the next convention to be from the branches, particularly from job branches, and not from the industrial union conventions, one delegate for every 200 members to come from the branches at the expense of the general organization, which shall authorize and collect a special 50 cent compulsory assessment

10. Articles in I. W. W. papers other than the Industrial Solidarity shall be similarly under the control of the G. E. B. with the same rules. And no article concerning this discussion shall be printed in either the Industrial Solidarity or any other paper until it has been passed by the G E. B.

No Fake Discussion!

The above rules show how a real discussion of organization tasks must be conducted. Anything short of it will not be a fair deal but a fake. By the above rules the I. W. W. will save its unity and clarify its purpose by reaching some intelligent decision.

By the methods proposed and the limitations imposed by the Industrial Worker, no real discussion can be had; the split in the I. W. W. will take on new life, the organization will become more confused and no intelligent decision can be obtained. However, if any discussion is opened, however limited and censored it may be the adherents of the Red International of Labor Unions will endeavor to fight the split, unify the workers and point the road to revolution.

In the Villages When Lenin Died

By ISRAEL AMTER.

THE whole country knew that Lenin was mortally ill. It knew that he was away from his desk, from contact with the active workers of the Soviet government and of the Russian Communist Party. It knew that his hand no longer guided the Communist International. But there was hope—he might recover and return to the work from which he had ben so rudely torn away.

But the fell blow came—and Lenin was stricken low. The friend and comrade of the peasants, the man whom they loved tho they had never seen him—the man who exemplified everything that the revolution had brot forth and meant—was gone. Children knew his name. They knew his picture. The stories of their fathers and brothers told them of the greatness of the man. In their imaginative minds, still filled with the ideas of the giants and supernatural heroes of the fairy tales, many of them regarded him as some being not of this earth.

But the peasants knew him—altho he was only a name. They knew what he had done for the poor peasants. How he had given them the land and furnish them the full support of the Soviet government, that at last they, the poorest of the poor peasants, might begin to live. They knew life under the czars, under the savage nobility and landowners. They knew the cossacks and the denial of the most ordinary demands. The great imperialist war, which had taken ten million of their sturdiest sons, had devastated their land and robbed them of their little patches of ground—this great imperialist war opened their eyes to the teachings of the Bolsheviki. For a short time misguided by the social revolutionaries they awoke and followed the leadership of the fighting proletariat of the city—under the banner of Lenin.

They knew Lenin. Many of their sons were in the Red Army whom Lenin had addressed. These sons went back to the villages to tell the folks the wise words that Lenin imparted to them. These sons in the Red Army were—and are—the best connecting links between the Soviet government and the villages.

But best of all the poor peasants knew that they together with the workers in the city now held power. They elected their village Soviets; they sent their delegates to the higher Soviets and finally to the All-Russian Soviet Congress, the supreme body of the Soviet State. And Lenin often addressed the congress, telling in simple words which each delegate could understand the facts of the situation within the state, the needs of the state, the situation of the peasants and the position of the workers. Telling them, above all, the facts of the international situation, so that for the first time, the peasants realized that they were part of a great world.

And the delegates reported back to the peasants in the village; told them how the Soviet government was making the greatest endeavor to lighten the burden of the peasants; how it was trying to provide them with all the accessories of modern cultivation; how it had plans under way to electrify the whole country, to introduce uniform taxes, etc.

These were the cold, hard facts that the peasants relish—the peasant being a practical man, unused to and uninterested in theory. And these facts were working out well—and the peasants were able to calculate it in improved conditions, in a raised standard of living, in a new outlook upon life.

So Lenin was no myth to them. He was the author of these new facts the fighter for them against the incredulous. He was not merely the friend of the poor peasants—he was their leader—one of the first to recognize that especially in Russia the revolution could not succeed, nor could it be maintained without the active support of the peasants. This was a revolution not of the proletariat alone, who needed the peasantry in order to hold power. This was a revolution of the workers and peasants, who tho having partly divergent interests, had one great interest in common—the fight against exploitation . . .

And now he was gone. Soviet Russia shook when the news flashed across the country. Lenin was gone—and the rest of the battle must be fought without him.

The peasants gathered at the Soviet House to discuss Lenin and what was to become of the country without him. The workers in the factories neglected their work, leaning on their machines to talk of the great old man. Each one, once a soldier in the war or the fight against the counter-revolution knew an anecdote, had heard a speech by Lenin, or a story about him. And the time was never too long, to repeat the stories, weaving fanciful details about them.

In the evenings they gathered at the clubs to hear lectures and speches. This was the great time to determine whether Lenin had builded well or not. Had he awakened the consciousness of the workers and peasants, so that they knew what the revolution meant and how the power of the Soviet government must be maintained? Had he builded in such fashion that when he was gone—when his work was finished—it would go on?

The Russian Communist Party sent out its corps of speakers to the remote towns and villages. The whole populace gathered at the clubs—men women and children, even babes in arm. They all came—not alone to pay tribute to the dead leader, but to her once more the familiar tale of the revolution and of Lenin's undying greatness in leading it. Opening with the funeral hymn played by the village band—which left no eye dry—peasants and workers who had seen their whole family torn assunder by the war and murdered by the counter-revolutionists. Then the peasants and workers themselves, in their simple way told of Lenin, the Soviet government, the Russian Communist Party. Then the speaker of the party or the Communist International spoke about the meaning of Lenin to the Communist movement of the world, of his leadership in the fight of the peoples of India, China, Egypt, Java Korea—of darkest Africa.

These were not myths of lore. There were the hard, cruel facts of the proletarian revolution that Soviet Russia was the first to solve.

Out of the sorrow grew the spirit of militancy. Out of militancy grew the determination to continue the fight. And the Internationale resounding thru the village and workers' club, in the Red Army barracks, in the university halls, showed clearly that Lenin has builded WELL—and Soviet Russia was a granite block.

On the train, when the news came that Lenin died, the train stopped and the workers alighted in the night, out in the snow and bitter cold, to sing the funeral hymn. They could not sing the mournful song—their throats choked. At the windows sat the N. E. P., who would not, who dared not participate in this funeral offering to the dead leader. They sat at the windows, being apart from the mass and the revolution. The workers, seeing them, were filled with hatred—but good revolutionists that they were, they knew that they must tolerate these leeches till the day when they may trample them under foot.

And yet, in the city of Moscow, the traders' organization asked permission to march across the Red Square to pay homage to Lenin.

Lenin builded well. The village, the peasant and the worker there, are the best heritage of his great work. The collective and Communal work of the poor peasants, forming the basis of Communism among the peasants in Soviet Russia is the greatest tribute to his genius. The cultural work taken to the village is another of his great deeds.

The village knew Lenin. The small factory town knew him well.

Lenin builded well—his death revealed his wonderful genius.

'RECOGNIZE RUSSIA!' CRY GROWS

Abramovich Is to Visit Chicago

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE good impression created in the minds of the British fraternal delegates to the Russian Trade Union Congress is causing havoc in the ranks of the second internationalists. What makes the yellow leaders angrier than anything else reported by the trade union leaders is their statement on Georgia, the pet bugaboo of the yellow socialists. The trade union leaders found the people of Georgia happy and smiling and blamed the socialists for the recent revolt of bandits and czarists in that country.

AT a recent meeting of the Bureau of the Labor and Socialist International, M. Vandervelde, his Belgian majesty's former socialist minister, attacked the delegates sent by the general council of the British Trade Union Congress to Russia. He denounced them for publishing eulogistic articles on Soviet Russia in the Communist press and for having given the Soviet regime a clean bill of health for its conduct in Georgia. He requested the bureau to discuss the conduct of the British delegates, but Jouhaux of France and Tom Shaw of England thought otherwise. There was no discussion.

THE diplomatic correspondent of the London Daily Herald writes that prior to the recent Paris conference on reparations, it was rumored that Britain and the United States were considering giving France remarkably easy terms on payment of her debts to both countries. Churchill was the British mouthpiece while Hughes spoke for Wall Street. The terms were as follows: a ten year moratorium; 90 years in which to pay the debts with a nominal interest payment during that period of 1 per cent. In return for this concession France was to join England and the United States in an anti-Soviet bloc. Evidently the plan did not go thru but Hughes is.

LORD OLIVER, secretary for India in the Ramsay MacDonald socialist government (how unearthly it sounds a lord in a socialist government!) delivered a speech in Calcutta a few days ago, in which he stated that the labor government made it quite clear to the Hindoos that it would not stand for any policy of threats or intimidation on the part of Hindoo nationalist or revolutionary organizations. The noble labor lord used the same kind of language employed by Lord Curzon, the tory. The subject peoples of Great Britain can expect no salvation from the British labor party. Only when the British workers follow the leadership of the Communists will the slaves of the robber empire be freed. But the colonial peoples must not wait for others to strike the blow.

MUSSOLINI is not even good to eat, it seems. A United News dispatch from Rome tells us that a few days ago while the big black-shirt dictator was diring thru the zoological gardens, he entered a lion's cage. He stayed with the animals for twenty minutes but they did not touch him. This is the only true story that has appeared in the capitalist press from Italy for several days. That is not saying much for the rest. Perhaps the Italian lions are fastidious and particular about their diet. Or perhaps they are vegetarians.

JENSEN'S SCAB PACT HOGTIES CARPENTERS

Prohibits Demand for Higher Wage Scale

Harry Jensen, president of the carpenters' district council, ruled out of order a resolution from Local No. 80, requesting the district to move for a new wage scale of $1.50 an hour and bring the carpenters' wages up to the level of other sections of the building trades.

The reason for Jensen's action is that the scab agreement entered into between himself and five Chicago contractors and made public the day before the elections, prohibits the carpenters from making any move looking towards an increase in wages and puts them in the position of undermining the wages of the entire building trades.

When Jensen signed the scab contract, he did it largely in order to gain popularity for himself and aid his election as president of the district council. This boss's lackey was willing to sacrifice the interests of the rank and file of the carpenters' organization to his own greed for the spoils of office. By signing this contract he was able to go before the members and pose as a man who did things and by not making it public until one day before the elections, the members were unable to read it and realize what it had committed them to.

Tied To Low Scale.

Under the terms of this agreement, local carpenters point out, the five contractors to whom the union is delivered hand and foot, can bring in all other contractors in Chicago into the agreement if they see fit. If this is dope the contractors who now pay more than the Jensen scale, would be able to use the Jensen contract to present the union members under threat of expulsion from demanding more money.

The struggle against Jensen's tools in Local No. 181 is still on, with the members growing more bitter against the autocratic actions of the officials. The members feel that the officials under the instructions of Jensen should not be allowed to continue making a mockery of the constitution.

At the last meeting of the local, it was brought up on the floor, that Local 224 of Cincinnati had requested information from Local 181 about the expulsions by Secretary Ejnar Larson, instead of reading the letter to the members, as the constitution provides, replied to the letter from the Cincinnatti carpenters and gave his own lying version of the situation.

Jensen Defends Larson.

Jensen defended this conduct on the floor of the union and declared that the secretary had a right to reply to communications and keep the information secret if he saw fit. The secretary admitted having answered the letter, but refused to let the members know what he said. Any motion introduced in Local No. 181 that is not to the liking of the official family is ruled out of order. The constitution might as well not be in existence for all the fakers care.

The chief conspirator behind this gag rule policy is Harry Jensen, who is the local cheap edition of Mussolini and is carrying out the edicts of "czar" Hutcheson in Indianapolis. The members might as well realize right now, that until they replace Jensen with a man who will obey the will of the rank and file and fight for the interests, it will be impossible for them to do any constructive work or use their organization to better their conditions.

From Local Union.

Jensen stated that he knew how Local 224, Cincinnati, secured the information. He said it came thru the Trade Union Educational League. Of course, the T. U. E. L. is vigilant in behalf of the interests of the rank and file, but The DAILY WORKER is informed that the request to Ejnar Larson, secretary of Local No. 181, asking for information came directly from the local and with the local's seal on the communication.

To Fight Jensen.

Chicago carpenters are convinced that it is time other locals should prepare to take action designed to bring control of their organization into the hands of the membership. Other locals in Chicago should join Local No. 181 in protesting against the railroading of the five members who are deprived of their means of making a livelihood because they signed a resolution protesting against a scab contract which is now strangling the carpenters and prohibiting them from demanding an increase in wages. This gives the real reason why these members were expelled. It proves conclusively that the expelled members are true to the highest ideals of militant trade unionism and that Jensen and his gang are the friends of the contractors.

SPY, IMPORTED BY SOCIALISTS, IS COMING HERE

Run Out of New York, Tries Luck on Tour

That Raphael Abramovich, Russian czarist, socialist and counter-revolutionist, who has been imported into the United States by the "socialists" behind the Jewish Daily Forward, considers the American socialist party beneath his notice, is shown by the statement of Bertha Hale White, secretary of the socialist party, that Abramovich has not consulted the national office of the socialist party.

The Workmen's Circle and the Forward, under whose auspices the czarist spy is about to tour the United States to agitate against Soviet Russia, believe apparently, that the socialist party is so small it is not worth bothering with. "Of course the socialists will attend Abramovich's meetings," a stenographer in the national office of the socialist party told the DAILY WORKER.

"I accidentaly heard about Abramovich when I was in New York," said Bertha White. "I have not heard that the socialist party officially has anything to do with his tour. It was only accidentally that I heard Abramovich would speak in Chicago."

When pressed for the attitude of the socialist party toward lies Abramovich told about Soviet Russia, Mrs. White said she had not heard or seen such statements, and that the socialist party had taken no attitude at all on them so far as she knew.

Abramovich, as soon as he has recovered sufficiently from the meeting called by the socialist party in his honor at the New Star Casino in New York, where the audience cheered Soviet Russia, will try his luck in Chicago. Meanwhile the few socialists left in Chicago are being rounded up to attend his meeting.

SNOW SHOVELERS EYED BY RICH, SNOBBY LOAFERS

Fur Clad Millionaires Urge Speed-up Methods

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—When a lot of snow fell recently into the streets of New York multitudes of jobless rejoiced, for it meant that they could tie up their ragged clothes with old twine and sally forth for a position with the city authorities at the enormous sum of fifty cents an hour as long as the snow lasted.

Fear Jobs Would Soon End.

Only one thing worried the slaves at the new job—that it would not last long enough. The snow cleared away the shovelers would again be in the ranks of the unemployed unless more snow fell.

To prolong the job—it must be done. It was easy to follow the inclination to prolong it. First of all most of the shovelers had been on low rations for months and, half-starved, were weakened and unable to do more than two men's work without much effort. Then the constant thot of joblessness and hunger modified their speed in the process of shoveling.

All of which has so angered the fa fur-coated aristocracy which has stopped to gaze at the toilers that a veritable revolution against the humble cleaners seems to be imminent.

Into the fray against the street cleaners plunges our old-time neighbor, humanitarian and friend of the toiling masses, B. C. Forbes. Says he:

"I have just been watching a number of snow shovelers working on a New York street. They are giving an exhibition of how not to work.

"A rather sad lot they are. They give you the impression of having lost out in the battle of life. Plainly they are not in the slightest interested in their job. It is hard to imagine they have ever shown particularly keen interest in any job. Their eyes lack sparkle. Their countenances are downcast. Their every movement is sluggish, utterly lacking in snap.

"The spectacle, however, brought this question to my mind:

"'How, usually, is success won?'

"Well, what is the answer?

"Having just watched these men the answer that comes to the tip of my tongue is:

"'Do more work than you are paid for, and earnestly strive to fit yourself to tackle more important work.'

"There rush to my mind many instances of conspicuously successful men who won their spurs by doing exactly that."

Ask for More Snow to Fall.

Then he goes on to mention some of America's high examples of bright light. He begins with Judge Gary of the U. S. Steel corporation, biggest slavedriver of them all; then Teagle of the Standard Oil company, Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel company Banker Mitchell and a few others who have earned their millions by shoveling more snow that they were paid for.

In the meantime the shovelers are doing the best they can to prolong their jobs.

WASHINGTON IS FEELING POWER OF SOVIET RULE

U. S. Is Learning Russia Can't Be Ignored

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—President Coolidge and the state department are being forced to retreat rapidly in their uncompromising stand against recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States.

Because of the clamor of American capitalists for an equal chance to compete with foreign nations for Soviet trade, Coolidge is being forced to bow before the Soviet power.

Begin to Ask Questions.

President Coolidge and the state department have been besieged with demands to know why the United States persists in refusing to recognize Soviet Russia, in the face of recognition by twenty-one other nations. American industrialists are chagrined that the recent recognition of Soviet Russia by Japan gives to that nation large oil concessions badly needed by the United States.

It is well known that Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, is favoring recognition of the workers' republic, not because he has the good of the Russian people at heart but because a powerful group of business men are backing Borah in this demand.

These business men want to do business with Soviet Russia, and are anxious to wipe out the disadvantages of trading which capitalists of nations having diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia do not suffer.

Bush Wants Russian Trade.

Irving T. Bush, president of the New York chamber of commerce, who made a tour of Soviet Russia a few months ago and upon his return advocated the signing of a commercial treaty with Soviet Russia. It is now admitted by even the most reactionary circles, that trade between Russian and American capitalists is constantly being carried on.

MINE STRIKE IS FACING DELAY IN PENNSY FIELDS

Grievance Committee Submits Demands

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 22.—Whether or not the anthracite miners will back up the rumored action of the general Grievance Committee, which, according to union officials decided not to take a district strike vote in the meeting Wednesday and instead submitted a demand upon John L. Lewis' "special commission" for the reinstatement of the expelled locals, still remains to be seen.

If the demands of the Grievance Committee, which include full restoration both of the expelled locals and all rights and privileges of the strikers without discrimination, are not conceded by Lewis' agents who have taken over in practice the job Cappellini could not handle, then the strike is only temporarily averted.

Likewise, if the miners affected, particularly the 11,000 on strike against the joint tyranny of Cappellini and the operators, feel that they are still unassured of the settlement of grievances which were the first cause of the strike, the walkout may continue in the mines of the Pennsylvania company, particularly as there is a clear division between the noisy but untrustworthy leadship of Tony Panne and the revolutionary members of the rank and file.

The "special commission" of John L. Lewis is working valorously to prevent any spread of the "outlaw" strike.

CHICAGO LENIN MEMORIAL MEET HUGE SUCCESS

Big Auditorium Holds Throng of Workers

The world Communist movement is building a monument to Nicolai Lenin far bigger and more lasting than any shaft of marble or granite, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, told the thousands of workers who packed the Ashland Auditorium Wednesday death of Lenin.

Engdahl outlined the achievements of the Third (Communist) International during the night to commemorate the past year.

death of Lenin," said Comrade Engdahl, "But to build a stronger Communist movement under the guidance of the teachings of Lenin. That is our monument to his memory."

The Party First.

"The Communist Party must come first above all other considerations," Earl R. Browder, acting secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party told the audience. "Lenin always emphasized the fact that the creation of revolutionary sentiment is not enough. The revolutionary sentiment must be crystallized by organization if the world Communist movement is to be strengthened."

"It was only eight years ago that the workers began to hear of Lenin," continued Browder. "Outside of a small circle his name was unknown. Then the capitalist press began to write about the 'strange fanatic' who was causing so much trouble to the Kerensky government.

"His fall was predicted in the near future, but the predictions of the capitalist press did not materialize and Lenin did not fall but established the first workers' government in the history of the world.

It Lives and Grows.

"Then the prediction mongers got busy again and the Soviet regime was given a few weeks, then a few months and then a few years to live. But much to the chagrin of the prophets of evil and the capitalist class the Soviet government continued to live and grow.

"The capitalist press then predicted that the Soviet government depended on the genius of one man, Lenin, that when he died the Soviet government would surely pass into history. Even some good friends of Soviet Russia feared that the death of Lenin would mean the end of Soviet power. But the hopes of the capitalists and the workers were both unfounded. Lenin died, but his work remained, and the achievements of the Soviet government since his death prove that his work is indestructible."

Arne Swabeck, District Organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party, acting as chairman, said:

"One year after Lenin's death, Japan has recognized the Soviet Republic and the United States is sure to follow. One after another the capitalist powers have been obliged to drop their haughty attitude and come to terms with the power they had vowed never to deal with.

"Tho Lenin lies cold in death he is as potent today as when his voice and pen were active in guiding the revolutionary movement in the struggle against the enemy. Lenin leads the Communist movement today and Leninism is the guide of the Communist International, the greatest monument that could be built to Lenin's memory."

It was young Thelma Kahn, who spoke as a representative of the Junior section of the Young Workers League who received the biggest ovation of the evening. Standing on a table so as to be seen by the audience, Comrade Thelma sketched the life of Lenin from the time he was denied admission to the university because his brother had been executed as a revolutionist, until he headed the victorious Communist revolution and founded the Soviet government of Russia and the Communist International.

Lenin Aided Oppressed Races.

Gordon Owens, the well known Negro Communist, told of the work of Lenin in cementing the oppressed races to the revolutionary movement.

The Red Star pageant, given to the music of the Young Workers' League orchestra, made a profound impression on the large audience. As the curtain rose, the stage was flooded with red light.

The orchestra played the revolutionary funeral march as a huge red star in the center of the stage suddenly flashed with light, and a hammer and sickle appeared on the star under which the letters flashod in electric lights, "Lenin Is Dead."

Then as the orchestra changed the tune to the Internationale, there appeared on the star in large letters, the slogan "Leninism Lives." The audience responded with a tremendous ovation.

Lenin and the Youth.

Barney Mass of the Young Workers' League, told of Lenin's work in founding the Young Communist International, of working class Communist youth of the world, of which the Young Workers' League is the American section. Comrade Mass declared that Lenin had said that the task of the revolutionary youth is to learn "It is with that spirit that the class conscious youth of the world are preparing to aid in the overthrew of capitalism," Comrade Mass declared. He reminded his hearers that Lenin dispelled the idea that there was no room in the revolutionary movement for the youth of the world.

"The world Communist movement has made great progress during the past year," said Engdahl. "Twenty-one capitalist nations, much against their will, have been forced to bow to the Russian Soviet government founded by Lenin. Now Japan has been forced to recognize Russia, and the United States must soon follow."

Engdahl told of some of the future tasks of the Communists. The next war will be fought over control of the Pacific, he declared. Soviet Russia is glad to sell oil to Japan because Russia needs the money to strengthen its workers' government, but the Japanese navy, with all its oil, cannot stave off the establishment of the Soviet government of Japan by the Japanese workers.

The new offensive of the capitalis government of the United States was described by Engdahl, who told how C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party was sitting in the hell hole of a prison at Jackson, Michigan, on the anniversary of Lenin's death because he dared to defend the Communist movement in this country.

Comrade Engdahl told of some of the triumphs of the American workers. He told how the left wing elements of the large trade unions, led by the Communists, are meeting the attacks of the bureaucratic rule of the labor fakers, and how the workers of New York hissed down the Jewish daily (socialist) "Forward," stool pigeon Abramovitch when he attempted to slander the Soviet government

SOME EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES AT LENIN MEMORIAL MEETING

Earl R. Browder: Lenin's work changed the face of the world. He taught the way in which revolution should be made thruout the world. Lenin stressed the fact that revolutionary sentiment alone is not sufficient, that it must be crystallized into organization. Browder finished his speech by appealing to all those who wanted to help finish Lenin's task to join the Workers (Communist) Party.

Barney Mass, of the Young Workers' League: Lenin has set a precedent which has become the ambition of the young workers under the banner of the Young Workers' League and that ambition is to establish the Soviet government in America.

Gordon Owens, representing the Communist Negroes: There is only one solution of the Negro problem and that is the social revolution.

RUSSIAN C. P. MAKES RULING IN TROTSKY CASE

"Fails to Admit Error" in Note to Central

(By Russian Telegraph Agency.)

MOSCOW, Jan. 22.—The Central Committee of the Control Commission of the Russian Communist Party, in plenary session, has examined the resolutions of the party sections regarding the attitude of Trotsky. A letter from Trotsky was read in which he regrets his inability, owing to his illness, to attend the session of the committee. Trotsky declares in his letter that he has kept silence in order not to injure the party, but denies vigorously all the accusations regarding his attempt to revise Leninism and to belittle the role of Lenin.

He fails, however, to substantiate this statement beyond the fact that it would arouse unnecessary discussion. He himself regards "Trotskyism" as a political tendency ended long ago. Regarding the accusations against him of being a pessimist with respect to the development of socialism in Russia and the procrastination of the revolution in western countries, Trotsky said:

"Despite the difficulty arising from capitalism surrounding Russia, the economic and political resources of the Soviet Union are very great."

Trotsky asserts that he had not foreseen his discussions would be interpreted as a political platform. He has not foreseen that his book, "The Lessons of October," which has provoked so much discussion, would be interpreted as a political platform. In conclusion, Trotsky declares:

"Regarding the accusations against me as to my aspiration towards an exceptional postion in the party, and my failure to submit to discipline, refusing the missions entrusted to me by the Central Committee, I reply categorically that I am ready for any task in any post or outside any post, and under the control of the party. It is useless to emphasise that, after the recent discussion, it is in the interest of our cause that I should be relieved of my functions as president of the revolutionary war council. I should add that I remained in Moscow until the plenary session of the Central Committee only for the purpose of submitting explanations, if required."

Decision of Central Committee.

After an exchange of views, the Central Committee, with the exception of two votes, and the Central Control Commission, with two votes abstaining, unanimously resolved:

First, to ask Trotsky to submit to party discipline effectively and not only in words; second, that the direction of the army should be based on the authority of the whole party, and also, in view of Trotsky's statements that it is necessary to relieve him of any further work on the revolutionary war council; Third, to consider Trotsky's future participation on the Central Committee at the next party congress, warning him, however, that in case of any violations of party discipline, the Central Committee will be compelled, without waiting for the congress, to consider Trotsky's remaining in the political bureau as impossible, and that the question should be considered as to whether he should not be refused the right to participate in the work of the Central Committee; Fourth, to consider the discussion as closed.

The resolution of the Central Committee declares that the iron discipline of the party was always the guarantee of the success of the Communist Party. The repeated attacks of Trotsky against Bolshevism compels the party either to renounce this guarantee, or to put an end once for all to these attacks. Considering the attacks of Trotsky as presaging a party split, the imperialists are already drawing practical conclusions in spite of the fact that the international position of the Soviet Union is stronger than ever.

Discussion Always Exposed Tendency

In all his previous discussions Trotsky was the spokesman of petty bourgeois tendencies. His anti-Leninist evaluation of the role of the peasants in the revolution, particularly constitutes an actual danger to the party, which is working to insure the alliance between industry and agriculture, in order to make the peasant masses participate in the Soviet policy to effect relief to agriculture, decrease taxes and to realise other measures of Leninism.

Trotsky's attitude undermines the confidence of the peasants in the political bloc of the workers and peasants The Red Army and Fleet, to which Trotsky should be an example of discipline, sees quite the opposite.

The Central Committee appreciates Trotsky's assurance that he is willing to do any work which the party will impose upon him, but points out that Trotsky in his declaration does not admit his errors, but continues to maintain his anti-Bolshevist attitude, thus making his submission a pure formality.

Red Flag of Soviet Rule Going Up in Tokio Where Waved Emblem of Czar

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the flag of the departed Russian czardom fails to fly over the Russian embassy in Tokio, the metropolis of the island realm of the Japanese mikado. Soon the red flag of Soviet rule will be raised in its stead; its folds flung to the breeze to the strains of "The International." Thus the crimson standards of the workers' revolution establishes a new frontier in the Pacific.

The strongholds of the czarist emigres fall one by one. Before imperialist France was forced to recognize the Soviet power, the czarists maintained their grip in the Russian embassy in Paris. It was the center of their machinations against workers' and peasants' rule in Moscow. They conspired and schemed, cajoled and pleaded with the capitalist powers of western Europe, for just one more attack on the proletarian dictatorship. But the memories of Wrangel, Yudenitch and the rest of the counter-revolutionary crew, were too vivid in the minds of Paris and London diplomats. France followed England in recognizing the established red rule of the Russian masses.

• • • •

It was very significant for instance that two brothers should meet at the Tunisian port of Bizerta, when the red Russians came to relieve the white guard Russians of the ships they had stolen from the Soviet Republic following the Wrangel adventure. One of the brothers was the Bolshevist Admiral Berens, chief of the Russian naval mission, who came to the French port in Africa, with the consent of the French capitalist government, to take the Soviet ships home again. It was his own brother, one of Wrangel's white guard admirals, that he had to deal with.

• • • •

As in Paris, so in Tokio. The Russian embassy in the Japanese capital has been the seat of czarist intrigue in the orient against Soviet rule. It was thru Vladivostok that world imperialism poured its armies into Red Siberia. The armed forces of the United States were there, with those of Japan, England, France and all the rest, bulwarking the bloody white guard attempts of Kolchak against the workerss' and peasants' power.

But red rule pressed back its foes. Every soldier fighting under a capitalist flag was driven from the shores of Siberia. The emblem of Soviet rule was raised again over Vladivostok. Soldiers of the United States mutinied in the face of the dirty task that Wall Street had assigned them. They did not come home as the conquering heroes of an ambitious imperialism. Instead many of them sit today as military prisoners in the American bastilles of the nation's Pacific ports. Only the Kolchak emigres reaching these shores were received with glad acclaim. They at least represented the ghost of something that might have been.

• • • •

Imperialist Japan today stands humbled. The red flag over the Soviet embassy in Tokio is the herald of "The New Day" for Japanese as well as Russian labor.

Goto, the Japanese baron who led the campaign for the recognition of Soviet Russia, says that no country can afford to remain aloof from Soviet Russia. He predicts that the United States will be the next to recognize Soviet rule.

• • • •

Capitalist nations cannot live without developing relations with the Russian Soviet Republic. Yet, neither can they live thru recognizing it. For recognition of Soviet rule means the acceptance of the victory of the workers and peasants in one great nation; a victory that must spread to all nations; ending in a world-wide triumph.

Today the czarist flag is lowered at the Russian embassy in Tokio. Capitalism will try to hide its tears and do its mourning in secret. For it knows that another outpost of its rule has fallen. It knows that the day of its doom draws ever nearer.

ENRIGHT WANTS FINGER PRINTING AND HIGHER PAY

Police Head Grows Poor on $10,000 Per

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Two ambitions dominate Police Commissioner Enright on his return from Palm Beach and South America: one is to have his salary increased from $10,000 to $20,000 a year and the other is to have every inhabitant of New York City and every arrival from outside whether visitor or permanently locating, summarily fingerprinted and recorded in the police register.

Looks Too Raw for Hylan.

Comptroller Herman A. Metz made the proposal of the raise in salary, but it looked so raw that Mayor Hylan suggested that it be put over till another meeting of the board of estimates.

The fingerprint proposition is, however, getting new life. Enright saw a beautiful system in the highly civilized states of South America where every citizen has to carry a fingerprint card with his photo attached. The same system should be introduced into New York, says Enright. It would cost only a dollar a head to get fingerprinted and a dollar for photos and the graft gang would have some twelve million more dollars to play with while they enjoy the pastime of harrassing the workers and especially those who are foolish enough to think other thoughts than those dictated by J. P. Morgan and John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Enright goes into ecstacies over what he saw in Buenos Ayres. There all honest people have their cards. Without the card no one can get a job. If the jobseeker has a card, it is at once referred to the police to see if he is a member of a union and if he is an agitator. His record spells his fate.

Fight on Organized Labor.

If he has not already secured a card and applies for one, he cannot get it, if he is found to have union affiliations or if he is considered a radical.

To stamp out all labor organizations and drive from the city all who advocate higher wages for workers—but for police commissioners—must get the boot, according to this advanced step in civilization.

UNSEAT DAN W. STEVENS FROM MPLS. ASSEMBLY

Reaction Wins After a Bitter Fight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 22.—Last night's meeting of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly here nearly ended in a riot during the vote to unseat Dan W. Stevens. Delegates were on their feet cheering and yelling at the top of their voices. The chairman and sergeants-at-arms clamored for order, but there was no way of stopping the demonstration.

The near-riot came during the taking of a vote to expel Dan W. Stevens, Communist, on charges of "conduct unbecoming a member of the Trades and Labor Assembly."

A complaint signed by Robley C. Cramer, and Budd L. McKillips, editor and associate editor respectively, of the Minneapolis Labor Review, James Fullerton, J. R. Powers, Gunnar Olson and Fred Ripcsinsky, member of the reactionary Lincoln (republican) club, charged that Stevens, in a speech before the central labor body January 14 had "slandered the officialdom" of the American Federation of Labor, as well as Paul W. Smith, special envoy of the federation. Stevens' speech was published in a recent issue of the DAILY WORKER.

Given absolutely no opportunity to defend himself, nor to produce proof in substantiation of the charges made in his speech, Dan W. Stevens was expelled from the Trades and Labor Assembly by vote of 84 to 30.

When delegates sought the floor in order to defend Stevens, they were immediately ordered to their seats. The gavel was in constant use last night. Whenever a left winger arose he was rapped out of order. Fair play, justice and the square deal was utterly forgotten in the haste of the reactionaries to "hang" Stevens.

The fact that Dan Stevens had spent twenty years of his life in the labor movement, sixteen of which were served as an official of this same central body, made no difference to his accusers. The skids had been well oiled and the "machine" was in perfect working order. As a Communist Stevens might stand in the way of the reactionary officialdom in their attempt to "sell out" the workers to the war mongers in preparation for the next imperialist bloodbath.

The climax came when Delegate Harris, of the Boilermakers' Union, arose to explain his vote. From the reactionaries and "red baiters" came the cries, "Vote, vote, are you yellow?"

Harris, aroused at the attempt to gag him from explaining, then made the open charge that R. D. Cramer and Budd L. McKillipps had called upon him at his home and used undue influence, coercion and intimidation in an endeavor to compel him to line up with the reactionaries against Stevens. The chair rapped for order when the cheering began.

Pandemonium followed which lasted for fully twenty minutes. Chairs were knocked over, hats and caps were tossed into the air, while angry reactionary delegates dashed hither and yon trying to stem the demonstration that had taken place.

During the excitement and turmoil Paul W. Smith took the floor and demanded that Harris' office of registry clerk be declared vacant. It carried largely because of the fact that at no time did all delegates know what they were really voting on.

The vote against Delegate Stevens was taken by organization roll call, each delegate arising and voting "Yes" or "No."

In several instances assembly members answered "not voting." Roy Weir, organizer, did so and immediately the cry was raised. "What's the matter, are you too yellow to vote your convictions?" Such proved to be the case, so bitter has become the onslaught of the reactionaries against anyone daring to oppose them or their moves.

Stevens, after the vote had been taken, finally got the floor after several vain attempts, but was waved to his seat after saying only a few words. Stevens said this much, however:

"Naturally I am going to demand a trial before a trial committee. The accusation has been leveled against me that I have made certain statements which I cannot prove. Now, let me say here and now, I am not in the habit of saying things and later repudiating them. In my first trial of last week, I was given no opportunity of hearing what my accusers had to say against me. In the capitalist courts a man has, at least, that right of defense. Brothers, I ask only that which would be accorded me in a capitalist court. Regardless of whatever action you take here tonight, my work as a Communist must and will continue."

Walter Frank, of Lathers' Union, No. 190, was objected to last night when credentials were offered for him as a delegate to the local assembly.

Frank is a member of the Workers (Communist) Party and an active trade unionist. Objections were raised on a previous occasion to Frank being seated in the central body, but the vote went in his favor, 36 to 19.

He was recently unanimously elected to represent his local. Franks' case will be reported on at the next meeting of the Trades and Labor Assembly.

KANSAS LEGISLATURE LOWER HOUSE KILLS CHILD LABOR LAW

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 22.—The lower house of the Kansas legislature yesterday rejected the ratification resolution on the proposed child labor amendment to the federal constitution by a vote of 101 to 21. It also postponed indefinitely a motion to submit the amendment to a vote of the Kansas people.

denly found himself belonging to an obsolete period, and has resigned taking with him from the state department the time-worn notion that the United States can maintain its prominence as a world capitalist nation and still isolate itself from trade with Soviet Russia, covering as it does one-sixth of the earth's surface, with many rich natural resources waiting for development.

Capitalism Retreats.

Even the imperialistic Chicago Tribune, whose Russian correspondent was expelled from Russia for telling lies about that country, admits in an editorial that extensive trade is being carried on between American capitalists and Soviet Russia.

"There is now more American trade with Russia than any other nation has," says an editorial in the Tribune of Jan. 22. "No chances are taken, it is spot cash at a neutral port."

But this "spot cash at a neutral port" attitude of the Coolidge government no longer satisfies the American financiers and industrialists who must now compete with Japan, France, China, Italy, Germany, England, and a score of countries which have agreements with the Soviet government. The American capitalists find the necessity of a retreat before the Soviet power. They find that they too vitally need the natural resources and the vast markets controlled by the Soviet government longer to thumb their noses at Russia, and they are bringing pressure to bear on Coolidge to keep step with the other capitalistic powers.

World Bows to Soviets.

Seven years after the founding of the Soviet state in Russia we find the treaty with Russia the principal subject before the chamber of deputies in France as well as the Japanese diet. While Premier Herriot still insists on the payment of old Russian debts to France, Herriot was forced to admit in this debate that "M Herbette, the French ambassador to Russia, is doing well in Moscow," and that "America must inevitably deal with Soviet Russia." The same view was expressed by the leading Japanese imperialists.

President Coolidge in his message to congress a year ago said: "Our government offers no objection to the carrying on of commerce by our citizens with the people of Russia." But Coolidge refused to negotiate even a commercial treaty on the ground that Russia must first "recognize the sanctity of international obligations" and the rights of private property.

Soviets Cannot Be Ignored.

History demands, however, that Coolidge put his pride in his pocket and negotiate at least a trade treaty with Russia, before American capitalists loose their foothold in the Pacific. The International Harvester company, the Ford Motor company the Case Tractor company, the U. S Steel corporation, and many other manufacturing concerns, have long been seeking trade with Russia on a wider scale. The cotton growers of the south realize the necessity of trade with Russia. They recall that only a few short months ago, the late Comrade Nogin, then head of Russia's textile industries, bought several million dollars worth of cotton. They also know that because no diplomatic relations existed between America and Russia, that the cotton was handled, insured and shipped by foreign agents, and that better terms could have been secured had a trade agreement existed.

Coolidge Must Give In.

As early as eighteen months ago a commission of senators, after spending sixty days in Russia, returned and unanimously advocated a trade treaty with the Soviet government.

Coolidge is now faced with the necessity of reversing his previous statements against recognition, in order to appease the business men who see that they have delayed too long in entering the world competition for Russian trade.

Women In Industry Subject of "Philly" Open Forum Talk

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 22.—Rebecca Grecht of New York, will be the speaker at the Jan. 25 meeting of the Philadelphia open forum. The subject will be "Women and the Labor Movement." The development of capitalism brings about a development of proletarian woman on a mass scale. Women have been plunged into industry, very often doing the same work as men at lower wages.

Rebecca Grecht will tell of the struggles of the women of this country for organization and will tell of women in the industries, such as the clothing, textile and food industries where women often predominate.

The Workers Party forum meets every Sunday at 8 p. m. at the Grand Fraternity Hall, 1628 Arch St. Admission is free. A lively discussion follows each lecture.

CARPENTERS HAVE LIVELY MEETING IN DETROIT

The T. U. E. L. Chief Topic Discussed

DETROIT, Mich. Jan. 22—When President Sharrock, of Local Union 1805, United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Jointers, refused to open the meeting of that local until William Reynolds, of L. U. 2140, expelled by the G. E. B., left the hall and when Reynolds stood on his constitutional right of membership until such time as he had been tried, convicted and expelled by his local union, and refused to leave the meeting, the gathering resolved itself into an open forum without a chairman and a round-the-hall discussion prevailed for 2½ hours.

Reynolds first outlined his activity in the carpenters' organization and the arbitrary expulsion without charges or trial. General Organizer Botterill then took the floor and denounced the Trade Union Educational League as a "dual union," after which he confessed he knew nothing about it, except that is was verboten, according to "Kaiser" Hutcheson.

He waxed eloquent about Reynolds' intentions to destroy the organization, but when challenged to mention a single act by Brother Reynolds to which objection could be made, he failed to do so. Botterill stooped to low demagogy and lying when he branded the Amalgamated, with which Reynolds had been affiliated for five years, as a dual organization opposed to the Brotherhood. The Amalgamated has been an organic part of the carpenters movement in Detroit, and no friction has existed between it and the district council during the period under discussion. Those members familiar with the facts keenly resented this piece of sophistry and branded it as such.

President Sharrock said he did not want the dictatorship of the proletariat here to deprive us of "all our rights" although he did not approve of the "Russian" methods of Hutcheson either. The poor liberal has a hell of a time these days. He doesn't like being quoted in the DAILY WORKER either. But what's a poor reporter to do, when he says such interesting things?

Reynolds took the floor again. explained the nature and purpose of the Trade Union Educational League and that the dictatorship of the proletariat, rude as it might sound, meant only the rule of the workers, and that when the workers of America realized their power, they would follow in the footsteps of their Russian brothers and establish the dictatorship of the proletariat.

An interesting time was had by all until 10:30 when the meeting took up for a short time some special business.

SENATORS ROW OVER MEANING OF PARIS PACT

Coolidge Has Dinner, Snubs Shipstead

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A controversy that goes to the root of constitutional interpretation was threatened in the senate today over the Paris agreement negotiated by Ambassador Kellogg, wherein the United States becomes an official partner in the Dawes plan in exchange for 2¼ per cent of the money that the plan extracts from Germany.

For the first time since the present flare-up over the Kellogg agreement, senators were inclined to question seriously the authority of the president and the secretary of state to negotiate such a pact without consulting the senate or submitting it to the senate for ratification.

"Constitutional," But—

While recognising that it is the constitutional right of the executive branch to settle claims, it was nevertheless pointed out that in matters affecting the pocketbook of America congress usually has made its voice heard.

Secretary Hughes has already stated the Kellogg agreement is not subject to senate ratification, but his opinion is not accepted.

Calvin Snubs Shipstead.

President Coolidge has made the first move toward a reconciliation of the foreign relations committee and the executive department by having all save one of the committee members at the White House to dinner last night. The lone exception was Senator Shipstead, farmer-laborite, of Minnesota.

This fact caused considerable comment at the capitol today. It seemed entirely unnecessary as Shipsteal is no foe of capitalism, but shows only how reactionary is Coolidge's regime. Hughes was also absent. He does not get along well with the foreign relations committee.

"Unofficial Observer" Explains.

Neither the Kellogg agreement nor the world court were discussed, the senators merely listening to an expression of the Lausanne treaty which the president is desirous of having ratified at this session. Richard Washburn Child, America's "unofficial observer" at Lausanne, explained it.

The drive for ratification of the world court protocol at this session apparently is doomed. With only six working weeks of the session left there is no time for the world court fight.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

A LETTER FROM SOVIET RUSSIA

Lately many letters have been sent to papers abroad, but it is the old people—our fathers and elder brothers—and not the youth who write these letters. That is why I am writing now in order to tell the adult and the young workers in Western countries how we young workers live in the U. S. S. R., and especially about the life and work of the young workers of the State brake factory in Moscow.

Our factory is turning out Westinghouse brakes and employs 500 male and female workers, of whom about 130 are young workers. Now the conditions of the young workers are much better than before. In the first instance there is a law which prohibits the employment of children under 14. At that age children must go to school. Between the age of 14 and 16 children can be employed in light work and not for more than four hours daily. This enables them to study. There is a six hour day for workers between the ages of 16 and 18, and it is only after the age of 18 that young workers have to work 8 hours like the other adult workers. The young people who work 4 and 6 hours a day receive full pay, namely, as much as they would receive for an 8-hour day.

There is a Young Communist League nucleus in the factory for the young workers, with 105 members. This shows that nearly all the young workers are members of the Y. C. L. This nucleus is doing splendid work in the factory, it has its own representatives in all the factory organizations, such as the factory committee, the protection of labor committee, etc. which defend the interests of the young workers. The nucleus is also carrying on educational work among the youth; it has organized various circles including a political literacy study circle. The nucleus is also teaching everyone how to live in a commune and how to exercise comradly discipline. There is also a club in the factory, and the membership is made up mostly of Young Communists and young people in general.

The club has many circles—dramatic circles, a circle for choir singing, and a circle for band practice, a radio circle and many others, to which mostly young workers belong. Thus we are not only given an opportunity, but we are even encouraged to take up all kinds of studies. The factory has also a school for apprentices which has at present 90 pupils, 17 of whom will have accomplished their apprenticeship in the school year 24-25, about June 1925. Their apprenticeship will have lasted four years. Every year there will be fresh batches of young people who have gone through their full apprenticeship course. This apprenticeship school is doing much good to the young workers, for in addition to being taught to read and write and to become an educated being, they are taught some trade or other.

There is one particular thing of which I must tell you, and that is, that there is in our school a committee consisting of the students themsleves which conducts all the affairs of the school. This committee discusses together with the instructors everything concerning the school. It decides what subjects should be taught and by what methods. It also helps to draw up the plan of work for every pupil and every pedagogue. The plan in vogue is that every pupil does the special task allotted to him or her, in accordance with the school syllabus. The apprenticeship lasts four years. The first year is considered a preparatory year with a six-hour day. During the remaining three years four hours are devoted to theoretical studies and four to practical work in the factory. Our school is really meant to be for the children of the workers of our factory. But it also admits on special recommendation pupils from children's homes and youngsters sent by the Labor Exchange. The apprenticeship school is training reserve forces to take the place of factory workers who are obliged to give up work because of old age or ill-health.

The pupils of the apprenticeship school receive pay, which is of course, not very high, but nevertheless, sufficient for one person. But if we should calculate the cost of the teaching staff, of the necessary school material and other school expenses, we see that a considerable sum of money is spent on every pupil of this school. On the whole we can say that the pupils of the apprenticeship school are very satisfied with their conditions and are eager to prove themselves as useful as possible to the workers and the Soviet Government.

A wall newspaper called the "Regulator" is published in our factory, and our young workers are active contributors to it. All the numbers contain their contributions. But they are not only contributors to the paper, for the paper, was founded by them and the editorial board also consists of members of the Young Communist League. We recently celebrated the Seventh Anniversary of our Revolution. We came out into the streets with our Red banners, the bands playing, and we rejoiced in being free citizens. We are not afraid of anyone for we live in a free country, where we ourselves are the masters. And on the day of the Fifth Anniversary of the Young Communist International our message to you is: "Follow in our footsteps towards the world commune."

Long live the Red Youth—the vanguard in the march towards the World October.

With young communist greetings,

Zafranski,

Youth Correspondent of the paper The Young Leninite, Moscow, Lesnaya 28.

Teachers Eye With Suspicion Pay Raise Talk

Anyone who has been watching the antics of the superintendent of schools, William McAndrew, can not help looking with suspicion upon the new recomendation of his to increase the school teachers' wages from 10 to 30 per cent.

This comes immediately upon the heels of his recommendation to drop the penny lunches in the schools and to charge children a penny a towel in the school baths, both these departments having been installed only in schools in the very poor sections of the city.

And so the teachers and their friends are waiting for the cat to be let out of the bag.

Miss Haley Says Its Bunk.

When called on the phone the Chicago Teachers' Federation knew nothing about McAndrew's sudden splurge of beneficence. Miss Margaret Haley business agent of the federation, said it was all a lot of bunk and the teachers knew better than to be fooled by any such "gestures" by McAndrew.

The administration committee of the school board was equally taken by surprise at this last move by the superintendent. At the last meeting Trustee J. Lewis Coate, who has always taken the teachers' side in McAndrews' attacks upon them characterized this last fake as "bunking the people." In speaking of it he said:

"It is ridiculous for the superintendent to think of raising teachers salaries when he knows that the board is not financially able to do it. His recommendations are inconsistent. He advises reducing expenditures in the penny lunches and charging 1 cent for towels in the public baths, and now wants to add nearly $9,000,000 to annual appropriations when the board is faced with a $22,000,000 deficit.

"He is trying to bunk the public and play cheap politics, and the public will get wise sooner or later. What the people want from McAndrew is a little common sense. He is saving the pennies and letting the dollars leak out."

Trustee James A. Mullenbach, another supporter of the teachers, said "A recommendation to that effect at the present time is questionable of sincerity."

Always Sides with McAndrew.

But Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, chairman of the school administration committee, who has always sided with the superintendent and supported him in every attack upon the teachers, applauded the superintendent's move and said she would be in favor of an increase if the money could be provided thru a referendum increasing the tax levy already permitted by the legislature. And here is where we hear the cat mew even if she isn't let out of the bag.

SENATOR LADD FOR UNDERWOOD SHOALS SCHEME

North Dakota "Radical" Had Talk with Cal

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Progressives in the senate, led by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, lost their fight to prevent the turning over of Muscle Shoals to private monopolies when the senate, by a vote of 50 to 30, passed the Underwood bill providing for a leasing of Muscle Shoals to private companies.

Following a conference at the White House between President Coolidge and Senator Curtis, republican floor leader, ten votes which were recorded in favor of the Norris proposal, which provided for government ownership and operation of Muscle Shoals, switched to the Underwood bill, assuring its passage. The only member of the progressive group who allied himself with what Senator Norris called a coalition of Underwood democrats and Coolidge republicans was Senator Ladd, of North Dakota. Ladd voted for the Underwood bill.

Only One Disappointment.

"I was told how many would change and who they were," Senator Norris declared, after the vote had been taken on the Underwood bill. "I think the vote will be a disappointment to future generations."

A bill differing with the Underwood bill in many respects but identical with it in the plan to turn over the government property to private corporations was passed by the house during the last session. It is believed that despite the opposition of the progressives in the house, where the rules prevent the extended debates which take place in the senate, these differences will be ironed out before the adjournment of congress.

CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE HAS LIVELY DISCUSSION ON REPORTS OF ITS VARIOUS COMMITTEES

At a very excellent meeting of the city central committee, Workers Party, Local Chicago, Tuesday, Jan. 20, the city executive committee brought forward many proposals and reports on extended activities on the industrial field, labor defense work, municipal elections campaign, shop nuclei activity, union organization of party members, carrying on united front campaigns initiated by the central executive committee on child labor, wage cuts, C. P. P. A., criminal syndicalism, etc.

Discussion on Industrial Work.

An interesting discussion lasting nearly two hours took place on the industrial report. The industrial executive committee is starting a concerted and organized drive to organize the party members into trade unions to which they are eligible.

Comrades will visit all party branches and take up each individual one by one on this matter. The registration is ready for such work and the information will be utilized in an endeavor to make every member of the Workers Party an active member of a labor union. Branches shall co-operate fully when representatives from the T. U. E. L. committee visit the branch.

In the metal trades, Comrade Overgaard of this committee, will speed the work of organization in this industry. The metal trades comrades, especially in the machinists, have been more active and have been circulating the metal trades bulletin to the extent of 2,000 copies. A number of successes have been had in the local and district elections and the machinist comrades are making a good campaign in the elections. Also the resolutions on labor defense and the Michigan cases are being taken up thru the Machinists District Council and thru the local unions.

The Fight in Local 181

The carpenters are making use of the expulsion of the five members of Local 181 for agitation. Leaflets and a pamphlet on the carpenters situation dealing with the local and national situation will be issued. A squad of girls is needed to help distribute the leaflets. Also the work of organizing the building laborers is being taken up by the carpenters group and a leaflet will likely be issued very shortly.

In the recent elections in the Barbers, the progressive slate received approximately 250 votes and the reactionaries 1,300 which is an improvement over the previous election.

Members Disciplined

A special committee is developing a program of action and organization for the entire needle trades group. Now that the matter of the suspended members in the Amalgamation Clothing Workers for signing the statement injurious to the left wing has been settled by action of the central executive committee, the needle trades work will go on in a more organized and determined fashion in an effort further to build the left wing. This program will be submitted to the needle trades group in a few days.

Comrade Pellegrino has been instructed to get on the job organizing the Italians in the needle trades. Special comrades also will be selected to carry on this work among the Poles and Czecho-Slovaks in an endeavor to build up a strong T. U. E. L. group.

Comrade Aronberg was appointed to develop the shop nuclei work among the needle trades nuclei and also to take steps to organize other shop nuclei as far as possible in the needle trades industry.

Also there are prospects of a shop nucleus being organized in one of the barns of milk wagon drivers.

Progressives and militant delegates to Chicago Federation of Labor are meeting to draw up a course of action and systematic work.

The branch industrial organizers of the Party are meeting Thursday, January 22nd, at the local office of the party in order to arrange for carrying out this broad program of organization and union activity outlined thru the Trade Union Educational League. Branches are expected to demand full and complete reports from their C. C. C. delegates on this and other work. The regular monthly meeting of the T. U. E. L. will be held, Wednesday, January the 28th, Northwest Hall. See DAILY WORKER other columns for further details.

The T. U. E. L. weekly page is also of great value in developing the industrial, trade union, political activity and comrades are expected to send in newsy stuff of shop activity, union work, strikes, etc.

Linking Up United Front Campaigns of the Party.

All of the united front campaign of the party are closely connected with one another and are being carried out in every possible field. The child labor campaign, Labor Defense work, unemployment, are being forwarded thru the municipal elections campaign. These major political issues and also additional ones, such as Saccon Vanzetti defense, the fight against the fake outfit, the conference for progressive political action, the campaign against the counter revolutionary tool, Abramovich, who is being used to prejudice the workers against Soviet Russia and to break down the most favrable report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia on union and political conditions there, are being developed.

A membership meeting will be called very soon to mobilize the party for immediate campaigns under the slogan of the United Front of Labor against the United Front of Capitalism under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party. All our campaigns are only phases of this central united front campaign.

In the local unions and other workingclass organizations our comrades are expected to fight against participation in any conference of the C. P. P. A. and to fight for endorsement of the Workers Party united front campaign on the various issues.

Municipal Election Campaign Is Going Ahead With Full Steam

Everyone of the candidates endorsed by the party will go on the ballot with a little more effort. Meetings in the various wards are already being arranged. The program of the party in this campaign is being widely distributed. Unions, as much as possible, are being visited for endorsement of the Workers Party program and candiates. A letter has been addressed to labor unions and other workingclass organizations asking their support on the basis of immediate issues set forth in our program.

Very good propaganda results can already be noticed from this campaign. In the coming weeks, as the work is intensified, our literature widespread, the party should endeavor to crystallize this work into organizational results.

United Front Defense, Council Forming

In the field of Labor Defense Council the Local Council is active and a call is being issued to unions and other workingclass organizations for a united front conference, (prospective date, February 26 is set) for the struggle against the criminal syndicalism laws in all states, for the freedom of all class war prisoners, Ruthenberg, Minor, Sacco, Vanzetti, Mooney, Ford, Suhr, etc. Our comrades are pushing these issues thru resolutions in the unions, etc.

Unemployment

A report on unemployment was given to the C. C. C. on the situation today in Chicago. Wherever possible, comrades in labor organizations are to present resolutions on the basis of our program, to continue agitation and forward resolutions passed and work done to the local office. On the wage cuts campaign, all party comrades are urged to send in every possible material on conditions. Wage cuts are always a problem for the workers. Wage cuts attempts are made irrespective of unemployment situation. Continued propaganda, agitation and vigilence is the only way to prevent further onslaughts against the workers.

Applications

The beginners class on the Program of the Workers Party has taken very well.

The following applications were accepted:

WOBBLIES, BACK AT CONCRETE, ARE PLANNING STRIKE

Conditions Make Them Fight Despite Conn

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONCRETE, Wash., Jan. 22.—Repetition of the strike of 700 men on the construction job of the Baker River hydroelectric project at Concrete, which resulted in the forcible and illegal deportation of some 200 I. W. W. and their fellow workers out of Skagit county by Sheriff Conn Nov. 10, is predicted by I. W. W. who have returned to the job in large numbers.

Unrest is becoming more noticeable among the 600 men. The men struck against conditions they regarded as little better than peonage—miserable wages, filthy blankets in squalid bunk houses, poor food, a dangerous job on which men were injured daily because the company failed to take even the most meager precautions to safeguard them. Rocks hurtling down the hillside in an uncovered sluice trough knocked three workmen unconscious within an hour; the men had been pleading for days to have the sluice protected by higher sideboards.

When they struck, the men maintained an impenetrable picket line for three weeks, until the Stone & Webster Co. became so enraged that Sheriff Conn carted the men out of town in motor trucks. Strikebreakers were herded in, but the old workers have gradually filtered among them again, with a host of more militant I. W. W. planning a doubly-effective strike.

District Four Reports Only Half Strength

WHEN the pilot ordered "pull for the shore," how many of the crew bent to their oars and pulled? Just half of them! And what did the other half do? They rested. And the ship—did it reach safety? No, it went on the rocks.

That was in the olden, golden days when men were galley slaves and life was never begun. And today? Well, some Communists are Communists, and some are . . . resting on their oars.

To make the DAILY WORKER safe for 1925, just 24 branches in District 4 have pulled. But they have been handicapped because 25 branches have not lifted a finger—have not given a Red Cent to the Insurance Drive. As a result, only a quarter of the campaign quota has been raised: only $408.00. As an average, this is less than a dollar a member, for the total membership numbers 541.

Thus, the inactive sap the strength of the militant. For instance, not one of all the Italian branches have given a boost to help the district.

But the final test has not been made. It is not yet too late for District 4 to mobilize its full strength. Before Feb. 1, work is to be done—among the militants as well as among the non-combatants.

A pledge of $300 has been received from the Finnish branch of Buffalo, N. Y. District Organizer T. R Sullivan reports that it is just a matter of time before this and other pledges and quotas will be secured. Branch secretaries, federation secretaries and DAILY WORKER agents must co-operate with him to make good. The present record makes plain what accomplishment lies ahead.

CAN MAKE NO NEW TWO AND A HALF INTERNATIONAL

Tranmael and Hoeglund Lose Ledebour

(Special to the Daily Worker)

Attempts to organize a new "two and a half" international by all the renegades of the Communist International have evidently failed, according to the official organ of the Norwegian Communist Party.

The attempt was made by Hoeglund, Tranmael and Steinberg, the leaders of this movement. According to reports from Norway, these traitors are to conduct a referendum among themselves on Feb. 15, to decide whether they shall start a new international or not.

Ledebour Has No Home.

In the preliminary conference held in Berlin during the Christmas period, George Ledebour, who—according to the claims previously made by Tranmael, Hoeglund and company—was to be the leader of the new international, was, instead, thrown out of the conference due to his advocating voting for Communists in the elections in Germany.

This was evidently enough to have him considered outside of the new anti-Communist international. Poor old Ledebour seems to have no place to go. That is where the "two and a half" international takes everyone connected with it. And "two and a half" internationalism has become about the sorriest thing in political life.

Yet there are subjective traits in many sections of the working class, sections which claim to be "Communists with reservations," and so on, that respond to the same descriptions as the more dangerous elements which really organize or try to organize a "two and a half" international.

If You Don't Know—Find Out.

The duty of Communists is to point out these deviations from the Communist line, from the line of Bolshevism. So next Sunday evening, in the lodge room at the Ashland Auditorium, on the corner of Ashland and Van Buren streets, Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party, will lecture upon the subject: "What Is Two and a Half Internationalism—and Where Does It Lead the Workers?"

Twelve Hundred More Cotton Mill Workers Get Ten Per Cent Cut

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 22.—The Lyman Mills, Holyoke cotton manufacturers, are announcing a ten percent wage cut for their 1,200 employes.

May Seize Greeks' Belongings.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—A news agency dispatch from Constantinople states that the government has ordered reprisals against the Greeks. This would means that the belongings of Greek subjects residing in Constantinople would be seized the note says.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TEXTILE BOSSES AGAINST LABOR SHOWS NEED OF WORLD UNIONISM

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Child labor is the outstanding characteristic of cotton mills in the vicinity of Tsingtao, China. According to the Textile Recorder 60 per cent of the 16,500 operatives in the 8 large mills which have been built since 1922 are children. All but one of these mills are controlled by foreign capital.

In the departments spinning yarn of finer counts, the report says, nearly all the operatives are children. The workers generally put in 12 hours a day. Daily wages range from 12c to 48c according to the nature of the work. Thus cotton cleaners receive from 20c to 28c a day, sorters from 20c to 34c while the highest wage for a spinner is 48c.

Many of the leading cotton manufacturing concerns in China are owned in Japan. One of these operating 10 mills with about 270,000 spindles and 1,600 looms in the vicinity of Shanghai has issued a circular describing the benevolent paternalism of their policy. High points in their description are:

Company housing has been developed near the mills in order that the employes may work the long hours without being away from home 14 hours or more a day. The 1,853 houses shelter 2,826 families composed of 14,285 persons. That makes an average of 9.4 persons per house. Rentals are $4 a month for a 2-story affair and $3 for a bungalow.

Modern efficiency management has been installed including a personnel department and an elaborate system of bonus payments covering production, attendance, etc.

The company attempts to eliminate the labor of children under 12 years by forbidding the hiring of children who measure less than 4 feet 2 inches in height.

The majority of spinning mills in Japan operate 20 hours a day in two shifts and the weaving mills in a single shift of 10 to 11 hours. Prior to the earthquake the government had passed a law to abolish night work for women in cotton mills but its effective date has been indefinitely postponed.

Cotton mill owners and operatives in Italy have agreed upon a 10 per cent increase in wages bringing the level just about even with the increase in the cost of living since prewar times. But in exchange the workers have agreed to a lengthening of the regular shift from 7 to 7½ hours, to an increase in the amount of overtime from 6 to 8 hours per week and to a reduction of the extra overtime rate from 40 per cent to 30 per cent of straight time wages. In addition they have given up the right to claim half pay for a fortnight in case of unemployment thru lack of orders.

Polish employers have been forced to grant very favorable working conditions because of the close proximity of the workers' republic in Russia. These include a 46-hour week, many holidays and two weeks' vacation with pay. All this new social legislation is extremely unsatisfactory from the mill owners' viewpoint, but is apparently necessary to keep wage earners from making common cause with their neighbors across the boundary.

• • •

The extent to which textile workers have lagged behind their employers in perfecting world organization is indicated by a glance at the pages of the International Cotton Bulletin. This reveals an International Federation of Master Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers associations with affiliations in England, France, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Sweden, Spain, India, Japan, China, Egypt, etc.

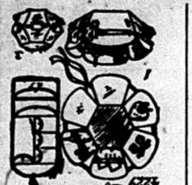
OUR DAILY PATTERNS



A PLEASING GROUP OF THINGS TO MAKE FOR GIFTS.

4229. This combination includes a work basket, a utility case, and a pin box and spool holder combined. The latter could also be developed as a button box. The work basket is good for cretonne, silk, linen or denim. The utility case may also be made of cretonne, linen, denim or crash, but is best rubber lined, or made of rubberised materials. The spool holder may be of silk, canvas, denim, cretonne or crash. A good suggestion for the work basket, would be found in tan linen, embroidered in red, and lining of red satin or sateen. Cretone in lovely pink and green tones would also make this a serviceable article. The basket sections could also be women of raffia over a cardboard foundation, and lined with silk. For the pin box the same materials would serve that could be used for the work box. For the utility case there are lovely rubberised silks, and cretonnes that will be very good for this article.

It requires 1⅛ yard of 36 inch material for No. 1, 1¼ yard of 27 inch material for No. 2, and ⅞ yard of 24 inch material for No. 3.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

The pattern is cut in one size. The cow requires ⅝ yard of 27 inch material and the horse, ⅝ yard of 36 inch material.

LORE SPEAKS AT N. Y. LIEBKNECHT MEMORIAL MEET

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—A thousand women and men went to Fordwards Hall, to pay tribute to the memories and great spirit of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg. The meeting was arranged by Workmen's Circle, Branch 620. The audience responded with fine enthusiasm to speeches by Comrade Ludwig Lore, Wm. Almazov, M. Altman, J. Klevens and the chairman, N. Koppell. A unique feature was the solemn dispersal of the audience at the close of the meeting, while the orchestra played the "International," An inspiring finale.

The Freiheit Mandolin Orchestra attuned everyone to the atmosphere of the memorial, by playing the "International" and the "Funeral March," and several other revolutionary works.

William Almazov told of the death in 1914 of Jean Jaures, at the beginning of the great war, in which the socialists changed the slogan of "Workers of the World Unite," to "Go and kill the workers of other nations."

The consequences of the war were oppressive and disheartening conditions all over the world for the workers, even for those of the victorious countries.

Yet, through the darkness of the war clouds, rang out the brave, courageous anti-war cry of Karl Liebknect. And Rosa Luxemburg joined with him in their splendid fight against militarism. In working-class history their names will always be revered.

Comrade Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkszeitung, told of the agitation to organize the young workers and of Rosa Luxemburg's remarkable work against socialist parliamentarism, in the demand for direct action.

An appeal was made for aid for political prisoners of all countries and, in response, contributions of $22 were quickly offered.

M. Altman said they had not come there to mourn, as such a personal tribute such spirits as Liebknect and Luxemburg would not have wished, and he declared that it was the Cahans and Hillquits who should mourn for themselves. Tho they are putting Ruthenberg and others behind bars, he said, Communism will not and cannot stop but will go marching on.

NEW YORK SHOPS PAY SHORT WAGE IN GARMENT WORK

Specialization Demands Amalgamation

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—"Oh lawd! Listen to what she is asking; Does we make over $20 a week?" And the group of Negro girls who had just come out of one of New York's large white goods shops laughed heartily at the question about their wages. "Why, we make $16 a week at best pressing," the girls said. Just before they had come out from work another Negro girl had said she made only $14 a week in her shop.

"We're very well satisfied with our boss," a couple of American girls said coming out of an underwear manufacturing shop. But when talking to them, one girl said that she made $34 a week for hemstiching—her friend said she was the best in the shop—when the union scale for the the work is $55. The girl admitted that she had worked four years in a Brooklyn shop where all sorts of welfare work was done for the girls but wages of $18 were usual. She had worked for two years in the Manhattan shop for higher wages without any rest room, girls kitchen, medical attendant or other welfare attention.

The usual course for a garment worker is for the girl out of school to work first in a white gods shop on underwear or on house dresses or kimonas. Then she goes to children's dresses and waistmaking and then into women's dresses and cloaks and suits, which of course pay highest wages because best organized.

Because garment making is being more and more standardized so that each worker does a comparatively small operation and can therefore work on various kinds of garments when all trades are not organized standards are jeopardized in unionized trades.

Poor Robber Must Do Term, Rich Robber Is Applauded by His Dad

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Gerald Chapman of the Leonad street mail robbery fame, has been run to earth in Muncie, Ind., and will finish his 25 years prison term in Atlanta whence he escaped about two years ago, unless he dies before he finishes his term.

Meanwhile James W. Cadoo, 23 years old, who held up a mail car single-handed in Freeport, L. I., last week, is being groomed for a life of ease and freedom because "his stun was only a boyish prank." James father is a wealthy Long Island lumber mernhant.

Reichstag, Now Tool Of Monarchists, Gives Luther Its Support

BERLIN, Jan. 22—The Reichstag gave the new government a vote of confidence this afternoon. On the roll call there were 246 yeas, and 160 noes. 39 not voting.

Killed When Airplane Is Shot At.

TANGIER, Jan. 22.—The observer was killed, but the pilot escaped unhurt in the crash of a Spanish Fokker airplane back of the French barracks here, it was announced today. The ship was shot down by Riff tribesmen.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Every day under this head you will learn not only what BUILDERS thruout the country are doing to build a greater newspaper, but also practical suggestions to accomplish more for OUR paper. Tell us what YOU are doing—and we will "tell the world."

Chicago and Pittsburgh Are At It Now!

LOCAL CHICAGO is getting up steam in a city campaign for the DAILY WORKER. Comrade Thurber Lewis is being kept as busy as a one-eyed man in a three ring circus, as all the workers securing signatures on petitions in the local aldermanic elections are getting subs for the daily.

But that makes only one iron in the fire. Branches are also endeavoring to reach a sub quota already set and the prospects are bright for a substantial increase before another few weeks have passed.

Not to be outdone Local Pittsburgh is beginning to "warm up" to action despite the season. Comrade Fred H. Merrick, city agent, is getting the local Communist machine "hitting on all six" in a campaign for 1,000 subs to be secured EXCLUSIVELY from people outside of the party who are not now subscribers to the DAILY WORKER. Prizes will soon be announced to go to the outstanding individuals and branches.

A feature worthy of adoption by all locals is the initiation of a drive for shop sales at the gates of the principal industrial plants. Bundle orders are now going forward for sale at the great Westinghouse plant to be followed with others as soon as more agents can be obtained for shop sales.

The brightest prospects are looming up in this town with a dark, smoky reputation.

BOSTON LETTISH WORKERS HONOR LENIN'S MEMORY AND SEND RUTHENBERG GREETINGS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 22.—The undying memory of Nikolai Lenin was honored by more than 300 Lettish workers of Boston Sunday, Jan. 18, at the Lenin Memorial meeting.

The meeting was arranged by the Boston Lettish branch of the Workers (Communist) Party and was one of the best meetings ever arranged.

A splendid concert program was furnished by the branch singing chorus and by the Lettish young people's orchestra conducted by Comrade E. J. Sugar. Solemn, revolutionary spirit prevailed all thru the meeting and especially when the speakers outlined the role of Lenin in the world revolution and mentioned the bloody days of January, 1905, in Petrograd, Riga and other parts of the then czarist Russia. Many of the Lettish workers participated in the January struggles; they paid the price of blood and they remember well the beginning of the end of czarism.

Telegram to Ruthenberg.

The meeting pledged itself to follow the red star of Leninism under the dark clouds of reaction in this kingdom of Morgans and Rockefellers. The following telegram was unanimously adopted by the meeting and transmitted to Comrade Ruthenberg:

"Charles E. Ruthenberg,
"State Prison,
"Jackson, Michigan.

"We, three hundred Lettish workers of Boston, assembled at Lenin memorial mass meeting called by the Boston Lettish Branch, Workers Party, send your our sympathy and greetings. We are with you, Comrade Ruthenberg. We pledge to continue your work for the working class and will fight for your freedom."

Collection for Defense.

Collection of the meeting amounted to $67.00, and the entire proceeds of the meeting will go for the Michigan defense.

RUSSIAN PEASANT COMRADES SEND BEAUTIFUL, EMBROIDERED ARTICLES TO AID THE RUTHENBERG DEFENSE

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The peasant women of Kharkov, in the Ukraine, to prove their solidarity and sympathy with the workingclass victims of capitalist justice, have made unusually beautiful embroideries for their benefit, of which 168 pieces only have reached America. The Civic Club of New York, at 14 W. 12th St., has consented to give the use of its committee room for the display and sale of the unusual collection.

These 168 pieces consist of table cloths, bureau covers, dresses, blouses, pillow cases, cushion covers, tea cloths, napkin sets, and window hangings. They are made of the finest Russian homespun linens and are of the most unusually fine workmanship.

The Labor Defense Council has charge of the collection and the proceeds will go for the defense of our class war prisoners.

They will be on sale at the Civic Club for one week, Thursday, Jan. 22 to 29, inclusive.

The prices are such that a prospective buyer who saw some of the lovely pieces when arrived said: "I'm ashamed to take them at that price. You will have to mark them up a bit for me."

We would advise readers of the DAILY WORKER who would avail themselves of the sale to come early as it is expected that the collection will not last out the week. Comrade Rose Pastor Stokes will be in charge of the sale at the club.

ARMY MEN TO DECIDE PAXTO HIBBEN'S CA

Final Decision Rest Hands of Three Offi

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Afte eighteen months' fight Captain ton Hibben's case goes for fina cision to the three army officers will decide whether he may retai commission in the U. S. army, o feit it because of his sympathy the Russian Republic and his su of the recognition movement.

The war department is acti trying Captin Hibben for treaso der the guise of an investigatio to his fitness to remain an officer, the legal argument he is filing fore Brig. Gen. William Barclay sons, president of the military b sitting in the Hibben case. The gument, prepared by Hibben's cou Major Joseph H. San, Field Arti Reserve Corps, says:

"What else are 'activities inimic the constituted government' by accused of 'holding beliefs favor to enemies of the United States ernment'? The charge, in fine, is Captain Hibben has violated his as an officer, and three gentle sitting informally about a table expected to decide that fact, wit the constitutional safeguards to wh every American citizen is entitled.

The charges against the liberal tain are a recrudescence of "slush" produced during the " raids" of 1920, says a statement Ma San issued after his arguments w filed. The attorney general, he clared, could find no legal grou against Captain Hibben and the w department was now seeing to rev his commission through "irreg proceedings." scheme thru, everyone must register with the police and be finger printed and photographed. In Buenos Aires, workers arrested for picketing and violation of injunctions are refused identification cards by the police and are refused employment by the employers.

WARREN S. STONE, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is the darling of the liberals who like to coddle some labor leader who is clever enough to hide his reactionary policies beneath a veil of liberal abstractions. Stone was the chief labor backer of LaFollette in that gentleman's race for the presidency. The locomotive chief is president of several banks and investment companies and chairman of the board of directors of a couple of scab coal companies. But Stone has not confined his business activities to banking and coal mining. A circular that reached the office a few days ago shows that he has more irons in the fire.

THIS circular shows that Stone is president of the Hobert-Stone company of Cleveland. This is a manufacturing and distributing company which manufactures articles of wear used by railroaders. This company is not even ostensibly a co-operative proposition such as the scab coal mines are that is owned by members of the brotherhood. This company is one of Stone's sidelines and the circular we have seen is addressed to the members of the brotherhood urging them to buy Stone's products. Some labor leader!

THE current issue of the United Mine Workers' Journal carries a report of Stone's scab Coal Rivers Colleries Coal company, made by a representative of the U. M. W. of A. to the executive board of that organization. We have no kind feelings for the bureaucratic officials of the U. M. W. of A.; they are just as reactionary as Stone, but the facts concerning Stone's operation of his scab mines have not been refuted. After the Jacksonville agreement was signed between the poerators in the central competitive field and the union, Stone demanded that his employes sign wage contracts to work under the 1917 scale. They refused. Sin then he has refused to recogniz union and has waged war agains union coal diggers, even going to extreme of evicting them from homes in the middle of winter.

STONE claims that his coal mi business is run on co-operati principles. It is no more co-operativ than the United States Steel corpo tion. The stock in the concern owned largely by members of th Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineer Some of the union coal miners pu chased stock, but they have bee evicted while scabs who have not single share of stock are filling the places. The only questions asked Stone of his former employes is "Will you work for the 1917 scale?" If they answer "yes" they can sta in their homes; if they answer "no" they are evicted.

PROFIT-SHARING has been advanced as a solution of the conflict between capitalism and labor. It is the theoretical foundation for the fallacy of class collaboration. Employer and employe can get along by sharing in the profits from industry, say the reformists. The fate of the union miners who held stock in Stone's mine is a convincing answer to this kind of bunk. Capitalism, whether under union auspices or otherwise, can only work in one way. That is, to exploit the workers to the limit. There is no way of bridging the chasm between labor and capitalism except to abolish the latter.

Leave Defense to Attorneys.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen," and other popular novels, will leave to his attorneys defense of charges that he offended a friendly nation in his attack on King Alfonse of Spain, he announced today. The Spanish author will remain at Mentone until called for trial he said.

Allies to Reply to German Note.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The allies now have a final report on the military situation in Germany and are preparing a detailed reply to the recent German note of protest against the continued occupation of the Cologne bridgehead.

"Our Empire"

The London Daily Herald carries an advertisement in a recent issue of a series of "brilliant and statesmanlike" articles from the pen of J. T. Thomas, colonial minister in the MacDonald government, to appear in "Answers," one of the string of publications founded by the late and unlamented imperialist Lord Northcliffe.

When the labor party was called upon by the king of England to form a government and Ramsay MacDonald kissed the royal toe, yellow socialists all over the world boasted that the policy of class collaboration and "letting evolution take its course" as against the policy of class struggle and revolution, was vindicated. The Communists pointed out that the assumption of power by the labor party did not mean the conquest of power on the part of the working class or their emancipation, but that the bourgeoisie were in a tight fix and needed the labor fakers to pull them out of a hole. That is what happened.

Ramsay MacDonald guided the destinies of the empire as carefully as did his predecessor, Stanley Baldwin. He slaughtered Hindoos and Egyptians, who thought they had a right to some liberty in their native land. He built battleships to defend the loot of the pirate capitalists who own the British government. He threatened to use the armed forces in strikes, against the workers. What more could he do?

J. H. Thomas looked after His Majesty's colonies. He explained to the workers of Britain that the empire was their empire, that it was to their interests to put down "native" uprisings and exploit the colonial peoples. He performed his duty just as conscientiously as the comparatively unknown flunkey who preceded him. The labor party government brought no change in British foreign policy until the labor movement forced it to guarantee a loan to Soviet Russia. Then the bourgeoisie decided that danger was around the corner and kicked it out.

Today J. H. Thomas is writing for a bourgeois paper about "our empire." The Daily Herald, an alleged socialist paper, publishes the advertisement. In doing so the Daily Herald participates in the treachery of J. H. Thomas, who is selling for cash the confidence that the masses of British workers still repose in him. He is instilling into their minds the pernicious doctrine that Britain and all her colonies belong to the British workers, and that they are co-partners with the bloated imperialists in the business of looting the victims of the pirate empire.

The British labor party has given fool proof evidence of the futility of expecting a labor party government to represent the interests of the working class. Wherever they have been in office, they have acted as the willing servants of the ruling class. The Right Honorable J. H. Thomas is a horrible example of a yellow socialist serving his masters. But Victor Berger or Morris Hillquit would act no differently if Wall Street decided that the Coolidges and Davises were no longer able to keep the masses from revolting.

The Same Old Northcliffe

Perhaps some of our readers believe that Lord Northcliffe is dead. He isn't. He simply stopped editing the London Times and took a long vacation. Being a staunch imperialist, Northcliffe still watches over the empire from his invisible vacation land.

You can't keep some people from breaking into the news. Northcliffe is one of them. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and several other bourgeois gentlemen held a meeting in Queen's Hall, London, recently. The hall was crowded. It is no wonder. Who would not go to see a bunch of bourgeois nuts offer themselves as object lessons on the intellectual deterioration of capitalist society?

According to the author of Sherlock Holmes, Northcliffe does not like the Times editorials. He says they are too long. Some critics find the same fault with the DAILY WORKER editorials. But we submit that ours are interesting. Northcliffe resented his being given credit for popularizing the "bogey of Bolshevism" as a means of scaring the masses. The best way to keep the masses in tow, he told Conan Doyle, is to "tickle 'em."

We suggest that Conan Doyle get in touch with Lenin!

A man who never looked at the clock—press agent stuff—left a thriving business to six of his employes recently. He was in the cloak and suit business. The gift looks fishy. The benefactor's name is Almerindo Portfolio, and when he turned into Santa Claus his brother Pasquale became president and treasurer of the new firm. The question before the house is: What's the matter with the rest of Portfolio's employes? Where do they come in? The story is mental food for [illegible]

The Irrespressible Mahoney

There is a person in St. Paul, Minnesota, by the name of William Mahoney. He is editor of a weekly labor paper, which he maneuvered into being made the official organ of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, much to the chagrin of a rival faker in Minneapolis, who edits the Labor Review.

Mahoney is ambitious and has more schemes for getting his name into the capitalist papers than a conjurer has tricks. At one time Mahoney worked the "progressive" gag for breaking into print. As a phraseologically fiery radical, the capitalist papers got a kick out of featuring this harmless middle-aged property owner. On the other hand Mahoney could prove in his weekly sheet that he was a perfectly tractable progressive who would never upset the capitalist apple cart.

There was a time when millions of American workers and poor farmers thought they wanted a labor party. Scores of American labor fakers and capitalist politicians thought they didn't, but did not say so openly. Their policy was one of watching and waiting and making Delphic promises.

The Communists took the lead in endeavoring to organize the growing political consciousness of the masses. This caused the labor fakers to sentence the Communists to political isolation. But they could not carry out the sentence.

The Communists advocated class political action for the workers and poor farmers as against a united front with the bourgeoisie as urged by the progressives and reactionaries. One of those who stood for a class farmer-labor party was Mahoney. But when LaFollette blew his bugle and the fakers followed him as the rats of Hamelin followed the Pied Piper (tho unfortunately not into the ocean) Mahoney joined the procession.

At the Cleveland conference of the C. P. P. A. Mahoney was not allowed to sit with the respectables. He was unclean, because in a weak moment he invited the Communists to participate in the St. Paul convention. But he was willing to make amends and since then he has made penance in sackcloth and ashes for his progressive sins.

Mahoney recently figured in the expulsion of two Communists from the St. Paul Central Labor Council. He aided the reactionaries. Again he breaks into the news. This time by reading the Communists out of the Minnesota farmer-labor federation.

In doing this, Mahoney will win back whatever credit he lost with the capitalist class during the days in which he sowed his radical wild oats. The political roue has now turned evangelist. If Mahoney thinks that he is hurting the Communists by his action, even his addled brain will soon be convinced that he has hurt his fake farmer-labor party more than he hurt the Communists.

The workers and farmers of Minnesota have in the Workers (Communist) Party the only political party that fights for their interests. The farmer-labor federation is now in the hands of bankers, labor fakers and petty bourgeois professional politicians who will use it to further their own ambitions and as a club to shake graft out of the capitalists. Without the Communists the farmer-labor federation is like a body without a soul. It is a political corpse. Mahoney is welcome to the job of being its undertaker.

Paste This in Your Hat

If anyone has a notion that the employers want an open shop in order to be able to raise the pay of the workers, or even if anyone has the insane idea that a successful open shop campaign won't make any difference in the general wage rate, merely because he himself is not a member of organized labor, he should read the following editorial taken from the Minnesota Banker for the month of December, 1920.

If anyone says, as some labor fakers do sometimes say, that the "radicals" and "left wing" are "helping the bosses" by "disturbing things," you may read that chap this quotation from the Minnesota Banker. So paste the following in your hat:

> "The open shop movement, now well under way all over the United States, is deemed by its proponents as the prime means of bringing about lowered labor costs and with them increased production. When such a gigantic force in the industry of the country as the Bethlehem Steel company openly announces its aid for this movement, even to the extent of refusing to sell its product to manufacturers not favoring the open shop idea, it is at once evident what vast momentum the open shop movement is obtaining.
> "There is no question as to the economic value of the open shop. But, at the same time, those who are pushing it must be most careful in their methods. The open shop movement is a powder magazine. A carelessly thrown match might start a nation-wide conflagration. The closed shop is zealously fought for by the radical wing of labor organization. The open shop can be the most readily brought about by the elimination of this element as a power in organized labor.
> "The conservative labor man is one to whom sound argument and sound horse sense appeal. He is the hope of the open shop proponent and upon him, in the final analysis, will rest the matter of accepting the idea philosophically, in the right spirit, without disrupting the entire industrial situation by means of disastrous strikes and lockouts. The open shop argument must be addressed, therefore, to the better sense and judgement of the conservative in organized labor. He must be won over to the soundness of the proposition.
> "This is the ideal thing to do and it can be done in many parts of the country. In others, where the radical element is too strongly entrenched, there is, of course, but one final thing to do, and that is to beat them by force. They must be locked out and licked until the conservatives see the light and realize that the rights of capital must be considered. This harsher method, however, should not be employed until all other plans have failed."

The Mad Dog of Menshevism

By Moissaye J. Olgin

(From the Novy Mir, Russian Communist Daily.)

THERE recently arrived in the United States one of the famous gang of the menshevik leaders. He came here to agitate among the American workers against Soviet Russia and for the International of Scheidemann. He came here for the same reason as those bankrupt aristocrats who are coming here to revive their business. In their homeland these Abramoviches are bankrupt. The working masses have turned away from them. The great Russian revolution branded them with scorn. The future holds nothing for them in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. America is big and plentiful, and here there are uncountable fools. That is why the Abramoviches are coming here hoping to strengthen their failing political credit.

But it isn't only Abramovich as such. It is the American menshevism and the American social-patriotism that are involved. Abramovich came at the invitation of the yellow Jewish newspaper Forward. He came to aid the reputation of this organ-parasite that grew fat at the cost of the Jewish workers. One bankrupt helps the other. But will it help any? Even the backward American workers are beginning to turn away from these brazen traitors. The class struggle is growing sharper on the one hand thanks to the steady capitalist oppression, and on the other—thanks to the steady work of the Communists.

But still we may say a few words about the enemy that has just arrived.

Abramovich is one of the most poisonous informers against the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; one of the maddest enemies of Communism. When he talks about the revolution and the revolutionary proletariat he chokes with madness. When he mentions the victorious Russian Communist Party, his face turns into the grimace of the insane. One can feel that it is a personal madness; a personal account.

What is the matter?

Abramovich cannot forgive himself because he missed a revolutionary holiday. The poor menshevik figured wrong. When the great masses of workers and soldiers began to rise in order to capture power, he thot it was an insane mutiny. When, from one end to the other of the vast country there sounded the slogan: All Power to the Soviets!—he held on to the folds of Kerensky and Chernov. When the Red Guard at the head of the revolutionary workers of Leningrad was fighting to capture the Winter Palace, our menshevik hysterically cried: "Help!" When the Second Congress of the Soviets in the great day of Oct. 25 (Nov. 7) became the supreme power and inaugurated the new Soviet system, Abramovich remained with the "democracy." The poor menshevik did not grasp what was going on. He was sure that the Soviet power would exist for only a day or two, or a week.

He was preparing to celebrate, with those who would "overthrow the Bolsheviks," and would bring back to Russia the bourgeois system. He was drunk with hopes. His awakening was a rude one. When he finally found himself after the world explosion, the revolution passed by and went ahead with giant strides casting him, and those with him, into the gutter.

It happened that he missed the greatest event in the history of the working class and in the history of the world. He became useless garbage. The victorious revolution has thrown him aside as one would shove aside a filthy cur.

And a filthy cur he has been since that time, running with slavver dripping tongue around the camp of the victors, sniffing about in search of that which may be found in the rear of a building under construction.

Here he notices a pile of garbage, there a few scraps from the table, etc., and all that which is unavoidable at a great historical job, all that the builders themselves are trying to correct—he attacks as a starving dog attacks a carcass.

He feeds on that, without noticing the great things that are transpiring in the land of the Soviets. This offal, with the aid of the menshevik press, he spreads all over the world. This offal he brought here—to the United States.

The workers will resent it as the Russian revolution resented the Abramoviches and all his kind.

Too brightly across the world shine the hammer and sickle, the symbol of victory of the working class!

For the Fighting Proletariat of Poland!

To the Proletarians of All Countries!

THE Polish bourgeoisie, in alliance with the Polish socialist party, has introduced an era of most brutal repression against the Communist Party of Poland, which is heroically fighting for the emancipation of the working class, the working peasantry and the suppressed peoples of Poland. The Communist member of parliament, Comrade Lanzuski, and the Ukrainian members of parliament are the first victims of this campaign.

Hunger, misery and the most brutal exploitation is driving the Polish proletariat and the propertyless peasantry into the fight against the ruling classes. In the border states, in spite of the military dictatorship and of the death sentences, the flames of revolt are again arising among the doubly exploited masses of White Russian and Ukrainian peasantry. The White Russian and Ukranian peasant is fighting, weapon in hand, against the Polish landowner for national emancipation and the right to self-determination. An economic and financial crisis of enormous extent, as well as unemployment and impoverishment of the masses, is undermining the foundations of the bourgeois feudal Polish republic. The ruling classes of Poland are attempting to master the difficulties of the situation with the aid of terror and streams of blood.

The Communist Party of Poland, which is suppressed and exposed to the blows of an unheard-of persecution, is organizing and conducting the struggle of the masses who are more and more threatening the rule of the bourgeoisie. Its influence is growing every day. It is gathering around the flag of Communism the entire flower of the working class who have been tested in fierce revolutionary struggles. Its infinite devotion to the cause of the emancipation of the working class, its heroic fight on all fronts of the class struggle—in the dungeons of the Polish secret police, upon the barricades of the revolutionary struggles and in the "democratic" parliament, where the Communist deputies raised flaming protests against the capitalist reign of violence and national suppression, which nailed down the whole fraud and hypocrisy of parliamentary democracy—all this is winning for the Communist Party the confidence of ever wider masses of the working people.

The parliamentary fraction of the Communist Workers Party in Poland has courageously and resolutely taken up the fight for the emancipation of the workers, of the peasants and the suppressed nationalities. The bourgeois-feudal rulers in Poland and their allies the Polish socialist party—these faithful watchdogs of the Second International and of world imperialism on the frontier of Soviet Russia, from whom all class conscious proletarians of Poland have long since turned from in disgust—are now endeavoring, drunken with the workers' blood which has been shed, to silence the Communist parliamentary fraction.

The bourgeoisie and the Polish socialist party are seeking by this means to prevent the exposure, by the revolutionary representatives of the proletariat and of the poor peasantry in the sejm, of their lies, their deceit and their base betrayal of the interests of the working masses.

The Polish sejm decided to deliver Comrade Lanzuski into the hands of the secret police on account of a speech which he delivered at a meeting of the railway workers. Comrade Lanzuski—a worker, a railway man, is accused of high treason. According to the laws of "democratic" Poland, the penalty for this crime is capital punishment.

The arrest of Comrade Lanzuski had long been prepared and did not come unexpected. During the whole day the police of the Polish bourgeoisie were lying in wait before the sejm building in order to arrest Comrade Lanzuski immediately the decision to hand over had been adopted by the sejm. In spite of this, Comrade Lanzuski appeared before the sejm in order to hurl in the face of the Polish bourgeoisie and of the Polish socialist party the defiance of the revolutionary proletariat. The accused became the accuser.

"Communism is growing and the day is not distant when it will sweep you off the face of the earth," declared Comrade Lanzuski in his speech; and these bold words of the proletarian champion will find a response, not only in Poland, but everywhere where there are revolutionary workers and peasants.

Comrade Lanzuski is torn from the ranks of the active champions of the proletariat, as was Comrade Dombal two years ago. But the Communist Party of Poland lives and will continue its fight, in spite of the white terror and in spite of the campaign of lies of the bourgeois and social democratic press.

The Polish bourgeoisie and its confederates intend, by the arrest of Comrade Lanzuski, and of three Ukranian deputies, to provoke the proletariat. The Polish rulers wish to arrange a massacre of St. Bartholomew, according to the Esthonian model; they wish to carry out a bloodbath among the revolutionary Poles.

This must not be permitted!

Revolutionary proletarians of all countries, remember that the reactionary clique in Poland form the outposts of world counter-revolution!

Protest against the shameful acts of the Polish bourgeoisie and the social traitors. Protest against the arrest of the working class members of parliament and the inhuman treatment of the workers. Protest against the unrestrained and ruthless suppression of nationalities in Poland.

The workers and poor peasants of Poland, who in the course of their long struggle against czarism have brought so many sacrifices to the altar of the revolution, have a right to reckon upon your solidarity in the hour when, under the flag of democracy, a new attack is being carried out against the workers of Poland.

Demand the liberation of the undaunted revolutionaries of Poland. Demand the liberation of the thousands and thousands of Polish, Ukranian, White Russian and Lithuanian workers and peasants who are pining in the dungeons of the Polish democracy.

Demand the liberation of Comrade Lanzuski!

Down with the white terror!

Long live the Communist Party of Poland!

The Executive Committee of the Communist International.

"Werther" by the Chicago Civic Opera Co.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

There are four kinds of opera. Lowest in the scale are works like "La Traviata," which consists of exactly three melodies hung on to a bad plot. Next is the glorious boob type, like "Il Trocatore," in which a trashy melodrama is set with catchy, brilliant tunes, which are never dramatically appropriate. Then there are the masterpieces, like "The Dusk of the Gods" or "Boris Godunov," in which every last line, every holding tone in a fourth bassoon has meaning and significance.

"Werther," which the Chicago Civic Opera Company gave at the Auditorium last Thursday night, belongs to the class of pleasantly unimportant operas, along with a good many others. The opera is by Jules Massenet, adapted from the novel, "The Sorrows of Werther," by Goethe.

Werther is in love with Charlotte, who is engaged to marry Albert. Altho she returns Werther's affection, she marries Albert, because her mother had made her promise accordingly when the old lady was dying. Three years later Werther, who still loves Charlotte, meets her husband in a small village, who counsels him to attempt to work up some affection for Sophie, Charlotte's sister. But Werther finds that after the absinthe is gone he gets no kick out of trying to eat the glass. He visits Charlotte in her home. He leaves her, sends for Albert's pistols, which Albert makes Charlotte handle, shoots himself, and dies in Charlotte's arms.

It is a dramatic tale, this, of how the hand of the dead can cause suffering and suicide. In its operatic form it has one fault. The hero of the story, Werther himself, is a sort of animated toothache, he has nothing to sing but sobs and supposedly heart-rending appeals.

The music is not so important as that of some other Massenet operas. There is nothing at all here comparable to the "Meditation" in "Thais," or the ballet music in "Le Cid." In the third act is a lovely solo for Charlotte, as she tells her sister of Werther's love for her, and at the very end is a most effective duet for Charlotte and Werther, as the hero dies. The rest is insignificant. It is not bad. There is not a note in the score that is as bad as the first act of "Lohengrin," but it is simply unimportant music.

The performance brot out a little day who is a real opera singer. Her name is Helen Freud, and she played Sophie. In "Louise" this same girl is the nastiest little beggar in Paris but in "Werther" she is quite charming. Her voice is small, both in volume and quality, but what there is of it is very fine. She knows how to handle it, and she knows how to act.

Mary Garden played Charlotte. She was good in the part because Mary Garden is always good in any part. She could play one of the giants in "Das Rheingold" and get away with it, if necessary.

Ferdinand Ansseau played the unsatisfactory role of Werther, and Alexander Kipnis was the Albert.

The scenery for the opera was gorgeous. The company spared nothing to make the four sets, a garden scene a village street, and two interiors, as beautiful as possible.

THE HIRED MAN.

We've sweated and struggled and slaved
Like the beasts we drive ahead,
And over us you have raved,
Christ, how we've wished you dead!

In our buying and our selling
You have gyped us all you could,
And always left us telling
That you thought our life was good.

We have lived in dirty hovels,
Worn the oldest clothes you've seen,
And you read in your cheap novels
Of big open spaces green.

Wives once pretty stand up with us,
Work gnarled hands and stooping back,
Cooking, mending, washing, muss
Till their backbones nearly crack.

Damn you, and you sit and holler,
Damn you, how you like to whine,
Curse your dirty filthy dollars
And your little petty mind.

Think that we will always stand it
Always be for [illegible] your butt?
The hired man's day is surely coming
Then we'll see who's got the guts.

Then with us poor country hicks
You'll take no more the country cure,
You'll know how broken blisters stick
As you shovel fresh manure.

Yes, our day is surely coming,
Coming and what then?
You will make the great discovery
That the hired hands are REAL men.

Textile Barons Want Both Higher Tariff And Lower Wage Rate

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 22.—Morgan Butler, treasurer of Butler Mills and president of the National Cotton Manufacturers' association, pleads for the New Bedford community to "grasp the importance of the tariff and support wholeheartedly as a common cause every endeavor to make the tariff adequate to protect our textile business," in his review of the year and outlook for 1925.

Senator William Morgan Butler's son claims the 1922 tariff insufficient to protect New Bedford fine cotton goods.

BRISBANE GUEST AS PLUTES PLAN WORLD CONQUEST

British and American Capital Now United

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The Right Honorable E. H. Young, M. P., formerly financial secretary of the British treasury, and for some time a visitor to America to effect an alliance between British and American capitalists, told an audience of fifty financiers than England America now exert a dual control over world finance.

Young stated that formerly Great Britain controlled the world money bags, but "the young American giant with new ideas had assumed at least an equal part in a dual control." Young spoke under the auspices of the Bankers' Club.

"What is needed is metal to join the two countries in international bonds," Young added. "That metal is international financial relationship."

Prominent at this gathering of American millionaires and industrialists was Arthur Brisbane, who performs the job of keeping the employes of this gathering satisfied with their low wages. All the millionaires smiled at Brisbane, and told him he was doing a good job in filling the minds of the workers with fantastic fairy tales in order to make them forget their empty stomachs. In addition to Brisbane, the guests included Charles M. Schwab, Bernard Baruch, Newcomb Carlton, Charles A. Peabody, James H. Perkins, Thomas W. Lamont, Paul M. Warburg and Owen D. Young. Morgan's banking connections were heavily represented.

PUS[illegible] THE WAR ON CHILD LABOR

BITTELMAN SCORES [illegible]MOVICH AS ENEMY OF SOVIET RUSSIA AND MURDERER OF EUROPEAN WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Alexander Bittelman, speaking for the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party before a conference of active party workers here tonight, exposed the counter-revolutionary mission of R. Abramovich, Russian menshevik, who is in the United States organizing against the revolutionary workers everywhere and against the Soviet government of Russia in particular.

Full of facts and information disclosing the true role of Abramovich, Bittelman's speech was also a rallying cry to the revolutionary workers to resist and overcome the propaganda of Abramovich, and to acquaint the workers of America with the true facts of Soviet Russia, Georgia, Armenia and the struggle for world unity of the trade unions. Comrade Bittelman said:

A Missionary of Counter-Revolution.

"R. Abramovich, a prominent menshevik and a leading figure in the Second International, is now paying a visit to the United States. The purpose of his visit is quite obvious. It is to win support for the Russian counter-revolution. It is to continue the struggle against Soviet Russia which Charles E. Hughes was compelled to give up. It is to defame and to discredit the revolutionary working class movement of the world, and, incidentally, to raise money for the Russian counter-revolutionists.

The International of Traitors.

"Abramovich is a well-known figure in that international fraternity of renegades and betrayers of the working class which parades in the world under the name of the Second International. He belongs to the same tribe as Noske and Scheidemann. Only with this difference—that Noske, Ebert and Scheidemann are still in power by the grace and in the home of the bourgeoisie, while Abramovich was ignominously defeated and thrown into the waste basket by the successful mighty uprising of the workers and peasants of Russia.

"Now Abramovich and his kind are trying to come back. They have been trying to do so for the last seven years. In company with Lloyd George and Churchill, Clemenceau and Nolens, Horthy and Masaryk, these Russian mensheviks whom Abramovich represents, have been conspiring and plotting against the Soviet power by all means at their disposal. They have been inciting the rich peasants and expropriated bourgeoisie to uprisings and insurrections against the rule of the workers and poor peasants. They have been receiving large sums of money from the imperialist governments of England and France to finance expeditions of bandits into the cities and villages of Russia to plunder, burn and murder. They are continually agitating in every capital of Europe against recognition of Soviet Russia and for new murderous interventions.

The Soviet Government is Now Stronger.

"As you know, the European imperialists have been doing all in their power to 'oblige' the Russian mensheviks and their neighbors to the right, the Russian white guard, and incidentally to reduce Russia to the state of a colony for imperialist plunder and enrichment. You are well familiar with the numerous attempts by the capitalist governments of Europe and the United States to overthrow the Soviet government and to reimpose upon the Russian masses the

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

JAPAN is much more enthusiastic about its treaty with Russia than any of the American capitalist papers whose comments on the pact have so far come to our attention. They cannot understand how Japan, a rather wise nation, could allow itself to be bamboozled by the "unscrupulous troublemaker of Moscow." But they croak disconsolately. The fact of the matter is that they feel more like crying than crowing. The Soviet government continues to survive despite all their best prophets. The most recent diplomatic victory of the workers' and peasants' government affects the interests of the United States even more so that similar action on the part of England and France.

AS the capitalist papers predict, the movement for recognition will [illegible] in Washington before next Christmas. It is reported in the capital that the Hughes' policy which wantonly insulted Soviet Russia and gave aid and comfort to her enemies will be modified gradually until the necessary psychological preparation is completed for a complete about-face. Owing to the fact that the Russian debt to the United States is trivial, compared to what other countries owe, the financial question would not prove a serious obstacle. Raphael Abramovich is out of luck. Nothing succeeds like success and while his socialist stoolpigeons may win sympathy in some quarters, they cannot live on tears.

THE labor fakers of Minneapolis have succeeded in ousting Dar Stevens from the Trades and Labor assembly. Stevens has been a delegate to the assembly for the past sixteen years. He is a member of a trade union for twenty years. The reactionaries failed to expel him on the ground, that as a Communist he had no right to be a delegate, but the lickspittle Robly D. Cramer, editor of the Labor Review went around to homes of the delegates and urged them to help in ousting Stevens because, according to a complaint signed by Cramer and others, Stevens had "slandered tho officialdom" and was guilty of "conduct not becoming a member of the Trades and Labor Assembly." His crime was that he refused to sell out as did Cramer.

MINOR'S TRIAL TO BE DELAYED BY PROSECUTION

Ruthenberg's Warden Is Fired by Governor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 23.—The trial of Robert Minor, who was scheduled to appear before the Berrien county court of St. Joseph, Mich., will be delayed until the United States supreme court finally acts on C. E. Ruthenberg's appeal for a reversal of his sentence, George Bookwalter, prosecuting attorney, has announced.

The United States supreme court has been asked to reverse the decision of the Michigan state supreme court, which affirmed the sentence imposed by Judge Charles White on Ruthenberg.

Brandeis Takes Next Step.

C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, has signed the bail bond of $7,500 necessary for his release, and he will be released as soon as Justice Brandeis of the United States supreme court formally issues the writ of supersedeas which he has granted. Comrade Ruthenberg who has served two weeks of a three to ten year sentence imposed on him by the Berrien county court at St. Joseph, Michigan, will be released Monday or Tuesday.

Warden Harry S. Hulbert of the Jackson penitentiary has been fired as warden of the prison where Ruthenberg is confined because he was unable to speed up the prisoners enuf to suit Governor Groesbeck and the state prison commission. The governor met with the prison board here and decided that Hulburt was not getting enuf work out of the prisoners Hulburt was then requested for his resignation to take effect Marsh 1.

Wanted $1.20 Profit per Prisoner.

Hulburt was receiving a salary of $15,000 a year, $7,500 as warden of the Jackson prison, and $7,500 as head of all the Michigan state prison industries. The state of Michigan, under Groesbeck, wrings the last drop of profit possible from the prisoners of the state. Groesbeck announced when calling for Hulburt's resignation, that the prison industries must be made to pay the state a profit of $1.20 for every prisoner in the state. Hulburt has been able to get 60 cents per prisoner profit, and hence has been fired

Ruthenberg Sends Greetings.

Comrade Ruthenberg sent his greetings to all members of the Workers Party and all sympathizers who have been aiding the Labor Defense Council in the Michigan cases, when visited by George Maurer, secretary of the Labor Defense Council, Maurer then hurried to Lansing to secure the proper signatures of the Michigan supreme court authorities, and the clerk of the Michigan supreme court then dispatched the bail bond to Justice Brandeis, who will issue the writ that will release Ruthenberg pending his appeal.

The Jackson penitentiary where Ruthenberg is imprisoned is one of the oldest and most unsanitary in the

"Two and a Half" Internationalism, Is Forum Subject

The "Two-and-a-Half" International so named by the brilliant Bolshevik journalist, Karl Radek, was an organization standing between—in an ideological way—the yellow socialist Second International and the Third (Communist) International.

It has no organizational expression now, since its marriage to the [illegible] International, but expressions of its ideology persist in many if not all countries.

What this ideology is, and why the "Two-and-a-Half" tendency in its general development turns more to the Second than to the Third International, will be told by Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party at the open forum, lodge room, Ashland Auditorium, next Sunday evening, Jan. 25.

EAST PITTSBURGH CHALLENGES BRANCHES TO BEAT ITS MARK

Can any Workers Party branch beat our record—without having to sell their coats and hats; that's what John Kaspar of the East Pittsburgh, Pa., English branch wants to know. He writes Saturday to the DAILY WORKER enclosing $25 for insurance policies, bringing the branch's total remittance to $125, which is over $10 a member.

"Do you remember," he asks Morits J. Loeb, business manager, "that in the Pittsburgh general membership meeting I pledged $100 for our branch and I said that if I could not sell at least $100 worth of policies, 'I'll sell my hat and coat?' Now that I have already sent you $125 and will soon send $25 more, I want you to know that I still have my old hat and coat!

"Thanks to the Communist movement, it has given me a little knowledge and plenty of courage with which to carry on party activity. We militants have decided that the DAILY WORKER must live, and believe me, it will!

"I claim that the 12 members of the East Pittsburgh, Pa., English branch wins the Red Star for selling the most policies in proportion to their number," writes Comrade Kaspar. "I would like to hear if there is another branch in the United States that has contributed (in proportion) as much as our branch. If so, I challenge them to beat me!"

And are the Pittsburgh comrades going to stop with this top-notch accomplishment? Not even to take breath! "Very soon you'll receive $25 more," says Kaspar. And to make it doubly sure, he adds, "I'll be on the job selling subscriptions after the insurance drive is ended."

PLATOON SYSTEM IN SCHOOLS HIT BY COMMITTEE

The committee appointed by Superintendent William McAndrew to study the platoon schools after visiting Detroit, Pittsburgh, Akron and other cities where the system is in operation has come back with a negative report.

This report has been in the hands of McAndrew for two weeks. He has not given any verbal indication of his reactions to the report. Perhaps his recent solicitation in regard to increasing some teachers' salaries, which by the way is another one of his dead secrets which only comes out in leaks here and there, may have some connection with this committee's report.

The committee's report presents numerous reasons why the platoon schools decided upon by the board of education last summer should not be established in Chicago. Principal among them is the warning that Chicago's problems should be solved in its own way. The platoon will not be an improvement on Chicago's school system. Its installation will be very costly, it will keep the children in school long hours thru waste of time and it will not add to the cultural education of the children.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE CONVENTION OF LOCAL CHICAGO ON TOMORROW

SPECIAL CHILD LABOR EDITION OF THE YOUNG WORKER

The next issue of The Young Worker will be a special Child Labod Edition. The latest and most complete news on the progress of the Child Labor Amendment in the various states will be contained in this issue; and a full Communist program will be presented as a basis for a strong fight against child labor by the young workers in America under the leadership of the Young Workers League.

While calling upon all young workers to fight against child labor, the next issue of The Young Worker will expose the fake character of the Child Labor Amendment is only a pacifist protest against child labor and will in no way remove the conditions that are responsible for more than a million child slaves in America today. Every worker old and young should get a copy of this Special Child Labor Edition of The Young Worker. Bundle orders or single copies can be obtained by writing to The Young Worker, 1113 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

PENNA. MINERS TRADE STRIKE FOR PROMISES

To Get "a Conference" with Lewis' Gang

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 23.—The rank and file of the anthracite miners of District No. 1, U. M. W. of A., are only beginning to become aware of what happened, or what is claimed to have happened, when the general grievance committee of the district failed to spread the strike thruout the district at Wednesday's meeting and instead, made some very weak "demands" on the "special commission" sent by John L. Lewis—practically amounting to a surrender.

A Weak Committee.

This weakness of the gneral grievance committee, which all recognize as able, if it so willed, to tie up the district and force the Lewis-Cappellini machine to compel the operators to really adjust the existing grievances was shown at the very beginning of Wednesday's meeting, and even before the meeting.

It was evident before the meeting gathered that John L. Lewis' special commission" had "seen" the leaders of the general grievance committee and that pressure was going to be exerted to forestall the spread of the strike.

Fell for Promise.

Before the general grievance committee convened its executive committee met and framed a report embodying a compromise based evidently upon some unrevealed promises of the "special commission." Summed up, in exchange for not spreading the strike, the executive committee gets—a conference with the "special commission." Nothing more.

The proposal, which was adopted by the general grievance committee as a report of its executive, made by Chairman George Nallin, carried, it is true, a resolution that the charters of the locals already revoked shall be restored and no discrimination be shown the strikers, but as such restoration is not in the hands of the grievance committee, but in the power of Cappellini, who is not bound by any resolution of the committee. Cappellini and Lewis' "special commission" can only be presumed to have promised such restoration, but as they have not been forced to do so openly and officially, they may renig and disavow any such promise after they think the miners have been discouraged in trying to make their strike vote effective.

The following is the literal text of the report as submitted by the executive committee of the general strike committee, and adopted unanimously:

The Resolution Adopted.

"That the general body take no district-wide strike action at themeeting.

"That a meeting be arranged with Neal J. Ferry and the commission in an effort to adjust the Pittston strike. This meeting to be attended by the executive committee, which is made up of two men from the general grievanve committees of Lehigh Valley, Lehigh and Wilkesbarre, Hudson and Glen Alden Coal companies and by a sub-committee made up of the presidents of the ten striking local unions.

"That the revoked chaters be restored with all rights and privileges, and that no discrimination be shown against the Pittston strikers."

Costa Rica Quits the "League."

GENEVA, Jan. 23.—Costa Rica today notified the league of nations that it would resign from the league effective with January, 1927.

The announcement was contained in a communication from the Costa Rican minister in Paris in which he enclosed a check for $15,667 in payment of league dues for Costa Rica from 1921 to 192[illegible]

ITALIAN LABOR HONORS LENIN; DEFIES FASCISTI

Many Are Arrested in Street Fighting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 23.—Lenin Memorial meetings were held thruout Italy, in spite of the attempts of fascisti to suppress the demonstrations by use of violence.

In Greco, the Communist, Ettore Cambiagies, of Milan, was arrested for speaking before a huge crowd of workers commemorating the death of Lenin.

Thousands of pieces of [illegible] were distributed at this meeting, and fascisti police confiscated stacks of manifestos.

Arrest Arsizio in Milan.

In Milan, Busto Arsizio, member of the Italian Communist Party, was arrested at a Lenin demonstration in the principal square of the city. Red flags were carried by the workers who attended the meeting. When Arsizio was arrested a battle between the workers and the fascisti ensued. As Arsizio was dragged away to prison he shouted, "Hurrah for Lenin and the revolution of the workers."

In Crieste Red flags were hung from all the telegraph poles by workers. Many were arrested. In Corino ex-Deputy M. Paolino was dragged out of his home and taken to prison.

Textile Strike at Vicena.

One thousand textile workers in the factories at Vicena have gone on strike because they were denied a salary increase.

In the meeting of the ministerial council, Minister Federzoni reported the Italian situation calm, despite the wide spread battles between workers and fascisti, that in many places bordered on mass revolts of the workers.

The senate, dominated by Mussolini, ratified fascisti treaties with the white guard government of Finland, and Czecho-Slovakia, regarding commerce and navigation. Mussolini is negotiating with the Balkan states for a treaty which includes measures for fighting the Communists.

That the poet D'Annunzio is still in sympathy with the fascist cause is shown by the fact that he has accepted a beautiful villa which has just been donated to him by the Mussolini government. The villa, which was formerly owned by the German emporer, is called villa Falconieri and is located at Frascati.

The fascisti grand council has announced its plans of making a great display of military force on the sixth birthday of fascism which takes place soon.

WORKERS FIGHT ENSLAVEMENT O ILLINOIS YOUT

Extract Millions fro Toil Worn Bodies

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 2[illegible]—The most bitter contest of the present session of the Illinois general assembly is looming over ratification of the proposed twentieth amendment to the constitution of the United States, which empowers congress to regulate child labor.

The Illinois manufacturers' association is vigorously opposing even this mild amendment, and child labor committees representing women's clubs and trade union organizations are fighting for ratification.

The anti-child labor committee favoring ratification by the Illinois legislature declares that the amendment is "an enabling act only." "It prescribes no particular kind of child labor law," says the pamphlet which has been widely circulated in Illinois by this committee, "except to fix an upper age limit beyond which congress may not legislate."

Communists Lead Fight.

Meanwhile, the Young Workers League is leading the fight to compel congress to enact laws for the full maintenance of all youth while they are securing an education. The Young Workers' League will [illegible] a program, and call upon all militant workers to fight for the [illegible] of child labor and control of [illegible] by the workers to prohibit the [illegible] of the youth of the [illegible].

Western Electric [illegible]

The Young Workers' League points out that there are thousands of young workers in Chicago and thruout Illinois who should be maintained by the government so that they may secure an education. The Western Electric company employs thousands of young workers of school age, who are given much less pay for doing the same work that is done by men. These workers labor for long hours stunting their growing bodies with arduous toil. The Young Workers' League de-

POOR FISH DUKE BORIS PREDICTS RETURN OF CZAR

He'd Better Stay Away from Madison Sq. Feb. 1

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—Grand Duke Boris Vladimirovich, cousin of the late czar, in an interview given here recently, predicted the fall of the Soviet regime and the reestablishment of a monarchy in Russia. When asked whether he believed that Russia will become a monarchy again, he replied, "Yes I do, because the majority of the Russian people understand that form of government better than any other. I do not know when it will be, but there are signs of the Soviet regime breaking up thru the internal struggle among the Communists."

It is also reported that Boris is returning to the United States to claim a sum of over $1,000,00 stored safely in the banks of this country and which was extorted from the sweat and blood of the workers and peasants of Russia. Another report states that Boris is seeking the aid of Henry Ford and other big financial backers in his attempt to restore the Russian monarchy.

Czarism vs. Leninism.

There is but one difficulty in the way of Boris' beautiful scheme. There is but one factor which Boris does not consider, when he hopes to have another opportunity to add to his millions from the toil and blood of the Russian workers and peasants. He does not consider that today, these workers and peasants fully understand what czarism means. He does not comprehend that a new factor has appeared in Russia and thruout the world. That factor is the spirit of Lenin and Leninism, which has permeated to the very roots of the Russian nation. When Boris hopes that the present discussion in the Russian party will weaken it and break up the Soviet regime, he voices a devout wish for the grand old days of despotism, which will never return. On the contrary, instead of weakening the party or the Soviet regime, it will greatly increase their strength and prestige, by informing and educating wider and wider masses of the workers and peasants as to the inner problems of the Communist Party and the Soviet government. Only the enlightened regime of czarist Russia or capitalist America have had aught to fear from general discussion among the masses.

America Not a Safe Refuge.

Boris and his gang, with their blood-stained loot, have fled to America, which stands today as the home of the reactionaries of the world. Here he hopes to find a haven from the bold, bad Bolsheviks. But his hopes are doomed to disappointment. The spirit of Lenin will haunt him even here, as it will everywhere where men toil under the yoke of capitalist slavery. On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 1, there will be a huge demonstration at Madison Square Garden on the occasion of the first anniversary of the death of Lenin. A remarkable program including William Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg, Ben Gitlow, Moissaye J. Olgin and a number of wonderful musical numbers including a chorus of 400 voices from the Freiheit Singing Society and a full symphony or- E. 13th St., 153 E. charge, unknown to the delegates except those who were on the inside That Paul Smith, the official stool-pigeon of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy should do this work is not surprising. That is what he is paid for. But that Robly D. Cramer should sink so low and prostitute himself in order to hold his job on the Labor Review, only proves that when a fake progressive hits the toboggan of political depravity, nothing on this side of hell can stop him. We assure Cramer and the parasites who train with him, that the fight in Minneapolis has only started.

THE rest of this column, for today may as well be devoted to renegades. There is Aristide Briand for instance. He once was a member of the socialist party of France and one of the most frothy mouthed. He decided to join the bourgeois government, protesting at the same time that he was doing it for the sake of the workers. But soon his sincerity was put to the test. When the postal employes went on strike he promptly called them to the colors and actually mobilized them to break their own strike. In those days Briand was a rabid anti-clerical and atheist.

WE now find Briand, after several years of service to the capitalists, lined up with the vatican in fighting the anti.clerical program of the present French government, which is under the direction of the grand orient, or the French wing of masonry. Herriot has forced the public school system on Alsace Lorraine and is now taking steps to withdraw the French embassy at the vatican. Briand is strongly in favor of retaining the connection with the pope, holding that France shuld be represented there, for the sake of the assistance of the catholic church can render to French interests.

THIS renegade is more concerned with the interests of the French bourgeoisie than even Herriot, who is a millionaire business man of Lyons. The pope threatens to retaliate agaoinst the withdrawal of the French diplomatic representative at Rome by recalling the papal nuncio in Paris, and elevating him to the cardinalate. This will mean activity in the red hat business if nothing else.

ANOTHER traitor is on trial in Moscow, or at least, was on Jan. 12. His name is Ivan Okladsky. Ivan was a member of a revolutionary organization and participated in many attempts to assassinate the czar. But it appears that during all this time he was in the pay of the government. When on trial for his attempts to kill the czar, declared before the court: "I do not ask and I do not need your leniency. On the contrary if you show me mercy, I shall regard this as a personal insult."

BUT despite this brave speech his sentence of death was commuted and he was afterwards raised to the nobility; drawing from the political police the highest salary paid for an ordinary official. He drew his last pay on the eve of the 1917 revolution. It is believed that Okdalsky will be sentenced to death but it doubtful if the death sentence will be carried out. Instead he may be allowed to write his reminiscences.

country. The jute mills and other industries grind the men down to mere wrecks and soon give them occupational tuberculosis.

When the prison board made its report to the Michigan legislature, it was stated that the increase in the prison budget of $118,000 over last year was due to "an overestimation of returns from prison industries." It is the aim of Governor Groesbeck by firing Hulburt, to put in a slave driver who will get a greater amount of work out of the state prisoners.

Workers Fight the Enslavement of All Youth in Illinois

mands that the young workers in industry be allowed to work for the same pay as men, and demand special working hours. They demand an education for all children of school age, these young workers to be maintained by the government.

The recent investigation by Young Workers' League into conditons in the mail order houses of Chicago revealed that thousands of young workers are being exploited at paupers' wages by the Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, and other mail order houses. The league demands that this exploitation of the youth of Illinois must stop.

Miners Taken from School.

In the mining towns of Illinois the young workers are expected to follow the trade of their fathers and enter the mines, most of the towns having only the one industry. These lads must work underground when their bodies are still unformed and their minds immature. During periods of unemployment, the government neglects the youth of Illinois. The miners are forced to loiter on the streets because no provision has been made for them to attend school.

Paid 17½ Cents an Hour.

In Belvidere, Illinois, the National Sewing Machine company, employing one thousand workers, pays the youth employed by them seventeen and one-half cents an hour. This company manufactures washing machines and sewing machines for the Montgomery & Ward company, in large quantities. Thus while entire families in Belvedere are forced into industry by the low wages, the Montgomery Ward company makes millions of dollars out of the profits of the toil wracked bodies of the young workers. The profits of the Montgomery Ward mail order house, because of the extensive exploitation of young labor, were the largest in history during the year just ended. Net profits of the company last year were $10,423,501, after millions had been paid out in dividends to the millionaire stockholders. This money was taken from the exploited young workers of Belvedere, earning 17¼ cents an hour, and from the thousands of young workers employed in the Montgomery Ward factories in Chicago.

Demand Voice in Industry.

The Workers (Communist) Party calls the attention of the Illinois legislature to these conditions, and demands that not only the federal child labor amendment be ratified, but that effective means be immediately taken to end the widespread exploitation of thousands of Illinois young workers.

While Nathan Leopold rolls around the city in his limousine, the young girls in his paper box factory in Morris, Illinois are selling themselves because they cannot exist on the $12 a week which he pays.

The young workers in the steel mills of East St. Louis, the thousands of young hired hands on Illinois farms, demand a voice in industry and demand that child labor be abolished, and if necessary, their families provided for by the state.

German Communists in Bitter Struggle With "Henchmen of Morgan"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

"TODAY it is not a question of the republic or the monarchy, it is the republic or chaos."

These are the words of Deputy Van Kardoff, of Stresemann's party, in the German reichstag. They are the familiar words of fascism. Mussolini uses them in Italy to bulwark his dictatorship.

• • • •

The German republic today is a most energetic defender of capitalism. It is in the hands of the Luther cabinet that even discusses the return of the monarchy. Every power that strikes a blow at these monarchist ambitions, parading under the mask of a capitalist republic, is attacked as the herald of "chaos".

To be sure there is only one such power—the German Communist Party. Soviet Rule in Germany, of course, means something even more than chaos for German capitalism. It means the end. But the cry of "chaos!" is raised in Germany, just as Mussolini raises it in Italy, just as the subsidized press raises it in this country, in order to frighten the masses, if possible, against the rising Soviet power.

• • • •

On the issue of Communism against capitalism, the German reichstag voted 246 to 160 to uphold the Luther cabinet, against which the Communist deputies hurled the the charge, "You henchmen of Morgan."

The socialists were compelled to vote with the Communists against the Luther cabinet. Not that they really wanted to. But the treason had they done otherwise would have been too apparent to the German workers. The Luther monarchists, with their cabinet in power, espouse the Morgan-Dawes plan, as the saviour of German capitalism, while the socialists, among the first supporters of the Dawes scheme, slip temporarily into the opposition in an effort to get a little prestige with the workers, in order that they might have something to deliver to the capitalist government when the next political trade is to be discussed.

• • • •

The center (catholic) party, that claims to be for the republic, voted almost unanimously for the Luther monarchists. But former chancellor Wirth, catholic party spokesman, cast his vote in opposition, in order that he might be in line for his previous job when Luther falls.

With their experiences of the last six years, since the kaiser was ousted, to fall back on, the German workers must indeed realize how their destinies are being toyed with by these capitalist political charlatans; how every step of all the parties, from the socialists to Ludendorff is against their interests; that the Communists alone are fighting their battles.

The German workers must realize to the full the meaning of the fawning approval with which Chancellor Luther defended the socialist president, Fritz Ebert. Luther excitedly deplored the attempt to "besmirch" the character of Ebert, because of his close connection with the Barmat scandal, a German "Teapot Dome," only that it dealt with high-financiering. Luther, the monarchist, announced that he is going to stand by Ebert, the socialist, just as he is backing the Morgan-Dawes plan to the limit. An interesting combination against the working class.

• • • •

It is against this combination that the German Communists take their determined stand and make steady progress. The resistance of the German workers against the Morgan-Dawes plan grows steadily. When the socialists are again needed in the anti-Communist government, they will be called in to break up as best they can, the unity of the workers. But the proletarian ranks are more impervious than ever to these socialist attacks. As a result, new and greater advances can be expected from the German Communists against the German henchmen of Morgan.

BORIS BRASOL STILL WAGING HIS BATTLES

Plays Don Quixote at Detroit Open Forum

By CYRIL LAMBKIN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 23. — Boris Brasol, the recognized leader of the Russian monarchists in this country was the speaker at a meeting of the Open Forum here, an established institution of Detroit, conducted by F. F. Ingram, perfume manufacturer and single taxer. The subject was Sovietism at work.

Himself an officer of the czar's army who lost his position and privileges he flayed the workers' and peasants' government of Russia. Every ill and misfortune of the Russian masses he laid at the door of the Bolsheviks, whose inevitable fall he predicted. Not a single misfortune did he attribute to the raparious czarist regime, to the world war, to counter revolution and the invasions, to the blockade or to the famine.

He cited many figures from Russian official papers, but the figures were nearly all for the years 1918 to 1921. He read a report of a well known Russian physician about the terrible conditions in the hospitals, but he failed to give the date of the report or to mention the blockade in connection with this. He charged the workers' and peasants' government with breaking up the home by making divorce easily obtainable, but he did not give figures showing the ratio of divorces to marriages. In Michigan the ratio is one to four.

He concluded his talk by reading a letter supposed to have been sent by the Russian Communist Party to all its units exhorting them to steel their hearts for the task of destroying their capitalist enemy in blood. "Blood, more blood" were the concluding words of the alleged document.

In his replies to questions during the feverishly hot question period which lasted for forty-five minutes he demonstrated such brazen contempt for the intelligence of the audience that the chairman, Charles M. Novak, a high school principal, lost his calm demeanor, and asked a question himself. When in reply to a question whether he did not think that the invasion of Russia was in some measure responsible for the industrial decline the speaker said he did not think so because the cities of Petrograd and Moscow, the largest industrial centers had never been invaded, the chairman himself asked the question whether the speaker seriously would maintain the idea of the invasion of cities rather than invasion of a territory.

A decided group in the audience consisted of Russian monarchists, most of whom are straw bosses in the Ford shops. According to authentic information their local leader is secretary E. G. Liebold, private secretary to Henry Ford. This group applauded their chieftain vigorously.

The chairman made the announcement that a speaker representing the point of view of the Soviets would be invited to address the forum some time before the close of the present season.

N. Y. STRUCTURAL IRON WORKERS ADOPT RESOLUTION CONDEMNING THE CONVICTION OF COMMUNISTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The Architectural Iron, Bronze and Structural Workers' Union at their last general membership meeting adopted the following resolution against "criminal syndicalism" laws which they sent to the governor of the state of Michigan and to the labor press.

Resolution.

WHEREAS, the many state "criminal syndicalism" laws and "sedition acts" are unconstitutional and instruments of employing class tyranny over the workers and their organizations, and

WHEREAS, the state supreme court of Michigan has upheld the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg for "assembling with" the Communists in an opinion which calls for the punishment of ideas and the denial of free speech and assemblage, and which evades the issue by ignoring the fact that, as the defense showed, there was not even a violation of the state law, since nothing was done in Michigan by the defendant in the way of any overt act or advocacy, and

WHEREAS, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Bookwalter and others of his class insist on a maximum of ten years imprisonment and $10,000 fine, for this "crime" of holding an opinion counter to their own, thus recommending government action based on vicious prejudice rather than on the law and the constitution, and

WHEREAS, the sustaining of Ruthenberg's conviction by the United States supreme court will mean also the railroading to long terms in prison of William Z. Foster, Wm. F. Dunne, Robert Minor and 29 other well-known fighters in the ranks of the labor movement—and would also encourage high-handed suppression by the capitalist-controlled government and all and any working class organizations who dare oppose their open shop rule, and

WHEREAS, the solidarity of the entire working class is essential to its welfare and requires that those in the forefront of the struggle must especially have the support of all workers, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we protest against and condemn the action of the Michigan state supreme court, record ourselves as in support of the Labor Defense Council in this case and call upon all labor bodies and working class bodies to take the same stand. That we petition the governor of the state of Michigan to pardon the defendant in the event that the United States supreme court sistains the conviction, it being our view that such action on the part of the federal supreme court would be a nullification of the constitution in the interest of instruments of capitalist suppression of the workers, and be it further

RESOLVED, that copies of this resolution be sent to the governor of the state of Michigan and the labor press.

'NONPARTISAN' LEAGUE REACTION OPPOSES MILLER

Help Private Banks by Futile Measures

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 23.—The suggestion made in the league legislative caucus by A. C. Miller, Communist memeber of the state legislature, that the Bank of North Dakota be made a depositery for all public funds and authorized and empowered to establish branch banks and perform a general banking business in the state, has started a new discussion among league representatives.

Afraid of Private Interests.

Ever since the Bank of North Dakota was started the private banking interests have been on the alert, taking care that this state bank did not injure their business. For a time they were scared stiff that the so-called "nonpartisan" leaguers might go "too far" with their experiments in state ownership and sound the death knell to private banking in the state. However, nothing serious happened to the private banks when the league was in full control of the state government for the simple reason that it did not go "too far" with such experiments. Since that time the league has become still more conservative and even reactionary there is, therefore, still less likelihood now that an attempt will be made to go "too far" in the way of eliminating the private banks.

The Communist Position.

State Senator Ralph Ingerson, leaguer, chairman of the house banking committee thinks he has a bank bill that will "solve" several of the problems connected with the Bank of North Dakota and he opposes the proposal made by Miller. Ingerson says his measure is "practical" and "diplomatic" and tells us that any banking bill that is introduced in the legislature ought not to bear the name of a Communist because then "it will not get very far."

When informed of Ingerson's statement Miller said that he was going through with his plans of introducing his bank measure until a better one showed up "I'll support any other bank bill that is clearly in favor of the interests of the farmers and the workers, but I am against camouflage and diplomatic tricks that merely fool the masses," Miller said. "We must be frank with the farmers and the workers," he added.

WORKERS SOLIDARITY IS THE ONLY ALTERNATIVE TO THE PERSECUTIONS OF REVOLUTIONISTS EVERYWHERE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—After having murdered the best leaders of the Esthonian workers in cold blood and after having arrested more than 1,000 Communists in connection with the revolt that took place after the conviction of some 130 more, the capitalist government of Esthonia began a campaign of suppression of the entire labor movement. All workers' organizations were raided; trade unions known for their militancy were dissolved. The Communists were hounded from one place to another.

Lithuania did not allow Esthonia to get ahead of her. Almost simultaneously with the campaign in Esthonia, the Lithuanian government started a campaign of terror against the revolutionary movement. Men and women were murdered—two girls were shot down in the streets.

In both Esthonia and Lithuania the capitalist governments were able to carry out their dastardly plans because they had the support of the social democrats. More than that: the social democrats acted as the denouncers to the police of the Communist workers. Then they justified their cowardly, treacherous acts by stating that they were compelled to support the capitalists against the Communists, because "the safety of the capitalist regime in Esthonia was threatened."

Not to be outdone by such little states as Lithuania and Esthonia, Roumania and Bulgaria started their own campaigns of terror. In one night, Communist homes and headquarters were raided in Roumania and 400 Communists arrested. Realizing that the Bulgarian workers and peasants have not forgotten the slaughter of their brothers and sisters in the uprisings of June and September of 1923, and that the conditions within the country have steadily become worse, the capitalist governments have again started to attack the revolutionary labor movement.

Poland has handed over revolutionary members of the sejm (parliament) to the mercy of the capitalist court. Immunity as members of parliament counts for nothing. The representatives of the workers have no rights in Poland. The result was that a member of the Polish sejm, who had not been a part of the Communist fraction, declared his solidarity with it and was sent to prison.

Why does the campaign take place at this time? Conditions in Europe are becoming worse, and the capitalists know of no other means of breaking the rising revolt of the workers and poor peasants. Why is Mussolini tottering in Italy? The economic conditions do not permit the workers and peasants to live. Why is Horthy's hold in Hungary weakening? Because the capitalists are trying to beat down the workers.

Why have the capitalists of the United States started a similar campaign against the workers? Why were two miners in Pennsylvania shot down in cold blood—and nothing done to punish the murderers? Why are the wages of the anthracite miners and of the textile workers being ground down? Why are the Communists being brought before the capitalist courts in Michigan? Why are Communist editors being arrested and prosecuted in New York? Why do the capitalists of this country declare that the workers must accept lower wages if they are to get work at all?

There are two reasons for this united campaign against the workers of all countries. First, the economic conditions are making the workers revolt. Second, the capitalists had hoped that Soviet Russia would disintegrate—because of economic conditions. They see that Soviet Russia cannot be beaten. They see that the British trade union delegation has only good words in praise of the conditions that they found upon their recent visit to Soviet Russia.

Soviet Russia is a menace to the capitalist world. The Communist parties are a menace to capitalist power. Hence everything smacking of revolution must be smashed. Revolutionists must be put behind prison bars; their families must be persecuted; their children must be starved. Then perhaps the revolutionists will become more "moderate." The revolutionists know no fear—and the fight goes on.

But revolutionists must be supported and helped. It is the duty of the American workers to do their very utmost to assist them. The International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council have that mission. The financial situation is very bad—and the calls made upon these two organizations are very great. Hence the two organizations arranged a joint bazaar, which will take place at the Lyceum, 86th St. and 3rd Ave., New York City, from Feb. 11 to 14. The response that the bazaar is meeting with demonstrates that the workers of New York City are moving forward. The bazaar will be a huge success.

Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Lithuania, Bulgaria, Greece, Italy, Germany, Bland, Hungary, India, Java—the same persecutions. Workers solidarity is the only alternative.

Japan Discontinues Discussion with U. S. On Immigration Law

TOKIO, Jan. 23.—Japan does not intend, for the present at least, to continue any discussions with the United States regarding the Japanese exclusion clause of the new immigration law, Foreign Minister Shidehara informed the diet today.

Emphasizing that Japanese-American relations are cordial, he said "no good purpose" would be served by keeping alive the immigration discussions."

USE NEGROES IN NEXT WAR, SAYS LONDON "EXPERT"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Jan. 23.—Military "experts" meeting here to plan how to fight the next war are studying the book of J. B. S. Haldane, called "The Defense in Chemical Warfare," in which Haldane declares that the next war will be fought largely by Negro troops directed by white officers.

The "experts" are recalling the number of French and English colonial troops slaughtered in the last war, and give much credence to Haldanes prediction. Haldane declares that "colored troops can stand poison gas better than white."

It is expected that perhaps the colonial peoples who are to be led to slaughter by the imperialistic nations which exploit their labor at home will make vigorous protest against Haldane's book.

Mellon Interests Reaching Out for More Easy Millions

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 23.—The Andrew Mellon interests are making a bold bid for a huge part of about a billion dollars worth of water power in the St. Lawrence river. The New York water power commission, composed of five republicans, has the disposal of this power and the St. Lawrence Transmission company, wants half a billion dollars' worth of it.

According to its published statement in Moody's Manual, this company is controlled by the $100,000,000 Aluminum company of America, from which Andrew W. Mellon resigned to become secretary of the treasury. His brother, Richard B. Mellon, is still a director and the company's vice-president; G. R. Gibbons is also vice-president of the St. Lawrence Transmission company.

The Aluminum company already has the use of about $50,000,000 worth of St. Lawrence power on which no rental has been paid to New York state since the plant began to operate in 1918. It was authorized then as a war measure, provided the assent of the state could be obtained. In consideration of the war emergency New York state waived its rights. Since the war it has unsuccessfully tried to fix a rental, which the St. Lawrence River Power company, (said to be controlled by the Aluminum company of America), could be induced to pay

Washington Discusses a Treaty

The senate foreign relations committee of which Senator William E. Borah of Idaho is chairman met to discuss the treaty signed between the government of Japan and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

An official report of the proceedings was not made public but it was unofficially hinted, after the meeting, that more, than one member of the committee used strong language in discussing the policy of Secretary of State Hughes in his conduct of the state department, with reference to the United States attitude towards Russia.

It was intimated that this policy of hate and hostility was mainly responsible for the comparatively strong position which the treaty with Russia gives Japan in the Pacific. Without a sufficient supply of oil to provide fuel for the Japanese navy, it was admitted by U. S. naval officers that the Mikado's navy would never dare risk a contest with the naval forces of the United States. The concessions granted to Japan on Saghalien Island, guarantees Tokio against any shortage of fuel for her navy and strengthens her immeasurably either in her negotiations with the United States or in the event of war.

The senate foreign relations committee fears that besides the published clauses of the treaty there is also a secret alliance between Moscow and Japan. As capitalist statesmen can think only in terms of bourgeois diplomacy, it is not surprising that they should suspect some agreement between the two governments in view of the world political situation. All the capitalist powers without exception are hostile to the Soviet government for very fundmental reasons, and even tho Japan is a capitalist power, it happens that her interests in the Orient conflict so violently with the two strongest imperialist powers that the Mikado's government is for the moment diplomatically isolated. Therefore the logical step for Japan to take, from the point of bourgeois diplomacy would be to form a defensive and offensive alliance with Moscow.

British diplomacy now aims at driving the United States and Japan into hostilities. It has been the historical policy of Britain to dispose of her foremost naval and commercial competitor. Navies, as a rule are built for the protection of trade and trade routes. The growing shipping trade of the United States and her expanding imperialism demand a larger navy. This brings her automatically into conflict with Britain. It would be to Britain's advantage to get Japan and the United States navies into a mutual annihilation contest, with Britain playing a role that would enable her to step in at the opportune moment to her advantage.

The foreign policy of Secretary Hughes is now undergoing a critical examination by the senate committee on foreign relations and his willingness to commit the United States to Britain's anti-Soviet strategy has led to developments which do not look good to many prominent senate leaders. The Soviet-Japan treaty brought the implications of this policy dramatically to Washington's attention and the decision of a member of the foreign relations committee to discuss the question on the floor of the senate indicates the deep impression the latest big development in world policies made upon the United States government.

Teapot Dome Again

The honorable millionaire's club known as the United States senate got its last kick out of the Teapot Dome scandal when by a vote of 40 to 30 it adopted the report by T. J. Walsh, of Montana, condemning A. B. Fall and others, implicated in the leasing of the naval reserve oil lands to Doheney and Sinclair.

This vote means very little except that it marks the falling of the curtain on the great scandal that thrilled two continents last spring, so far as the senate is concerned. The solons have spoken for the record. Doheney and Sinclair have the oil. Fall has the graft. Everything is well on the banks of the Potomac. The road is now clear for another graft orgy.

Vienna socialists have been forced to sell their great bakery founded fifteen years ago and capitalized at 1,000,000,000 Austrian crowns. This gigantic concern once supplied 40 per cent of Vienna's bread. The Austrian socialists are broke financially and politically. The workmen's councils were also dissolved Exit social-democrats!

The Soviet government was invited to send delegates to the opium conference. Tchitcherin replied in diplomatic language that the conference was no place for a representative from an honest government. The Soviet government was putting down the opium traffic, not merely talking about it.

The German Republic Totters

Dr. Luther, chancellor of the new German cabinet and well known monarchist admitted in his second speech in the reichstag, since his government assumed power that he and his colleagues discussed the question of changing the form of the German government, but decided that it "should remain a constitutional republic." This means nothing less than breaking the news gently, that the Luther party has in mind a resoration of the monarchy.

His speech created a sensation in the reichstag, but Luther was not worrying about that. The republic which was born out of the blood sacrifice of the German workers has proven itself to be an instrument of capitalism just as the monarchy under the kaiser was. Luther knows that the German working class cannot be as willing to fight for the preservation of a sham republic today as they were during the Kapp uprising. He also knows that the monarchist elements have gained strength since that time, under the benevolent policy of the social democratic president and the socialist party of Germany.

What a commentary on the accomplishments of social-democracy! Those capitalist bootlickers boasted that they saved Germany from the grip of a dictatorship when they crushed the proletarian revolution and blocked the path of those who aimed to establish the rule of the workers thru a Soviet republic. The corpses of the revolutionary leaders of the working class were offered by the social democrats as proof of their abiding faith in capitalist democracy. Today the government which they held up before the eys of the masses as a horrible example of working class rule, the Soviet government, is strong and powerful, with a stable leadership enjoying the confidence of millions, while the German republic, monument to social democracy is tottering on the brink of ruin, with the social democrats helpless and discredited playing the role of discarded political prostitutes.

The battle going on in Germany today is between two extremes, the monarchist-fascist-junker-industrialist reactionaries against the Communists, who do not make a fetish of democracy. Both sides know it is a fight to the death, between the capitalist system which the former are prepared to fight to preserve, and Communism which the latter will fight to establish. The Communist Party will lead the masses to fight for a republic in Germany—but it will be a Soviet republic.

A vegetarian expresses the opinion that there is little difference between a capitalist who works children long hours in a factory and a Communist who eats meat. It could be said with greater justification that there is little difference between the brain that houses such intellectual offal and a garbage pail.

The Busted Balkan Alliance

After the tory government assumed power in England, the first important move of the foreign office chief, Austin Chamberlain, was to tour Europe in an effort to form an anti-Soviet alliance of all European countries that British diplomacy could rope into such a scheme without endangering any of the imperial interests.

Judging by the propaganda that followed in the wake of Chamberlain's visit, the attempt was crowned with success. Paris, Rome and every capital city in the Balkans broke into print. It looked very dark for the Bolshevik government. But the excitement resulting from the publicity lasted less than a week. Then the fog cleared and the crooks began to talk about the things they were most interested in, that is, their immediate graft.

Chamberlain made a special effort to fix the Balkans against Soviet Russia. He got the Yugo Slav and the Bulgarian governments into a conference and one of his proposals was the reorganization of the Wrangel army, the remnants of which are still in Bulgaria and Jugo-Slavia. These bandits were used by the Bulgarian government to crush the peasant uprising in 1923.

Another part of the Chamberlain scheme was that King Boris of Bulgaria should marry Princess Lieana of Roumania. Since then this proposed marriage has been called off. Perhaps the Queen of Roumania is of the opinion that King Boris' head is none too stable.

Bishop Fan Noli, head of the Albanian government was informed by Chamberlain that England would aid him against his adversary Ahmed Bey Nogu if it expelled the Soviet representative from Albania.

Chamberlain's plot was not confined to the Balkans alone; Turkey, Afghanistan and Finland were included. Unfortunately however for the ambitious plan, the robbers could not come to terms and even England was compelled to disavow the actions of the foreign minister after their failure was patent. A diplomatic denial usually means less than nothing, but in this case it meant that the power of the Soviet government was impregnable.

COMRADE LENIN: Hard and unassailable as he was to all those who were our enemies, the bourgeoisie and the social-traitors, he could be and was lovable not only to the working class in general, but to each individual worker and toiler with whom he came in contact. The sons of our class he warmed by the rays of his great love, which was like the southern sun. Lenin was a comrade to each and all of the workers whom he met. Simultaneously he was a teacher, a brother, a leader and a friend.—Zinoviev.

Abramovich Exposed as Enemy of Soviets

rule of a puppet czar directed by the big imperialists. You did not forget yet, I am sure, the bloody doings of the armies of intervention, the brutal system of the infamous 'cordon sanitaire' invented by Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Wilson to strangle the Russian masses either to submission or to death, nor will you ever forget the terrific campaign of defamation and character assassination that was carried on by the capitalist and menshevik press of the world against the leaders of the Russian revolution.

"But the Soviet government is still in power. It is now stronger than it ever was before, interally and externally. The economic system of Russia is continually improving, in spite of the tremendous difficulties that must be overcome at every turn of the road. Why, the mere fact that Russia's monetary system had been finally stabilized without the help (in fact, against the sabotage) of the mighty capitalist powers of the world, should be proof sufficient of the strength and resourcefulness of the Soviet government.

Emissary of the "Kulak"

"Then again, one must note with great satisfaction the harmonious and fraternal relations that exist between the Soviet government and the poor peasantry. Mind you, I speak here of the poor peasantry, and not of the village exploiter, the peasant capitalist, the 'kulak.' It is the former, the poor and to a certain degree, the middle peasants, that count. And with these the workers of Russia and the Soviet government are in a close and unshakable political and economic alliance—an alliance wihch forms the very basis of the Russian government of workers and peasants.

"As to the rich peasantry, this group is quite naturally opposed to the present order of things in Russia. It is among these peasants that the counter revolution, one of whose spokesmen is R. Abramovich, is now in America, is building its nests. But that shouldn't worry us. The revolution must succeed not because of them but in spite of them. The growth and concentration of the Russian proletariat and the consequent growth of the Russian Communist Party are the best guarantees that the Russian revolution will triumph in spite of all difficulties.

"Internationally the position of Soviet Russia is very favorable. Within the last few months a number of important capitalist countries, chief among them England and France, were compelled to grant recognition to Soviet Russia. Japan is about to do the same thing. And even the government of the United States, the last bulwark of uncompromising opposition, is noticeably beginning to give way. The resignation of the pious Hughes is quite symptomatic in this respect.

America Becomes the Center of the Russian Counter-Revolution.

"It is important to realize that the Russian counter-revolutionists are beginning to feel quite uncomforable in Europe and are therefore gradually shifting over the center of their activities to the United States. America is fast becoming the center of the Russian counter-revolution. The American labor movement must be careful to draw the proper conclusions from this very important fact.

"We must inquire first into the reasons for this change in the base of operations. Why is it that during the past year the United States have been 'honored' by so many notables from the white guard Russian colonies of Europe? Why is it that so many czarist officers, generals, diplomats and politicians have migrated recently into the United States?

A Nest of Vultures.

"There are three basic reasons for this change. First, the capitalists of the United States are becoming the actual dictators in the affairs of the world. From this it follows that he who is looking for favors at the hands of capitalism generally must first secure the good will and approval of American capitalism. Second, the defeat and failure of the schemes and conspiracies of the Russian counter-revolutionists in practically every center of European imperialism. And third, the growing power and influence of the Communist and militant trade union movement in all the European countries.

"These three factors, in addition to several others of lesser importance, have combined to bring about a situation which made it vitally necessary for the Russian counter-revolution to transfer its center of activities to the United States. Where these conspirators and plotters were formerly operating in Constantinople, Belgrade, Sofia, Prague, Berlin, Paris and London, they are now shifting their base to New York, Washington, Chicago and Los Angeles. America, the center of world imperialism, is now becoming the center of the Russian counter-revolution.

A Menace to the Labor Movement.

"The American working class, the American labor movement, and every progressive element in Aemrican social life must take cognizance of this important fact. It will be a fatal mistake to adopt the position that these migrations to the United States of Russian counter-revolutionists and the visit of such emissaries of reaction as that of R. Abramovich, are of no concern to the American masses generally, that it is the business only of the Russians. Nothing will prove more disastrous to the working masses and to the progressive forces of this country as a whole than such an attitude of alofness and neutrality toward the reactionary machinations of the Russian counter-revolutionists in the United States.

"Why? First let us remember that wherever the Russian counter-revolutionists succeeded in establishing a base of operations, they invariably strengthened the reactionary forces of that country against the forces of labor and progress generally. Ask the Turks, the Bulgarians, the Czecho-Slovaks, the Germans, French and English about the reactionary pressure exercised by the Russian counter-revolutionists upon the internal affairs of those countries.

To Aid Reaction Here.

"I might remark, in passing, that it is generally quite difficult to separate the home affairs of a country from its foreign affairs. This is particularly true with regard to problems of a country of such world importance as Soviet Russia. It is conceivable, of course, for a capitalist government to follow a policy of aggression (diplomatic, economic or military) toward Soviet Russia and at the same time attempt to pursue a 'liberal' policy toward the labor movement at home. But this dualism of policy, if I may use this expression, that is, aggression abroad and 'liberalism' at home, cannot continue very long under the present phase of capitalist development, the phase of imperialism. It was quite possible in the old pre-imperialist days. It might work for a short while even now, but such dualism must inevitably disappear, giving way to reaction at home as well as abroad.

"From this it follows that in the measure in which the Russian counter-revolutionists, now concentrating in the United States, will succeed in swaying the American government to their side, this will produce not only aggression and hostility toward Soviet Russia but also an intensified offensive against American labor and against the progressive social forces in America generally. Aside from the general atmosphere of suspicion and disturbance that will necessarily be created in the United States by the continuous plottings and conspiracies of the Russian counter-revolutionists, an atmosphere very favorable to capitalist reaction but extremely unfavorable to the labor movement, aside from this, every successful move of these conspirators against Russia will also spell severer and more cruel attacks by the government of Strikebreaker Coolidge and 'Open Shopper' Dawes upon the safety and well being of the American toiling masses. The American working class must therefore be on its guard.

An Agent of World Imperialism.

"It is in the light of the foregoing that you must consider the arrival in the United States the other day of R. Abramovich, leader of the Russian counter-revolutionary mensheviks and henchman of the Second International of Scheidemann, Noske and Ebert.

"What is the significance of Abramovich's coming to America, particularly at this time? It is very much worth while inquiring into this matter. You will find that the Russian counter-revolution, altho disgracefully defeated, is still alive and active. You will also learn something more vital and important; namely, that the so-called Second International, the agent of of world imperialism and the flunkey of 'Open Shopper' Dawes, is now embarking upon a new crusade against the revolutionary and militant labor movement to crush all opposition to the 'successful' enforcement of the Dawes' plan.

"The mission of R. Abramovich, active counter-revolutionist and representative of the Second International, must be analyzed and considered very carefully. What does Abramovich want in the United States?

The Program of Abramovich.

"You have read the statement of the central executive committee of our party. It tells you in few and plain words what Abramovich wants to achieve. Let me enumerate his ambitions.

"1. He wants to arouse prejudice and sentiment against Soviet Russia in order to strengthen the reactionary opponents of recognition and to prevent a possible commercial and political reproachment between the United States and Russia.

"2. He wants to mobilise and gain the support of the reactionary bureaucrats in the A. F. of L. against the movement for international unity of the trade unions initiated by the Red International of Labor Union, and he will fight particularly against the recently formed 'Anglo-Russian Unity Committee' of the trade unions of those two countries.

"3. He wants to strengthen the reactionary wing in the American labor movement against its left wing, its militants and Communists.

"4. He wants to assist the American bankers and the American government to convert our labor movement to the support of the Dawes' plan, which means the support of the imperialist, plundering ambitions of American capitalism, and

"5. He wants to collect money for the Russian counter-revolution.

Coincidences and Developments.

"These are his main tasks. Now, please consider, in connection with the above, the following coincidence of facts.

"Gompers died. This meant the removal from the political scene of one of the bitterest enemies of Soviet Russia and one of the most trusted agents of American imperialism in the labor movement of the United States. The forces of reaction and capitalism in the American Federation of Labor have thereby been considerably weakened.

"Then, what happens? R. Abramovich comes to the United States. He is a 'socialist,' a 'labor' man. He is an 'expert' on Russia. He is on friendly terms with the reactionaries in the A. F. of L. He can gain their ear. He will give them the latest dope on Russia and international developments generally. He will bolster them up, solidify them, and in this way Abramovich will be fulfilling one of the duties of the dead Gompers. 'Accidently' Abramovich arrives in the United States just in time.

A Flood of Lies Expected.

"Another coincidence. Charles E. Hughes is being retired from the office of secretary of state, which means again the removal from a powerful position of an uncompromising opponent of the recognition of Soviet Russia. New winds are blowing in the air. There is talk about a coming change in the attitude of the American government toward Soviet Russia. Then, what happens? Abramovich comes to the United States. Altho he has been out of Russia for years, he is supposed to possess valuable knowledge on conditions in Soviet Russia. He will talk. He will enlighten. He will tell stories about the persecution of 'socialists.' He will paint terrible pictures of the 'slavery and oppression' of the working masses' in Soviet Russia. He will relate brilliant mythology of how Georgia has been 'crushed' under the iron heel of the Communist dictatorship.

"He will probably enrich our knowledge on the 'persecution and oppression' of the Jews in Soviet Russia. And . . . oh yes, I nearly forgot Comrade Trotzky. Abramovich will also tell us something about Comrade Trotzky. How the latter is being held in strict confinement, under heavy guard, for fear that he might divulge to Abramovich some terrible secrets of the 'oppressive' rule of the Soviet government.

Menshevik Opposses Labor Unity.

"Abramovich will tell us all kinds of stories, but in doing so he will have only one purpose in mind—to continue the noble work of Charles E. Hughes. You see, comrades, it is merely 'coincidence' that Abramovich comes to America at the very moment when Hughes is about to retire from the office of secretary of state. By this I don't mean to imply that Coolidge will appoint Abramovich to the position of secretary of state. No, far be it from me to imply any such thing. What I do mean is this, that Abramovich will be made very good use of by every reactionary and enemy of labor in the United States.

"Then, a third coincidence. The British trade union delegation, headed by Purcell, which recently visited Soviet Russia, was greatly impressed by the strength of the Soviet government, the continual improvement of the economics of Russia and of the general conditions of the working classes, and particularly by the fact that the Russian workers are actually learning to govern and rule in the interests of the masses and against their exploiters. The report of the delegation is extremely favorable to Soviet Russia and to the Russian Communist Party.

"Furthermore, while in Russia the British trade union delegation jointly with the trade unions of Soviet Russia formed what is known as the 'Anglo-Russian Unity Committee' for the purpose of promoting the movement for international unity of the trade unions thruout the world. You will recognize, comrades, that this is an event of first class importance. It signifies the beginning of an alliance between the workers of Russia and England which will have far reaching consequences in the development of the world revolution.

District 9 Campaign Speeds Up

"ALTHO this local of ours is only a small one, less than twenty members, we realize the necessity of the DAILY WORKER, and we will stay in the drive to the end, trying to 'clean up' our quota."

This letter from a Finnish comrade in Orr, Minn., expresses the spirit of District 9. Indirectly, it also explains why so many branches have not yet reported in the policy campaign. Innumerable other small branches are sprinkled thruout the territory of north Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin, separated from the general labor movement as well as from each other. How can they be united in an amalgamated campaign to bring the insurance drive to a clean-cut victory?

Of the 88 branches in the district, only 32 have a record of achievement. Their total contribution amounts to $674.00 as compared to a quota of $5,766. But they are just getting into action! From Newberry, Mich., comes their slogan, "We will continue selling the policies until they are gone."

The Duluth, Minn., Finnish branch has set the pace by remitting $71.00, closely followed by the St. Paul English branch with $68.00. The sole Ukrainian branch in this district, after disposing of its first $50.00 books, sends for another, just as these comrades have conquered the rock and iron and barren earth of this region, we are assured that they will conquer their District 9 quota!

Child Labor--A Modern Pestilence

By H. M. WICKS.

INCREDIBLY ghastly in its ravages among its helpless victims, child labor has become a blight that menaces every human being in the nation. There are two types of child labor in the United States today; the open employment of children in factories mills, mines, department stores and in agriculture; and the furtive slavery of children within the confines of the hovels they call homes. It is the second category that merits close investigation, because it is more carefully concealed.

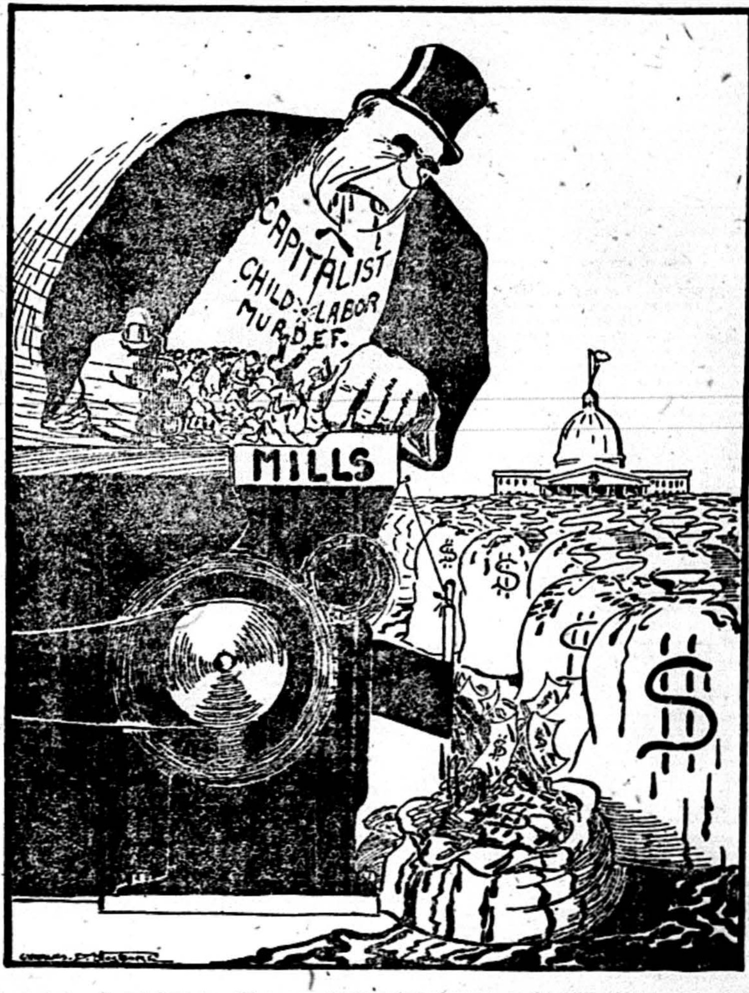
Dry statistics from the last census conducted by the U. S. government (1920) inform us that there were at that time 1,090,858 children between the ages of 10 and 15 years "gainfully employed" throut the country. Equally vague are the figures regarding the division of this group between industries and agriculture. The same government report presents tables of statistics to prove that child labor has decreased since the census of 1910. Like all government reports, this one requires further investigation. It is poor policy to take the statements of a capitalist government at their face value, especially when they deal with the devastation caused by capitalism. Granted that the figures were accurate they do not prove a decline of the number of child slaves, for the simple reason that the 1910 census was taken in a period of so-called "prosperity," while the 1920 survey was taken at the beginning of a period of unemployment and at a season of the year when employment, especially in agriculture was at the lowest point. The additional fact that the federal child labor law was at that time on the statute books must be taken into consideration. It was the supreme court decision declaring this law unconstitutional in 1922 that necessitated a constitutional amendment to give congress the power to enact a federal child labor law. So our glorious constitution that the one hundred per centers profess to uphold does not even permit congress to legislate for the protection of helpless children from the jackal pack of capitalism.

A Tale of Two Pest Holes.

The census of 1920 informs us that in New York City there are 32,383 children between 10 and 15 years of age "gainfully employed," and that in Jersey City, N. J., there are 2,735. But like the national total, these figures are inadequate to convey the real facts regarding child slavery. Nothing is said here about those miserable half-starved and half clothed, prematurely aged children UNDER TEN years of age that slave from morning until night in the most revolting surroundings—their homes! Hearing reports of the conditions in certain districts, I, accompanied by other trade unionists, investigated some of them both in New York and Jersey City and was staggered by the appalling conditions existing in a supposedly civilized country.

In New York City, in three different sections—the Bronx, the lower East Side and Brooklyn—we found children both boys and girls, working on beaded gowns. There are designs drawn on these gowns and the children have to sew bright colored beads on the designs, for which they are paid according to the whim of the employers, who deliver the dresses and beads at the "homes" of the workers and call for them when finished. Whole families and even children as young as six and seven years do this work. Sitting in one position hours at a time, straining their baby eyes to get each bead in its proper place, browbeaten by filthy, brutal, illiterate parents, there is surely no more pitiable creatures on earth than these children. One little Italian girl had some sort of infection in her eyes that caused a steady discharge, which she constantly wiped with the back of her hands and every one of these victims of the inordinate greed of capitalism appeared warped and stunted—with the bodies of children in stature, their faces bore ghastly marks of agonizing toil far worse than the puny slaves of the cotton mills of the south.

HIS PROFITS—BLOOD MONEY



Slaving their lives away in vile, unsanitary, dark, cold and damp tenements in order that the indolent, debauched, extravagant kept women of the bourgeoisie may bedeck themselves in beaded gowns and attend charity balls where their feigned concern for the poverty of the workers is a pretext for the gorgeous displays. A short time ago, in an address before the Woman's Trade Union League one of the members who had investigated this very condition, stated that no woman with a spark of humanity knowing how beaded dresses are made, would ever wear one of them.

Having occasion to be in Jersey City, where child slavery in "homes" of workers is rampant, a hasty survey was made there. The horrors of New York City were duplicated, if not surpassed. There were found children of both sexes sewing bags for tea. One house investigated is typical of them all. There was no electric light and the dingy halls were in total darkness. Inside the rooms, where people were huddled, one and sometimes two families in one room, whole families were engaged in the business of sewing little pieces of cloth into tea bags. There were the same signs of occupational depformities that were observed in New York. This work is so arduous and requires so much speed to earn the merest pittance that the ends of the children's fingers constantly bleed from being stuck with needles, some of them are infected and exude puss. During a survey conducted two years ago, Wassermann blood tests were taken of some of these children and many of them registered positive some of them "four plus," indicating 100 per cent syphilitic infection.

The tea bags, when finished, are thrown in heaps upon the floor, around which the family sits in a semi-circle. And when they are removed from these home manufacturing establishments they are stuffed with tea and placed upon the market WITHOUT EVEN BEING WASHED in ordinary water, say nothing of being disinfected.

Menaces Everyone.

Clearly child labor ought not to be a problem exclusively concerning the working class, tho, of course, it is only the working class that will ever abolish it. It is not only a blight upon the childhood of the nation, but it menaces every person that patronizes a grocery store, or buys clothing or on any manner moves in this society. If the pest-holes of the Bronx, the lower East Side, Brooklyn, Jersey City and hundreds of other places throuout the nation could be visited by intelligent workers they would rise in their might and scourge from the face of the earth the contemptible scoundrels of capitalism that dare propose a continuation of this foul plague. If the facts regarding child labor were once known it would not be a question of parliamentary discussion, of state ref-

Bolshevism or Trotskyism? By G. Zinoviev

III.

Was There a Right Wing in the Bolshevist Party?

We must give a clear answer to this question. Everybody who is familiar with the real history of Bolshevism will, without hesitation, give the following answer: There was none and there could be none.

There could be no right wing because the Leninist fundamental principles of the structure of the Bolshevist party excluded every possibility of a right and of a left wing.

There could be no right wing because the first split between Bolsheviki and mensheviki had already taken place in 1903 on the eve of the first revolution of 1905.

Comrade Lenin wrote regarding the Italian socialist party that even its first splitting from the extreme chauvinists which took place some years before the world war—that even this superficial split which was far from being complete, helped it in the first period of the imperialist war, in the year 1914, to adopt a more commendable standpoint than the standpoint of those social democratic parties who up to the year of 1917, and even later remained united. Every one who has read the articles of Comrade Lenin from the years 1914-1915 on German social democracy ("Against the Stream") will remember how passionately Lenin advocates the splitting of the German social democracy, what great hopes he placed on this split, how he explained the complete collapse of German social democracy among other things as being due to the belated split between the left and right wings.

"The type of the socialist parties of the epoch of the Second International was the party which tolerated opportunism in its midst, which during the ten years of the period of peace continually grew in numbers but which hid itself and adapted itself to the revolutionary workers from whom it took over its Marxist terminology and avoided every clear definition of principle. This type outlived its time.

"In Italy the party was an exception for the epoch of the Second International; the opportunists with Bissolati at the head were expelled from the party. The result of this crisis was excellent . . . We, in no way idealize the Italian socialist party and do not guarantee that it will prove to remain firm in the event of Italy coming into the war. We are not speaking of the future of this party, we are speaking now only of the present. We affirm the indisputable fact that the workers of the majority of the European countries were deceived by the ficticious unity of the opportunists with the revolutionaries and that Italy is a happy exception—a country where at the present moment there is no such deception. That which for the Second International was a fortunate exception, must and will be a rule for the Third International. The proletariat will always—so long as capitalism exists— be in contact with the petty-bourgeoisie. It is unwise, sometimes to reject a temporary alliance with them, but to unite with them, to be united with the opportunists can at present only be defended by the enemies of the proletariat in the present epoch." ("Against the Stream" p. 36.)

Whoever thinks over these words will understand why in a party which was formed by Comrade Lenin in the fight against the mensheviki and against Trotsky there could exist no right wing.

"Our Russian party has long since broken with the opportunist groups and elements . . . The dead weight of opportunism was not able to drag down our party into the deep. And this circumstances rendered it possible—as the split of the Italian party—to fulfill its revolutionary duty."

So wrote Lenin in "Socialism and War." (Second chapter.)

Comrade Trotsky must understand all this and then he will understand why one cannot speak of a right wing of the Bolshevist party which was created by Lenin in a "fierce" struggle against all non-Bolshevist fractions, groups and tendencies.

Whoever understands anything of the theory, of the tactics and of the organizatory principles of Leninism cannot claim that a right wing existed in the Bolshevik party. Bolshevism differed fundamentally in that it could not permit and did not permit the party to be organized as a block of all possible tendencies, as a block of a right, of a left wing, of a center, etc.

Think over what Comrade Lenin has written for example regarding the period of the emigration time of the party. He said: The great variety of political tendencies in emigration—mensheviki, S. R. anarchists, maximalists, which were again divided into sub sections, had the effect that all non-Bolshevist elements were withdrawn, as by a plaster, from the body of the party. The same was the case in the period of legal and illegal existence of our party between February and October, 1917. At that time we saw the same variety and multiplicity of political parties, fractions and minor fractions, which inevitably absorbed everything that was not thoroly Bolshevik. In this manner the Bolshevik party became a crystallization point only for Bolsheviki. Hence our party was one indivisible whole.

It involves a complete ignorance of Lenin and of Leninism to admit the possibility that Lenin, even if only for a short time, had tolerated the existence of a right wing in the Bolshevik party. And what is still more important is, that Leninism is irreconcilable with the existence of a right wing in the Bolshevist party.

It could be argued that there were Bolshevik "reconciliators" who greatly resembled a right wing of Bolshevism.

Yes, that is a fact. The Bolshevik "reconciliators" played an episodal role at the commencement of the split between the Bolsheviki and the mensheviki (1903-1904), and then also in the years of the counter-revolution (1910-1911). But at the moment of this hesitating attitude of the Bolshevik "reconciliators" it came essentially to a direct split between us and them. The Bolshevik party, under Lenin's leadership, was ready to amputate this small fragment from its body, and this it did in order to remain a homogeneous Bolshevik party.

The overwhelming majority of these reconcilors are at present in our ranks and nobody thinks of asserting today that they recollect there being in any way a sort of right tendency in the party. Their most prominent leader was I. F. Dubrovinsky, and nobody who knew him would pretend that he represented in any way a right wing. From one prison to another, from one banishment to another, went such comrades as Dubrovinsky and Nogin; and in the period between the one prison and the other they made many passing errors regarding questions of organization. Of course, these comrades could have fallen victims to opportunism if their errors had undergone a logical development. This however, did not happen. Lenin put the question bluntly: Either expulsion or submission to the decisions of the Bolshevik leadership.

That does not mean that in the long years of the history of Bolshevism there were never any differences and various tendencies between the most prominent functionaries of the party. There were, of course, such differences. In 1906 Kamenev advocated the boycott of the Duma (a "left" attitude), while Comrade Lenin recommended participation in the Duma. In the plenum of the C. C. in 1910 (the last joint plenum with the mensheviki) a section of the Bolsheviki attempted unity with Trotsky, whilst Comrade Lenin and other Bolshevik leaders, (among them the present writer) were emphatically against this attempt. These, however, were only episodal differences of opinion.

But the differences which we had with the people grouped round the paper "Vperjod" (Forward) in 1908 and which lasted for some years, could not be regarded as episodal. These alleged "left" people, as a matter of fact, defended opportunist tactics, that is, they abandoned the fundamental basis of Bolshevism. The group was expelled from our organization and only those have returned who have thoroly recovered from the "Vperjod" sickness.

Also those differences cannot be characterised as being episodal which arose in connection with the war, and which extended only to a few prominent Bolsheviki at the beginning of the imperialist war. Bolshevism as a whole adopted a thoroly correct attitude towards the imperialist war and was conscious of the world-historical slogan: "Conversion of the imperialist war into civil war." A few important Bolshevist functionaries, for example, I. Goldenberg, vacillated regarding the question of the character of the war, and it came to an organizatory break with these comrades. Goldenberg was not able to return to the party until 1921, after he had thoroly recognized his fault.

What is the explanation of some of the errors committed in the first days of the February revolution? The general staff of the Bolsheviki, after years of imperialist war and white terror came together from various parts of the earth, after the central functionaires of the Bolsheviki had lived separated from their best friends. All were overwhelmed by the world historical events. Many things turned out differently from what had been expected. In the first days of the revolution the Bolsheviki themselves were in the minority among the Petrograd workers. The mood of the soldiers, whom Lenin later called "honest defenders of their country," created great tactical difficulties for us. We asked ourselves how we could approach these masses, how we could at least get them to listen to us. All this led to those difficulties which were responsible for the errors of the "Pravda" in the first days after the February revolution, before the arrival of Comrade Lenin.

Can one from this infer the existence of a right wing in the Bolshevist party, which Comrade Trotsky attempts to represent as a "social democratic," "semi-menshevist" wing. Only he who does not know the Bolshevist party can say such a thing, who judges the party from the outside, who for fifteen years has fought against this party, and who in 1924 again declares war against the party.

There were serious differences among the Bolsheviki in the period from April to September, 1917. Groups could have been formed out of these differences if the comrades who had erred had not confessed their errors, if events had not quickly liquidated these errors, if the party had not unanimously repudiated these errors, if the party had not had a Lenin. Then a split would have occurred, but in no event would a right wing have been formed.

There were sharp differences among the Bolsheviki in October and November, 1917. During this time the present writer was among those comrades who had erred. If the errors had not been immediately recognized as such, if the party had not unanimously corrected these errors, and again, if the party had had no Lenin, then these sharp differences could have led to serious results. But as a matter of fact the contrary of all this occurred.

The first split between the Bolsheviki and the mensheviki began in 1903. Since about 1910 the Bolshevist party has had a completely independent organizatory life. Between 1903 and 1910 Bolshevism experienced a period of insufficient organizatory growth. From 1910 to 1917 this could no longer be the case. There was and could be no right wing in the Bolshevist party.

IV.

Is the Formation of a Right Wing in the R. C. P. Possible at the Present Time?

A really serious question. Our reply to this is: Yes, an attempt is now being made to create such a right wing in the R. C. P. and in the Comintern. The leading figure in these efforts is Comrade Trotzky. The real problem is whether we can tolerate the formation of such a wing, and if not, how we can avoid it.

From whence can a right wing, a right fraction, a right tendency arise? It would be absurd to explain this by the personal responsibility of this or that comrade. No, there exist indisputable objective pre-conditions therefor.

What constitute the essential differences between the present state of affairs in our party and the position of our party before the October revolution?

First: The mensheviki, the S. R. the anarchists and the remaining groups have disappeared from the open political life of our country. In the interest of the successful carrying out of the proletarian dictatorship, the victorious working class, under the lead of our party, had to render illegal the S. R. the mensheviki, the anti-Soviet section of the anarchists, and other groups opposed to the idea of the dictatorship of the proletariat. Only the Russian C. P. is legally active. Today it cannot be otherwise. With such a state of affairs it is unavoidable that many elements enter our party, who, in the event of the existence of other legal parties, would not be with us.

Second: We have ideologically shattered two important parties which during two decades were our rivals; the S. R. and the mensheviki. Some ten thousand members of these parties have come over to our party, among them many very active members, as for instance Comrade Trotsky. A considerable portion of these comrades have been completely assimilated by our party and now are good Bolsheviki. But we must not disguise the fact that the annihilation of the S. R. and the mensheviki as legal parties does not serve to promote the homogeneous composition of our party.

Third: Our country is passing thru a transition period. Up to October, 1917, the situation was in many respects more difficult, but clearer. The party was confronted with an immediate task: the overthrow of the bourgeoisie. The present situation is more complicated. The Nep, the bourgeois environment, all these factors render our situation extremely complicated. Never in the history of the struggle of the international working class was a workers party in such complicated transition period.

Fourth: The social composition of the party has become heterogeneous. Up to October, 1917, our party was almost entirely a party of workers. After 1917, the situation has changed. We have at present over a hundred thousand peasant members, some thousands of members from the higher educational institutions, and many thousands of Soviet employes.

What is the meaning of all our efforts to purge our party, the Lenin recruitment? The aim of all these efforts is to render the composition of the party as homogeneous as possible, to prevent a dilution of its social composition.

All these together create the prerequisites under which the formation of a right wing is possible in the party created by Lenin—and is now without Lenin.

When we deal with the attacks of Comrade Trotzky upon the Bolshevist C. C. with the greatest objectivity, then we see that their content is the following: During these years Comrade Trotzky gave expression to everything which is not strictly Bolshevist, and which feels itself cramped within the frame of the old Lenin tactics. Trotzky is sincerely convinced that the old methods of Leninism can no longer today fulfill their task, when the party is acting in such a vast arena. According to his opinion, the party must become a block of various tendencies and fractions.

We all know that all those processes which are developing in our country are reflected in our party, which is in possession of power and which has suppressed all the other, anti-Soviet parties. We Leninists draw from this the conclusion that it is all the more necessary to preserve the greatest possible homogeneity of the party, the greatest firmness of leadership and the greatest possible devotion to Leninism. To maneuver, sometimes even to make concessions, is unavoidable. But it is necessary that the party shall always remain Bolshevist. Trotzky, on the other hand, draws different conclusions from the complexity of our present situation. It seems to him that the earlier "sectarianism," steel-firmness, is leading the country to the edge of the abyss.

Lenin As I Saw Him - By Schachno Epstein

ARTICLE VI.

An Interview With Lenin.

LENIN took great interest in America. For this reason he often invited to his cabinet comrades who were acquainted with American conditions. I happened to be one of them.

This was at the time when the Communist International was exerting all its efforts to unite the different Communist tendencies in America. The representatives of the American Communist factions were, of course, too partial in this question. There were comrades among them who cared nothing about affiliation or unification. One side flung accusations at the other. The "C. P." (Communist Party) considered the U. C. P. (United Communist Party) fatal centrists and opportunists; on the other hand, the U. P. C. thought the C. P. narrow dogmatic sectarians, who were against any Communist mass-action. Along came the "C. U. C." (Communist Unification Committee) and spared neither side.

The representatives of the various factions agreed, however, on one point, that in America there could be no question at that time about an open and legal Communist party. Even though there would be a unification of all Communist forces into one party, the united party would be forced to exist as an underground and illegal organization.

Lenin paid little or no attention to the facts and arguments of the fighting groups. He was all the time of the opinion, that whatever the conditions in America were at the time one thing was certain—the Communist Party must exert its efforts to carry on Communist mass propaganda among the masses.

For this purpose it was necessary to attract all the left elements of the socialist party and bring about a solidification, one way or another, of the radical forces. That was why Lenin found it necessary to consult those comrades who had lived in America before the outbreak of the Russian revolution, who were able to remain impartial concerning the fractional conflicts in the American Communist movement.

And because the movement of the workers of America always interested me and now though I was in Russia I was nevertheless in close contact with the American delegates, Lenin invited me to his cabinet to a private talk.

The manner of the invitation greatly surprised me. No denite date nor hour was set. The question was: What is the most convenient day for me and all this thru the telephone. I, of course, answered, that I was ready to come at any time Comrade Lenin would find it possible to interview me.

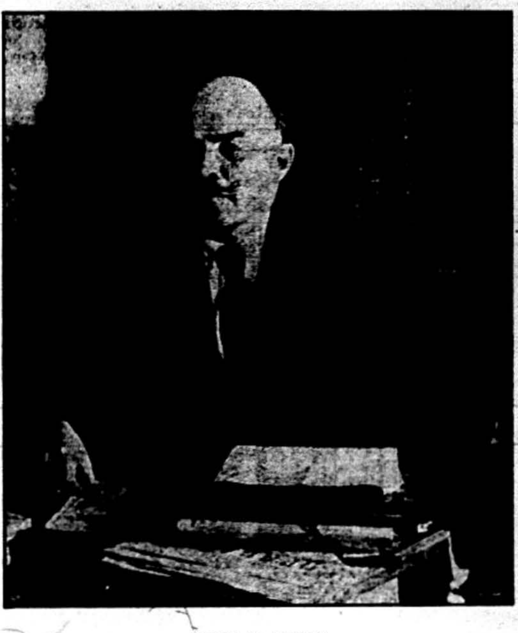
That same day, late at night, coming home from a party meeting, I found a note, in which I was requested by Lenin to be at his office at two in the afternoon the next day. But to make sure that I could keep the appointment the secretary of the council of the people's commissars ("Sovnarcom") would phone me at nine in the morning.

The watchman who brought me this note looked at me with great respect. I felt that he looked at me with admiration. When he asked me to give him a cigaret, he eagerly uttered: "Will you be tomorrow at Ilyich's himself? Eh, I wish I had a chance to speak to him personally. I know it isn't hard, he receives everybody without any formalities, but I can't bother him just for the sake of satisfying my curiosity."

The next moring exactly at nine the telephone rang. The secretary told me that at two Lenin had a recess period between sessions of the central committee of the Russian Communist Party. That the doorman at the entrance to Kremel would let me pass and I'd be escorted to the office of the "Sovnarcom."

I have had various occasions to be in Kremel to party meetings, military drill and journalistic purposes. I had in fact what would be called a regular pass. But this time I did not have to go thru any formalities. As soon as I mentioned my name to the doorman he ordered a Red army soldier to direct me to the office of the "Sovnarcom."

Having arrived half an hour ahead of time, the Red junker, a young Russian of fine appearance, offered to show me the Kremel in the meantime. However, I did not accept his offer. I knew the Kremel well, I had visited all its historical places many a time. The junker told me that last Saturday he and Lenin attended a "Subotnic" together ("Subotnic" means extra work done on Saturdays for starving Russia); they chopped wood for the Kremel military school, and Ilyich (Lenin) proved to be the fastest worker. He chopped the wood with a particular diligence, telling jokes, and making everybody laugh. "Yes," said the young soldier good naturedly, "one feels in the presence of Ilyich like his equal, he shakes hands with everybody, and always takes an interest in our well being; he wants to know how we are getting along, what books we read. We are all comrades. Last Saturday, at the 'Subotnic,' some of the comrades were ashamed to smoke in his presence. Ilyich noticed it and made the following remark: 'It's better when one does not smoke at all, but when one is used to smoking, there is no reason why he should be ashamed to do so in the presence of a comrade.'"



NICOLAI LENIN.

When the yong soldier told me this story his eyes sparkled with joy.

In the office, a large bright room simply furnished, several girls worked on typewriters. There were a few delegations waiting; among them one could see some elderly peasants dressed in gray dowlas coats and shoes made of bark. This delegation was attended to by the leader of the co-operatives, Khinchook, a well known former menshevik, who was the president of the Moscow Soviet under the Kerensky regime and turned Communist. I learned that these peasants came from Tula; they had to decide on the electrification of their village, so they came to ask Lenin's aid. One of the delegates, quite an old man with a long gray beard, was their spokesman: "A school we have in our village already, a club of Communist youth, too. The club has a library, it is therefore high time that we should have electricity. We're old people, let's then, live to see with our own eyes our village electrified. Under the czars regime we have had nothing. Now, under the Soviet regime, things are different. We are the rulers."

Another peasant of middle age chimed in: "The neighborhood village already has those 'Ilyich's lamps,' why shouldn't we have them?"

The name "Ilyich lamps" for electricity made everybody smile. "What names people can invent," my escort the Red soldier, joyfully remarked.

The chief secretary, Comrade Padejeva, directed me to Lenin's cabinet. In the large corridor, where a high iron stove stood majestically, a few visitors were seated on a bench among whom I noticed Maxim Gorky, talking to the young door-maid.

I was led into the cabinet.

It was a large hall with many high Venetian windows facing one of the main boulevards of the Kremel. The walls were covered with book shelves. In the middle there was a long table with papers, books and telephones galore, several simple chairs stood around the table and a sofa in a corner of the room. There were no pictures on the walls, no ornaments. There was only one large map on the wall. The only luxury to be found in the room was a Persian carpet covering the entire floor. But everything basked in an abundance of light and spaciousness. Thru the windows one could see a beautiful panorama on the lake Moscow, surrounded by golden church domes.

Having to wait ten minutes, I cast my eyes on the New York Times, Call, and Weekly People, that were lying on the table, also several English books, among them Upton Sinclair's "Brass Check."

From another room, the door of which was open, I heard Zinoviev and Trotsky, whose voices were familiar to me ere long.

Lenin came out, and extending his hand to me, as to an old friend, excused himself for keeping me waiting. "Young ought to know," he smilingly added, " when we begin to discuss a question time ceases to exist.

I at once felt intimate, as if I had met a very close friend whom I have not seen for a long time. Soon our conversation was in it's full swing. The sprightliness of his face especially impressed me. Not a gray hair in his beard. His small keen eyes pierce with a fire of youthfulness. Dressed in a black, light alpaca jacket and wrinkled necktie with his blond French pointed beard, Lenin looked like a provincial Russian proprietor. Peculiar, however, is his roundly pointed forehead full of narrow wrinkles. When he smiles his jawbones are bulge out.

Lenin showed a special interest in the conditions of the socialist party in America, in its left wing. What elements is it composed of? Did I know the leaders. He was of the opinion that it is necessary to draw them near, and not repel them, as it was unfortunately done by the American Communists. Naturally, we have to criticise them and sharply so, but the criticism must be a friendly one. The same attitude must prevail toward the progressive elements in the unions. "You and Comrade Ogursky have recommended Schlesinger," Lenin remarked. "I don't know just how much one can rely upon Schlesinger, he impresses me as a very limited personality, is somewhat insane, rather insincere, but if he is really as radical as he said he is, so bitterly opposed to Samuel Gompers, we have to support him in his struggle against the conservation in the trade unions."

I told Lenin what I knew about Schlesinger, how he behaved after his return from Russia and Lenin motioned with his hand: "Hm, well, such a person doesn't deserve too much attention; what they want is publicity to advertise themselves. Their deeds however, tell what they are. What is necessary in such cases is to discuss their doings, ignoring their personality. That is the worst thing for them."

I was surprised to learn that Lenin detected at once the weak side of Schlesinger.

We turned into a discussion of the problems of the working class movement of America, and Lenin displayed a thoro knowledge of American conditions. In his estimate the play of illegality in America was of no or little importance. The chief aim of the American Communists should be to create a wide left mass-movement. To cling strictly to the slogan of armed insurrection, of proletarian dictatorship in America is no more than a left wing child-disease. The moment the left wing movement becomes a movement of the masses, so that in America there will spring up a party of the toiling masses ready to fight capitalism, the slogans of proletarian dictatorship will become the natural result. To jump over from "A" to "Z" is impossible. America is not Russia and not even England. American capital came out of the world war stronger than it was before the war, therefore it is first of all necessary to awaken the most elementary political consciousness of the American toiling masses. For this purpose a small legal "daily" is of far greater importance, than a big underground organizational apparatus. The Americans committed an unforgivable error in not supporting Eugene V. Debs in the last (1920) presidential elections. To bury oneself in a shell and fancy that one is making revolutions is not becoming to a Communist who must stand on solid ground and not soar in the ethereal spheres of abstract slogans and speculations.

"I argue about it," says Lenin fully convinced, "with the American comrades, and it is remarkable that just those comrdes, who went thru the revolutionary school in Russia and are now active in the American movement, cannot and will not understand this. They think that America must follow the road of Russia.' The genuine American comrades do understand the importance of being a legal party, and to them, therefore, belongs the leadership of the movement. There are among them people who have a thoro understanding of the trade unions, and the trade unions are the foundation of the entire left wing movement. So long as the Communists will not penetrate the ranks of the trade unions, they will remain stationary."

In passing, Lenin made a few remarks about the Jewish working class movement. And here too he showed

When the News Reached Siberia

By AMY SCHECHTER.

A SPECIAL meeting in the People's House. The big log hall is filled with men and women in rough sheepskin coats and high felt boots, the men with ear-lapped fur caps, the women with shawls, some with babies wrapped in the folds. The news reached the county committee of the party several hours ago, so that most of the workers know why the plant whistle has summoned them to a special meeting, and their faces are grave.

The party secretary comes in, throwing off his great shuba he wears over his sheepskin coat, he has come by sleigh from the next village and it is bitter cold.

He is the typical worker of these parts, blonde and strongly built, and he tells about Lenin's death in simple words. Then he reads the telegrams from the central party and union state organs.

The messages tell of Lenin's last weeks, his part in the revolution, his relation to workers and peasants; but the burden of each one is the same: "Lenin is dead—his work goes on."

The workers are very silent and some are weeping. Now their minds are filled with the bare fact of their loss. But within a few days many will join the hundreds of thousands of workers all through Russia in confirming the party's words, when the mass movement of workers to the Communist ranks will come as a magnificant answer to the whispering and whispering among the counter-revolutionaries and the liberal defenders of "democracy," and the plain ordinary speculators and crooks and grafters all waiting vulture-like for the disintegration of the revolution after the death of Lenin.

"Lenin is dead—his work goes on."

A comrade has died while on a job of vital importance to the workers' republic, and the others feel a personal responsibility for seeing that it is carried through. For it is exactly as a comrade worker on the job of building the workers' republic together with them that the revolutionary workers of Russia think of Lenin . . .

The chief of militia in this village was a worker in a Leningrad factory when Lenin led a strike there. . . All over Russia workers are scattered who, at one time or another, came into just such contact with Lenin in their everyday industrial struggles.

To some of the peasants he may be a sort of supernatural figure. Hereabouts, for instance, the peasants tell that once in the days of Kolchak when the Whites herded all revolutionary sympathizers into this same People's House and were getting ready to fire the building when "Lenin suddenly appeared in their midst". . . and a few moments later, "A Red band came down from the hills," and put the Whites to flight.

All of which is true, save the appearance of Denin; and what is that after all, but revolutionary force as personified in the peasant mind?

But to the mass of the workers Lenin is the comrade, the organizer of strikes, the teacher of workers' groups, the comrade who knew every detail of their daily lives and struggles, and who, at meetings, as Stalin tells, might always be looked for in some corner of the hall, talking animatedly with a group of rank and file workers. . .

. . . The messages have all been read, and the meeting is ended.

This is the regular meeting night for the party shop nuclei, so the members of the mixed nucleus which regularly meets in the People's House, remain, and the machinists and electrical workers and carpenters and other groups go off to their shops.

The work goes on . . .

The night of Lenin's funeral. The workers gather in the snow-heaped garden of the People's House where girls and boys stroll about on summer nights between dances or the acts of plays.

It is far below zero, and the sky is blue ice, and the stars distant and pale. The Young Communists come, and the chill of the night is broken by red-flaring of pine torches, dusky red of flame-lit banners.

The band plays the opening bars of the Red Funeral March, and the dark sheep-skin clad mass thins out as it goes through the gate and becomes a procession. It circles the little settlement, passing the coke plant where blazing ovens show a living industry where last year there was dark silence.

Back near the People's House again, the Communists line up facing the river with rifles at aim. A speaker mounts the platform set in the open near the graves of men who fell here in the revolution.

His speech is suddenly broken into by the signal for the parting salute fired at the same moment by thousands of Communists in towns and cities and villages all through the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The volley is answered by a flash from the hills across the river where the miners are gathered.

The speaker takes up his theme with its burden—"his work goes on."

Popular Music at Symphony Orchestra

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

The fourteenth program of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, given at Orchestra Hall last Friday and Satur somehow sneaked out of the Thursday night pop series and found its way into the solemn subscription series. The entire program was light, except for one composition. It was an international program as well since music of Germany, Austria, Italy, France and Russia was represented.

The Italian work, the third symphonic poem written by G. Francesco Malapiero under the title, "Impressions of Nature," was given its first Chicago representation. It is in three sections, "The Festival in the Valley of Hell," (not Dante, but an actual valley near Naples), "The Roosters," and "The Tarentelle at Capri." The section is quite clever. The music is most solemn and churchy, broken by cacklings from the muted brass. Thus Malapiero contrasts the serious aspect of the dignified cock with the sounds to which he gives voice. The last section is a sweeping, infectious dance tune.

The program opened with a still born and stupid little overture, "The Barber of Bagdad," by Peter Cornelius, a German who has written far better music.

The Austrian work was the "Rustic Wedding," symphony of Karl Goldmark. This is a gracious gesture among symphonies. (It is really not a symphony because it is not in symphonic form, but Goldmark called it that.) There are five movements, a wedding march with variations, a bridal song, a serenade, a section called "In the Garden," and a heavy peasant's dance.

Soviet Russia came to bat with the symphonic poem, "The Sirens," by Reinhold Moritzovitch Gliere. This work was written during Gliere's German period, in 1912, and shows markedly the German influence. The plot of the poem is the familiar one of the sirens luring the sailors to aproach the island, where the ship is wrecked on the sunken rocks. Gliere's setting is second only to one piece of music I know of in describing water. The passage in the mysteriously muted horns describing the approach of the doomed ship and the terrific climax when the ship is ground to bits on the rocks, are two of the great thrills written by a master of thrills.

Since the Russian revolution Gliere has directed the government conservatory at Kiev, where he was born.

The program wound up with some selections from the opera, "The Damnation of Faust," by Hector Berlioz one of the great master hands of France and of the world. In these days when the Gounod Faust is popular and the Boito Faust bids fair to attain a popularity aproaching epidemic proportions, it is well to hear these melodies of a Faust greater far more than both others.

Mr. Stock's suite from the opera consists of the invocation of Mephisto the dances of the will-o-the-wisps and of the sylphs, and the famous Rakoczy march. Let those who loudly proclaim, as they often do, that Berlioz contributed only to the theory and not to the worthwhile literature of music hear this suite and forever hold their peace. The two dances are music with an unexplainable quality about it which is at once graceful and light and hypnotic, in the literal sense of that word. The Rakoczy march is a splendidly vigorous setting of an old Hungarian tune. There is a long story behind this Berlioz arrangement but it is too long to tell here.

Anna Pavlowa, empress and standard bearer of Russian dancers, is due to arrive at the Auditorium theater next Monday night. She and her company are to stay here for two weeks. The present tour of the Pavlowa company is announced as its last.

The regular Pavlowa repertoire will be presented with several important additions in the way of revivals and new pieces. Chief of these latter is a ballet in two acts on the subject of "Don Quixote," with music by a composer named Minkus. Minkus is a name unfortunately not within the ken of this writer nor do any of the standard reference works carry any comment on him, but "Don Quixote" is alluring material for ballet treatment and Pavlowa is famous for presenting the best in the art of dancing.

Another new presentation is a work called "Coquetterie de Colombine," by the Russian composer Richard Drigo, author of that famous restaurant tune the serenade in the ballet "Les Millions de Harlequin."

The revivals are the ballets "The Sleeping Beauty," by Chaykovski, the waltz of which is played by every amateur orchestra, "Coppelia," by Leo Delibes, author of Lakme, and ballet composer par excellence, and a setting of Weber's "Invitation to the Dance."

The company for this final tour is over a hundred strong. That phenomenal athlete, Laurent Novikov will be Pavlowa's partner, as in previous seasons. Theodore Stier will again be the orchestra director.

The program of the first week is subjoined. There will be seven divertissements at each performance. "Divertissement" is a fancy word for a short ballet five or ten minutes long.

The program:

Monday, Jan. 26—Don Quixote.

Tuesday, Jan. 27—Amarilla and Autumn Leaves.

Wednesday, Jan. 28—Fairy Doll and Invitation to the Dance.

Thursday, Jan. 29—Coppelia and Chopiniana.

Friday, Jan. 30—Don Quixote.

Saturday afternoon, Jan. 31—Sleeping Beauty and Fairy Doll.

Saturday evening, Jan. 31—Don Quixote.

Sunday afternoon, Feb. 1—Don Quixote.

Sunday evening, Feb. 1—Polish Wedding and Snowflakes.

Emperor Jones at the Punch and Judy Theatre in New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Paul Robeson, great Negro actor, has risen to the peak of his artistic career in the title role of The Emperor Jones, the fine West Indian play of Eugene O'Neill, now revived and presented by Harry Weinberger at the Punch & Judy Theater.

Robeson has the physical magnificence that goes with the part of the ex-Pullman porter who rose from stowaway to emperor in two years on this Carribean island not yet "self determined by United States marines" as the program puts it. He is a genial superman in the opening scene as he tells a shrimpy English trader of a good lesson he learned from the quality folks on the Pullman cars—that if you steal a little they put you in jail but if you steal enough they make you emperor. And like a good sport, trained in the school of craps he gaily admits that good luck can't last always and that he is ready any time to make his getaway and cash in, if his luck turns.

Luck turns when the "bush niggars" the emperor is exploiting, start a revolution. The gaudy monarch hikes thru the tropical forest. Night sets in and fears with it. The terrors of the darkness and the old superstitions he laughed at in the daytime overcome him. He is haunted by visions his distraught mind conjures The chain gang and whipping boss he had once fled from appear before him with other phantasises of the horrors he has seen or hear from of old. In the end the "bush niggars" get him.

Another O'Neill Sailor Play.

The Steamship Glencairn, another fine O'Neill revival, now playing at the Princess Theater, after a run at the Punch & Judy and the Provincetown Theaters is a powerful presentation of the life of the sailors of a few years ago before unionism wrought some reforms. The passing out of Yank in his forecastle bunk is one of the most realistic pieces of tragedy the New York stage has seen and the crimp joint scene in London where sailors are vamped, doped and shanghaied is raw, disheveled life as it was. So some old sea dogs, not regular theater goers, say after seeing it. O'Neill's years before the mast have been vividly crystallized in the Steamship Glencairn.

Teachers' Silver Jubilee Today.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its entry into the tax campaign in the city of Chicago with a silver jubilee luncheon today at the Morrison Hotel 79 W. Madison street. There will be an informal reception on the second floor, main parlor from 11:30 to 12 o'clock. Luncheon will be served at 12.30 sharp in the Cameo Banquet Hall on the same floor.

Shop Nucleus Reorganization

THE following communication on shop nucleus reorganization, a reply to the C. I. letter published several days ago, will be of interest to all members of the Workers Party, making available the experiences gained so far for all units of the party.

To the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

Dear Comrades : Your letter of November 22, 1924, on the matter of shop nuclei has been received. Your letter will be most helpful and we hope it will be followed by additional material and suggestions on organization and experiences in carrying on shop nuclei work in the other Communist Parties.

The plan of organization which you outline is the one which we have been working on and which we hope to carry out in due time.

We are enclosing the thesis on reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei which was unanimously adopted by the central executive committee a number of days before receipt of your letter.

We think that you will find it in thoro harmony with the policy on shop nuclei of the Comintern. We have, as you will note, corrected our errors in conception and organization of shop nuclei as contained in the original resolution on factory nuclei adopted at the second convention of our party in January, 1924. Especially as concerned with language organization, dues payments, etc.

Followed Piatnitzky's Articles.

We have followed Comrade Piatnitzky's articles on shop nuclei organization very closely, especially as outlined in his articles in the Communist International No. 4, English edition, which goes into details on the way to carry out the reorganization.

There is not any disagreement between your outline and ours. Yours is a finished form of organization, that is, when shop nuclei organization has proceeded to a very great extent, while we have had to deal with but the preliminaries of the organization and therefore our immediate and practical approaches are variable, but having the same foundation and form. We are even yet in the propaganda stage in many instances of shop nuclei organization... Not all the party units by far, especially the language organizations, understand the necessity of reorganization on the factory nuclei basis.

We suggest to you that you deal in a special communication on this question in a great part with the role of language groups and members or auxiliaries when the party is a party of shop nuclei. This will no doubt go a long way in getting the language federations more energetically behind the reorganization.

At present we are following the plan of organizing shop nuclei in favorable, yet isolated instances, for the purpose of experience and demonstration of the superiority of shop nuclei over the territorial or geographical form of organization. This is on the basis of information gotten thru the industrial registration. We have organized some shop nuclei in the city of Chicago and in Gary. These are in the needle, printing, machine shop and steel industries. They have not been organized within a particular territory or ward, but from locality in general. These are working out fairly well, despite inexperience, and indicate much promise for the future.

We are enclosing copies of material sent to district organizers on experiences to date in organizing shop nuclei which will explain some of the difficulties thus far in the work and some of the benefits.

Work Will Grow.

It must be understood very clearly that it is not our intention to continue for a very long period the method of organizing shop nuclei in isolated instances and places. When these factory nuclei have, among other things, served the purpose of showing to the party units how much better shop nuclei function, we will be in a better position to apply the more systematic plan of reorganization as outlined in your letter, Piatnitzky's articles and as also adopted by our party.

We shall then also take a special territory or ward and try to reorganize that particular territory or work, or working area on a completely shop nuclei basis.

We are clear, we think, on the function of factory nuclei and local branches. Perhaps the confusion between the functions of the local branches and factory nuclei occurs to you because of our method of organizing the nuclei in isolated places. If so, we trust that we have cleared up this point.

Our reading of your letter gave to us the impression, in fact, that our organizational plan and understanding of functions were in complete harmony with yours.

The city committee is the guide of the activity of the party in its respective locality in every phase of the work. The factory nuclei have authority on all the party matters in their respective factories. The superior party committees have authority over the nuclei as such as well as over the individual party members. We believe our thesis makes this, as well as other points, clear.

We have, of course, not yet reached the stage whereby the leading committee of the city organization is elected by a conference of factory representatives of nuclei. When we have organizations functioning upon a ward or district scale, we shall naturally proceed to organize our leading bodies thru such means, and also the higher bodies.

For purposes of clarification, we might say that uses and meaning of terms may lead occasionally to misunderstanding. For instance, your use of the term "district conference" indicates a territory smaller than a city conference, whereas American usage of the "district conference" means a conference larger than a city one, in fact implies numerous cities. Also in America the term "ward" refers to an election area, whereas, it must now be made clear what we refer in our literature and letters to, is a working area.

In smaller localities, we find that all the subdivisions will not be necessary, especially in the mining territory where only one organizational form, a city committee, for example, may be necessary to direct the work.

Industrial Registration.

We are agreed that the industrial registration of members according to factories is irksome and perhaps superfluous. We are making use of that since we are organizing our nuclei at present as mentioned above, in isolated cases which makes this registration necessary for informational and organizational purposes. When we proceed to organizing nuclei thru the ward method, then the registration method will not be required.

Where we have organized nuclei, such as in Chicago and Gary, the city executive organization directs the work and issues the necessary instructions for the nuclei, tho it cannot of course be said that everything is working as smoothly as would be desired. Our enclosed letters speak of some of those experiences, good as well as bad.

We are especially pleased with your statement that "It is absolutely necessary for all the members of the W. P. working in a particular factory regardless of their language group to which they belong to organize themselves into one and the same nucleus." We have also stressed this point, as you have no doubt noted in our discussion and thesis.

Language Federations.

Also your opinion that the future form and development of language federations and the auxiliary organizations of the party of carrying on propagandist, agitational and cultural tasks, etc., is completely in accord with our conception. You have perhaps seen this in our original draft of the thesis which speaks of language federations being formed into language auxiliaries of the party. With, this we have not as yet dealt, except in passing, in our press and thesis, since we felt that our first task is propagandizing of the absolute necessity for factory nuclei reorganization and the commencement of the practical work. In this way we would be transforming the character of our work and thus, naturally, by developing at the same time the new forms of the party, the shop nuclei, changing the role of the language units. We would like more on this question, since especially in America the problem is quite complex and the party and its federations will require all the advice and experience possible.

We also are pointing out, as you do, that the argument of difficulties of open activities as an argument against factory nuclei is quite the contrary; that that is another good reason for the organization of shop nuclei. America with its oppressive methods, its multitude of factory and governmental spies, certhinly makes our branches a thousand times more open to attack than our factory nuclei which can closely scrutinize who enters its ranks and as much as possible prevent the entrance of all kinds of spies. You will perhaps recall that we spoke of this in answering the contributor you refer to in the DAILY WORKER supplement. We are taking, of course, all due precautions to safeguard the shop nuclei.

We might add that some of the difficulties in the shop nuclei work is to make the factory nuclei carry on definite political functions. The tendency is toward swerving off onto almost entirely industrial and shop matters, but we have been making headway in this respect. By continued discussion and practice we find that the nuclei thus far organized are beginning to see that they are political units of the party and function accordingly.

Question of Unemployed.

Another point upon which we would like to get more information is that of the unemployed and factory nuclei. First as to the length of time unemployed are to be attached to their factory nuclei, if there are no immediate signs of returning to work in the same factory. Shall we continue to let them be in the branch long, or to stay in the nuclei to which they belonged until they are employed in another factory and then transfer them to another shop nucleus. transfer them to another shop nucleus?

Also, we have these situations in America to meet in the needle trades; for example, where we have comrades in nuclei who are unemployed for a month or two months and then return to the same factory. It is very hard to make them realise that they are to continue functioning. They seem to feel that, out of a job, out of the nucleus, whereas, of course, this feeling does not exist in the case of a territorial branch. We point out to the comrades that the question of unemployment is one of the problems to discuss and to meet in the cases of the factory nuclei and to make this an agitational and organizational basis for reaching other fellow workers. We hope to remedy this difficulty, but would appreciate suggestions.

Also we have the case where members of a nucleus working on various floors and one floor is employed and the other is unemployed. This is a variation of the previous question (which is not as difficult of solution, we find).

The party is also now proceeding to organize shop nuclei in southern Illinois in the coal mining territory. The reorganization there is meeting with fine results. We hope to be able to write you soon of practical successes. Also in the case of Pittsburgh steel and coal territory. In Cleveland, too, factory nuclei are being established.

We are in the midst of a party discussion and this in part delays practical reorganization, but it will help to clarify the entire question of shop nuclei. We feel thereby that we shall be able to go ahead much faster with reorganization in many parts of the country on the basis of our thesis just adopted and the policy of the Comintern.

With Communist greetings,
Martin Abern,
Director Shop Nucleus
Reorganization,

Earl R. Browder,
Acting Secretary.

ABRAMOVITCH GETS INTO TROUBLE

By JOSEPH BRAHDY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—And now the yellow "socialist" international has sent its emissary to America.

Abramovich stood on the platform in the New Star Casino, New York City, last Sunday waving copies of the "Emes" and the "Pravada" at an incredulous audience and shouting "I'll prove to you from the Bolshevist press what I am saying." He never read a line from those papers.

Pulls Old Joke.

"The Bolsheviki accomplished the peasant revolution, I admit," he shouted; the audience applauded "but they didn't do it according to Marx." He really said that in the best stupid fashion of the swivel chair philosopher. Tho an old joke the audience acknowledged their pleasure at hearing it again. "The trouble with the Bolsheviki is that they only put into effect the theories of the peasant leaders Stankernazin and Pugatchoff." So the Bolsheviki were too slow for him he said; but they also were too fast for him because Russia wasn't "ripe" for the revolution.

There was several million dollars' worth of "socialists" on the platform, Hillquit, Panken, Vladek, etc. socialists of smaller denomination, members of the "organization departments" and "entertainment committees" of certain unions were liberally sprinkled thru the audience.

They were auctioning off socialism. Vladek, Hillquit, Oneal were standing on the platform flapping their arms and crying "Order, please. There are only ten disturbers in the hall, don't mind." Later they said there might be as many as 200, but that that was alright, too. They'd be taken care of. As a matter of fact, there were really 2000 "disturbers" there, out of an audience of 3000.

They pleaded with the sympathisers of Soviet Russia who were in the crowd. "You can applaud whenever you like," they said. The various chairmen, vice-chairmen and superchairmen took their turn. Finally Hillquit said, "Comrade Abramovitch can take care of any interjection; don't throw them out." But of course, Comrade Abramovitch could do nothing of the kind.

Then the cheka of the S. P. was led into action by his honor, Comrade Judge Panken. "Leave the aisles, committeemen; police, take your post in the aisles." And in the very best socialist fashion every one could see the united front between the millionaire-socialist-lawyers and the Tammany Hall bluecoats. "Here, here, there," the committee men pointed them out and the policemen threw them out, and beat them up, while some of the protesting comrades were carved up by the union gangsters.

When Abramovitch mentioned anything pertaining to the yellow international, the audience booed; when he referred to the Communist International, they applauded vigorously. So he had to talk carefully in between these two; a contradictory, colorless, classless, aimless talk, worthy of the best traditions of the Second International.

One serious mistake he committed. He challenged the Communists. He the compatriot of Noske, Scheidemann, Ebert, Kerensky, is challenging the comrades of Liebknecht, Luxemburg and Lenin.

Abramovitch, we accept your challenge.

The Truth About Soviet Russia

By A. A. PURCELL,
Head of the Fraternal British Trade Union Delegation to Investigate Conditions in Soviet Russia.

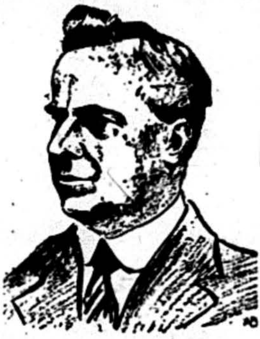
SEVERAL years ago, in 1903, I think it was—I remember reading a pamphlet by that Scotch-American millionaire, Andrew Carnegie, wherein it was stated that if capital could ever be got together to exploit Southern Russia, it would be a veritable Mecca beyond the dreams of avarice, returning to capitalism a financial Mount Everest.

Several times my swift movements through Southern Russia covering 3,000 miles in eighteen days, I have been constantly reminded of the Homestead philosopher of capitalism and his trite remarks.

Carnegie would exploit the earth's wealth for a particular small set, but the Russian worker has accepted the task of exploiting his native territory for the common weal.

Go where you will in the Don Basin and you are struck instantly with a whole maze of capitalist contradictions, or rather, the remnants of them. You see the incessant struggle going ahead to master the physical and mental defects inherited from capitalism.

Fred Bromley



You can see the bruises and dinges battered upon the well-worn machinery, the frightful conditions under which the minions and concessionaires of czardom freed their victims to work, breed, feed, sleep and expire amid tears of blood and disgusting modes of disease and insanitary conditions.

Everywhere you can discern the depredations of the treacherous invader, whether in frock coat or khaki suits. Then having defeated the invader you sense the miraculous and herculean tasks being performed to diminish the evils which have scarred a one-time beautiful and undulating country side. A yawning black and bleak cavity seems to gasp at the human presence.

The filthy relics left by capitalism as its contribution to human emancipation present a formidable enough task for the new masters, and these are gradually wrecking the old so-called homes and replacing them with tiny houses, that are monuments to the revolution, and will eventually prove to be bulwarks against the old inhuman, insanitary and disease-ridden little cells.

It is a tribute to the ability and capacity of the Workers' Republic that they can rely upon sufficient discipline to enable them to mobilize domestic armies to march and attack this octopus.

If you go to Grosny or Baku, the story simply changes from coal and salt to oil. But the avowed intention, everywhere discernible, to reduce illiteracy and shocking housing conditions, becomes more and more apparent the further you move forward.

Then Schlerovka and Zemo-Avchati give an ever-widening and penetrating glance into the efforts being made to provide energy-giving electrical power to huge slices of the earth's territory, piercing the natural darkness on a more modern basis with the application of scientific methods on an ever-increasing scale.

Thus, to destroy the old and erect the new on these ruins is the everywhere accepted task of all.

As showing the intensity of interest in the undertakings, and the certainty of final success, at one of the mines in the Donetz, a very good old trade union colleague of mine remarked to a Russian comrade that whilst admitting the enormous difficulties which were being so successfully surmounted, there was much of a primitive nature about the workings. "Quite true," replied our good Russian friend, "but never forget these are ours."

But Chatura is clearly the greatest example of working class determination and capacity. Four years ago the place was in an extremely raw state, but I remember reporting in England the importance of what I saw on that occasion. I have now seen it a second time and am bound to say that it certainly ranks among the highest efforts of the Soviet Republic.

The use and exploitation of peat as an energy-raiser on the scale provided at Chatura is of itself a unique thing, but the lay-out of the place, the fine buildings, the well-planned housing facilities for the workers, together with the clubs, schools, and restaurants—all this will, when the plant is completed, make the Chatura electricity plant one of the finest, healthiest, and most self-contained industrial plants in the world.

Here is shown the mighty difference between capitalist and working class effort to deal with a great problem.

A mere glance would compel the most hide-bound anti-Soviet croaker to admit that even the users of strong revolutionary phrases can handle powerful economic undertakings with wonderful success.

Here the technical men are given free and full play within the scheme for the display of scientific skill, a freedom they cannot get under capitalism, unless it pays the capitalist; here is a question of social service and consequently, the best is asked for, expected, and conceded.

These great undertakings at Chatura, Schlerovka, Zemo-Avchati, impress me considerably; each is a great piece of social and economic organization, and yet they, and several others, are just a part of one and the same idea.

Soviet Russia will yet feel more proud of its adventures in the field of electricity. In England, we are still talking about it, but you in Russia are doing it; and Russia is poor financially, whilst England is relatively rich, again financially.

Anyway, in this direction, you are fast approaching genuine and satisfactory communal rewards, while we in England are still considering whether it will pay the capitalists to exploit our natural resources.

My time will not permit me to launch into further detail, it is sufficient for my purpose to say that I am profoundly impressed at the wondrous advances made since my visit of 1920.

The head almost reels at the thought of the energy which has been consumed in repelling the attacks of almost every country in the world; sometimes avowed and open, at other times by the most insidious and dastardly manner. Then there was the famine period, the almost daily attacks in the world's newspapers, and the constant and persistent building up of crass calumny, lying and distortion, every atom of which was perpetrated in the ever present hope that it would bring about the fall of Soviet Russia. These fools forget that in the end they have done more to popularize Russia than they will ever know. More and more, we are beginning to know Russia; the inquiries by ordinary workers in Great Britain are a constantly increasing stream, despite all calumnies.

And so I am led to Georgia, which has had its full share of capitalist attention, and, if I may say so, alleged socialist attention too.

When I was about to enter Georgia I kept glancing around to see if any Georgians still survived. The British press during the last six months has demonstrated a fond capitalist-like love for Georgia; it has, in fact, emptied Georgia of its entire population.

Day by day, and week by week, we were told how munities, risings, tortures, shootings, murder, rapine, and slaughter was being perpetrated under Bolshevik rule in Georgia. The most hair-raising paragraphs were stuck in the mid-columns of the British press.

They knew all this was untrue, yet they hoped it really was true, because all their other weapons against Soviet Russia had fallen from their hands.

It appeared to me at sight, that the trouble is clearly one in which those who have been compelled to disgorge their plunder feel annoyed.

The splendid demonstration in Tiflis on December 3, which took nearly three hours to pass a given point, was a complete answer to the croakers at home and abroad:

Men, women, boys, and girls, all in their industrial garb, sang, cheered, and marched in good order and their banner, and the expression on their faces indicated that they have a hold upon Georgia which they have determined must be maintained at all costs.

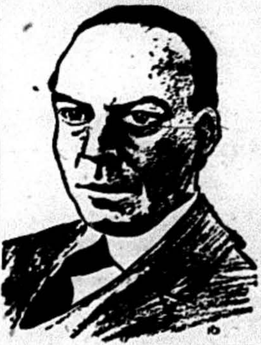
Merchants and landlords, former occupants of Georgia, stand up if you can and speak the truth!

You know your confreres abroad lie. Why do you acquiesce in this? I will, if I may, reply for you.

You observe that the workers have taken all power out of your hands, and worse still for you, are going ahead to clear out the vile slums from which you took toll. They have built up better dwellings, and bigger and stronger trade unions, which have their full share in the general scheme of things.

They attack your profiteering. They have ended your chances to exploit them for your own aggrandisement. That is your trouble. I as a member of the British working class am proud, indeed, to have had this opportunity to associate with that great mass of Georgian workers which I witnessed and mixed with recently. Despite all the lying, despite all the charlatanry, chicanery, and humbug, the Georgia workers are in possession, and, therefore, long life and success to them! Keep out your old masters, keep in yourselves.

A. A. Purcell



It will be our duty on returning to Britain to prosecute, with ever increasing energy, our promise to inform the British working class of your great work in Georgia, and this, too, also applies to the U. S. S. R. Long may it reign, and may it have our greatest help!

LENIN AS I SAW HIM

a thoro acquaintance with the matter. He knew the role the Forward plays in the Jewish labor movement, what Abe Cahn represents. He emphasised that he considered the movement of the Jewish workers of great significance. It will have to play a decisive role in the left wing movement of America, especially at its inception. Lenin was of the opinion that the Jewish workers will be pioneers of the open revolutionary activity, simply because their unions are the most progressive, and also because they are more socialistically inclined as a result of their past experiences on the other side of the Atlantic. Leaders of the Abe Cahn caliber are not to be taken seriously—they are money makers; if the Forward had no other worker's daily to compete with, and the left wing movement would grow, it would also bend leftward, for Soviet Russia; but if, on the other hand, the left wingers will publish their own daily newspaper, the Forward will turn blacker and blacke against Soviet Russia and for Gompers. It would be better, added Lenin with a smile, that the Jewish workers had a daily of their own in opposition to that of the Forward, owned and controlled by the workers themselves.

While discussing the movement of the Jewish workers, Lenin asked me whether I was a "Bundist," and whether I became a Communist right after the first split of the "Bund." I answered him and he expressed his delight that the entire "Bund" went over to the Communists. After all, the "Bund" is one of the oldest Marxian organizations which is of great value to the Russian revolutionary movement, not withstanding its optimism and nationalistic tendencies.

Finally Lenin asked me if I knew Daniel DeLeon personally. He was very much interested in him and expressed a desire to get all his works. Debs is too much the man of the heart. This makes him flexible and inconsistent and this is to be pitied; he is a bright personality and could otherwise have had a great creative influence on the development of the American working class movement.

Lenin became enraptured in his talk to such an extent that he forgot about the session of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, which was going on in the other room. Remembering it, he, good-naturedly, made the following remark: "A Russian habit we haven't yet learned from the Americans that time is money."

He very heartily took leave from me, excusing himself for troubling me, thanking me for the information I had given him.

I felt ashamed of myself, because it was he to be thanked. In the one hour I spent with Lenin, I learned so much about America! And I was supposed to be the "expert!"

After Lenin has taken leave, and I reflected upon our conversation, upon his comradely behavior, I only began to comprehend his greatness, that which people call "genial simplicity."

In the corridor Maxim Gorky was still waiting, and because of this visit to Lenin, I had the opportunity to become acquainted with Gorky.

This was one of the happiest days in my life, that I will never, never forget. . .

Bolshevism or Trotskyism?

According to his view, the party must become a combination of various tendencies and fractions, and that it shall not immediately conduct the state and economic apparatus, but leave more scope for bourgeois specialists, etc.

This idea of Comrade Trotsky would in the present international and inner-political situation, logically lead in the best case to the substitution of the Bolshevik Party by a "broad" "labor party," after the model of the English MacDonald labor party in a "Soviet edition." It is quite possible that Comrade Trotsky has not thought out his idea to its logical conclusion, But he is steering in this direction, unless he returns to Bolshevism.

A party which has to work under such conditions needs a number of transmission belts to secure its influence upon the peasantry, upon the employees, upon the intelligenzia, etc. The system of levers which secures the dictatorship of the proletariat is complicated (Soviets, trade unions, etc.). But it does not follow from this that the party can become a block of tendencies, a sort of "parliament of opinions."

It is a matter of course that the Bolshevik Party in the year 1924, cannot simply copy the Bolshevik Party of, say 1914, or even of 1917. We cannot limit ourselves merely to admitting workers into our party as members. By means of the Lenin recruitment we did everything possible in order to increase the number of industrial workers in our party. For some years we held back the influx of peasants into our party. But we have now come to the conclusion that we must again admit a considerable number of peasants. A workers party which governs the state in a peasant country, must have among its members a certain percentage of peasants.

The regulation of the composition of our party is a complicated and difficult task. It is closely connected with the most difficult and sometimes the most delicate political problems. The party must maneuver in this connection. At the present epoch the party cannot be so homogeneous as it was before the seizure of power.

Therefore, the policy, and also the leadership of the party, must be as Bolshevik as it has been hitherto, as Lenin has taught us. The working class realizes its hegemony in the revolution, and the party is the leading advance guard of the class possessing this hegemony.

From this there arises the question of the inner orientation of the party. The Bolshevist Party of 1924 must base itself upon the picked troops of its members, upon the workers. No other section outside the workers can serve as the barometer for the policy of our party.

Must we therefore permit the existence or the formation of a right wing in our party?

We must not!

It does not in the least follow that because we have to be content with a non-sufficiently homogeneous social composition of our party, that because we have to attract a certain number of non-workers into our party, we can water down the policy of the party, that the leadership of the party must also be heterogenous. On the contrary! Precisely because the party, under the present conditions, cannot be so homogeneous in its composition as it was before the seizure of power, the policy of the party must, more strictly than ever, base itself upon the workers; and precisely therefore, the leadership of the party must be specially firm and Leninist.

The objective conditions under which our party must work at present are such that there exists the danger of the formation of a right wing. He who wishes to remain true to the spirit of Leninism must exert all his forces in order to help the party to withstand these tendencies. With a skillful and correct application of the principles of Leninism to the present situation, we will succeed in preventing the formation of a right wing in our party.

Those comrades, however, who, like Comrade Trotzky, not only do not resist these tendencies, but become their representatives, those comrades who oppose the Leninist central committee which clearly perceives the danger and has to maneuver in a complicated situation, thereby become the enemies of Leninism.

Whether this is their intention or not, it is all the same. Whether they clearly recognise this or not, it is also all the same.

Let us take, for example, two preeminent comrades (let us say comrades A and B). Both comrades are the most disciplined and excellent comrades. Comrade A, however, came over to Bolshevism at another time and by other ways than comrade B. Comrade A came from the peasant movement. Comrade B came from the workers' movement, he has been a Bolshevik for twenty years. Our party needs both. When, however, comrade A begins to develop within the party in a certain manner, as so often happens, and begins to demand that the policy of the party shall be based, not upon the workers but upon the peasants, or when he begins to demand that the general staff of the party should be transformed into a block of various groups—what would our party say to this comrade A in this event?

Something similar, but in a more serious form, is now being done by Comrade Trotzky. He is giving expression to everything in the party which is not Bolshevik.

Can the party tolerate this? Is it to be wondered if the party administers such a severe rebuke to Comrade Trotzky?

(To be continued)

What Is A Liberal? -

By KARL REEVE

WHAT is a "liberal"? Judging from the Nation, the chief liberal magazine, a liberal is a self-inflated personage who never says in a clear, direct and concise manner what can be said with an obscure, half-hearted, bewildered, muddle-headed, and doubting phraseology. A liberal prides himself on his doubts. He wants to be fair, wants to weigh both sides. The test of a liberal is this—when a decision is forced upon him, he always favors the most reactionary course. And the doubt, according to the liberal rules, must be expressed in high-falutin' sentences.

Take for instance the book review in the Dec. 10 issue of the Nation, entitled "Mussolini, Pro and Con." A blackguard fascist named Luigi Villari has written a book on the "Fascista Regeneration," which is a pean of praise for the arch murderer Mussolini. But the Nation, true to its liberal tradition, must be fair to Mussolini. "Italy needed force vigorously applied in the right direction," says Tenney Frank, in the review of this fascist's book. "Mussolini was there at the proper moment, preferring however to use quantities of TNT where some of us think that a steady steam engine might have sufficed. But Italy has made the grade, notwithstanding the fact that she has been a bit rattled by unsteady motion. It was a steep grade, too."

Nation Praises Mussolini.

"There is something very appealing in Mussolini's romantic faith in youth, his devotion to clean public service, his power to inspire disinterested work, his hatred of malingering and graft in public office."

In this statement the Nation's liberal tactics are followed to the letter. In the first place, the liberal idea of "fairness," of "seeing both sides," has nothing to do with gathering the facts. Mussolini made the grade, says Mr. Frank. In other words, it was a question of the rule of the working class of Italy or the rule of the bourgeoisie thru a murdering, oppressive, dictator. What tho Mussolini rules by means of the bayonet, torch and castor oil. What tho thousands of workers are being tortured in prison, what tho the fascisti have been caught committing every crime on the calendar, including arson, robbery, rape and murder. The main thing is, Mussolini has made the grade. He has for a time staved off the triumph of the workers' revolution and kept the industrial capitalists in power. That is enough for the Nation and for Tenney Frank. The liberal code has been followed. When it comes to a choice between the dictatorship of the Italian workers and the dictatorship of the capitalists thru the fascist rule, the Nation's book reviewer chooses the blackguard blackshirts.

The Utmost Confusion.

It is no accident that this reviewer praises the book by Villari, a reactionary Italian professor, and eliminates the viewpoint of the Italian working class. Numerous other examples of this "liberal" method of thot can be taken from the pages of the Nation, and the similar breed of petty bourgeois publications.

Take for example, the review of Sherwood Anderson's autobiography, "A Story Teller's Story," by Harry Hansen. This is a case of a liberal writing about a liberal's book, and the utmost confusion results. That Sherwood Anderson insisted that when men get back to the period of individual craftsmanship, the ills of the machine age will be solved, is dwelt upon by Hansen. Hansen does not point out that the machine age is here to stay, that machines are necessary to supply the necessities and comforts of life, and that the workers must take control of these machines and run them for their own use. For that matter, neither does Sherwood Anderson.

Nation Contemplates "The Soul."

These book reviews are supposed to be the work of "artists," writing about the works of other "artists." The "machine age" the fight between the workers of Italy and the fascisti, the class struggle, the battles of the workers for emancipation, are looked upon by the liberals as so much material with which to adorn written sheets of papers, Anderson dismissed with a phrase how he spent his life trying to find out the meaning of life. But those who were making history, fighting the battle of the working class for the overthrow of the rule of the employers' Anderson dismissed with a phrase or two about "sterile Communists." The liberals centering around the Nation are an instrument in the affairs of the world only in so far as they disinfect the manure pile of the capitalist system with their confused ravings about "pure art" and "craftsmanship." Like Sherwood Anderson, they spend their lives weaving fancies, while the workers fight the bloody battles for their own emancipation.

Nation Forgets Workers' Battles.

The staff of the Nation never considers an article for publication on the ground that it might aid in this battle of the workers for control of industry. Take for example, the case of the oppressed miners of Eastern Kentucky. These miners are clamoring for organization. Those unions which they have formed have been broken up by Samuel Pascoe, head of the district of the miners' union, who co operates with John L. Lewis and the international organizers of the United Mine Workers to keep the Eastern Kentucky fields running on a non-union basis.

These workers appealed to various liberal publications for publicity as to their extremely bad conditions. They told of the company stores, the murders by mine officials, the low wages and the long hours. But how did the "liberals" respond to these pleas.

"Can Do Nothing."

Upton Sinclair wrote to one of these miners who appealed to Sinclair for publicity, "I have your extremely interesting letter, and I wish I could be of some help to you. Certainly the conditions you report should be exposed. I myself cannot write anything about them. Having written one novel about coal, it would be only repetition for me to write another."

Sinclair sent this Kentucky miner's letter, written by A. Walters, a member of the I. W. W., to the Nation. Freda Kirchwey, managing editor of the Nation, wrote back to Sinclair, "I am enclosing herewith Mr. Walters very interesting letter on the coal situation in Eastern Kentucky, together with Mr. Lane's comments. It seems to be history repeating itself—another case of the West Virginia story. I do not think there is anything we can do with the material now." The Nation, in other words, has ample room for a book review which praises Mussolini, and it is willing to repeat over and over again twaddle to be fed to the introspective egotists who parade as "artists." But it is not willing to print a story on the conditions of the Eastern Kentucky miners for fear of repeating the West Virginia story. It is not worth while, in the eyes of the Nation, to emphasize the heroic struggles of America's miners, or any other of America's workers for that matter for decent living conditions, because the cane carrying intellectuals who read the paper might become fed up on stories about the masses of America's workers.

"So Sorry."

Winthrop D. Lane, writing from "Croton-On-the-Hudson," says, "I have read Mr. Walters' letter to Upton Sinclair. Eastern Kentucky is certainly one of the most exploited and badly treated parts of the coal fields, and the conditions that Mr. Walters describes are no doubt, substantially true. But there is nothing, or at most little, in these conditions different from the conditions in West Virginia.

"An article about Eastern Kentucky would afford a new geographical name, and one might pick out some new aspects, but this I doubt. I do not think any article on it could add much to hitherto published information about the ways of industrial autocrats and the facts of the industrial struggle. Neither do I know anybody who could write such an article."

The Ostrich Hides its Head.

One can imagine Mr. Lane, after giving his verdict that the Nation is not going to print the coal miner's story, yawning and looking with a bored air out of the window at the beautiful countryside bordering the Hudson. Lane is well enough versed in the magazine business to know that a "new angle" could easily be found if he were interested in finding it. He could also find someone to write this article if he cared to. But Lane does not want to bore the readers of the Nation with too many facts about the "industrial struggle," he does not want to drag them away from their contemplation of themselves as "artists." Nor does he have the heart to ask one of the literary lights of the Nation to write about Eastern Kentucky. He would rather they would stick to their merry game of "fairly" considering all subjects—and always siding with the existing system and with the exploiting class when a real decision is unavoidable. Gracefully, artistically, with a few regrets and a few tears shed about the poor workers, the Nation sides with the bourgeoisie when a crisis arises."

The moral is, when you want to be confused about the class struggle, buy the Nation. If you want to join the workers in their struggle for power, buy the Workers' Monthly and The DAILY WORKER.

erendums or of imploring state legislators to act against it; no one would DARE defend it.

The elegant grande dames of the plutocracy do not know when they drape themselves over their antique chairs at afternoon teas but that the slimy trail of child labor will wreak a loathsome vengeance upon them—that is, those of them that are not already infected thru indulging in the favorite pastime of the ruling class seducing each others' wives and husbands.

But those who distill the blood of children into profits are not concerned about such abstract considerations as the welfare of society. Speak to them of the ghastliness of child slavery and they reply with the bourgeois philistine shibboleth: "There is no sentiment in business."

The Economies of Child Labor.

While the working class cannot escape the effects of the spread of disease emanating in the foul holes where children slave, it must face another menace equally as dangerous. The spread of child labor will inevitably result in wholesale reductions in wages of adult workers because it fosters a condition where the whole family must work in order to earn sufficient to enable it to exist.

Under capitalist production the value of labor power, the one commodity the worker has to sell, is determined by the value of the necessaries of life required by the average family—that is, the father's wage (price of labor power) should be sufficient to support his wife and children. Unless this condition prevails there is a violation of the very laws of capitalist production itself; the plain economic fact that the worker must not merely produce sufficient to maintain himself, but that his wage must enable him to support a family so that another generation of wage slaves may be able to step into the places of the present one.

When other members of the family are thrown upon the labor market the result is the spreading of the value of the labor power of the husband over the whole family, thus depreciating his own labor power. Proof of this effect of child labor can be obtained by even a cursory examination of the wages of men in industrial centers where child labor prevails. In the cotton mills of the south this is so glaring that the so-called "poor white trash" that furnishes child slaves for the mills actually measure their prosperity by the number of children they have to send into the slave pens. If the number of children is greater than the average, the family income is larger—the parents are so devoid of that which the bourgeoisie like to parade as the parental instinct that they look upon their own children only as adjuncts of machines to be put in operation at the earliest possible moment. Many of these parents were child slaves themselves, marrying in their early teens—many girls become mothers at fourteen in these districts—and deprived of even the rudiments of an education, so they are utterly incapable of properly raising children. As soon as possible after childbirth, these pathetic mothers go back to the looms, while neighbors' children, not yet old enough to go into the mills, take care of their offspring.

This blight upon the family is not confined to the cotton mill states, but is gradually spreading thruout every part of the country. Even the skilled industrial workers of New York are forced to send their children into offices, stores or industries at an early age in order to meet the demands of the cost of living. If such workers were alive to their own interests they would prepare to struggle against the spread of child labor. For if the labor movement of this country does not take drastic steps to wipe out this menace, the conditions now existing in child labor territory will become the condition of the working class of the whole country.

The enemies of labor, in their fight against the abolition of slavery of children, talk about the sacredness of the "home," in order that they may continue to ravage the homes of the working class.

Trade union officials of the reactionary type, which is the predominant type today, are incapable of waging a real fight against child labor, first because of their political alliances with the politicians who exist by virtue of the patronage of the exploiters of labor, and, secondly, because of their notorious ignorance of everything pertaining to economics. No matter what their intentions might be, they are not equipped to lead a struggle of this character.

It is only the Communists who can analyze the system that produces child labor and it is only the Communists who are capable of taking the lead in mobilizing the workers for united action in defense of the elementary interests of labor. We fight today for ratification of the proposed amendment, thereby proving that we engage in every struggle that affects the working class, but we know full well the limitations of parliamentary reform and to the extent that workers in large numbers engage in such struggles to that extent will they came to realize that the constitution, the congress of the United States, the various state legislatures—in fact the whole government apparatus—exist only for the purpose of perpetuating slavery. This is part of a struggle that can only end when the workers of the United States, under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party, smash the state power of the capitalist class and establish a workers' republic.

"There is no sentiment in business!" say the Philistines. All their sycophants re-echo this part of the litany of capitalism. Very well, we revolutionists should see that the workers remember this assertion and mobilize our power relentlessly to scourge form the face of the earth these despoilers of the human race.

Allies Send 'Reply' to Germany, Managing Not to Say Anything

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The allies sent to Germany today an identic note in reply to the German note which protested the failure of the allies to evacuate the Cologne zone.

The note was said to be formal in its tone and does not make a complete answer to Germany. It does not contain either, it was said, details of the allies' charges that Germany has violated military provisions of the Versailles treaty. This detailed charge is awaiting the completion of the allies' report being put up by the military control commission.

LABOR FAKERS AND GANGSTERS SLUG MILITANTS

Threaten Progressives Asking Fair Play

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 25.—Angered at the action of the official machine of the Fancy Leather Goods' Union in taking all the names of the militants off the ballot, the progressives proceeded to print sample ballots to distribute, but were brutally beaten by the gangsters provided by the bureaucrats.

The election of officers took place on Thursday at the Rand School, 7 East 15th street.

Strike Names Off Ballot.

All names of ... militants in this union were stricken from the ballot, and the membership could only vote for machine officials headed by the $125-a-week Ossip Wolinsky, manager.

The progressives of this union printed sample ballots with the names of the militants, and were distributing them as a protest against this arbitrary action on the part of the union bureaucrats. Two active young New York girl comrades were helping in handing them out to the members of the union on their way to vote.

... as the ... were ... to register their protest, and were each taking a copy of the sample ballot, along came a ...-looking man, vaudeville-actor type, with a cane and spats and shook one of the girls by the shoulders and threw her in a ditch, saying, "Are you a member of this union?"

He took the ballots from the hands of the other ... threw it on the street, indignantly.

Gets Aid of Thugs.

He then ran into the Rand school and was reinforced by three dozen of the usual "union" thugs, to defeat the two women. He shouted wildly that he was going after the police force in addition to this small army. Wolinsky, however, was recognized immediately by his cane which he evidently carried not only for the purpose of keeping up his $125 a week style but for protection against women who might be lurking on doorsteps.

The militants, however, were not daunted by his rough-house actions, but will do everything to bring their own leaders to the front in order to make the union a real force in the fight against the bosses who now have the support of the union aristocracy that is fighting for their life to maintain their present prestige.

RUSSIA TAKES SAKHALIN FROM JAPAN, MAY 1

Countries to Confer on Old Debts

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Jan. 25.—The Japanese government agrees to evacuate Sakhalin by May 1, the treaty signed between Russia and Japan provides. Both Russia and Japan agree to restrain natives of their countries from acts which would endanger the order and security of the other country.

According to the treaty, loans negotiated by the czarist government are to be discussed at a later conference. The two countries will also confer on the work now being carried on by the Japanese in Sakhalin, and on the 1907 fisheries agreement.

A treaty on commerce and navigation, based upon freedom of travel and residence, will also be discussed by the two nations.

The Japanese are pushing the building of large types of submarines and destroyers, it is learned here, now that they have made arrangements for a larger supply of oil.

The Soviet ambassador to Rome, M. Jereniev, has issued a statement declaring that the pact between Russia and Japan is of world wide importance, and that the attitude of the United States toward Russia may be affected by Japan's recognition. "The past was achieved despite the intrigues of our enemies," Jereniev stated.

The Italian papers previously praised the poet, calling him the friend of Italy, but his speeches in Italy have hurt the prestige of the fascisti, and therefore the authorities have forced Tagore to cancel all further speaking dates.

EVERYTHING MAY BE ROSY FOR SCHWAB, BUT WHY THE WAGE CUTS?

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The steel outlook was never better, said Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, today before embarking for a European trip.

"Steel companies should all show better earnings this year than in 1924," Schwab declared. He looks for an increase of $10 a ton in prices of finished steel due to the higher prices of raw materials. Steel prices he said are $10 a ton below the scale of prices of January 1924 and should be brought back to that level.

"The general business outlook could not be better," said Schwab.

Schwab did not, however, explain why—if business is so good—the capitalists are united in an effort to cut wages and lengthen hours.

U. S. Should Halt Persecution.

FT. WAYNE, Ind.—That the federal government should call a halt to the persecution of John Schedel, whom it is trying to separate from his wife and five small children, is the demand of the Workmen's Sick & Death Benefit branch of Ft. Wayne, Schedel's home town. The branch has 304 members. They unanimously declared that Schedel's radical opinions should be no bar to his remaining in the United States. He was deported once and came back illegally to rejoin his family.

What Else Could You Expect

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 25.—Fighting against the organized machine of the manufacturers, representatives of labor unions and of women's organizations tried to get the committee of the state senate yesterday to vote for the child labor amendment but were defeated 5 to 1 which was of course to be expected since the committee is composed of bosses.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25.—Branch 102 of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society of this city, having a membership of 500, passed the resolution against the "criminal syndicalism" laws at its last meeting and voted a donation of $10 to the Labor Defense Council.

MASS ARRESTS IN JAPAN GREET WORKERS' AND STUDENTS' DEMANDS

(By Rosta News Agency)

MUKDEN, Jan. 25.—According to the Japanese papers in Dairen and Changchun, important political disturbances have occurred in Tokio and Nagoya. Mass arrests were effected by the gendarmerie.

The movement has spread to the workers and students, the latter being against militarization of high schools. Proclamations are being everywhere distributed in enormous quantities calling to overthrow the present government. The center of disturbance was at Nagya, where the local garrison could not cope with the insurgents and had to be re-inforced from outside.

The Nagya gendarmerie authorities pretend they have unearthed a new plot against the regent, which has given them an excuse for mass arrests. In connection with the proposed visit of the empress to Kyoto and Oswka, the police have rounded up in both these places some four thousand "politically dangerous elements," and the minister of justice proposes to deport these "dangerous characters" to some remote islands belonging to the empire.

CANCEL RUSSIAN DEBT, M. CACHIN ADVISES FRENCH

Deputy Tells Chamber of Damage Done Soviets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Jan. 25.—Marcel Cachin, Communist deputy, in a speech in the French chamber, denounced the London agreement and the Geneva protocol of the allies and declared them [illegible].

Neither the United States nor Great Britain would pay the slightest attention to the Geneva protocol, Comrade Cachin [illegible].

The Communist deputy showed the hypocrisy of the present French government in attempting to repudiate debts owed by America to France, and at the same time France insists that Soviet Russia pay debts incurred by the czar. Cachin declared that the banks which issued the loans should refund the full amount, more than one billion francs.

France's Anti-Soviet Acts.

"It is no more just to demand that [illegible] than for America and Great Britain to ask us to repay the 130,000,000 francs they advanced to us." Soviet Russia would be justified, Comrade Cachin said, in asking compensation for the millions of francs France has loaned to enemies of Soviet Russia in its attempt to overthrow the Soviet government. Poland and France had united in a secret treaty, Cachin charged, and was withholding information from the public as to its contents. He was interrupted by Premier Herriot, who defended "French democracy."

Stifles Borah's Frankness.

Senator Borah's frank statement that France and England secured the bulk of the plunder from the world war has caused excitement here. Borah declared in his senate speech that "if you take the states of Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, New Mexico, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming, Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, you will still have less in area in territory than Great Britain acquired as a result of the great war."

Borah declared that, "Never was there such a division of territory and of spoils as characterized these settlements, designated and controlled by the secret treaties." He said that France got out of the war 403,39[illegible] square miles of territory with a population of 4,000,000, the coal beds of the Saar, Alsace Lorraine, and much loot from Germany.

America Wants Plunder, Too.

Talk of the "moral contribution" of France and England to the war has been punctured by Borah's speech. The French now realize that the United States wants her share of the plunder accumulated at the expense of the [illegible] people.

"Remember the secret conference at which four or five nations met and secretly divided the world," Borah said, speaking of the Versailles treaty. "President Wilson was unable to release their grips on these seizures."

The American capitalists are determined to do some gripping of their own, and Morgan seems to consider Coolidge more efficient at securing plunder than was Wilson.

MINOR'S TRIAL NOT POSTPONED

declared that the cases are directed from the office of the state's attorney in Lansing and that O. L. Smith, and not Brookwalter is in charge.

Trials To Go On

Attorney for the defense, I. E. Ferguson, called Smith on the phone after reading the Brookwalter statement and learned that no decision to postpone the Minor trial had yet been reached by the state.

Comrade Maurer urges the readers of The Daily Worker not to slacken their efforts in raising funds for the defense. The following dispatch from our St. Joseph correspondent may throw some light on Brookwalter's reasons for making the statement.

Taxpayers Worrying

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Jan. 25.—Berrien county taxpayers are becoming incensed by the increasing burden of taxation the trials of the Communists being prosecuted there under the Michigan criminal syndicalism law are causing. Thousands of dollars are being spent by the county on every trial and there are thirty-one more yet to be held.

The storm of protest has been so great that George Bookwalter, Berrien county prosecutor, is beginning to worry about his political fortunes. He has, it appears, been frightened into announcing that there will be delays in the prosecution of the Communists.

Voters Kick.

But that is mere talk for the voters. Brookwalter knows there will be no shortage of funds for prosecuting the Communists. This recalls a similar situation that existed in 1923. Then too, there was a kick from Berrien county. But it was soon hushed. The taxpayers were given to understand in various ways that they were not paying the bill.

The Michigan state legislature, for example, passed a bill about that time, authorizing the state board of appropriations to supply all the necessary funds for the prosecution of criminal cases in any county in the state. This was obviously meant to bear the financial burden of the Berrien county cases.

A Little Check For Berrien.

In January of last year, the DAILY WORKER published the photograph of a check for nearly $4,000.00 issued by the state of Michigan to Berrien county to help cover the costs of the prosecution. This was only one of many checks. Beside this, the state took the lead in the prosecution and lightened the burden in that way as well.

Department of Justice Wants Action.

It is also a matter of record that the department of justice has shown must more than a casual interest in the proceedings in Michigan. It was department of justice agents who raided the convention. It was agents of the department of justice and spies of the United States secret service who planned and executed the whole frame-up. They certainly haven't lost interest to the extent they are going to let hard-earned indictments go by default for mere lacks of funds.

Burns Takes a Hand.

There is another element. The Burns' detective agency took an extraordinary interest in these trials as well as the Thiel detective bureau. Both of these are professional red-baiting institutions and are keeping in close touch with every move in the Michigan cases.

It has been reported many times that both these bodies as well as other organizations interested in the prosecution, not forgetting the Michigan chamber of commerce, have let the authorities know there is no need to worry about running short of funds in pushing the cases to the limit.

State to Push Cases.

When Ruthenberg was sentenced on January 5, O. L. Smith, assistant attorney general of Michigan, announced that the state would proceed with the other cases in February, with Robert Minor to be the first one tried. Behind the prosecution are the notorious Daugherty, active again in Washington, Burns and all the red and labor baiting agencies, and all the power of the reactionary open-shop movement of the country.

So that all rumors of the county prosecution delaying or threatening to close the Michigan cases for lack of funds, can well be "taken with a grain of salt" in the face of all these willing sources of revenue for sending the thirty-two Communists to prison for long terms.

Law A Spurious God

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—In a talk here former United States Senator Beveridge calls law a spurious god. "American people are by law forbidden to do more things and, by law, ordered to do more things than was the case in Russia under the Czar or Turkey under the Sultan," asserts ex-senator Beveridge. He would have a law repealed every time a new one is enacted. "One out of every 11 of our adult wage-earning population is a government employe," says Beveridge. He claims that "We have made law a fetish, a spurious god."

Reverses Court as Theater Censor.

NEW YORK.—The God of Vengeance, the play against which judgment was made on the grounds of its alleged immorality, has won a reversal by the court of appeals, because producer Harry Weinberger was not allowed to introduce a copy of the play, which is Yiddish, as evidence. The play deals with the effort of a brothel keeper to rear his daughter in decency and his failure because of the environment which he created around her.

SOVIET OIL INDUSTRY WINNING MARKETS FROM AMERICAN AND BRITISH FIRMS THRUOUT PERSIA

MOSCOW, Jan. 25.—That Soviet-Persian trade relations are rapidly growing, is shown by the following figures supplied to the press by Shumiatsky, plenipotentiary representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics at Teheran. While Soviet Russia exported 400,000 poods of oil to Persia in 1922, 750,000 poods in 1923, the export of this mineral reached 1.5 million poods in the current year.

At the same time, the Soviet oil industry conquered new markets in South Persia which before were entirely controlled by American and British firms. As for sugar, exports have also grown considerably, namely, from 190,000 poods, in 1922, to 350,000 poods, in 1923, and 600,000 poods in 1924.

Have Good Organization.

"Such a considerable development of Soviet trade in Persia and the interest witnessed for it on the part of local merchants are due in a large measure to the organizational forms and methods of the trade policy of the Soviet Government," remarked Shumiatsky. "Eight mixed stock companies have been organized, thru the activities of one of which, the 'Persian Cotton Trust', about 75 per cent of cotton growing has been restored in Persia. Another company, the 'Persian Silk Trust', is engaged in restoring Persian silk industry, its work being carried on very successfully."

The operations of the Russo-Persian Bank have considerably increased, their volume reaching nine million rubles in the current year.

Further, special mixed companies under way of organization for carrying out electrification in Persia, and the Leningrad electrical industry will have a big part to play in this branch. Soviet participation in the fulfilment of Persian orders for airships is another interesting feature: Russian made airplanes have successfully arrived in Persia in spite of all the difficulties on the way, and they now constitute the kern of Persian aviation. On the other hand, French machines, manufactured by French automobile works, have proved unfit for Persian conditions.

Persia Buys Farm Implements.

The sale of Soviet agricultural machines in Persia is also growing, and it may fairly well be expected that further progress will be reached in this branch with the gradual fall in the cost of Soviet industrial products.

At present, the commercial turnover between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Persia is about 16 million rubles and is steadily nearing prewar dimensions, which will probably soon be exceeded.

BANKERS MOVE TO MAKE FRANCE PAY U. S. DEBT

Finances Are Thrown to German Industrialists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The American bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan, who have saddled the Dawes plan on the German people, have declined to float a new French loan requested by the Herriot government, in order to force France to recognize its war debts to America.

Under pressure of the American bankers, Premier Herriot and the chamber of deputies have suddenly curbed their enthusiasm over the speech of Deputy Marin, and have refused to print the speech for public distribution. Marin, amid the applause of the entire chamber, had declared France should not pay the $4,000,000,000 war debt owed to the United States government.

England Also Wants Money.

The Baldwin government is greatly pleased that Senator Borah and Coolidge are opening a campaign to dun France for the debt. Winston Churchill has pointed out that Great Britain will insist that if France pays her debt to the United States, Great Britain will also have to be paid. Churchill is trying to cut the income tax for the British millionaires, and he sees in the debt payment from France a way to bring about the decrease in the income tax. Churchill declares if France pays anyone else they must pay Britain a proportional amount at the same time.

Wall Street bankers, in a move to force France to recognize her debt were yesterday underwriting a number of German industrial loans, while French industrial loans were being held back. The bankers pointed out that Germany and France are competing in the investment market for capital to build their industries, and if France persists in her debt policy they will force a change by throwing financial support to Germany.

Cora Meyer, secretary, invites friends and sympathiers to send birthday cards and letters (money is advisable for gifts) to these political prisoners. Books and publications to be sent directly from the publishers. Small calendars for the year 1925 are also suggested.

Kept Press Shows Its Ignorance About Ruling Power in Soviet Russia

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the capitalist press is much chagrined over the failure of Leon Trotsky to do in Soviet Russia what it was hoped he would do; try to usurp the Soviet Power.

Arthur Brisbane, of the Hearst sheets, seems most peeved. Day after day, he harps on his disappointment, concluding that Trotsky must have been some kind of a coward. Brisbane put his viewpoint in a paragraph when he wrote:

> "What a chance Trotsky had when Lenin died, leaving him with the army under his control. A Napoleon Bonaparte, or even a Napoleon III, would have known what to do. Trotsky didn't know."

But there are two other paragraphs that help shed some additional light on Brisbane's monumental ignorance, when he writes:

> "There is something the matter with Trotsky's mental fighting apparatus. He had his chance when he had the Red Army under his orders, and Lenin, dying, left the whole of Russia to any man able to seize the power.
> "Trotsky seems to lack the power of a Danton, Robespierre or Marat. Those men knew how to fight for what they thought was theirs, and how to die cheerfully."

• • • •

The recent relations that have developed between the Russian Communist Party and Trotsky pin pricks the bubbles that Brisbane, in common with the whole kept press lackeydom, have been blowing these past seven years in speculation as to the future of the Soviet Power. Trotsky was often been referred to as a "Red Napoleon," who would in time establish a military dictatorship. Other prominent Russian Communists were picked for roles that individuals have played in previous revolutions, notably the French Revolution. In this, all these press prostitutes either display a willful or actual ignorance of the real nature of the Russian revolution.

Lenin did not do, something he could not do, leave "the whole of Russia to any man able to seize the power." Lenin left Russia with the organization he had helped build, more than any other single individual, the Russian Communist Party. His legacy to that party, and to the World Communist movement, is Leninism, the teachings of Lenin.

• • • •

The ruling power today in Soviet Russia is not lodged with any individual, or even group of individuals.

The dominant power in Soviet Russia today is the Russian Communist Party. It rules thru its hundreds of thousands of members directly affiliated with it.

Neither Trotsky, nor any other individual, at any time, ruled the Red Army. It was ruled at all times by the Communist Party; especially thru the Communists who were the leading and most self-sacrificing spirits in the Red Army.

The Communist Party rules in industry thru its members in the shops, the mills, the mines and the factories. That was the strength of the Russian Communists, even before the revolution; that they were able everywhere that labor toiled to create their nuclei, and keep in the closest touch with the everyday aspirations of the workers at their work places, leading them to victory.

• • • •

It is the inability, or lack of desire, on the part of the capitalist scribbler to understand the role of the Russian Communist Party in the Russian revolution, that leads to many silly conclusions. The failure of the French Commune was due to the fact that the French workers had no powerful, disciplined, centralized Communist Party to inspire and lead their struggle. The strength of the First Workers' Republic is such a party, the Russian Communist Party. Lenin's strength, his power, grew out of his ability to lead the Russian Communists in their struggle for power, and later in their fight to maintain power.

It was Lenin who founded the Communist International, the world Communist Party to win the victory for the world social revolution, just as he helped organize the Communist Party to triumph in Russia.

There are no Alexanders, Caesars, Napoleons or Kaiser Wilhelms in the Soviet Russia of today seeking world conquest. It is not in the theory or the practice of the Communist struggle for power. Trotsky knows this. He has shown it again by submitting to the discipline of the Russian Communist Party.

• • • •

Trotsky is weak because of his inability to help lead the Russian Communist movement along the correct Bolshevik path. That weakness,—not courage, or willingness to fight,—costs him his place as a dominating influence in the Soviet Republic. If the policies that Trotsky espouses are found wanting, and they have been found wanting, then all the bravery in the world would avail him nothing. He would forfeit his place under the dictatorship of the proletariat that leads on to Communism.

• • • •

It is this same capitalist mind, supported by "socialist" theoreticians, that charges the present Dictatorship in Soviet Russia is a dictatorship over the workers and peasants, and not a dictatorship by the workers and peasants.

Just as the kept press pictures Trotsky as usurping power without the aid of the Communist Party, so it claims that the Communist Party maintains a dictatorship over the workers and peasants in spite of their opposition. This is also a phantastic dream. The Communist Party rules thru the dictatorship of the workers and peasants, and it maintains its ruling position because the masses of workers and peasants support its policies.

It is well that American workers and poor farmers understand these fundamentals in order to interpret correctly the capitalist press accounts of what is transpiring in Soviet Russia. Of course, it is better still not to read the capitalist press at all. Depend on the Communist press for the truth about the First Workers' Republic.

WASHINGTON IS WHISTLING OVER RUSS-JAP PACT

Anything to Keep Up the Face of Officialdom

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. [illegible].—Official Washington's attitude toward the Russo-Japanese treaty under which the Soviet Union gets recognition and the Japanese get oil, coal and lumbering concessions and trade advantages in the Russian Far East, is one of feigned indifference.

Hughes Has Nothing to Say.

Hughes has nothing to say, but apparently waits for the people to charge him with having helped Japan to wring from Russia a naval oil and coal supply close at home, and the first choice of all trade privileges in Siberia.

Hoover knows nothing officially about the Sinclair oil concessions that seem to have lapsed, and about the value of the oil concessions now given to Japan. The possibility that this fuel supply may turn the scale of Japanese development toward the production of steel and machinery, to the injury of American commercial expansion in Asia, does not appeal to him.

The White House Remains Calm.

From Japanese propaganda quarters comes a pleasing statement that America has lost nothing; that this treaty does not give Japan nearly as much as she gave up at the Washington conference when she dropped her 21 demands against China and entered the four power pact.

But at the capitol, where senators speak their minds freely if they are not to be quoted, one learns that the economic side of this Soviet treaty with Japan is of the utmost importance to the future of the Pacific. It gives Japan a supply of oil for her navy and for her future industrial development, which may rival that of Britain. It [illegible] than the United States in the struggle for commercial leadership in China.

Die Hards Still Obstinate.

In confidence, senators express disgust at the stupidity of the course pursued by Hughes toward Russian recognition, which has led to the situation in which the United States, alone of all the important nations of the world, maintains a pretense of ignorance that for more than seven years a Soviet republic has ruled Russia.

All but the die hards concede that since Japan has come to terms with Moscow, the United States is sure soon to follow suit, or at least to begin haggling over the price.

Debs Wakes Up: Sees Nothing.

DAVENPORT, Iowa.—With the suddenness of one emerging from a hypnotic trance, Eugene V. Debs, in his greeting to the annual convention of the Young People's Socialist League in New York, calls for "a thoroly reorganized, militant socialist party, based upon the class struggle, and expressing in terms not to be misunderstood, the aim, purpose and determination to educate, organize, discipline and equip the workers for their historic mission of putting an end to capitalism and wage slavery and establishing an industrial and social order in which the workers and producers shall be masters of their tools and jobs, the owners of all they produce and the sovereign rulers of the world."

I do not question Comrade Debs' sincerity or his integrity, but I think that perhaps in his desire for harmony, he has lost sight of, for the time being, certain fundamental principles. Under the leadership of Moses and Aaron, the S. P. has been hobnobbing with labor fakers and peanut politicians for the sake of expediency, and Comrade Debs has now come to a realization of the fact that the party has been getting nowhere. I fear, however, that this knowledge has come too late.

In regard to the party's participation in the LaFollette campaign, I have seen here a campaign manager sent in here by the state chairman, who was accompanied by a BOOTLEGGER, who supplied him and a number of the local independent candidates; I have seen these "Progressives" dickering with the democratic party bosses to swap votes, one consideration being that if the democratic sheriff was elected, the manager's botlegger would be permitted to operate a soft (?) drink parlor. All of this with the knowledge and the silent acquiescence of the local socialist leaders.

What can the socialist party hope to accomplish in behalf of the working class with such tactics as these?—W. J. Daniel, Davenport, Iowa.

REFERENDUM AID TO BOSSES' FIGHT FOR CHILD LABOR

Their Hold on Press Controls "Opinion"

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

Confident of absolute power to mold public opinion thru the control of the press, organized capital is resorting to popular referendum to defeat the child labor amendment in certain states where the legislatures would probably vote ratification.

Proposals for such a referendum are being discussed in New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Michigan.

The only popular referendum so far held—that in Massachusetts—proved entirely satisfactory to the exploiters resulting in rejection by a 696,119 to 247,221 vote. This is not binding on the state legislature, but may be expected to have a powerful influence.

The situation in other states may be briefed as follows: Arkansas and California have voted for ratification. South Carolina, North Carolina and Georgia have rejected it. Louisiana has postponed action indefinitely which is the same thing as rejection. And the amendment has failed to pass one house in Kansas, Oklahoma and South Dakota. Action is expected within the next two or three months in Maine, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Missouri, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont and Wisconsin. It requires 36 states to put the amendment in force.

State Regulation Status.

All except 7 states have statutes technically prohibiting the employment in factories and stores only of children under 14 years of age. Of the exceptions, Utah and Wyoming have no laws, California, Maine, Michigan and Texas have established a minimum age of 15 and Montana and Ohio prohibit employment under 16.

All except 12 states have statutes technically prohibiting the employment of child labor in excess of 48 hours a week. The exceptions are Florida, Idaho, Maine, Michigan, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and South Dakota with a maximum of 54 hours, Pennsylvania with 51 hours, South Carolina with 55 hours and Georgia, Louisiana and North Carolina with 60 hours.

All except 19 states require school attendance of some sort up to the 16th year. The exceptions are Idaho, Nevada, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon and Utah which set the age at 18 years; Delaware, Maine, Maryland, North Dakota, and South Dakota which set it at 17, Arkansas with 15 and Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia and the District of Columbia in which school is required only up to 14 years.

Exemptions Make Law Look Foolish.

The exemptions allowed in 20 states render the apparent regulation a deception and make possible the employment of over 1,000,000 children between the ages of 10 and 15 years of whom 40 per cent are under 14. In many of these states children are allowed to work under the legal age or beyond the maximum number of hours during vacations or when employed by parents. In Arkansas, California, Delaware, Idaho, Mississippi, Utah and Virginia the hour limitation does not apply to work in the canneries which is recognized by the U. S. children's bureau as one of the worst forms of child exploitation. Delaware and Mississippi also exempt canneries from application of the minimum age limit.

There are other grounds for exemption from one or another of the protective provisions of these state laws. Among them the most significant is poverty. Poverty is recognized for exemption from the requirement of school attendance in Arkansas, Colorado and Iowa. It is recognized in Georgia for reduction of the minimum age from 14 years to 12 years. In South Dakota, Texas and Washington poverty deletes the age requirement altogether.

In these states the children of the poor are not protected at all.

Bank Closes Doors.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 25. — The Farmers' State Bank of Deer Creek was forced to close its doors because of lack of reserves, the state superintendent of banks announced. The bank had deposits of $100,000. It was capitalized at $25,000.

ROBERTSON SAYS THAT R. R. UNIONS ARE STILL CONSIDERING C. P. P. A.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Referring to a query as to whether the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen would attend the C. P. P. A. conference at Chicago to be held in February and the possible formation of a "third" party, D. B. Robertson writes as follows:

"In reply will say this brotherhood, in conjunction with other railroad labor organizations, is now giving consideration to this subject with a view to determining upon a policy to be followed, but up to this time no definite program has been agreed upon."

BORAH WOULD COLLECT FRENCH DEBT FOR CAL

France Got Plenty of Plunder, He Says

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 25.—Borah's speech in the senate, demanding that France pay her debt of $4,000,000,000, which the United States loaned Paris during the war, was a statement of the views of the Coolidge administration, it was learned at the White House. Borah's speech stampe the Idaho senator as the mouthpiece of the Morgan bankers controlling the Coolidge government, and gives strength to the rumor that Coolidge will soon recognize Russia as a good business proposition.

Borah claimed in his senate speech that France is trying to repudiate her debts. His speech was made at the time when a new French ambassador is on the way to Washington, Borah recalled that the French finance minister pointedly ignored the American debt in his official report on assets and liabilities, which was made to the French chamber a month ago.

Borah demands that the money, which was loaned on demand notes, be returned. Borah criticized the recent speech of Marin in the French chamber which characterized American as a Shylock, and declared France sacrificed so much in life in the world war she should not have to pay.

France gained 400,000 square miles of territory, her lost provinces, the richest iron basin of Europe and enormous cash payments from Germany in the world war, and America wanted her slice of plunder as well as France, Borah said.

A Plantaganet or a Montague? A Grave Problem for Charlie

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. — Charles Evans Hughes, retiring secretary of state, may have a damage suit on his hands if the Lucy Stone League committee reports favorably.

At the league's dinner to Helena Normanton, English woman lawyer who won a passport in her own name, the use-your-own-name women decided that they might take action against Hughes for the stern refusal to grant American women passports in their maiden names.

Ruth Hale (wife of Haywood Broun, columnist), president of the league, did not succeed in getting her passport for a recent trip to Europe under her own name.

They Fight Child Labor Law

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Jan. 25—No stone was left unturned by the exploiters of labor here to defeat the Child Labor Amendment to the United States constitution. Lavishly oiling their machine with the money stolen from workers' toil they succeeded in getting the Oklahoma legislature to vote 81 to 24 against the amendment.

GLENN YOUNG, KLAN RAIDER, MEETS DEATH

Led Gang in Assault on Deputy Sheriff

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 25.—S. Glenn Young, Ku Klux Klan murderer, has been killed here, after leading a gang of gunmen in an assault on Ora Thomas, deputy sheriff.

Thomas was attacked by 14 klan gunmen, who led by Young, opened fire on Thomas as he was walking down the principal street of the town unaccompanied.

Renectly Returned to Herrin.

Thomas ran into the European Hotel and barricading himself behind the clerk's desk, returned the fire of the klan killers. Thomas, before falling to the floor mortally wounded, shot and killed Glenn Young, and wounded Homer Warren and George Forbes, all klansmen.

Thomas had just returned to Herrin, after an absence dating from the latest shooting in which an automobile load of klansmen, which included Homer Warren, attacked Thomas and Galligan anti-klan sheriff of Williamson county, in front of the Smith garage. Six men were killed in this shooting, three of the attacking klansmen being shot, and retreating before the fire of the deputy sheriffs.

Young had paraded the streets armed to the teeth and looking for trouble. He had been staying at the Lyman Hotel where he declared he was writing his autobiography.

Troops have again been called from Carbondale by Governor Small. Many of the militiamen are also members of the ku klux klan.

Had No Official Authority.

Glenn Young gained prominence as a man killer. For 15 years he worked for the department of justice, spending most of that time in hunting draft evaders and army deserters. Young is said to have received over $60,000 from the United States government in return for the men he killed or captured. Young had boasted that he killed 30 men during his career.

In 1920 Young came to Illinois working for the ku klux klan. His first act was to enter the home of a farmer at Madison, Illinois, and fire nine shots into the farmer's body, killing him in cold blood. Young had no official authority for his murderous raids, being backed only by the ku klux klan.

Forbes Trial Nears End.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Closing arguments in the long-drawn-out trial of Col. Charles R. Forbes, former head of the war veterans' bureau, and John W. Thompson, St. Louis and Chicago contractor, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government were begun in the federal court today.

Opening arguments for the government, Assistant Attorney General Ralph Potter asserted that the position Forbes had held was "second only in importance to that of the president."

Court was adjourned at noon until Monday, when counsel for the defense will take up their pleas, with John W. H. Crimm, government attorney, making the final argument.

Amalgamated Bank Statement

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Sidney Hillman announced today that the Amalgamated Bank counted its earnings on stock last year at approximately ten per cent. Resources increased in the year to about $5,000,000 from $450,000 which the bank had when it opened. Together with the Chicago bank the institution has sent abroad for workers $10,000,000 in 300,000 remittances thru the foreign exchange department.

SOVIET RECOGNITION IS STIRRING BELGIUM AND CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

MOSCOW, Jan. 25.—The Belgian Communist organ, the Drapeau Rouge (Red Flag), reports that there is a strong movement among Belgian industrialists in favor of resuming relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics without further delay.

It is symptomatic in this reference that a large joint-stock company, which possessed enterprises in South Russia, explains the recent increase of the company's capital by the fact that they "must be fully prepared to recommence work in Russia as soon as circumstances will permit—which may happen very soon."

The chairman of an important manufacturers' union in Belgium has recently stated that they are eager to set to work in Russia again provided they can enjoy the "fruit of their labors in the limits of reasonable expectations."

In a recent speech at a meeting of the Labor Party in Brussels, Mr. Vandervelde also spoke emphatically in favor of early Soviet recognition.

Czechs Demand Recognition.

It is reported from Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, that the pro-government coalition parties have since for some time been discussing in a lively manner the question of restoration of normal relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

According to the Czecho papers, the National-Socialists, the Social-Democrats and the Agrarian Party are all supporting Premier Benesh's position in favor of prompt recognition. They have against them the right wing of the National-Democratic Party, headed by Mr. Cramarzj, while the left wing National-Democrats favor recognition for reasons of an economic character. The same differences seem to be splitting the Clerical Party, whose attitude as a whole in the matter is yet uncertain.

It is worth noting that an effort recently put up by the Czecho-Slovakian fascists to arrange a meeting stirring anti-Soviet agitation failed to rally more than a very few hundred sympathizers.

CLASS COLLABORATION AS IT WORKS IN THE CITY OF NEW ORLEANS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 25.—A little over a year ago in the harbor strike New Orleans resembled an armed camp, with burly police officers carrying riot guns, and machine guns placed at the head of Canal street ready to mow down men, women and children who might attempt to walk on public property against capitalis' wishes.

Andrew McShane was mayor at that time, Dave Marcusy was president of the central trades and labor body, and an avowed candidate for the office of commissioner of Labor of the state of Louisiana. Without the aid of the police, under the control of the mayor, the strike would have been won.

Today Andrew McShane is again a candidate for mayor, and Dave Marcusy, still president of the central trades and labor assembly is supporting him for mayor.

24TH WARD PLANS HOT CAMPAIGN FOR ELECTIONS

Fifty Workers Out for Signatures

The opening gun of the 1925 Aldermanic campaign in the city of Chicago will be fired in the 24th Ward at a campaign meeting next Tuesday, Jan. 27th, at Workers Party Center, 3118 W. Roosevelt Road. Hyman Epstein, candidate for alderman, will speak and well known figures in the American and Jewish labor movement will also voice their support to his candidacy, endorsed by the Workers (Communist) Party.

Fifty workers will make a final house to house canvas this Sunday, Jan. 25th, to get the remaining signatures needed to put their candidates on the ballot, and at the same time they will distribute the Workers Party Program and notice of this meeting. All volunteers will report to the Ward Campaign Headquarters, 3118 W. Roosevelt Road, Sunday from 10 to 1.

Several other meetings will be held in various parts of the ward, and a social affair will be run some time in the middle of February to help raise campaign funds. All volunteers for campaign work should report to William F. Kruse, 703 S. Ashland Blvd., or to the Douglas Park English, Douglas Park Jewish, or Y. W. L. No. 1 secretaries.

City Council Bows To the Wishes of Traction Magnates

The protest of the workers of Chicago against the failure of Mayor Dever and the city council to put up a fight against the continued control of the city traction lines by the bankers, is growing. President Henry A. Blair of the Chicago Surface lines, has now proposed a system of subway and traction lines for Chicago, which ignores Dever's proposal of a municipally owned traction system.

The city council committee on transportation does nothing without consulting the bankers, and then takes the orders of the bankers. Blair's plan ignores the sale of the traction lines to the city and provides for the granting of a new franchise to the bankers by the city. So far the council has made no attempt to confiscate the city traction lines, or to put the bankers in their place by delivering an ultimatum to them.

The bankers will officially tell the city council what attitude they will take on the demand that the city control the traction companies as soon as a majority of the debt to the bankers has been paid. The city council admits that, if the bankers do not accept, the mayor's plan is dead, as they do not intend to take action that would displease the bankers.

Labor M. P. Gets Poor Relief.

LONDON.—While Albert Law, a Bolton cotton-spinner and labor member of parliament until the October election, is applying for unemployment relief, John Brotherton, elected to the house for labor at the same time, is just emerging from government assistance. Brotherton in his maiden speech in parliament announced that unemployment had forced him to take the government dole until his election. Unemployment is responsible for Law's plight, together with a million other British workers.

1,500 TEACHERS TELL M'ANDREW THEY WILL FIGHT

Applause at Big Party Puts Crimp in His Day

In rooms so close to each other that the cheers, roars of laughter, singing voices and thunderous applause of the 1,500 teachers, in their Silver Jubilee at the Morrison Hotel, drowned out the voice of the Superintendent of Schools, William McAndrew, who was addressing a meeting of the principals in the same building, the fight of the Chicago school teachers took on a new phase Saturday.

The silver jubilee of the Teachers' Federation was in celebration of the 25th anniversary of the federation's first campaign against Chicago's tax dodgers. But it was not only to this battle that this gathering of teachers gave expression. In fact, it was a tribute to every battle the teachers have been waging to maintain the integrity of their organization, to maintain existing standards of education within the public schools of Chicago and for the further improvement of the education of the children and the betterment of their own conditions right up to their present fight with McAndrew.

McAndrew chose even the same day, the same place and the same hour to meet the principals to hatch his plots for breaking the federation.

Hears Their War Cry.

The hundreds of voices that went up in cheers at the teachers' gathering no doubt destroyed the confidence of McAndrew's outfit in the success of their schemes.

Nor could McAndrew or any of the others in his meeting help but have it brought home to them that the teachers' federation is a fighting organization and a powerful force to deal with.

Miss Margaret Haley spoke, giving a brief outline of the teachers' tax fight which began in 1899, its purpose being to round up wealthy property owners who were getting away without paying one single cent on valuable taxable property, while the teachers were receiving a mere pittance for a wage and the school system suffered from lack of money, a condition which they have been fighting ever since.

Fight For Better Education.

She urged the teachers not to stop in their efforts to get across to the people of Chicago that all their fights are for the welfare of the children and for a higher standard of education in the public schools of Chicago.

Night Shirts at Funeral.

DANVILLE, Ill., Jan. 25.—The ku klux klansmen from many points in Illinois and western Indiana were in attendance today at the funeral of Dr. Samuel L. Paul, mayor of Milford, held at the methodist church. He had been the assistant state veterinarian of eastern Illinois for the past ten years.

Jap Volcano Busy.

TOKIO, Jan. 25—The Shirane volcano near Kasatsu is again pouring out ashes and smoke and the populace fled from the vicinity in great alarm today.

SIGNIFICANCE OF OUR MADISON SQUARE GARDEN MASS MEETING

By ALEXANDER TRACHTENBERG.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. — Madison Square Garden is the largest arena in New York. When it is packed it is the nearest to an open air demonstration. A successful Madison Square Garden meeting has no peer in this country. A meeting in the Garden is not only a New York meeting. It is a national meeting.

In speaking to the 15,000 assembled at the Garden, we speak to the millions outside, without broadcasting the speeches. The capitalist press cannot ignore revolutionary assemblies which pack the Garden, and the following day the whole country reads about our demonstration. But to achieve the significance of a real demonstration the Garden must be filled to the top.

A meeting with an attendance of five or six thousand is generally a great meeting, but it would be a failure as a Garden meeting. It will not be noticed, or it will be ridiculed. The great arena looks empty with six thousand people present. The Garden is at its best when it is packed to the roof. Those who have had something to do with running Garden meetings know the enthusiasm which a successful Garden rally produces among the members and sympathizers and the general propaganda which results from such a meeting.

Last year's Lenin Memorial meeting was the topic of conversation for weeks. We shall repeat the same feat this year if the masses hear about the meeting. They will come in thousands; they will fill the hall to overflowing because they want to pay homage to Lenin, who gave his life to the cause of the disinherited. They will come because they want to show their solidarity with the Russian workers, in whom they see a promise fulfilled, a dream realized. Our slogan should be: "On to Madison Square Garden on February 1.

By train, ferry, street car, subway, on foot—the thousands will come from all corners of greater New York, with strong delegations from nearby, Connecticut and New Jersey towns to join them at the Garden. Every friend of Soviet Russia, every militant worker, every rebel living in a radius of at least fifty miles form the Garden will want to be there Sunday, Feb. 1. They will come long before two o'clock, the hour set for the meeting. When the doors open, thousands will be in line for admission to the Garden. As last year, they will be happy in the thought that the Lenin Memorial meeting was a great demonstration.

Get Tickets at Once.

Our advice to all who want to be on the inside of the Garden and witness the demonstration to Lenin's memory, to Soviet Russia and Communism, is to obtain the admission tickets immediately and be near the Garden before noon on Sunday, Feb. 1. That day will be memorable in the life of the militant workers of New York. All America will know about it, and the victorious Russian workers will be glad to hear that they have so many friends in New York.

Madison Square Garden is soon to be demolished. Let the Lenin Memorial on Feb. 1 be the greatest in its history.

RED HONOR ROLLS FOR N. Y. JOINT BAZAAR ARE NEEDED AT ONCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The last conference of the joint bazaar committee was held Sunday. As the opening of the bazaar approaches, more and more energy must be devoted to the affair.

Great progress was reported on all hands. A Japanese booth is assured. The Russian booth with hand-woven linens and embroideries will be one of the attractions of the bazaar. The Italian spaghetti booth will supply that Italian dish in all its fine flavor. One of the finest attractions will be the Indian magician's booth. A real Hindu will perform most unusual tricks of magic, such as are seldom seen. There will be a booth of kitchen utensils, one of books, of flowers, Armenian pastry, etc. The finest entertainment has been procured, among the organizations participating being the Freiheit Singing Society, the joint orchestra of 90 pieces, a children's dancing school with 60 children, a children's orchestra of 25 pieces, the Finnish societies, and various stars.

The Red Honor Rolls must be returned by Jan. 26, so as to make it possible to print the names in the souvenir program. All funds collected should be sent in before the bazaar.

TEXTILE BARONS NOW WANT GIRLS TO WORK NIGHTS

First Low Wage, Then Everything Else

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 25.— Writs attacking the constitutionality of New Jersey's new law prohibiting night work for women have been granted certain manufacturing concerns of the state.

Botany Mills, Jersey City laundries Garfield Worsted Mills, Owens Bottle Co. and several others have refused to comply with the new law preventing from women from working between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m.

Commissioner of labor Andrew F. McBride is restrained by the writs from attempting to enforce the law temporarily.

Attorney General Robert H. McCarter acted in behalf of the manufacturers, arguing that the act was an improper exercise of the police power.

Women's organization and the labor unions of New Jersey who backed the law charge that political manipulation to destroy the value of the law is practiced by the manufacturers concerned.

400 DELEGATES OPEN ASSEMBLY FOR NEW CHINA

Adopt Manifesto That Hits at Treaties

(By Rosta News Agency)

SHANGHAI, Jan. 25.—The Ming Kuo Ji Pao gives an account of the inauguration conference of the Shanghai Committee for Promoting the National Assembly. There were present over 400 delegates, representing 143 organizations.

Abolish Rights of Foreigners.

A manifesto was passed, demanding abolition of unequal treaties, reinstallation of custom revenues to China herself, abolition of extra territorial rights of foreigners in China.

The conference declares that it is not only against a convention of militarists, as planned by Peking, but will be against participation in the people's conference of representatives from military cliques. The conference further appeals to the Chinese people to organize themselves and prepare a real people's conference.

In another passage of the manifesto, the following demands are set forth: Guarantee of liberty of speech [illegible] Tuchun system; disbandment of troops; popular election of civil governors in provinces; abolition of [illegible] and other extra taxation; [illegible] laws for the protection of the interests of workers and peasants; [illegible] the import and production of opium and other poisoning narcotics in China; protection of overseas Chinese residents by demanding annulment of laws prohibiting the education of Chinese in their native language; abolition of the system of missionary [illegible] uncontrolled by the Chinese government; abolition of military defense commissioners in [illegible] confiscation of the property of militarists responsible for civil war, [illegible] tion of these means for war [illegible] relief and exemption of the [illegible] in the war region from land taxes [illegible] three years.

The manifesto concludes by a [illegible] to the Shanghai citizens to elect [illegible] mayor of the city and organize their own people's militia.

Urge People's Conference.

In a special telegram to the provisional chief executive, the conference demands the immediate convocation of the preliminary people's conference and, within three months, of the people's assembly; that a mandate be issued, abolishing all special police regulations that are oppressing the rights of the people, and another mandate for the re-establishment of the workers,' students' and peasants' unions suppressed by Wu Pei Fu, [illegible] and other militarists.

CHINA NOT VANQUISHED NATION AND FIGHTS AGAINST DAWES PLAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—There is further information available to the effect that the so-called "Dawes Plan for China" is apparently inspired by and has the strong backing of the Committee of American creditors, which was formed some six months ago by ten American companies having claims against China for supply of railway and other materials. This committee has been very active recently, bearing ever stronger pressure to be borne on the State Department that the latter adopt measures with a view to obtaining payments from China.

The "Annalist", a well-known financial organ, while welcoming the idea of a Dawes plan for China, is bound to point out that there is the essential difference between Germany, for which the original Dawes plan has been adopted, and China in that the latter is not a vanquished foe, but an ally in need. This, the journal remarks, would naturally make it more difficult to apply a Dawes plan in China.

Returns published by the Department of Trade witness to the fact that the United States is ever more interested in China. Of American external commerce for the first nine months of the current year, two per cent went to the East and 29 per cent to Europe, as against 22 and 30 per cent, respectively, during the same period in 1923. While the imports from China have somewhat decreased, the exports to China have somewhat decreased, the exports to China from America are larger this year by about $14,000,000.

Jobs Scarce in Detroit.

DETROIT—Employment in the capital of the auto industry reflects very little of the industrial revival supposed to follow the election of President Coolidge. According to the weekly report of the Detroit employers' association the number of workers on the payrolls reached 197,334, about 4,000 above the low point, when 194,249 were employed. This compares with more than 242,000 in February, 1924. More than 18 per cent of those employed last February are out of a job.

32nd WARD CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE MEETS TONIGHT.

An important meeting of the 32nd Ward campaign committee will be held Monday, Jan. 26, at 8 p. m., at the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division St. Committees of Russian, Polish and Ukrainian branches and Y. W. L. No. 5 must be present.

STRIKE IN ANTHRACITE CALLED OFF

Terms of Agreement Arrived At

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 25.—The strike of 12,000 anthracite miners of the Pennsylvania Coal company—directed, however, against both the traitorous Cappellini ring of district officials and against the company, will be ended Monday morning when the miners are ordered by the grievance committee to resume work.

On Friday morning a conference was held at a local hotel, participated in by presidents of the ten striking locals with six representatives of the district locals outside those on strike and the "special investigation commission" appointed by John L. Lewis to quell the revolt against and save the hide of his local tool, Rinaldo Cappellini, president of District One.

Look 'Em Over, Miners.

This "special commission" is composed of Neal J. Ferry, Edward Dobbins of Illinois Dist. 12, John O'Leary of Pittsburgh, Dist. 5, John Matis of Williamstown, Pa., of Dist. 9, and John [illegible] of Homer City, Pa.

The basis upon which the men will return to work Monday morning as agreed at the above meeting is stipulated as follows:

1. That their grievances will be taken up immediately by the mine committees and district officials upon a return to work.

Immediately "Considered."

2. Reinstatement of the revoked charters will be immediately considered by the "special commission" when the men return to work.
3. Lewis' commission will remain in Scranton until grievances are adjusted and will recommend no discrimination against strikers or their leaders.
4. The presidents of the three anthracite districts are to help in the adjustment of grievances.

Fight Changes Form—But Don't Stop

The miners are not considering that the end of the strike means an end to their struggle against the treacherous Cappellini and his collaboration with the operators to defeat them in their insistence that the operators also must abide by the agreement.

If this compromise means that Cappellini's neck is saved for the time being from the wrathy miners who have been demanding a special district convention to put Cappellini on trial for treason to their interests, the fact is still evident that the miners are certain to overthrow him at the first opportunity. They are completely disillusioned in him and mean to end his career. Moreover, the real adjustment of their grievances must come soon or another revolt will break loose and will be harder to handle.

was only fair to her that she should see the prospective bridegroom before accepting him for better or very likely worse. The genial Urbain restrained his urbanity, but his stocks in the matrimonial market are now below zero.

SAMUEL M. VAUCLAIN, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works has no use for people who are not always looking prosperity straight in the eye. He blames the workers who haven't a job for being unemployed. There is no excuse for it, he said. If a million workers were laid off, said the optimistic plute, what they should do, instead of trotting around to the unemployment offices, is to take out their paint pots and brushes and begin painting their fences. This would set every paint shop and nail factory in the country busy right away and the unemployed workers would be dragged from their homes by employers, in search of help. Of course, it never occurred to Vauclain that not every worker is lucky enough to have a fence to paint.

LORRETTA HINES is the daughter of a millionaire lumberman. This fact is responsible for the generous space given to her marriage by the capitalist papers of Chicago. Had she been the daughter of Murphy, the carpenter, who sometimes drives nails in Hines' lumber, her name would never get beyond the marriage license column. As it is, a cardinal celebrated the public marriage and the wedding cost every nickel of $100,000. The bride was given a pair of handsome crystal rosary beads by the pope—for which he no doubt got handsomely reimbursed—and Bishop Francis C. Kelley, presented her with a white prayer book. It would be a tribute to satan's efficiency if the girl was suing her husband for divorce, in a few years, on the ground of infidelity.

THE catholic church tells us that marriages are made in heaven. If so, God should be able to keep the wolf from the door until the next seven years of plenty. Skeptical people, particularly ex-catholics, are of the opinion that heaven has only a long distance acquaintance with the treasures which his agents collect in his name. Anyhow, the wedding of the lumber magnate's daughter must have caused rejoicing in heaven and perhaps in the vatican. The pope may console himself with the thot that even tho his friend Mussolini loses his head and the pope his rather spacious living quarters, he could enjoy himself in Chicago, among his catholic money barons. It is significant that every capitalist paper in Chicago, all owned by protestants, gave the Hines wedding the front page. They even took pictures of the ceremony with Cardinal Mundlein sitting on his "throne." Not a pleasant picture for the ku klux klan.

AFTER reading a description of the wedding that cost $100,000 a Federated dispatch from New York caught my eye. It read: "Dead from starvation! So ambulance surgeon, Scott of Harlem Hospital said after examining the body of a woman found lying in the basement of the tenement house at 1985 Seventh avenue. She had apparently crawled out of the snow storm to die." This is a good picture of life under capitalism. The parasite daughter of a parasite capitalist has her $100,000 marriage ceremony performed by a prince of the catholic church. A woman of the working class who participated in the production of the wealth which is squandered on these parasites, dies of starvation.

FOUR big news features jostled each other in the Chicago papers yesterday. They were: The Glenn Young affair; the eclipse of the sun; the shooting of Johnny Torrio and the wedding of Lorretta Hines. Torrio, being a local hero got away with the lion's share of the publicity. According to reports which he does not deny, Torrio is general manager of the vice and booze business in Chicago. Of course there are independent concerns but Torrio is to vice and booze what Gary is to the steel business. As such he cuts a big figure and in politics and when he speaks to Governor Small in favor of some imprisoned panderer the Joliet gates fly open.

TORRIO was shot at, last Saturday and is seriously wounded. He refuses to divulge the names of his assailants and the police have a lot of fun telling the newspapers that they know who did the shooting, and the reporters are scratching their heads trying to think out new words to describe the mysteries of gangland. An enterprising city editor sent a sob sister to interview Mrs. Torrio, and the gentle lady, the gun man's wife, could hardly be prevented from discussing the eclipse of the sun rather than the shooting of her husband. But the reporter was more interested in what she wore than what she said, which is perhaps to the credit of the sob sister's sense of judgment.

AND this is part of what she wore: A blue serge tailleur, trimmed with tan crepe; a tan felt hat; tan chiffon hose and black patent leather slippers; a rich moleskin wrap, with a collar of gray fox, and a purse of tan suede. Only a platinum wedding ring adorned her fingers! A good deal of this is Swedish to me. The money that went to pay for the costly raiment of Mrs. Torrio, did not come from exploiting lumberjacks in British Columbia or Maine. If Torrio is not the most maligned man in Chicago, a good deal of it came from the houses of prostitution which he owns. But it is money just the same and no questions are asked as to its origin. Mrs. Torrio and Miss Hines get their haberdashery described in the capitalist press because they have money. This is one kind of equality that flourishes under capitalism.

Daily Worker Builders' Corner

Conducted by L. E. Katterfeld

MANY New York readers are wondering why the DAILY WORKER does not appear regularly every day on the news stands. The explanation is really quite simple.

The paper is distributed to the stands by the Metropolitan News Co. which has a tremendous machinery covering the entire Metropolitan area and which begins its work right after midnight. In order to catch the days distribution the DAILY WORKER has to arrive in New York before midnight the night before. If it comes later, then it has to wait till the next day.

Now the only train that makes the trip from Chicago to New York after the DAILY WORKER is printed that arrives in New York in time to catch the Metropolitan's delivery service is not a through mail train, but has to make connections in Cleveland and Buffalo. If it fails to make either of these connections then the Daily can not appear on the New York news stands the next morning.

There is no way to remedy this just at present. But within a few weeks it will be done by printing the DAILY WORKER New York edition in the afternoon instead of in the evening, and shipping it from Chicago at 5:30 instead of eleven. This change can be made as soon as the Italian Il Lavoratore moves from Chicago to New York, probably before the end of February.

Until then, our readers, who are so loyally supporting the DAILY WORKER on the news stands, must be prepared to miss a day now and then and then purchase a double ration of two Daily Workers the next day.

All readers of the DAILY WORKER will perform a great service if they will explain to others that the irregularity is not due to the devilishness of the "printer's devil" in the DAILY WORKER office, nor to any fault on the part of the Metropolitan News Co. that delivers to the New York news stands, but to a cause over which none concerned have any control.

If there are complaints aside from this general difficulty, then these should be brought to the attention of the DAILY WORKER New York Agent as promptly as possible. But to have value a complaint must be SPECIFIC. Always give the name and location of news stands and the exact date on which the DAILY WORKER was not received and the name of the agency through which the dealer regularly gets his papers. 208 East 12th street.

With proper attention to detail and enough "revolutionary patience" we shall gradually solve all the problems that confront us, and win the battle on the New York news stand front.

WORKERS' SCHOOL TO HAVE LECTURE BY OLGIN JAN. 27

Subject Is "Leninism vs. Trotskyism"

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—"The Internal Controversies Within the Russian Communist Party" will be the subject of a lecture by Moissaye J. Olgin at the Workers School, 208 East 12th St., on Tuesday, Jan. 27th, 8 P. M.

The importance of this question to the revolutionary working-class movement cannot be overestimated. In the great task of building powerful Communist parties, there must be a clear understanding of what we mean by Leninism by Bolshevist principles and tactics.

Comrade Olgin, who has had first-hand contacts in Russia recently, has studied the question, and is well qualified to analyze the situation, will deal in his lecture with the issues involved in the conflict within the Russian Communist Party. He will show the fundamental difference in the tendencies manifested, and will explain the significance of Leninism versus Trotzkyism.

No New York militant should miss this opportunity to hear Olgin. During this week, when all over the world workers are commemorating the death of the great leader of the international proletariat, the subject is especially timely and fitting.

This is the fourth lecture in the series on the Russian Revolution which Comrade Olgin is giving at the Workers School on alternate Tuesdays. Admission for a single lecture is 25 cents.

Want Sunday for Church Only.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—One of the most drastic blue law measures since the days of puritanism is being drafted for introduction into the N. Y. legislature. It is said that if the bill becomes law there will be a complete cessation of Sunday activities, with the exception of going to church.

Canon W. C. Chase, head of the N. Y. State Civic League and the Rev. O. R. Miller, who edits the League Bulletin, are said to be behind the proposed measure. It is said that several members of the assembly have been approached about standing sponsor for the bill, but all declined.

ENGLAND KICKS SELF FOR WRONG SOVIET POLICY

Britain Is Losing Soviet Trade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 25.—English captains of industry are becoming alarmed at the situation forced on them by their own stupid policy toward Soviet Russia.

The recognition of Soviet Russia by Japan and the continued hostile attitude assumed toward Soviet Russia by the Baldwin government have lost them trade advantages.

All trade with England has been stopped by the Soviet council of commissars, who have proclaimed an economic boycott against England, a news dispatch arriving by way of Copenhagen declares. The economic boycott is to continue until diplomatic relations between Russia and Great Britain become better, the dispatch stated, and all orders are to be diverted from England to France and Germany by the trade commissaries.

Alarmed at Russo-Japan Pact.

The foreign office here, which expresses the sentiment of the large bankers and industrialists, is particularly alarmed over the clause in the Russo-Japanese treaty providing that each country guarantees benevolent neutrality in the event the other is involved in war with another power.

The foreign office here has announced that the agreement might conflict with the Geneva protocol if that instrument is ever adopted and if Russia was declared an "aggressor" by the league of nations. Japan is bound by its membership in the league, in such a case, to "engage in economic, financial and moral pressure against the power to which Japan has promised benevolent neutrality." The Baldwin government has suffered from its stupid policy of hostility toward Soviet Russia, and is eating sour grapes by attempting to show that Japan signed an "illegal" treaty.

England's Troubles.

Meanwhile England is having its troubles with the Geneva protocol. "There is not a country in the world, however small, of which a blockade would affect the American interests," says the London Times, in favoring the amendment of the protocol. "It might, and probably would, bring a clash or cause complications between the blockaded state and those who wished to pursue their normal trade." The foreign office argues that the Geneva protocol as it stands is futile because the United States is liable to run counter to the decisions of the league of nations. "Most Englishmen rightly attach great importance to the maintenance of friendly relations to the United States," says the London Times.

U. S. Disturbs Peace.

Japanese statesmen are exerting pressure on Washington to prevent the naval maneuvers of the American fleet in Pacific waters. Tetichi Sugita, members of the Japanese house of peers, has sent a letter to Congressman Britten, urging him to endeavor to prevent the fleet maneuvers, which are called by the Japanese statesman "a menace to the peace of the Far East."

The world economic and commercial situation is revolving about the Pacific, and Soviet Russia at present has more influence in the Far East than any other world power.

Bostonians Brave Severe Storm to See Russian Film Show

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—Great enthusiasm was displayed at the showing of the first Proletkino production, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik." In the sumptuous symphony hall the audience stood up in honor of the international which was rendered, at the opening of the show, by the organist, on the beautiful concert organ. This made a very deep impression upon the audience, and after that, the applause for the first glimpse of Russia in Overalls was tremendous. In spite of the fact that every one came in drenched and cold from the bitter storm that started in the late afternoon and continued all night the audience was the most cheerful and enthusiastic that symphony hall has had in a long time.

As for the response of those present when Beauty and the Bolshevik was flashed on and the village life of the Russian peasant and land owner was shown the house came down with applause. Every one is still talking about the picture in Boston and inquiring when the next picture produced by the Proletkino will come to Boston.

THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL AND THE WORKERS PARTY ARE THE ONLY CHAMPIONS OF NEGRO WORKERS

By EARL R. BROWDER.

MANY Negro comrades have written letters of protest against a communication published on Jan. 17, in the letter column, signed by L. Robertson. The latter's communication was directed against a previous letter by Negro comrades. Both sides have demonstrated why the capitalists find it easy to pit one race against another—it is because the consciousness that all of us are members of the same exploited class is not yet realized keenly enough among all of us. Robertson's letter is most in the wrong, however, as he flagrantly misquotes the letter of the Negro comrades.

The DAILY WORKER cannot be the channel for pointless argument as to who said this and that, and whether one or the other was right or wrong. So we have to tell all the indignant comrades that their letters are received but not published. Further controversy would be useless. The policy of the DAILY WORKER is clear, and so is the policy of the Workers Party and the Communist International. We are champions of the oppressed Negro workers, and because the Negro constitutes one of the most exploited sections of the working class, therefore we are especially interested in the Negro—just as we consider more the interests of the unskilled workers than those of the skilled.

Now a word as to the things which aroused quite a hot feeling among some, especially the Negro comrades. Robertson objected to the letter of Doty because it spoke of "stupid and ignorant white workers," saying this was race propaganda. You're wrong, Comrade Robertson. The Negro comrades were quite correct when they said that many white workers are stupid and ignorant. That is the reason why they are still enslaved by capitalism. If they were not stupid and ignorant they would throw off the capitalist system and establish a Communist order. Just as soon as they become enlightened that is what they will do.

Comrade Doty and his co-writers did not say that all white workers are stupid and ignorant. Nor did they maintain that the Negroes are all so enlightened as to be Communists. Indeed, I think they would readily admit that most of the Negroes still need a very great deal of education, just as most white workers. But all workers, whether they are white, black, or yellow—whether they are stupid or enlightened—have common class interests, which is the basis upon which we must all unite. If we are so completely stupid as not to do so, then the capitalists will [illegible] struggles for working class advancement will fail, and we have to fight it over against until we learn the necessary class solidarity of all races of workers.

The Negro workers may be assured that the DAILY WORKER and the Workers (Communist) Party will continue to stand at all times for their interests as a most important because most exploited section of our class. The C. E. C. of our party has passed a resolution instructing the DAILY WORKER staff to continue this policy with ever more vigilance for every opportunity to strike a blow for the Negro workers. And as for Comrade Robertson's fears, which are unfounded and based upon his misreading of a letter, we assure all the comrades impartially that the DAILY WORKER and our party will never for one moment tolerate any propaganda, whether it be that of white against black, whites against yellow, or the other around. All hatreds and prejudices based upon racial distinctions are the most deadly enemies of working class progress.

We are all of the working class—we have but one enemy and that is the capitalist system with its instruments of oppression. We must unite to overcome our enemy.

COOLIDGE FORCES SECRECY IN TALK OVER STONE JOB

Suppress Opposition in Secret Session

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Opposition to the confirmation of Attorney General Harlan F. Stone as an assistant justice of the United States supreme court flared into the open in the senate yesterday afternoon.

It revolved around an attempt by Senator Heflin, democrat of Alabama, to reply to a newspaper article which charged him with opposing Stone's confirmation because the latter was an "attorney for J. Pierpont Morgan."

Coolidge for Suppression and Secrecy.

Three times administration leaders raised points of order against Heflin to prevent him attacking Stone.

With Heflin apparently stopped by the objection of republican leaders, Senator Overman, democrat, of North Carolina, moved that the senate immediately consider Stone's appointment in "executive session." This motion prevailed by a one vote margin, 37 to 36.

Coolidge's Tool Busy Whispering.

In the midst of the row, Representative Everett Sanders, republican of Indiana, already selected by President Coolidge as the successor to his secretary, C. Bascom Slemp, appeared on the floor. He conferred earnestly in whispered conversations with administration leaders.

Administration Opposes Publicity.

The secret session, lasting an hour, was characterized by a series of attacks on Stone, all of which were based on reports that the attorney general planned to obtain an indictment against Senator Wheeler in the courts of the district of Columbia. This reported activity led Senators Borah, Walsh and Heflin to bitterly flay the attorney general. They were joined in this stand by Senators Overman, democrat, of North Carolina; Caraway, democrat of Arkansas, and Norris, republican of Nebraska.

Under the flow of denunciation, administration senators sat silent, protesting only against efforts to carry the fight out into a public session.

Officials Call Police Against Members.

But the protests were unavailing, and at the election on Dec. 26, Smith, Rowe and Carley were candidates. The president, Brady, appointed ten tellers, the vice-president two, and Brady then ruled that the counting of ballots should be behind closed doors.

The demand of the opposition candidates to be present at the counting was met by the calling of the police, and some forty men, including candidates and their supporters, were taken to the police station, and altho not detained, they found upon their return the doors of the hall locked.

The Old Game.

The tellers' report gave Smith some 878 votes out of a total of about 1,480, altho it is almost impossible to find anyone to find anyone to say he voted for Smith. Mike Kelley and T. P. McNamara were defeated for re-election as business agents, because of having opposed the ruling machine, altho McNamara was credited with 430 votes as against the 220 which served to elect him in 1923.

The membership had long been thoroly disgusted with the conduct of local officials. The largest laborers' local in the union, with over 6,000 members, it should have been able to accumulate a large surplus, but the officials were able to keep the money used up for expenses.

Officials Milked the Treasury Dry.

The meetings were so disorderly that the rank and file were practically unable to express themselves. The per capita tax to the International has not been paid since October with resulting loss of benefits. The conduct of the election gave sufficient proof that the machine in power will go to any length to keep out those who oppose them.

The charter officers of the new local include John Carley, president, and T. P. McNamara, financial secretary. It is joining what is known as the "New" Building Trades Council, affiliated with the A. F. of L. building trades department, while the "old" council, dominated by the carpenters, is not so affiliated.

The new local claims over 1,000 members with more members of No. 10 coming over all the time.

RADICAL IS AS RADICAL DOES!

New District 12 Cooperates In Campaign to Insure Daily; More Work Still to Come

Fifteen branches in District 12 have proved themselves worthy of the good old reputation of "radicalism" that the western coast has borne since the far-off days of the general strike in Seattle. The labor-fakirs reign in the unions and press, likewise, in the I. W. W., many newly-organized branches of the Workers Party are springing up to oppose them.

Faced with local debts, unemployment and handicaps due to the newness of the party, nonetheless, western comrades have realized their dependence on a central party press. They have turned from their own troubles to help insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

Just before the paper went to press, there arrived a check for $12.00 for DAILY WORKER insurance policies sold to the Russian branch of Seattle, Wash. This removes another branch from the non-militant class.

Will this branch go even further and make a good beginning into a good ending? Will it complete its quota of $3.00 a member?

And how about the other twenty branches that have not yet got into action? We await word from them.

STARVING SNOW SHOVELER BEGS POLICE FOR FOOD

But He Is Held Instead for Vagrancy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Michael Halloran stumbled into the West Forty-[illegible] street police station last night and told Lieutenant Timothy O'Brien that he was out of work and so weak from hunger he could not shovel snow. The lieutenant sent out for coffee and sandwiches and fed him.

Halloran did not look better after his meal and an ambulance surgeon was sent for. He said the man was suffering from malnutrition and needed sound sleep, so O'Brien, with Halloran's consent, arrested him for vagrancy and allowed him to sleep in one of the cells.

A new volley of letters from big taxpayers poured into the editorial page of the dailies complaining that the snow shovelers are too lazy to do more than two days' work in one while several of the slaves fainted in the street from sheer exhaustion.

After combing the city, all since Forbes informed the world that Gary and Mitchell and Schwab made their millions by shoveling twice as much snow as they were paid for, the investigators have been able to add only one conspicuous case to the list of successfuls, that of young Vanderbilt, whose father before him had also set the example of shoveling twice as much snow as he was paid for.

Young Workers League Issues Slogan: "Into the Large Factories!"

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The New York district of the Y. W. L. is at the present time registering all the unemployed members of the league and sending them into the large factories where thousands of young workers are employed.

This is a result of the campaign that the league is carrying on for the re-organization and further organization of the Young Workers League on the basis of shop nuclei. While every member employed in any shop no matter how small must carry on Communist activity, the very small shops can never be the basis for the units of the Young Workers League. It is the large factories that are so numerous in every part of the United States, that form the basis of our organization of shop nuclei. Because of this fact we want more and more to transfer our comrades from the smaller shops into the large ones. The present period of unemployment in the different trades affords an opportunity of shifting many of our comrades into different industries, and influencing thousands of young workers.

We must concentrate our forces in the basic industries, in the large factories, and at the same time intensify our work in shops and thru systematic efforts, win over the young workers to the program of the Y. W. L.

Comrade Bloor reports that she is organizing for the Labor Defense Council in California as well as doing other party work.

N. Y. Shirt Boss Moves to Jersey To Escape Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—One of the largest shirt manufacturers, unwilling to have the Shirtmakers' Union "interfere" with his business, closed shop here in New York and moved his entire plant to the city of Paterson. There he hopes to escape the "tyranny" of the union.

But he will find the Paterson workers who have been aroused to militancy by the splendid strike of the Paterson silk workers, unwilling to act in the capacity of scabs. In fact, those who have answered the call of "Help Wanted" are already responding to the call of the Shirtmakers' Union which has sent a organizer into Paterson.

The Paterson section of the Y. W. L. that has shown how Communists should participate in a strike, by their heroic and splendid work in connection with the recently terminated Paterson Silk Workers' General Strike, can be depended upon to render every possible assistance to the union in organizing the workers and make it hot for the shirt manufacturer. The treatment that the manufacturer will receive in Paterson will be a warning to all the manufacturers that the workers of the state of New Jersey are growing more militant and will stop the epidemic of manufacturers moving their plants from New York to the various towns of New Jersey to escape the union.

"Nationalizing" the Child.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—A writer in the New York Times who announces that he is not an "employer of child labor" opposes the child labor amendment on the grounds that such a measure would "nationalize the child—thus introducing the immoral practices of Russia."

The gentleman further fears that the passage of the amendment would release a horde of federal agents who would "question the right of every parent to have his child work, regulate the hours that the child shall work or the conditions of his labor." And (saddest thot of all for millions of proletarian parents!) "Congress could even prevent a father from ordering his boy to pick strawberries for his breakfast"!

RED REVEL IS DRAWING NEAR; GET YOUR MASK

Language Federations to Pack the Hall

Tho the Red Revel is more than a month in the future yet it is surprising to those who have never attended a Red Revel in Chicago to learn the interest that this event is exciting. Many of the girls are picking out designs for costumes and according to Barney Mass of the Young Workers League that organization is almost as interested in getting its members ready for the Red Revel as it is in distributing circulars on child labor at the factory gates.

Federations Preparing.

From what the committee on publicity understands, the language federations are going to show up in full strength. At least as many members will be present at the Red Revel as participated in our last general membership meeting. The hall is convenient and can be reached by street car or elevated. Taxis can be secured of course, but should be used only in emergency cases, such as when the merry-maker misses the last car.

In inducing party members to come to the Red Revel the matter of duty will not be stressed as that is considered unnecessary. The fact that the net proceeds will be devoted to strengthening our party here in Chicago will be a powerful incentive in inducing every member to work his (her) head off.

Mark Down the Date.

But fun! Particulars of the bill of fare will be published later on. For the present we advise you to take out your note book, tell your wife, your sweetheart or your affinity that February 28 is the date of the biggest social event of the season. Mark this date down in your book and get yourself in the proper frame of mind to enjoy it. The affair will be held in West End Women's Club, 37 South Ashland Blvd., corner of Monroe.

Kept Press Spreads Falsehoods About Budget of Soviets

MOSCOW, Jan. 25.—It is stated authoritatively that the reports, which have appeared in some foreign press organs of the would-be deficit in the state budget of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in view of the partial crop failure in the southeastern area of Soviet Russia, are fundamentally wrong.

As a matter of fact, the agricultural tax, a levy which is usually completed by March, is even now yielding on the average, eighty-seven, while in certain places—one hundred per cent of the budget estimates. Now, the income from the agricultural tax forms but one-third of the revenue estimates. Moreover, not only has the budget for the financial year 1924-25 been drawn up without a deficit, but the estimates even provide for some surplus funds.

In refutation of the false assertions of the Russian white emigrant papers regarding the allegedly unreal character of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republic budget without deficit — an argument advanced in view of the would-be failure of last year's budget, the Isvestia shows, on the strength of authentic figures and other materials, that the actual working of the 1923-24 budget gave an excess of state revenue over expenditure of more than thirty million roubles, which was not provided for in the estimates.

Against Boss—Only in the Home.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The Rev. N. J. Springer, last night sermonized in his Brooklyn church on "Problems of Modern Marriage," and delivered himself of the following sentiments:

"It will be clear that the marriage relationship which I regard as ideal is the one in which the common and unreserved devotion of husband to wife and wife to husband rests, not on the ability of either to absorb and subdue the other. The only marriage relationship which I could regard as tolerable is one of equality. One cannot be both boss and husband.

The reverend is preaching a series of sermons on this subject. It is not announced that he will speak on the "Boss in Industry."

TEXTILE WORKERS' UPHEAVAL PERSISTS THRU UNION DIVISION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 25.—All is not peace among the textile unions it is evident. The return to work of one group of workers being offset by the walkout of another, while a third union soon will announce the result of a strike vote recently taken.

Weavers at the Potomska mill yesterday voted to return to their looms today, and the loom fixers of the same concern were ordered by union officials to resume work. The number of men affected is 300.

About seventy weavers and loom fixers of the Devons Mills, Inc., the Goodyear and Fisk Rubber company's plant still remained out.

Twenty-two weavers in the night shift at the Butler mill walked out last night, declaring that the 10 per cent wage cut in addition to previous wage adjustments will amount to a reduction of between $6 and $7 a week.

Workers' Government's Business Deals Has Got Them All Wondering

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. — The New York Times' financial expert says that not the least puzzling phase of the current gold movement, now about $100,000,000, is the amount of purchases by Russia.

This expert says that a banker, conversant with Russian business has thrown some light on the problem, saying that about three-quarters of all the gold shipped to London, and marked for reshipment, was destined for Russia. He thought the bulk of this was the conversion of profits into gold.

The new-born Russian textile industry, he said, was one of the phenomena of 1924. Its profits were relatively small, but nevertheless very real, and with no great need at the present for such credits in New York, the Russian textile operators have called for their transfer in gold to Russia. A considerable portion of the gold shipped there recently, he believed, could be attributed to this operation.

Coolidge Would Fleece the Postal Workers of Back Pay

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 25.—A test vote on the postal pay raise bill is to take place today when the senate votes as to whether or not it will eliminate the provisions for increase in the postal rates. It is expected that the provisions injected by Coolidge senators, increasing the postal rates, will be stricken out. A vote will then be taken on the Moses bill, which has the approval of Coolidge, but amended so that the bill will be in practically the form which Coolidge vetoed.

If the amended Moses bill passes, Coolidge is expected to veto the bill once more. The bill provides for increase in the pay of postal employes amounting to $68,000,000 per year.

The republican senators are trying to pass the bill in a form which makes the pay increase retroactive only until Jan. 1, 1925, instead of until July of last year. Coolidge is thus trying to deprive the postal workers of six months back pay.

Out of Work—Takes Poison.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Four days ago, Ruth Khlar left her home at 1619 Bathgate Ave. to find work in Philadelphia where she had been promised a job. Today she was found dead in Philadelphia with forty-nine cents in her pocketbook.

On the top of her suitcase she had left a piece of paper on which there was no message, nothing that spoke of her failure to find work or the destitution that drove her to take her own life. Only her name, "Ruth Klahr, 1619 Bathgate Ave., Bronx, N. Y." was neatly printed on it.

Policemen were "unable to establish a motive" for her suicide.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Every day under this head you will learn not only what BUILDERS thruout the country are doing to build a greater newspaper, but also practical suggestions to accomplish more for OUR paper. Tell us what YOU are doing—and we will "tell the world."

Here's a Good Way!

METHODS to "Build the DAILY WORKER" are many. Some are good, some better and some are particularly suited to the immediate needs of "Our Daily."

Nothing at this time is more urgent than this fact we are bringing to your attention . . . . you need not be an authorized agent to do it:

Last year thousands of workers sent in their subscriptions in the first two months of the year to greet the birth of the DAILY WORKER. Hundreds of these are expiring during January and February NOW!—and if these are not renewed there will be a big loss to "Our Daily."

That leaves two things to be done at once. We are now sending out the latest expiration lists to our DAILY WORKER agents thruout the country. If you want to lend a helping hand (every one of our agents will welcome it!), get in touch with your branch or city agent and "go seeking subs" and renewals. And if there is no agent in your town write us about it and we will see that you "go seeking subs" anyway.

Perhaps you can do another task even more simply. Take a peep at the label on this paper you are reading, if you got it by mail. If your sub expires within the months of January or February get into action at once. Send in your remittance to cover renewal.

Either one of these methods—and both will be better—can help to "Build the DAILY WORKER". Are you ready? Here's a good way!

Street Cleaners Demand A 10 Per Cent Raise

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. — The New York street cleaners get $29.40 a week, out of which they have to pay $1.08 for pensions and sickness insurance. They want an increase and are asking for 10 per cent more.

Abraham Kasoff, president of the joint council of the street cleaners representing some 7,000 workers, has presented a petition to Mayor Hylan, asking permission to lay his request before the board of estimates.

The two severe snow storms recently have made conditions of work terribly hard for the cleaners, who are exposed to grave dangers of traffic, the intense cold and infections from the bad conditions created by the mixture of snow and dirt, and the thawing.

STUDENTS OF LABOR COLLEGE SEND AID TO W. VIRGINIA MINERS

KATONAH, N. Y., Jan. 25.—The students and instructors at Brookwood Labor College, Katonah, New York, have given up eating deserts for three weeks and are sending the money thus saved by the college commissary to the secretary-treasurer of District No. 17 of the United Mine Workers of America in Charleston, West Virginia. Twenty thousand persons, evicted union members and their families, are living in tents and lean-to's on the windswept hills of West Virginia today. The union is providing them with shelter and rations enough for a bare existence. The contribution of the Labor College is in response to an urgent appeal for clothing. In addition to money, two large boxes of clothing were dispatched today. Some students will go without needed overcoats, sweaters, or under-clothing to help the West Virginia miners. The initiative in this movement was taken by miners from Pennsylvania and Illinois belonging to the Labor College's student body.

Dies from Starvation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Dead from starvation! So ambulance surgeon, Scotti of Harlem Hospital said after examining the body of a woman found lying in the basement of the tenement house at 1985 Seventh Ave. She had apparently crawled out of the snow storm to die.

NONSENSE OF [illegible] POWERS [illegible] TO THE [illegible]

Funny Demands Made [illegible] Recognition Parley

(By Rosta News Agency)

PEKING, Jan. 25.—Attention [illegible] ing directed in official and public [illegible] ese circles to the juridical [illegible] contained in the last note of [illegible] ers, the particular point which [illegible] thus come under attention being [illegible] how, if the present Chinese [illegible] ment is not organized ("de facto" recognition being certainly [illegible] non-recognition of a government) [illegible] the provisional chief executive [illegible] not be made responsible for [illegible] and agreements concluded by [illegible] governments?

Must Pledge Future Governments.

A strict observance of international law would require that the [illegible] stand as follows: either the [illegible] government is one formally [illegible] nized, in which case all [illegible] volving formal engagements [illegible] made to it; or it is not a [illegible] government, in which latter case [illegible] powers should wait for a formal government to which to address [illegible] claims.

Another curious point is the [illegible] the utterly incomprehensible [illegible] put to a government to guarantee [illegible] good behavior of each and every future government that would [illegible] the failure to give this pledge [illegible] followed by a refusal of formal recognition.

This point, which juridically is [illegible] nonsensical, appears to have [illegible] at least as much [illegible] wilderment, revealing a hopeless [illegible] of logical reasoning and [illegible] of any really earnest desire on the part of the authors of the note to [illegible] any one actually understand the "understanding" proposed by them.

They Ask Too Much.

One fact, however, stands out in this pitiful affair, and that is that the powers have chosen—with [illegible] profit to themselves—to assume a position in which, while not recognizing the Chinese government, [illegible] they demand from this government that it recognize all the [illegible] with regard to the powers.

In reference to the much talked of note of the powers, it is being pointed out in Chinese diplomatic circles that if the powers really took seriously what they write to China in their own communications, the logical consequence of their statement [illegible] to recognition of the Chinese government ought to be the [illegible] diplomatic and consular relations with the present administration.

Game of Mockery.

Now, if the powers will not do so, as they surely have no intention of doing, all this juggling with the terms "de facto" and "de jure" becomes an unworthy game of mockery, meant only to frighten someone.

Soviet Air Service to Persia.

MOSCOW, Jan. 25. — Regular airplane service with Persia is rapidly improving, the distance from Moscow to Enzeli, Persian port on the Caspian Sea, being now covered by Junkers' machines in slightly less than [illegible] hours' time.

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

A TALK WITH TEACHER.

In the school that I go to, the teacher always tells us that capitalism is good. So one day I brought the DAILY WORKER to school and gave it to my teacher and asked her if it was a good paper.

She said it was a bad paper because it was against the government. So I asked her why she thought this government was so good. She said: "If you want to be a good citizen, you must believe in this government."

So I said: "I agree with the viewpoint of this paper because it is a true one and because it represents the workers." Then I asked her if she knew what Communism means. She said that the Communists are people who want to overthrow the government. Then I said: "Isn't it better for the worker to control this country than the capitalists? The great mass of the people are workers; they do all the work and make everything in this country!"

Then she said: "Where do you learn such horrid ideas? Who teaches them to you?"

I knew she was getting sore, so I just answered that I learned these ideas by reading and thinking, and that I believed in them because they were true.

Then she looked at me kind of surprised for a while, and told me to go to my seat and that's all. I guess I showed her she can't tell me any more bunk about the grand American capitalist government.

Is It Going to Be a Funeral?

The Conference for Progressive Political Action is scheduled to hold a convention in Chicago on February 21. Opinions differ, whether it is going to be a funeral or the scene of another political miscarriage.

One fact is obvious. The only party, if party it is, in the United States that takes a serious interest in the coming conference is the socialist party. This outfit has been snatching at straws ever since it lost its proletarian trunk to the Communist movement, but every new straw that blows its way, only serves to inveigle it farther into the treacherous political currents which have led to the brink of destruction.

The railroad brotherhood leaders, the real power in the C. P. P. A. would rather lay the baby on the shelf for a few years, or at least until the next congressional elections. They don't want to be bothered with any kind of an organization that requires even a little activity to keep it alive. These labor fakers have frowned on the organization of a Third Party and let it be known that they were opposed to the February 21 conference.

This leaves the socialists, William J. Johnston and a few nondescripts like J. A. H. Hopkins of the Committee of 48—which is dead by the way—in favor of holding the convention at all.

It is likely tht Johnston will express benevolent aspirations toward the ideal of a Third Party, but what can an honest man do with the railroad brotherhood officials running scab mines and demanding pay boosts for railroad officials, that they have no time to waste on third parties.

Sidney Hillman, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers will say, if he says anything, that his organization is in favor of a class labor party and nothing less will satisfy them. This will give the wily Sidney, the necessary "radical" coloring and cover up his policy of eliminating the class struggle on the industrial field thru banking operation.

The labor papers that reaches the exchange desk are not excited over the future of the C. P. P. A. or any kind of a new party, third, fourth or fifth. It seems they have not yet recovered from their LaFollette debauch.

Senator Wheeler is off the third party reservation for good. LaFollette is almost as silent as "Cal." Only the poor socialist party is looking around for a place to lay its head. Unless all signs fail it looks as if it would have to sleep on a bench.

The Workers (Communist) Party points out that the C. P. P. A. is worse than useless as a means of fighting their battles. It is merely a political liason officer between the labor fakers and the bourgeoisie. The workers must fight it.

General Persing is on a tour of South America. He danced the tango in Argentine. Should fortune frown on him, he could be assured of a job as come-on in a first class cabaret. Lots of people think he is a better cake-eater than general.

The Opium Smoke Screen

Lord Cecil, British democrat and winner of a prize for telling the choicest collection of palatable lies about the great mountebank Woodrow Wilson is express his lordly indignation at Geneva because the American delegates to the opium conference impolitely stated that England was insincere in her attitude on the opium evil and her pledge at the Hague convention was only a scrap of paper.

This almost led to a scrap. The noble lord picked up his hat and was about to buy a ticket to London, when some other delegate caught him by the coat tail and pulled him back to his seat. According to those in the know, lords and dukes act just like ordinary people when they are angry or soused, which they are quite frequently, particularly the latter.

The opium conference is funny, to disinterested observes, but a tragic farce to the sufferers from the opium curse. Those sufferers are mainly the Chinese on whom the opium evil was forced by England at the point of cannon. Britain had a double motive in this criminal act. One was to dope the brains of the Chinese and render them easy prey for British exploitation, the other was to enable British business men to make profit out of traffic in opium. Profit is at the bottom of the opium curse, and the same is true of ninety per cent of the evils that aflict the human race.

When the Soviet government was invited to attend the opium parley, Tchitcherin informed the conference that the workers and peasants government was taking steps to abolish the opium curse not merely talk about it. The Soviet government is concerned with the welfare of the working class of the world and not with coining profit out of their misery.

McAndrew's Hypocrisy

The school teachers of Chicago who have been resisting the autocratic rule of superintendent McAndrew since he was appointed to his present post, may be excused for rubbing their eyes in wonder when they read in the papers last week, that the local school czar favored granting them an increase in wages. That the teachers are entitled to an increase and a big increase nobody but a miserly bourgeois taxpayer will deny. But that McAndrews is serious in recommending the increase is not so certain. Why?

Ever since McAndrews came to this city to assume his duties as superintendent he has waged a vigorous campaign to smash the teachers' councils. He wanted complete control over the schools and he bitterly resented the teachers—those who are charged with the task of preparing the children of the workers for their role in life—having a voice in the manner this training should be done. The very idea of a union among the school teachers was gall and wormwood to this lackey of big business and he used every trick he knew of, to break down their morale. He first made a frontal attack and he had to retreat. Since then he has continued the fight, using whatever tactics he thought would best suit his purpose. So far he has been defeated.

But he is persistent. Having failed to win by a frontal attack, he tried a flank move. Having failed to break the solidarity of the teachers by threats and cajolery he decided to play his best card. He recommended an increase in salary, to prove that he was the teachers' friend and that they could accomplish more for themselves by being loyal to him and junking their organizations than by fighting him. In other words, by recommending something that he cannot deliver, he hoped to create a division among the teachers which would enable him to destroy the councils.

The school committee will not sanction the proposed salary increase. McAndrew knows that. The city council would not approve of it even if sanctioned by the school committee. McAndrew knows that. But when his recommendations are rejected by the representatives of the capitalists on the school committee and the city council, McAndrew can go to the teachers and say: "I did the best I could for you. Can't you see now that I am your best friend."

We do not believe that McAndrews will succeed. The man who tried to save money for the tax dodgers by cutting out the penny lunches of the school children, cannot fool the teachers by his present streak of generosity.

There are many other angles to the school situation which will be dealt with later on, but McAndrew's hypocrisy deserves special treatment.

Mussolini and the Wild Beasts

The freak section of a local capitalist paper recently carried the yarn that Benito Mussolini, murderer-in-chief of Italy, took a fancy while riding thru the zoological gardens in Rome to enter the lion's cage and remain with the animals for fully thirty minutes, while his appearance indicated that he was in deep thought.

His action excited the curiosity of the audience which quickly gathered to witness this novel form of entertainment, but as no explanation of his conduct was given by the dictator, Rome and all Italy are still "up in the air" for an explanation.

An article in the London Daily Herald, however, from the pen of a correspondent who was driven out of Italy by the fascisti, may shed some light on the incident. It is stated that immediately prior to Mussolini's latest attack on the opposition, he was visited by a delegation of extreme fascists led by Roberto Farinacci, an ex-socialist and the most bloodthirsty of the blackshirts.

Farinacci, speaking for his prize cutthroats, warned Benito that unless he stopped flirting with constitutionalism that he would be superseded and the manner in which this task would be accomplished was suggested by Farinacci, as he careless like drew his hand across his throat.

Mussolini immediately decided to give the opposition parties 48 hours within which to shut up. He suppressed several papers and gave his assassins permission to go on an orgy of rape, arson and murder that lasted until their momentary passion for crime was satiated.

It is quite likely that Mussolini took a ride thru the park after this meeting and seeing the lion's cage visited the animals in order to quiet his nerves after his experience with his fellow beasts.

He's a Hopeful Cuss

"You feel that there is still hope of civilizing this commercial, imperialist, good-natured America of ours . . ." writes Oswald Garrison Villard in a circular letter sent to readers of The Nation. The bible says that "hope deferred maketh the heart sick" or perhaps one of the prophets said it. It is a wise old saying but it does not apply to Villard. His fountain of hope never runs dry.

Villard has reached the summit of optimism if he expects to civilize imperialism even by the fine English that adorns the pages of The Nation. Imperialism is a beast of prey and can no more be "civilized" than a skunk can be trained for the drawing room.

The only way to "civilize" imperialism is to destroy it. How America can be "good-natured and imperialist" at the same time is a puzzle to us. As William Howard Taft in response to the question: "How can the unemployment problem be solved" answered, "God knows. I don't."

The Soviet government is putting grand opera thru a delousing process. One, entitled "A Life of the Czar," will be called "Scythe and Hammer." A similar operation on most of the stars would not do any harm.

WORKERS PROTEST AGAINST SCHEDEL RE-DEPORTATION

At the last meeting of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, Branch No. 51, consisting of 304 members, the followng resolution was passed in protest against the re-deportation of John C. Schedel.

Resolution on Schedel Case.

WHEREAS, the following facts regarding the case of John C. Schedel have been called to our attention:

John C. Schedel was one of the victims caught in the net of ex-Attorney General Palmer's "Red Raids" of 1920. In January of that year he was seized in his Fort Wayne home, separated from his wife and five small children, and deported to Germany. The sole charge against him was membership in the Communist Party of America. The separation was bitter for both Schedel and his family. The young baby died. Mrs. Schedel broke down under the strain of her grief and hardships, and temporarily lost control of her mind. She was a patient at the East Haven Asylum, Richmond, Indiana, until 1923. The four children were placed in the Allen County Orphanage. Naturally, Schedel made every effort to rejoin his wife and family. Finally, after nearly five years, he succeeded in making his way back into this country. He was immediately arrested and now faces a possible five years in jail, followed by deportation to Germany. He is now out on bail and is working at his trade as piano-polisher in the same factory where he had long been employed at the time of his arrest. And,

WHEREAS, we are informed that Schedel's case is about to be brought to the attention of the department of labor and department of justice; and

WHEREAS, we are convinced that unless the prosecution of Schedel is checked, harsh injustice will result to Schedel and his family in that further or permanent exile and separation, even though legally justified would be very inhuman; and

WHEREAS, there is no reason why the present administration should uphold the 1920 deportation policy of the Wilson administration; and

WHEREAS, above all, this is a case in which the ordinary routine of administrative action should be tempered by or give place to humane consideration, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we call upon and petition the United States government to forego prosecution of John C. Schedel, of Fort Wayne, Indiana, on account of his re-entry into the United States after deportation and to set aside the original order of deportation against Schedel in case number 54, 709,978, Department of Labor, so that he may remain in this country with his American-born wife and four American-born children; and further, that we send copies of this resolution to Attorney-General Stone, Secretary of Labor Davis, the Federation of Labor and the Labor Press.

Capitalists See in Finnish Athletes Good Material to Exploit

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Capitalism sees in sport, just dollars. The prowess of Paavo Nurmi and the other Finnish athletes, who beating the rest of the world's picked athletes, is regarded as worth not less than $10,000,000 to Finland.

Leonard Astrom, Minister of the Republic of Finland, came to New York to present to Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, the Order of the White Rose. Mr. Astrom said that the victories of Nurmi, Ritola, Stenroos and other Finns had afforded Finland more advertising than anything else in a century. It had surpassed he said, even the Declaration of Independence of Finland, in this respect.

Mr. Mitchell said his observations had been similar; that Americans were electrified by the accomplishments of this handful of athletes, and men who had never devoted much thought to Finland has begun questioning one another about the country and how it was able to produce so hardy a group of field and track athletes. Results of this inquiry were such, he said, as immensely to enhance the credit rating of Finland. Purchasers of bonds of Finnish extraction were satisfied that a stalwart race, such as the Finns appeared to be from the victories of their athletes, was sufficiently strong to a settlement of all debts.

FRIENDLY CHATS WITH WORKERS

THRU the chinks of the smoke-blackened door came the all-too-certain smell of cabbage. We were admitted by a smiling red-faced man. He waved us in with a fork as he explained that he was doing the cooking while his wife finished the Saturday's shopping. When we told him that we wanted him to sign a petition to nominate a candidate for alderman, he asked us who was our man.

"Jack W. Johnstone," we replied, "a working man who has been active in the labor unions for some ten years in Chicago."

"Sure I'll sign," he agreed, putting down his fork for our pencil.

Meanwhile, we became aware of a new odor that entirely eliminated the cabbage. What was it? No, it wasn't merely ham; it was something with a "kick" in it . . . . (just a gentle, legitimate one), in fact, we finally recognized it as nothing else than cloves, but it made us feel as cheerful as did the new signature on the page which our genial host returned to us.

"We want you to read our candidate's program," we said as we handed over a copy of Dec. 17 DAILY WORKER. "If you know enough about him, you'll be sure to vote for him."

"The DAILY WORKER!" he exclaimed. "Well, I'm glad I signed. I read this paper almost every day. You see, I belong to a union, and four of us fellows chipped in and bought a subscription, and we pass the paper around. Sure, I'll vote for Johnstone if this paper supports him."

That's what getting signatures for election petitions means; going right into workers' kitchens—seeing what they eat and what they think and what they read. And tho from the outside a house-to-house canvass for signatures may smell as bad as, say, cabbage—one the inside, it's spicy as cloves with adventure. Each new face peering from behind a new door gives a feeling of wonderment.

For instance, there was the hard-faced girl who looked at us with sullen eyes as we explained our purpose. She listened, but no change of expression relieved her sternness. "What does non-partisan mean?" she finally interrupted us.

"It means that nominations aren't made by separate parties," we said, "but by collecting signatures, like this."

"Then you aren't republican or democrat?" she persisted.

"No," we assured her.

"That's all I want to know," she remarked, as she melted into a smile and jotted down her name. We were too surprised to answer for a minute but then we pressed on her two copies of The DAILY WORKER, over which she nodded smilingly.

Of quite a different type was the "lady" with the Pomeranian pup in her arms who "wasn't interested in politics." Likewise, another "lady," who, tho she was well made-up, showed pouches of age under her eyes, as well as elsewhere.

"Tho I have just been old enough to vote for a short while," she informed it (it certainly was news) "I have neglected to register."

Probably because we, too, appeared like "ladies," men seemed quite willing to sign, whether they had registered or not, or whether they had signed other petitions. At least two other candidates had been circulated before ours. Judging from the remarks of many voters we met, they had signed both without scruple; but we, didn't allow duplication on our petitions. We knew that a candidate that would fight for the workers could not "get by" except according to the letter of the law (if even then) the scapegoat politicians could safely commit legal murder.

Forty signatures we obtained altogether in our trip around one petit bourgeois block. Sprinkled in as seasoning to take off the "flat" taste (they were all apartment houses) was the housewife who would vote for any union man, "right or wrong"; the vaudeville performer, who dramatically told us that "the world wouldn't move without the working man"; and the worried-looking little seamstress, who anxiously asked us if we knew "what church Mr. Johnstone went to."

The "church" didn't matter to anyone but the antiquated dressmaker, however. Our magic word was working man, we found. And on the basis of this class appeal, we could separate the ignorant from the wise in a cross-section of precinct 44.

MUSIC · LITERATURE · DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

The thirteenth program of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, given at Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday, was completely given over to Brahms. Three of the German master's compositions were played, the overture "Academic Festiva,." the third symphony and the second piano concerto.

This program illustrated beyond a doubt that Brahms was at his best as a composer of pieces in small forms. When he wrote in the large forms, especially that of the concerto, he was more or less of a flat fire.

The "Akademische Fest" is composed of four student songs woven together in a freely constructed overture. It smells of good beer and bad cigars. It is very German and very lively.

The symphony and the concerto can be considered together. The concerto is far worse than the symphony, but both suffer from the same defect in the composer.

Johannes Brahms lacked sustained inspiration. He could write deep, profound, stirring, wonderful melodies sixteen measures long. After that his flow of melody went dry. These short, undeniably great melodies make up some of the finest songs, waltzes and short piano pieces in the literature.

Beginning of Symphonies Best

But when Brahms started out to complete a symphony he struck a snag. After the statement of a captivating theme at the beginning of every movement of his four symphonies he had to fall back on his prodigious knowledge of musical science to finish the job. The result is that the short melody of the opening is invariably variated and juggled about in so many ways that variation ceases to be variation and becomes distortion.

The composer Chaykovski expresses this unsatisfactory quality in Brahms as a symphonist by a clever metaphor. The letter in which it appears is quoted below. The concerto mentioned in the first sentence is Brahms' only violin concerto, but the criticism of this work applies to all the symphonies and concerti of the German.

Says Chaykovski:

"The concerto of Brahms does not please me better than any of his other works. He is certainly a great musician, even a master, but, in his case, his mastery overwhelms his inspiration. So many preparations and circumlocutions for something which ought to come and charm us at once, —and nothing does come but boredom. His music is not warmed by any genuine emotion. It lacks poetry, but makes great pretensions to profundity. These depths contain nothing; they are void. Take the opening of the concerto for instance. It is an introduction, a preparation for something fine; an admirable pedestal for a statue; but the statue is lacking, we only get a second pedestal piled upon the first. Brahms .... never expresses anything, or when he does, he fails to express it fully. His music is made up of fragments of some indefinable something, skillfully welded together. The design lacks definite contour, color, life."

This opinion of Chaykovski is perhaps a bit exaggerated, but is nevertheless true in the main.

As we said before, the piano concerto of this program was far worse than the symphony. It is one of the worst concerti ever written. Except for the third movement, (there are four instead of the conventional three) and parts of the first, there is little music in it at all.

Olga Samaroff, who played the solo part in the concerto, knows how to play the piano. There seems not the slightest effort in her work. She played thru this long and difficult concerto without misplacing a hair. This does not mean that her work was lifeless. It was simply effortless, unposed, beautiful piano playing.

Pavlowa Farewell

Elaborate preparations have been completed to welcome to Chicago Anna Pavlowa and her Ballet Russe, coming to the Auditorium Theater tonight, for a farewell engagement of two weeks preceding her round-the-world tour.

"Don Quixote" her newest offering—one for which she and her helpers ransacked the art centers of Spain—will be the opening performance, and will also be repeated on Friday, Saturday and Sunday of the same week.

"Don Quixote" is given in a prologue and two acts, its story taken from the Cervantes book, and it calls for an enormous cast.

The program for the first week is as follows: Monday, "Don Quixote"; Tuesday, "Amarilla" and "Autumn Leaves"; Wednesday, "Fairy Doll" and "Invitation to the Dance"; Thursday, "Coppelia" and "Chopiniana"; Friday, "Don Quixote"; Saturday afternoon, "Sleeping Beauty" and "Fairy Doll"; Saturday evening, "Don Quixote"; Sunday afternoon, "Don Quixote".

PROCESSIONAL

A REVIEW.

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The Theatre Guild's latest production, "Processional," by John Howard Lawson now playing at the Garrick Theatre, New York, is undoubtedly one of the most frank presentations of the class struggle that the American theatre has yet seen.

A strike of the West Virginia miners is used as the background for a play which actually lives up to it's name, for we see the procession of the agents of the capitalist state pass before us. It is presented satirically, for in an unvarnished form the American authorities and Henry [illegible] might protest. It is not however, a pink, pacifist affair, but a real, red blooded, rebel play.

The principal figure is Jim, leader of the striking miners, who is arrested by the sheriff, owned body and soul by, and working under the personal direction of the mine owners. He escapes and when the troops are called in and martial law proclaimed, he wrests the bayonet away from the soldier who is pursuing him, and kills him in self-defense. He is hunted by the troops who capture him, tie him to a tree, and burn his eyes out, in real 100 per cent American style.

The sheriff, we discover, is a member of the Ku Klux Klan, who gains control of the town and mistreats his mother and sweetheart, in the name of the flag and the church. The sheriff says he can make anything he desires legal.

It is announced at a meeting of the Klan, that the United States Congress, has joined them to a man.

The miners homes are burned by the hundred percenters, who start a reign of terror against them, who fight with guns in their hands, the red flag in the forefront, to drive out the troops and klansmen.

We have the K. K. K., the American legion and the United States army lined up in a united front against the workers. Even the yellow Hearst reporter is on the job. He states that if there would be no trouble, he would create it. Willie Hearst sends him a telegram to make the wires hot with the kind of news he wants.

It is a remarkable play, a truthful portrayal of the workers' struggle. The Theatre Guild should be commended for giving us the opportunity of seeing this splendid chapter of the class-war, with such a brilliant cast and scenery.

CROWD CHEERS SOVIET RUSSIA AS SPY LIES

Attacks on Workers at Abramovich Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 26.—Once more Raphael Abramovich, imported spy, tried to tell falsehoods about Soviet Russia, and more cries of "Long Live Soviet Russia" rang thru the Brownsville Labor Lyceum and drowned out Abramovich's lies at his second New York meeting.

The violence of gunmen hired by the Jewish Forward and a large squad of police brought in to arrest friends of Soviet Russia, were unable to drown the enthusiasm for the Communist International and Soviet Russia [illegible] by the audience.

Socialist Thugs Active.

The thugs hired by the "socialists" of the "Forward" outfit, beat up several young workers who challenged Abramovich's lies, and threw several others out of the second story window, but even this violence did not prevent the Brownsville workers from branding Abramovich to his face as a traitor, a spy and a liar.

The Forward crowd has been [illegible] for a chance to let loose their [illegible] and challenged a lie Abramovich told about Soviet Russia, the gangsters were let loose and the hall was immediately in uproar. The young worker was badly beaten up by four socialist gunmen. He was then dragged to the second story window of the hall and thrown out into the street where he was picked up badly injured and taken to the hospital by fellow workers. Several other workers were thrown out of the window at the same time.

Abramovich Branded Traitor.

The audience finally resumed its seat, and Abramovich, gaining a little courage, [illegible]ced his attack on Soviet Russia, and praised the world imperialists for their attempt to throttle that country. But the gangster tactics of the socialists could not prevent the New York workers who attended the meeting from [illegible] the lie to Abramovich's false statements. A worker immediately rose to his feet in front of the platform and shouted: "Abramovich, you are a traitor from the Second-and-a-half International. You have put yourself in the service of world imperialism. You are a traitor to the working class, and you and your social-democratic friends are responsible for the murder of Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht."

Spy Loses Nerve.

Immediately from all over the hall shouts of "Long live Soviet Russia," "Long live the Communist International," arose, and Abramovich, turning pale, tried to apologize by saying he was not in Germany at the time of Liebknecht's death. "Down with all traitors to the working class," "Down with Abramovich," the shouting continued, and Abramovich was forced to cut short his speech.

Abramovich has not yet been able to deliver his speech against Soviet Russia, and it is expected that he will soon make arrangements with the New York Times, or some other capitalist sheet, as the only means of getting his poisonous propaganda before the public.

Crowd Sings International.

The Forward gangsters made further attempts to drag the worker near the platform from the hall, but he continued to shout his defiance at the traitorous Abramovich, and workers from all over the hall sprang to his defense.

The audience marched from the hall singing the International and still crying "Long Live Soviet Russia."

Like Bittelman's Talk

The New York workers are incensed that Abramovich is in America to aid the American imperialists in their propaganda in favor of the Dawes plan and in their attempt to break up the

How We Live and Work

Editor's Note:—This paper is printed for the workers, poor farmers and those who work and sweat under the present system of society. It is a paper of the workers, by the workers and for the workers. We want to reach every corner of this country where labor is being exploited for private gains, for profit. We want the workers and farmers all over the country to read the DAILY WORKER. In order to make it more interesting and be able better to reflect the life of the wide laboring masses, WE WANT OUR READERS TO WRITE TO US. This new department "HOW WE LIVE AND WORK" will appear as often as there will be sufficient letters from our readers about the life and working conditions under which our masses struggle. Try to make the letters interesting, bringing out facts which may not be known to workers in other sections of the country. Try to make them short and to the point.

To the Workers in the Heavy Industries

DEAR Comrades,

Permit me to relate to you how we live and work now that the power is in the hands of the workers, and to compare our life with what it was before the revolution. I will speak only of the work in the rolling mills and of the life of the workers of our factory (formerly the "Houson," now the "Sickle and Hammer"), because our life and work are characteristic of the industries thruout the Union of Soviet Republics. In former times we used to work in our mills in two shifts of 12 hours each. We used to work because we were goaded by fear, not from any love for the work. For every mistake the worker was punished either by a blow, or at best by a fine, losing about five roubles or more every month. The manager and the foreman were the gods and czars of the mill. Any worker who displayed intelligence of any degree was mercilessly driven out and thrown into prison. At the close of a hard working day we had no facilities for sensible recreation. We had no clubs of our own; the theatres were too [illegible] for us, and the [illegible] schools were only for the bourgeoisie, not for the workers' children. In the same way the sporting clubs were in the hands of the bourgeoisie, and the only thing left to us were the beer shops, the government vodka shops, card gambling and fist fights. Many of us succumbed either to these pleasures or to the dope of the priests, who told us to await the kingdom of heaven.

After the October revolution of 1917, we began to lead quite a different life.

It is true that at first, harassed by the white guards who were aided by your bourgeoisie, we experienced great hardships. We starved while our transport was in a state of chaos. Our factories were at a standstill and most of us fought at the front. Our own factory, which employs 4,000 people, had hardly 400 at that time, and any kind of production was out of the question. As you know, we have smashed the white guards and attacked a new front, the front of useful toil. [illegible], comrades, we have won one victory after another. To quote an example: In the year 1913-14, our record year of production, we turned out on the average 162,300 poods of wire in a month, working 24 hours a day. Now, we work in two shifts of eight hours, that is only 16 hours a day, and we have already produced 102,170 poods, and in view of our constant increase and expansion of production, we may confidently expect a much larger output when we start working 24 hours, i. e., in three shifts. All this is done without any compulsion, but by our own good will and efforts. I feel that to produce in eight hours upon an old bench the quantity that used to be turned out in 12 hours on a new one, is quite a big victory, and you will surely share in our jubilation.

A roll-worker in our mill used to earn 70 to 75 roubles a month, now he earns from 130 to 150 roubles.

You are told all manner of horrid tales about our Bolsheviks, which are nothing without our consent. Our Communists, our teachers, do nothing without our consent. We support them all the way thru and we shall always follow their lead, because they protect our own and only our own interests. Not all are in the party, we do not think ourselves sufficiently developed, but in spirit we are all Communists.

We now have our own club, with an endless variety of circles: dramatic, choral, musical, art, radio and sport. There are scores of members in every circle, but in the sporting circle we have nine football teams alone, whereas in the past we had only five footballers in the whole factory, and even those played in the bourgeois club.

Our sporting grounds are full of children during the day, and in the evening, after work, the adult workers engage in physical culture. Our youngsters are all pioneers and communards, robust and happy fellows, growing up under good conditions and in health of body and mind—they are [illegible] to take our places.

Our entire life, our production, our [illegible] and our tasks, are reflected in the columns of the newspapers. Since the newspapers cannot possibly give us all the space we need, we run our wall newspapers in every factory. The news to the newspapers is communicated by ourselves, so that there can be no garbling as is done by bourgeois reporters. You may rest assured, comrades, that we shall never allow any evil designs of our enemies to escape our timely attention and exposure.

There is no need for us to tell you that the schools, the theatres, the clubs, the physical culture establishments, everything is now thrown open to us. This goes without saying, because the power is in our own hands, in the hands of the working class.

Therefore, dear comrades, we wish you to get the same as we have, i. e., all power in the hands of the workers.

With fraternal greetings,

Non-party workers' correspondent,

A. G. Pogozhenkov.

Notices are posted in all departments of the Devon Mill declaring that the management will close down at least until Feb. 2, because of "unbalanced conditions."

The "unbalanced conditions" are the weavers' and loom-fixers' strike which since last Monday, has practically tied up all production in the mill in protest against the ten per cent wage cut.

Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, will be the main speaker. All workers living in the vicinity of the meeting place, are invited to attend. The speakers will explain the platform of the candidates indorsed by the Workers (Communist) Party. All who work are welcome. Bring your friends.

CUT WAGES OF SURGICAL GAUZE MILL OPERATIVES

CHICOPEE, Mass., Jan. 26.—Notices have been posted by the Chicopee Manufacturing company, manufacturers of gauze and surgical dressing materials, of a 10 per cent wage reduction, effective today. The mills employ nearly 1,800 operatives and are owned by Johnson & Johnson.

SOLONS VALUE TRACTION JUNK AT $200,000,000

Property Paid for Over and Over Again

"Experts" have examined into the possible value of the surface lines in Chicago. Their report, submitted yesterday, says that the properties of the street railways are worth $200,000,000.

The so-called valuation was made at the instance of the committee at work under the direction of Mayor Dever for the purpose of taking over the surface lines for the municipality. The mayor's committee has been engaged in protracted [illegible] with representatives of the holders of Chicago Surface Lines securities. The object of the negotiations is the purchase of the railways and attendant properties of the [illegible] holders by the city government.

$200,[illegible] seems a big sum to pay for the [illegible] and rattlers familiar to [illegible] strap-hanger. But Mayor Dever won't pay that much, he has insisted that he will pay no more than $16[illegible]00,000, which the mayor considers a fairly reasonable figure for the collection of junk called Chicago Surface Lines.

The fact that the working population of Chicago, paying exorbitant fare-rates for years has bought and paid for the property ten times over, has been totally ignored by both the mayor's committee and, of course, the committee from the bankers.

These proceedings of Dever's call to mind the case of Ole Hanson, who, when mayor of Seattle, bought the street cars from the private owners at such a fabulous and ruinous sum that the city will be years in recovering.

The holders of street railway securities seem very anxious to unload at a time when the properties are so decrepit and depreciated in value that they are faced with large expenditures for necessary re-equipment and rehabilitation. And if they are smooth enough they can usually convince a city administration of the virtues of municipal ownership.

Such a thing is happening in Chicago. The invariable result of all these grand purchases by municipalities is that banker's securities are saved from going to the dogs and workingmen's pay envelopes are squeezed to make up the difference.

And such things will continue to happen as long as capitalist political gangs are permitted to rule the city government.

The Communist aldermanic candidates running in nine wards in the local elimination contest have a program that will put an end to this kind of financial jerrymandering. They say that these city transportation properties have been paid for enough by the car riders who have been mulcted since the old horse-car days. They say that the municipality should run these utilities for the benefit of those who use them. And as for compensation they propose to tell the bankers, "Try and get it."

Northwest English Branch.

Members should come on time. Bring along some friends and sympathizers, and by all means be prepared to pay up your DAILY WORKER policy.—G. Bjornson, Branch Secretary.

WORKERS PARTY SECRETARY HELD NEARLY 3 WEEKS

Case Appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court

C. E. Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, walked out of Michigan state prison at Jackson at noon today. He was released on bonds amounting to $7,500 pending a decision of the United States supreme court on the constitutionality of the criminal syndicalism law under which he was committed to Jackson prison twenty days ago.

After serving two weeks in the customary prison quarantine Ruthenberg had been doing regular prison work for almost a week when he was released today.

The three weeks he has served will be counted in the three to ten year sentence he drew from Judge White of the Michigan state court in the event the supreme court finds the Michigan act constitutional.

Early Hearing.

When the appeal will be heard by the supreme court is not yet certain, but [illegible] Michigan [illegible] he will [illegible] before courts under the syndicalist laws of other states.

Arrested in 1922.

Ruthenberg is the first to be convicted in the prosecution of the thirty-two Communists who were arrested on the twenty-second day of August, 1922, by department of justice agents and deputy sheriffs on warrants charging them with "assembling" in Bridgman, Michigan, at a convention of the Communist Party in violation of the criminal syndicalism law.

Foster Jury Disagreed.

The first trial was that of William Z. Foster, chairman of the Workers Party, which ended in the disagreement of the jury. Foster is awaiting a retrial which will probably be heard directly after the trial of Robert Minor, cartoonist for the DAILY WORKER, who is booked to appear next month.

Ruthenberg Talked to Court.

Ruthenberg's trial, held in May, of 1923, caused quite a sensation. In the direct examination by his counsel, Frank P. Walsh, Ruthenberg explained to the jury the complete position of the Communist Party despite the protests of the State Prosecutor, O. L. Smith.

The only evidence the state was able to submit was the charge that the Communist Party advocated the formation of Soviets in America and stated in its literature that the struggle for the formation of a government of workers and working farmers would inevitably be attended by violence.

Frank P. Walsh in his argument to the jury said, "Who will dare say that what the Communists state about the struggles in the past is not the truth?" He showed the power of the capitalists in industry and politics today and pointed out the growth of the workingclass movement, which challenged this power. "If these conditions are not changed," Walsh argued, "is not what the Communists say likely to happen and this struggle between those who are preying on the people and those who are robbed result in a struggle in which there will be a resort to force?"

Judge Prejudiced.

Judge White was obviously biased in his charge to the jury sitting in Ruthenberg's case. He told the jury that the prosecution had said that the advocacy of Soviets included the advocacy of violence as Soviets could not be established without resort to force, and that if the jury found this to be correct they must convict Ruthenberg. There were eight farmers on the Ruthenberg jury, a member of the Benton Harbor chamber of commerce and a member of the American legion.

Thruout the trial, department of justice agents were in St. Joseph stirring up propaganda against the defendants and in various ways trying to intimidate the jury.

KLAN FUNERAL OF HERRIN GUNMAN TO RIVAL THAT OF CHICAGO'S KILLERS

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 26.—S. Glenn Young, whose colorful career as ku klux klan leader in Williamson county came to a close in Saturday night's gun fight here, in which four men lost their lives will have the grandest funeral ever held in the state of Illinois, according to plans made public here today by Carl Neilson, exalted cyclops of the klan in Herrin.

Word was flashed to every klavern in Illinois and adjoining states by ku klux klan headquarters here to send representatives to the funeral Wednesday. Klansmen predicted that 50,000 persons would attend. Unless military authorities object, the services will be held under the official auspices of the ku klux klan, Neilson announced.

Under present plans, twelve snow white horses will draw the cortege. All klansmen will attend in full regalia. Floral tributes will surpass in number those showered on Dean O'Banion, Chicago gunman. Young will be laid to rest in a mausoleum in the Herrin cemetery, Mrs. Young announced.

The mausoleum of Young will be a stone's throw from the graves of the imported gunmen who tried to break the miner's strike in Herrin and were killed by miners after [illegible]

CONSTRUCTIVE CONVENTION IS HELD BY Y. W. L.

Local Chicago Elects New Officials

A full program of work was laid down by the sixth semi-annual convention of the Chicago Young Workers League on Sunday. This was the first convention of the Chicago league since its reorganization on the basis of the working area branches, and the delegates from the six new branches showed a great desire to get down to real work making this convention the most constructive one in the history of the Chicago league.

Comrade [illegible], secretary of the Chicago league, reported at the convention for the city executive committee, pointing out in her report the great gains made by the Chicago league as a result of the reorganization and showing that today there was nothing in the way of complete reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei.

The Chief Problems.

A complete program of action for the coming six months was also outlined and the sentiment expressed in the discussion showed that the delegates were almost unanimously in favor of making all efforts to see that this program of action is carried out; [illegible] that practically the entire Chicago membership is ready to give full cooperation to the new C. E. C. in seeing that real constructive work is carried on in the future, and that no factionalism is permitted to interfere with the accomplishment of the great tasks that lie before them.

The major portion of the discussion was with only those problems first [illegible] such as: the organization of shop nuclei; the intensification of trade union work, factory campaigns, education, literature, worker correspondence, children's work.

In Better Position.

[illegible] delegates to the convention stressed the importance of greater participation in the party life by the league membership. This suggestion was strongly upheld in the report of [illegible].

The Chicago league showed itself in better position than ever before to [illegible] the tasks that lie before it. Impressed by the great and important work ahead, the large majority of the delegates showed a great enthusiasm for getting down to real work [illegible] in co-operation and under the leadership of the C. E. C. and the D. E. C. and plainly expressed the sentiment that they would have no patience with any factional attempts to hinder work in the future.

The report of the city executive committee was accepted almost unanimously and the new city executive committee proposed by the elections committee was elected by vote of 25 to [illegible]. The delegates also showed themselves almost unanimously in favor of a resolution presented endorsing the D. E. C. and the stand it took in supporting the C. E. C. of the Workers Party in its major political policy.

T. U. E. L. ISSUES STATEMENT ON THE SITUATION IN "THE AMALGAMATED"

The statement on the situation in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union by the national committee of the Trade Union Educational League is as follows:

* * * *

THE administration party within the A. C. W. A. has definitely set its feet upon the path of "respectability," away from the road of the militant class struggle, which made the union a mighty organization, backward toward reconciliation with the most reactionary trade union bureaucrats and with the employers themselves.

This policy is marked on the one hand by concessions to the bosses (witness the readjustments, so-called, that lowered the earnings of the workers, the latest concession in Chicago that sacrifices the cutters to new demands of the bosses). On the other hand, it has been accompanied by war against the left wing and against all progressive and militant policies within the union.

It is the duty of the left wing to fight against the corrupting policies being systematically introduced by Sidney Hillman. Under no condition can supporters of the T. U. E. L., members or sympathizers of the left, support the policies of class collaboration practiced by the administration party, and to be silent is to give support.

In the recent election within the union in Chicago, some members of the T. U. E. L. local group opposed the issuance of any leaflet stating its position. This was the first mistake made by these comrades, because it would leave the possibility of large numbers of workers getting the impression that the T. U. E. L. was not opposing Hillman's class collaboration policy. However, the progressive campaign committee, with the approval of the national committee of the T. U. E. L., did issue a leaflet which laid down a left wing policy and declared in support of the T. U. E. L. program and the candidates of the left wing. This leaflet was a good fighting left wing document, which could be supported by every member of the T. U. E. L.

But several members of the T. U. E. L., because they had not themselves authorized the leaflet, denounced it in a document which they delivered to the leader of the administration party in Chicago. By so doing, they delivered a serious blow against the left wing, undermining, by their act, the fundamental solidarity which must exist between all those who oppose the policies of class collaboration of the administration party. Whether the leaflet was issued by the T. U. E. L. or by someone else, whether the comrades approved it or not, to sign a document against the leaflet at the request of an enemy of the left wing was a blow at the whole left wing movement.

The comrades either committed a serious mistake, or, if it was not a mistake—if they struck this blow intentionally—they have no place in the left wing movement or in the T. U. E. L.

The national committee of the T. U. E. L. believes that the comrades made a mistake which deserves and does receive severe censure. It is very reluctant to think that any member of our movement would intentionally injure the movement in such a manner. Altho it has been necessary in the past, particularly in the case of Comrade Schneid, to combat a tendency that looked for a common ground with the administration party more energetically than it looked for an opportunity to fight for our principles of class struggle, yet we still want to believe that the comrades merely made a mistake, and that they can be brought to correct their attitude, that they really wish to work with the left wing. By their loyal and unhesitating support of the left wing in the coming struggles they can prove that our hopes are justified.

In the face of the desertion of the class struggle by the administration party in the A. C. W. A., the T. U. E. L. calls upon all true left wing workers to unify their ranks on the basis of the class struggle.

It is the function of the left wing not to win the offices for the sake of offices, but to win the leadership of the masses FOR the class struggle and AGAINST class collaboration.

To protect the workers against wage cuts—we must unite for struggle. To protect against unemployment—we must unite for struggle. To build the power of the working class for the overthrow of capitalism—we must unite for struggle. To win the members of the A. C. W. A. away from the misleading policies of the administration party—we must unite for struggle.

in subjection, by force. The capitalist government is a dictatorship, tho in some countries such as the United States, Great Britain and France, it masquerades under the cloak of democracy. It nevertheless rules by force and throws off its democratic mask whenever its power is imperiled or a crisis confronts it. Such a crisis was the European war. It then enforced conscription without regard to law or constitution. It made its own laws.

THE question that faces the workers is not whether it is wrong to treat the capitalists in Russia as the capitalists treat the workers in America, but whether the capitalists have a right to exploit the workers or whether the workers are justified in freeing themselves from the grip of a gang of highway robbers? If we believe that the present system is a robber system and that the capitalists are robbers, then we should not insult the intelligence of the exploited workers, who realise they are being exploited, by talking nonsense such as is indulged in by those who put the dictatorship of the proletariat in Russia on the same level as the open dictatorship of the capitalists in Italy or the camouflaged dictatorship in America.

AND when a stoolpigeon like Abramovich, comes to America in order to spew his venom on the Russian revolutionists from the platform, and the workers of New York refuse to listen to him, we are of the opinion that such action is justified. We are glad to learn that the New York workers have enough red blood in their veins and enough class consciousness to resent the visit of a czarist spy.

IN yesterday's paper there was a report from London of a Lenin memorial meeting being broken up by fascisti by means of tear gas bombs. We read of Communist meetings getting broken up all over the world, by the capitalists and their yellow socialist allies. We read of Communists being expelled illegally from the trade unions by the yellow socialists and the labor fakers. We know that Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were murdered by the yellow socialist allies of Abramovich and that Lenin would have been killed by Kerensky had he been able to lay his hands on him. Knowing all these facts and many more, we refuse to do penance for the vigor of our language in describing the perfidy of Abramovich.

COMMUNISTS are not bloodthirsty. In fact they have the only program that will inevitably bring peace on this earth. Until capitalism is eliminated there cannot be any peace. The conflicting interests of capitalist groups bring wars between nations and groups of nations and the conflict between the workers and the capitalists produce the class struggle which must culminate in civil war. The victory of the workers over their masters will bring lasting peace when class conflicts and all incentives to war are eliminated thru the establishment of Communism.

to the klan. Among crimes committed by Young, which the klan now admits, were the theft of $250.00 at an Italian wedding in Pittsburgh, Illinois.

Young assaulted Paul Corder of Marion, and was tried for this offense in Herrin. On February 6, 1924, Young raided the home of E. C. Frick, foreman of the county grand jury, which was then investigating Young's lawless activities. Frick was kidnapped by Young and spirited out of the county in an attempt to postpone jury action. He was held on a charge of possessing liquor in his home, but it was later proved that Young had planted the liquor there previous to the fake raid. At another time Young kidnapped the Herrin mayor, and took him out of the county.

Klan Pays Young.

When the klan saw that Young had attained a national notoriety as a killer, they attempted to repudiate him, but Young did not permit them to get away with this. The klan supported Young and his family up until the time of his death. Young returned to Herrin, breaking his promise to remain away for the good of the county. He had been given $1,000 by the klan, but ran out of money and came back for more. The klan gave him more money and paid his expenses at the Lymar Hotel, the best hotel in Herrin.

Just before his death Young had completed plans to organize for the klan in Jackson county as he had done in Williamson county. Young had already completed financial arrangements with the klan for his lawless work in Jackson county, and on the day of his death said: "I contemplate cleaning up Jackson county in the near future."

Lies in Baptist Church.

The body of Glenn Young is lying in state at the first baptist church, which from the start ardently supported Young in his murderous career.

State's Attorney Arlie Boswell is representing the state here, but he has refused to say what action Governor Small will take. He was asked whether Small had taken any steps to curb the klan's lawlessness here, and admitted he knew of no such action.

CONGRESS BALKS A TPASSING FIVE COOLIDGE BILLS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—With adjournment only five weeks away, administration forces faced impassable barriers today in attempting to enact President Coolidge's administrative program before the summer vacation.

Five major legislative measures remain on the administration program, aside from the usual appropriation bills. These includes the Isle of Pines treaty, the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill, the Moses postal bill increasing postoffice salaries through higher postal rates, a farm bill to control co-operative marketing and the president's own recommendation for American adherence to the world court.

The administration also faced serious difficulty in obtaing senatorial confirmation of the appointments of Harlan F. Stone to the supreme court and of Charles B. Warren as attorney general. Fights have been waged against both appointments. Warren has been exposed as a sugar trust lawyer.

The outlook was that congress will make little headway on subjects the administration favors and much noise where the president desires quiet.

New English Branch Is Organized on "The Hill" in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 26.—A new English branch was organized at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, Pittsburgh. This branch is located in the heart of the famous international district known as "The Hill." This branch has a nucleus of old and tried comrades and in view of the character of the population in this section there is wonderful opportunity for the development of a big and effective branch.

The branch will meet every Thursday evening at the Labor Lyceum. The next meeting is Thursday, Jan. 29, 8:30 p. m. Workers interested should attend the next meeting and get in the organization at the time it begins.

Letters of Hope and Hate Reveal a Friend and Foe of Communism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, two letters stand out from the host that daily piles my desk. They are interesting because of the striking contrast that they present.

One is from a New York "socialist," an enemy of Communism. He spews the venom that only disappointed "socialists" can; especially those whose latest disappointment is the utter failure of the Anti-Soviet propaganda with which the counter-revolutionist, Raphael Abramovich, was going to flood this country. His is a sample of two or three letters that have come to the DAILY WORKER since it joined with the whole Communist press in exposing this agent of the counter-revolution. It breathes the hate of the foiled conspirator whose schemes have been rudely set at naught; in this case the attempts to hold the Abramovich meetings under the cloak of socialism in New York City.

* * * *

The other letter comes from a Communist sympathizer in the west. He reads the DAILY WORKER. He is enthused by its Communist message. He is not a member of the Workers (Communist) Party, but he is the kind of material that is helping build the American Communist movement. His letter is published in full as follows:

> Sisseton, So. Dak., January 24, 1925.
> Gentlemen: Your paper comes to my desk every day along with another Chicago daily. From your paper I can get the real conditions as to the laboring man and his family. From the other daily I can see that we farmers of this northwest are having a bunch of prosperity that should make the city people envious of us.
> I would like to give you some information on the real conditions out here in this part of South Dakota and I believe that the entire northwest is in the same condition.
> Last fall I had occasion to investigate the crop mortgages that our good farmers of Roberts County were compelled to give the bankers and machine men. This amount that I am giving is only crop mortgage on the first of September and does not include any other personal property or real property. The crop mortgages amounted to [illegible].
> Again going to the Register of Deeds office of this county I found that in the four years previous to 1920 there were 54 mortgage foreclosures recorded on land. The last year or 1924 there were registered 124 foreclosures.
> I might add that this part of the state has not been settled over twenty-five years. At that time the government gave this land to the settlers that were willing to go thru the hardships to settle it up and now they are losing their homes every day.
>
> They have worked hard, not only the men but children and wives have spent long hours laboring in the fields trying to pay the interest on their home and now they are seeing them go.
>
> Just the other day the state legislature voted the child labor amendment down, and still the voters of our state do not awaken but keep sending the same bunch of parasites to make the laws for them. What can we do to wake them up?
>
> The reason for this information that I am so freely giving is because I think the laborer and farmer has a common cause and should be made to see the light.—Yours very truly, W. P. WOHLHETER.

* * * *

This correspondent utters the hope that unity of the exploited in the cities and on the land will be effected for their common struggle against capitalism. It was the alliance of the city workers and landless peasants that Lenin fought for and achieved in Russia. It is the strength of the Bolshevik revolution. The hatred of "socialists" for this revolution is contained in the second letter received as follows:

> Mister Engdahl, Idiot and Liar:
> Raphael Abramovitsch, a man whose boots you are not fit to blacken, said at the New Star Casino meeting that your hoodlums and ruffians failed so miserably in their scoundrelly attempt to break up, that there are two kinds of opposition, one that is intelligent and one that is otherwise. He referred to the howling gang of maniacs who are so afraid that some one might learn something that they brayed like the jackasses they are in order to prevent him from being heard. Alas for them, he was heard, no thanks to your hooligans. That is what he referred to as "unintelligent" opposition. But that was before anyone had seen the delicate little piece in your issue of January 23. That beggars description. The words to describe that haven't been invented yet.
> Louis Engdahl, I always knew you were a little weak in the head. That's why you went Communist. But I always thought you were a little more decent personally than the usual breed. But I guess the people who have bought your services have bought, not only your feeble ability, but also your soul and you have sunk to the level of your proprietor, the unspeakable Zinoviev. You have fallen below Hearst in decency. You are lower than the Chicago Tribune in manhood. No honesty can be expected from a Communist, no decency. If a person had any he wouldn't be a Communist—it's against the rules. He'd be expelled from the ranks as a petty bourgeois if he showed the slightest signs of decency. But that editorial is the furthest south you've gone so far. Keep it up, you poor fool, and maybe some day you'll sink low enough to be invited to Moscow to be Zinoviev's right hand man.—With the supremest contempt, W. M. FEIGENBAUM.

* * * *

The writer of the above, William Morris Feigenbaum, is one of the editors of the New Leader, the official organ of the "socialists" in New York City. Feigenbaum does the scavenger work for the New York "socialists" that is rejected by others as being even too repulsive for them. In Hillquit's "socialist" court he is the master buffoon, and now he turns apologist for Abramovich.

As a weekly The Leader succeeded The Call, when this "socialist" organ died in the arms of a combination of "socialist" trade union bureaucracy in the needle trades and the petty bourgeoisie who parade as "liberals."

If Abramovich had been able to inject his poison into the New York labor movement, especially into its Jewish section, it might continue the dictatorship of this wing of the American labor reaction a little longer. But Abramovich failed. And his failure was due to the spontaneous resentment of New York's rank and file workers against the Abramovich breed; just as they have fought and will continue to fight the Cahans, the Sigmans and the Kaufmanns.

* * * *

It is a rather sickly wail for "socialists" to claim that Communists are trying to smother their attack on Soviet Russia. The whole capitalist press is open to the "socialists," where their own press has failed.

It is a rather healthy sign when enraged workers can get their resentment against the enemies of Soviet Russia across in spite of this capitalist-socialist press alliance, in spite of the police and private gunmen and gangsters who try to rule at the Abramovich meetings; in spite of every weapon of the "socialist" counter-revolutionaries.

Such workers display an encouraging knowledge of what they really desire—the triumph of American labor against capitalism. The "socialists," including the imported Abramoviches, are madmen to try to oppose it. But capitalism breeds even this form of insanity.

* * * *

The exploited workers and poor farmers of America are rapidly learning that they must fight these imbeciles of capitalism's lunatic asylum, as well as the rest of the capitalist class. Having learned this the workers and farmers speed the day of their own victory.

steps taken toward world trade union unity.

The speech of Alexander Bittelman, member of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, to party members here, caused much favorable comment among the trade unionists. Comrade Bittelman exposed Abramovich as an emissary of the Second (Socialist) International who is trying to discredit the Anglo-Russian trade union move toward trade union unity.

Bittelman declared in his speech that, "The labor reactionaries all over the world are quite alarmed at the rapprochement between the trade unions of England and Russia." Comrade Bittelman continued:

Play A. F. of L. Against British Labor.

"They see in it, quite justly, a menace to their domination, which means the domination of capitalism, in the labor movement. You should read the Berliner 'Vorwaerts,' organ of Scheidemann and Noske, and you will get an idea of how bitter, resentful and alarmed they really are.

"So what do they do? They attempt to discredit the report of the British delegation in order to neutralize and counteract its effects. They attempt to break up the 'Anglo-Russian unity committee' in order to prevent the unity of the international trade union movement. They are also trying to get the reactionaries of the American Federation of Labor to mobilize the Amsterdam International in order to create a reactionary counter-balance to the growing left wing and particularly to the powerful influence of the Anglo-Russian unity committee. [illegible] this last maneuver [illegible] from the statement of Comrade Foster made upon the occasion when Gompers and [illegible], representatives of the Amsterdam International were discussing in El Paso the entry of the A. F. of L. back into Europe.

"Now comes Abramovich to continue the work begun by [illegible]. He comes to mobilize the Gompersites for a new crusade against the world trade unity, against the Anglo-Russian unity committee and against the left wing of the labor movement. Especially Abramovich is here to prevent the formation of a united front of labor against the united front of capital.

Flunkey of "Open Shopper" Dawes.

"Abramovich is here to do a job for 'Open Shopper' Dawes and for American capitalism. You must realize, comrades, that one of the chief objectives of the world unity of the trade union movement is to unite the forces of labor against the enslavement of the European working masses by American imperialism, i. e. against the Dawes' plan.

"The American imperialists know full well that the success of the unity movement will spell the defeat of the Dawes' plan. The American imperialists and their servant, 'Open Shopper' Dawes, are therefore bitterly opposed to the 'menace' of world unity in the trade union movement. The Second International and its emissary in the United States, R. Abramovich, are doing the bidding of Dawes when they engage in obstructing the unity of the working class. Abramovich is doing now in the United States a job for world imperialism and for its chief master, the imperialists of America.

Expose and Defeat the Counter-Revolutionary Plan of Abramovich.

"Comrades! It is the task of our party to tell the American working masses the whole truth about the Second International and its special emissary in the United States, R. Abramovich. It is our duty to warn the American labor movement against the menace of intensified and more brutal capitalist reaction that will inevitably follow in the wake of Abramovich's mission. We must explain to every worker within our reach that the success of Abramovich and the Russian counter-revolutionaries generally will mean more hardship, more misery and more bitterness in the life of the working masses of America. We must arouse the masses to protest and demonstrate their resentment against this flunkey of Dawes and servant of imperialism.

"Let every working man and working woman in the United States know what the Second International stands for, what Abramovich stands for, and what the Russian white guards stand for. Let every worker and every progressive know what suffering and misery these agents of imperialism have brought upon the heads of the toiling masses throut the world. Let every honest worker realize that it is because of the treachery and betrayal of these servants of capital that humanity is still bleeding and suffering in the iron clutches of world imperialism and that thousands of the best manhood and womanhood of our class are being tortured in the prisons of Germany, Esthonia, Hungary and every other capitalist country in the world because they had the courage to protest and fight.

"Let this flunkey of Dawes, who calls himself R. Abramovich, meet everywhere with only one response:

"Not an ounce of support;

"Not a cent of money—

"For the agents of imperialism and counter-revolution."

BUILDERS AT WORK

Every day under this head you will learn not only what BUILDERS thruout the country are doing to build a greater newspaper, but also practical suggestions to accomplish more for OUR paper. Tell us what YOU are doing—and we will "tell the world."

Nine Good Men—From Jacksonville, Florida.

WHAT good work can be turned in by workers sympathetic to the Communist cause is shown by this group in Jacksonville, Fla. Nine good men, most active among whom are L. Bernhart, Ben Berlin, Loebe, and Weisselman have in the last nine months contributed $1,500 in cash to support the "Freiheit." Of this amount $330 was given on the last visit of Comrade Loonin, national organizer of the Jewish federation.

This alone is proof of support to the Communist cause. But they did more. They pledged $100 to the Insurance policy campaign of the DAILY WORKER which they mean to send in as soon as able. Adding this it makes a mighty good record for the group—but they did still more!

They turned over to Comrade M. Zevin, a member of the Philadelphia Jewish branch who was visiting there, $80 worth of subscriptions to "Build the DAILY WORKER" as further evidence of their willingness to build the Communist movement.

That in our opinion constitutes a record of building they can well be proud of. Our hats go off to the nine good men of Jacksonville, Florida!

NOBODY KEEPS AGREEMENT BUT COAL DIGGERS

Operators Turn Scab, Lewis Fights Dist. 1

Oklahoma coal operators are slowly but surely breaking the grip of the United Mine Workers of America in that state.

In the last year producers representing 84 per cent of the production in the state have broken away from the union and are now mining coal under the 1917 wage scale.

The miners are paid approximately $6 a day as the basic wage as compared to $7.50 provided for under the Jacksonville agreement with the union.

The Henryetta field is the only one left to operate under the war-time wage scale of $7.50 a day.

The Wilburton and McAlester fields are the strongholds of the open shop. The U. M. W. of A. under the administration of John L. Lewis, makes no effort to sustain the union, letting the operators have their own sweet way.

Own Your Home and Get Your Wage Cut.

Many mines were idle during the summer in the fight for lower production costs. Hundreds of the employes owned their own homes and after several months of idleness accepted the 1917 scale offered by the operators.

There was some disorder in the district. National guardsmen had to be called to the Wilburton district in June, September and October. Martial law existed for a time but mines continued to work.

Production in the Wilburton and McAlester fields now is averaging between 3,000 and 5,000 tons a day. Verbal contracts exist between the company and miners on the question of the 1917 wage scale. A fake "arbitration" scheme is provided by the [illegible] of the company, to give "fair and impartial" decision on disputes.

[illegible]—Withdraw from Agreement?

The day wage scale under which the miners now are operating is on a basis of $6. Under the 1924 union contract it would be $7.50. The pick scale is on a basis of $1.01 a ton. Under the 1924 contract it would be $1.25. There is a 14-cent differential between the pick scale and the electric chain machine scale for those mines using machines, allowing a loading price of 73 cents a ton, and a runner's and helper's rate of 15 cents a ton.

There are approximately 25 mines working under the 1917 scale. The number increases as the market for coal improves. There are about 60 shipping mines in the affected fields. All of these operating under the 1917 wage, have withdrawn from the operator's association which signed the Jacksonville agreement. The miners, however, are "outlawed" by Lewis if they try to "withdraw from the agreement."

Amalgamated Votes For Mich. Defense and Seidel Protest

Chicago Local 39, A. W. C., at its last meeting voted to support the Labor Defense Council in the defense of C. E. Ruthenberg and the other Michigan cases. At the same meeting they also passed a resolution against the deportation of J. Seidel, or rather, the re-deportation of Seidel.

C. N. W. Machinists Defeat B. & O. Plan

The machinists of the Chicago and Northwestern shops, Lodge 478, by an almost unanimous vote defeated Wm. L. Johnston's "B. & O" class collaboration scheme. The T. U. E. L. is making this a major issue in the nominations that are taking place throut the Machinists' Union for the coming general election. Johnston is up against the fight of his life.

Two machinist lodges of Chicago, 390 and 337, adopted resolutions protesting against the "criminal syndicalist" laws and conviction of Comrade Ruthenberg. Both resolutions have been sent to the machinist district council for adoption. In addition to this action, Local 337 donated $10.00 to the defense.

Chicago Painters 275 Ring the Bell for the Michigan Defense

Painters' Union 275, Chicago, passed a resolution condemning the criminal syndicalist laws, supporting the Michigan cases. The local affiliated with the Labor Defense Council electing two delegates and donated $100.00 for the defense of C. E. Ruthenberg.

Kansas City T. U. E. L. Resurrects Itself and The Labor Defense

The Kansas City league has been re-organized and reports that regular monthly meetings will be held, industrial groups will be created in the near future. A local Labor Defense Council has been formed and an entertainment and dance arranged for the defense of the Michigan cases.

Duluth Machinists Keep the Gravy Warm For "B. & O." William

DULUTH.—Zenith Lodge No. 274 of the International Association of Machinists, at its regular meeting Jan. 19, endorsed unanimously the complete slate of the left wing headed by J. Emme for the election of International officers. Revolutionary unionists and the real progressives of the T. U. E. L. all over the country keep up the good fight, stick until we win—because if we stick we will win.

Chicago Amalgamated Left Wing Elections

In spite of the regular Chicago labor faker tactics of the Hillman-Levin machine, the slugging of members of the T. U. E. L., and not allowing the left wing candidates to have watchers, the ticket supported by the T. U. E. L. received 25 per cent of the votes cast.

The candidates of the left wing and the votes cast for them are as follows:

For General Manager, Aronberg, 2,274.

For Assistant Manager, Epstein, 2,500.

For Assistant Manager, Savanovsky, 2,600.

For Business Agent, Chappas, 2,707.

This is encouraging when you consider that about 4,000 members were unemployed, a majority of whom were left wingers and many could not vote because they could not pay their dues.

Joliet Left Wing Outside the Pen But Inside Unions

The left wing in Joliet waged a successful fight in the election of officers for the Central Trades and Labor Council of Will county. President, vice-president, treasurer, recording and financial secretary were elected by the left wing. Arrangements are being made to hold a mass meeting to discuss the child labor amendment.

Chicago Electricians' Strike Going a Month

Six hundred Commonwealth Edison Company construction electricians have been on strike more than a month. No attempt has been made to break it as at this season little new work is undertaken.

Minn. Machinists Endorse Left Wing And United Front

By C. SKOGLUND.

Local 91 International Association of Machinists meeting here tonight unanimously endorsed the left wing slate for international officers now being nominated.

Local No. 459 of St. Paul had endorsed the slate at their meeting last Friday and had sent out a letter to all locals in Minnesota urging them to do likewise. It was on this request that action was taken by lodge No. 91.

The slate was headed by J. F. Emme for international president, Tim Buck for secretary-treasurer and Overgaard, editor of the Journal and a full slate for candidates for vice-presidents.

At the same meeting the resolution supporting the Labor Defense Council and demanding the release of C. E. Ruthenberg, was passed. They elected two delegates to the local Labor Defense Council and instructed them to work for the repeal of the Minnesota criminal syndicalism law and for the release of the Communists arrested in the Michigan raid.

Frank Miner, Jack Bradon and C. A. Hathaway were elected as delegates to the Hennepin county committee of the farmer-labor federation and instructed to fight against the policies now being inaugurated by the officialdom of that organization and fight for class political action.

Omaha League Digs In Deeply With the Child Labor Issue

Omaha T. U. E. L. reports that there is a very strong fight being made against the child labor amendment. The opposition to the amendment is working amongst the farmers telling them that if the amendment is passed the government will then have the power to regulate the education and the raising of their children. Of course, the farmers are not supposed to know that the government already has a strangle hold on education, and that the price allowed them for their crops in an indirect way determines how their children will be brought up.

All that the so-called "leaders" have done was to send a questionaire to the members of the legislature asking their promise to support the measure. Under the leadership of the T. U. E. L the resolution passed by stone cutters, reported last week in this section, has been sent to all the locals in the city, with a letter from the T. U. E. L asking them to appoint a special committee. Quite a few organizations have responded and the first anti-child labor conference was held in the Labor Temple, Thursday, January 22. A program to reach all the locals in the city has been drawn up, and a mass meeting will be held in the near future. A series of street meetings have been arranged.

Another Detroit Carpenter Local Supports Reynolds

Detroit local union 1102 of the Carpenters' Brotherhood at its meeting Jan. 21, voted unanimously to demand a fair trial for brother William Reynolds of local 2140 who has been arbitrarily expelled by the G. E. B.

As local union 1102 is the smallest carpenters union in the city they are taking real chances of incurring the wrath of Czar Hutcheson, who as the saying goes is "a big man in a small way" and usually picks an easy victim. He sometimes makes a mistake.

Local 1102 supported Hutcheson unanimously in the election less than two months ago. They now join in the protection of those whom Hutcheson would exile from the organization. Hutcheson is playing a losing game.

Why Not a Little "Unusual Effort" By the Left Wing?

In the recent carpenters election, the conservative locals in Cleveland showed an unexpected strength for Rosen, the progressive candidate, but the progressive locals fell below the vote which was to be be expected, due to the unusual efforts made in these locals to overcome the progressive sentiment, and to count out the progressive votes.

BIG FIGHT IN MINNEAPOLIS SHAKES UNIONS

Stevens and Mauseth Trial Statement

The following is a statement of Dan W. Stevens and William Mauseth, made to the hand-picked "investigation" committee of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly which reported adversely upon their right to be seated as delegates from their local unions. The committee's recommendation was defeated and the delegates were seated, but unseated at a later meeting:

"At the meeting of the Trades and Labor Assembly held on Wednesday, January 7th, we Dan, W. Stevens and Wm. Mauseth, had our credentials protested on the grounds that we were members of the Workers Party and, therefore, owed first allegiance to that organization. The protest implied that because of the fact of the alleged membership in the Workers Party, it would be impossible for us to function in the interest of the American Federation of Labor. In order that there may be no misunderstanding to our position, we wish to make the following statement:

First, we are members of the Workers (Communist) Party and believe in the principles of that party. We seriously disagree with those who feel that it is impossible for a Communist to function for the best interest of the trade union movement. We contend that our activities in the trade union movement in which we have carried out the things in which we believe, prove that the principles of the party are in the interest and not to the detriment of the trade union movement.

"The Workers Party is interested in the overthrow of the capitalist system. It realizes, however, that before this can be accomplished there must be a strong trade union movement with power to control the industries of the country. We, therefore, have fought in the past and will continue to fight in the future to build the American Federation of Labor and make it an effective instrument in the struggle against the employers.

"W have fought against all schemes which had for their purpose a tendency to create in the minds of the workers a feeling that their interests were the same as the bosses. We have tried to show the workers that the bosses were organised against them as evidinced by the citisen's alliance in Minneapolis. We have tried to convince them that they must carry on a continuous struggle against the employers, if they were to improve their conditions.

"We have fought to get the trade union movement to constantly carry on a militant struggle for increase in wages and against any reductions in wages or lengthening of hours. We have fought against injunctions whenever the capitalist state has used its power to compel the workers to go back to work in industrial disputes. This is evidenced in the case of Stevens in the Wonderland Theater case.

"All of our activities in the past have met with the unanimous approval of the Workers Party and if we are seated in the Assembly we will continue to fight along the same lines as we have in the past.

"In the Assembly at the present time you have delegates who, in addition to representing a local union, are supporters of or hold membership in the republican party, the democratic party, the farmer-labor party, the LaFollette movement, the socialist party. If the policy of excluding delegates because of their political beliefs or affiliations is followed, it means the disruption of the entire labor movement.

"A labor movement is organized to carry on the everyday struggle against the employers for better wages, shorter hours, and better working conditions. The sole requisite for membership is that one be a worker in some particular craft. If you attempt to bar people because of religious or political views, you finally get it down to the point where only that portion of the wage workers who accept the political or religious views of the ruling group may become members of a trade union. That can never succeed.

"We are not attempting to camouflage our beliefs or affiliations before this committee. We want you to understand frankly that we are members of the Workers Party; that we belive in the program of the Workers Party but we contend that as workers we are entitled to membership in the trade union movement and that any effort to bar us is an effort on the part of those in control of the local labor movement to disrupt and destroy the trade union movement.

"Fraternally submitted,

NEW YORK LEAGUE BATTLING UNION REACTION DAILY

Needle Trades Workers Never Quit Scrap

The New York league is carrying on a very active campaign in the International Ladies Garment Workers against the reactionary policies of the Sigman and the Forward machines. These two groups, now fighting one another, were one against the T. U. E. L., resulting in over 100 members being expelled, 56 suspended, and many members of the league ruthlessly removed from office throut the entire industry. They also formed a united front against the membership led by the left-wing, in the last New York cloak makers' strike, turning a victory into a defeat.

An Offensive Defensive

For some time the T. U. E. L. in the I. L. G. W. has been forced to a wage a defensive fight. This is a tactic never adopted by the league unless it is unavoidable. In this instance the attack was so bitter and vicious being carried out simultaneously throut the entire country, that the league was literally forced to wage a defensive fight. It can be said, however, that it was a very offensive defensive.

Now the league is again on the offensive, pushing its program before the members, sinking its roots deeper than ever into the ranks of the I. L. G. W. U. The confidence that the rank and file have in the T. U. E. L. is shown in the demand made upon the general executive board against an arbitrary increase in dues, and signed by 10,000 members of the union.

Increase in Dues

The opposition against an increase in dues is due to the lack of confidence in the leaders. The membership know that the extra income will be used to continue the fight against the militants instead of against the bosses.

In order to show a logical reason for increasing the dues, the G. E. B. has announced a nationwide organizational drive. At the same time, they oppose strikes, advocate class collaboration and still adhere to the policy of expelling, suspending, and removing from office and the ballot those who do not accept their program.

Against this policy, the National Committee of the Needle Trades Section of the T. U. E. L., has launched a campaign based upon a fighting program,—the class struggle as against class collaboration; reinstatement of the expelled with a repudiation of the expulsion policy; a militant campaign to organise the industry 100 per cent. When a real fighting program has been adopted, the rank and file will gladly assess themselves to carry out an organization campaign.

The New York Carpenters

The New York League has just completed an election campaign in the Carpenters' union with splendid results. The reports sent in show that in seven local unions Morris Rosen, left wing candidate, received 1922 votes, while the combined vote of Hutcheson and Brown in the same locals only totalled 1598. In one of these locals No. 2717, where Hutcheson received 520 votes out of a total of 584, it is known that no more than 300 votes were cast.

25,000 copies of the left wing program were distributed by the New York League, and 5,000 of the Special Carpenters' Election Edition of the Progressive Building Trades Worker, were sold.

STRIKE STORMS SHAKE TEXTILE MILLS OF EAST

The sporadic strikes going on in the whole textile industry especially in New England, against the wages cuts, grow out of the resistance of the rank and file of the divided and demoralized unions which embrace only a small part of the workers, to the wage cuts being carried out by the closely organized textile barons.

The T. U. E. L. is in these fights, fighting to force the unions to resist the wage cuts by strikes, urging the unions to unite on this one issue, pointing out that only amalgamation of the eqisting unions into one industrial union, then an organization of committee control of the unions and a militant fight to increase wages instead of accepting lower wages, can solve the textile workers' problems.

The strikes are so numerous and varied from day to day, that we advise the reader to follow them in the news columns of the DAILY WORKER.

T. U. E. L. BUILT UNION FROM 500 TO 5,000 BY WORK DURING STRIKE

PATERSON, N. J.—The T. U. E. L has gained much prestige among the textile workers during the silk workers' strike. This was accomplished because the T. U. E. L. understands the struggles of the workers, plus hard work, devotion to the cause of labor and ability to lead in the struggle.

The struggle was a bitter one, meetings of the strikers were suppressed, Communists and T. U. E. L. speakers were denounced daily by the press. The T. U. E. L. and the Workers Party raised a fund of approximately $10,000 which was turned over to the strikers for relief work.

Over 10,000 workers were involved in the strike which lasted over three months. As a result of the activities of the T. U. E. L., the Associated Silk Workers, an independent union, increased its membership from a few hundred to nearly 5,000.

Buffalo League Not Buffaloed By Pat O'Brien

Getting the support of the militants by proclaiming to be "progressive" is beginning to be a thing of the past. The T. U. E. L. is spoiling the game of these election progressives whose game is to get elected by making glowing election promises. All over the country we see in union elections where the T. U. E. L. is active three slates, two reactionary groups calling themselves progressive and the slate supported by the T. U. E. L.

The Buffalo league reports on the coming election in the Central Labor Council show a similar situation. The "outs" supported by Patrick O'Brien of the Seamen's Union, a renegade socialist, are opposing the "ins" led by the present secretary, Owen Kavanagh. Both claim to be progressive.

The T. U. E. L., however, is supporting the left wing slate whose election campaign is based upon the program of the T. U. E. L. which includes amalgamation, the organizing of the unorganized, child labor, unity of the labor movement, repeal of the criminal syndicalism law, etc. Candidates of the left wing are as follows:

For President, Roy Raymond; Vice-President, Fred Shulman; Secretary, Joseph [illegible]; Treasurer, Joseph Segvio; Credential Committee, Segvio, Raymond and Bohn; Organization Committee, Raymond, Shulman, Siminoff, Segvio, Berry, Bohn and Ryerson.

Philly A. C. W. Says "No" to R. Abramovich

PHILADELPHIA.—At last Thursday's meeting of the Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, a committee from the socialist party, headed by Organizer Regensberg, appeared. After telling all the great things about the menshevik Abramovich, he asked for a committee from the joint board to welcome this agent of counter-revolution.

Brother Neinstein at once moved to table. Rudow, manager of the union, insisted on giving long explanations, and asked for a committee. Then the revolutionary members of the board tore the mask from Abramovich and showed him up for what he is, a renegade and counter-revolutionist, sent to America to get material and moral support for the counter-revolutionary groups inside and outside of Russia who are still trying to overthrow the Soviet government and still conspire with imperialist reaction against it.

The vote of fourteen to ten decided to deny Abramovich any support of such a committee. Let this decision be a shining example to all class conscious workers in America.

LENIN AND THE AGRICULTURAL WORKERS' UNION

"Of Exceptional Importance," He Says

On the Necessity of Organizing a Trade Union of the Agricultural Laborers of Russia.

By N. Lenin, in Pravda, [illegible]

There is one question of exceptional importance that must be [illegible] the All-Russia Trade Union [illegible] This is the question of the formation of an All-Russia Union of Agricultural Laborers.

All classes in Russia are [illegible]

[illegible]

It probably appears to many that this is perhaps the preventing [illegible] that just at this moment, [illegible] necessity in organizing [illegible] sis, demanding the abolition of the private ownership of land, the [illegible] sation" of its use, the formation of a trade union of agricultural workers is inopportune.

Just the contrary. Precisely at such a time it is particularly [illegible] urgently necessary. For those who hold a class, proletarian viewpoint, there can be no doubt as to the correctness of the thesis adopted at the Stockholm session of the Russian Social Democratic Workers Party in 1906 (now Communist Party), on the initiative of the Bolsheviki, and which has ever since been included in the program of the R. S. D. W. P. The thesis states:

"The party at all times and under all circumstances of democratic agrarian reform, puts as its aim to strive undeviatingly toward the independent class organization of the agricultural proletariat, to explain to them the irreconcilable opposition between their interests and the interests of the bourgeois farmers, to warn them against the allurements of an agricultural system that under the capitalist system of production can never destroy the misery of the masses, and finally, to point out to them the necessity of a complete socialistic revolution as the only means for the destruction of all misery and all exploitation."

There is not a single class conscious worker, not a single trade union member, who will not acknowledge the truth of this thesis. To put this thesis into effect, insofar as it is a matter concerning the independent class organization of the agricultural proletariat—is particularly the task of the trade unions.

We hope that just at a revolutionary juncture, when there is manifesting itself among the toiling mass in general, among the workers in particular, a living tendency towards breaking their own trail, towards not permitting the building of life anew without the independent decision of the workers themselves on all questions concerning labor—that just at such a time the trade unions will not lock themselves up in narrow craft interests, that they will not forget their weaker brothers, but with all their energy will come to their aid in founding a union of the agricultural workers of Russia.

CARPENTERS OF DETROIT SIT ON EXPULSION PLAN

Repudiate Hutcheson Act in Two Locals

DETROIT Mich.—The reactionary machine in local 19 of the Carpenters Brotherhood was forced to resort to Hutcheson's tactics to protect Hutcheson's stupidities from the protest of the rank and file. A resolution repudiating the expulsion of William Reynolds by the general executive board and demanding a trial before his local union, in accordance with the constitution, was presented and amended to the effect that the repudiation be changed to protest.

After an appeal from the arbitrary ruling of the reactionary president on a motion for the previous question had been sustained by a vote of 24 to 8, the amendment was lost by a three to one vote and "repudiate" was contained in the resolution. This is significant of the attitude of the rank and file members of the carpenters in Detroit towards the arbitrary and unscrupulous expulsion of Brother Reynolds.

Autocracy Brings Big Protest

When the amendment to substitute "protest" for "repudiate" was lost, President Ball acting for the machine under the instructions of Stoolpigeon Botterill, general organizer, representative of the G. E. B. in Detroit, refused to put the resolution to a vote. A motion to recall Ball as president was then made, which he refused to recognize. Charges were made in writing against Ball for his refusal to carry out the will of the body, which he also refused to recognize. The meeting then broke up in confusion without adjournment at 11:30, with the whole meeting in protest.

When in the early part of the meeting, Botterill objected to Reynolds' presence, the meeting gave itself over to a wholesome expression of contempt for the general executive board and its agents, and indignation at its criminal action. Men who have carried cards in the Brotherhood for 30 years expressed a determination to stand by Brother Reynolds in his fight against expulsion, even if expelled themselves if that was where a fight for principle must lead to.

Botterill was hooted and jeered, and the opinion was expressed and applauded that if the constitution meant no guarantee of rights to the rank and file, then the charter, which was only the symbol of the constitution, also meant nothing, and the threat to lift it was an empty one. The meeting was a forceful expression of discontent which has been gathering for years, and which now has found an outlet.

Botterill's Private Fink

At the same time, local union 1191 was dealing with a spy whom Botterill has had acting for him in that organization, to get knowledge of the actions and intentions of the local union and to ascertain the radical affiliations of the members.

Local union 1191 has long since earned the hatred of Hutcheson and the pay roll gang, by outspoken criticism of these grafters and also by casting a vote of 118 for Rosen for president as against 3 for Hutcheson. Hutcheson demanded the books of the local union some five weeks ago, and according to the officials of the local union, they have them as they disappeared while three payrollers were present in the union and have not since been located.

Local 1191 also repudiate Expulsion

The same resolution which was introduced at Local Union 19 carried unanimously at 1911, the two Hutcheson flunkeys who spoke against it not daring to vote against it.

The parasites of the general office are awakening to the fact that the expulsion of Reynolds has roused the whole rank and file of Detroit, and before they are through they will either have to reinstate Reynolds or expel the whole district. The revolt has just begun.

Washington Hits Blow at "B. & O." Bill Johnston Plan

Lodge 102 and 497 Machinist's Union, Tacoma, Washington, endorsed the left wing slate headed by Julius Emme. Both of these lodges are composed of railroad workers. One the Milwaukee and St. Paul the other the Northern Pacific.

Seattle Lodge Number 79 were equally divided between the Anderson so-called progressive forces and the left wing. The vote was a tie, the chairman casting the deciding vote for the Anderson slate. The Johnston ticket was not even considered. The Anderson forces parade as progressives without a program, to bolster up their claim of being progressive they have on their slate such candidates as Wm. Ross Knutson who ran against Johnston in the last election on the program of the R. I. L. U. but since that time has not worked with the left wing forces.

KANSAS MINERS COUNTED OUT IN DISTRICT VOTING

Hold Protest Meeting and Rake Lewis

The fight of the militant progressive miners of Kansas is well known to the league members. The efforts made by John L. Lewis to destroy the miners' organization in that district has been persistent but futile. Alex Howat rejoined the Miners' Union shortly after the last convention, held in Indianapolis, when he saw that Lewis was determined to destroy the organization rather than allow him a fair trial.

In the election of Dist. 14, the progressive candidates had the support of 90 per cent of the rank and file, with the Lewis henchmen in control of the union machinery. With an honest election the reactionaries would have been cleaned out of office. They stood no chance of even being nominated. So they used the usual brutal Lewis tactics and removed nearly fifty candidates from the ballot, and declared themselves elected because there was no opposition.

On election day most of the miners stayed at home. As their district candidates had been removed, there was some confusion. Some thought that if they recognized the election by voting, that they would not then be able to contest the election. Nevertheless, out of those who did vote fully 90 per cent wrote in the names of their progressive candidates. These, of course, were not counted. The report sent in by the progressive miners on the votes cast for national left-wing slate in nine locals, shows the following results: Lewis, 103, Voysey, 948, Murray 95, Staples 939, Green 114, Nearing 918.

Immediately following the election, the miners held a rank and file conference on Jan. 4th. At this meeting there were delegates from 71 local unions representing 80 per cent of the membership of the district. They unanimously adopted a resolution demanding a special district convention. The resolution is rather long, but the following are a few of the most important points:

"AND WHEREAS, our district constitution in District 14 provides that anyone who has been a member of our union for six months continuously previous to the month in which the election is held shall be eligible to be a candidate and to hold district office;

"AND WHEREAS, the International constitution makes no qualifications in any way as to who is eligible to hold a district office as that is a matter that has always been, and is at the present time decided by the various district organizations;
